6 Thou lovest them that hate thee, and thou hatest them that love thee: and thou hast showed this day, that thou carest not for thy nobles, nor for thy servants: and I now plainly perceive, that, if Absalom had lived, and all we had been slain, then it would have pleased thee.

7 Now therefore arise, and go out, and speak to the satisfaction of thy servants: for I swear to thee by the Lord, that if thou wilt not go forth, there will not tarry with thee so much as one this night: and that will be worse to thee, than all the evils that have befallen thee, from thy youth until now.

8 Then the king arose, and sat in the gate: and it was told to all the people, that the king sat in the gate: and all the people came before the king: but Israel fled to their own dwellings.

9 And all the people were at strife in all the tribes of Israel, saying: The king delivered us out of the hand of our enemies, and he saved us out of the hand of the Philistines: and now he is fled out of the land for Absalom.

10 But Absalom, whom we anointed over us, is dead in the battle: how long are you silent, and bring not back the king?

11 And king David sent to Sadoc, and Abiathar, the priests, saying: Speak to the ancients of Juda, saying: Why are you the last to bring the king back to his house? (For the talk of all Israel was come to the king in his house.)

12 You are my brethren, you are my bone and my flesh, why are you the last to bring back the king?

A sense of his misconduct would also render him more humble, and easier to manage than Joab, whose insolence caused him to be 13 And say ye to Amasa: Art not thou my bone and my flesh? So do God to me, and add more, if thou be not the chief captain of the army before me always, in the place of Joab.

14 And he inclined the heart of all the men of Juda, as it were of one man: and they sent to the king, saying: Return thou and all thy servants.

15 And the king returned, and came as far as the Jordan, and all Juda came as far as Galgal to meet the king, and to bring him over the Jordan.

16 ^aAnd Semei, the son of Gera, the son of Jemini, of Bahurim, made haste and went down with the men of Juda, to meet king David,

17 With a thousand men of Benjamin, and Siba, the servant of the house of Saul: and his fifteen sons, and twenty servants were with him: and going over the Jordan,

18 They passed the fords before the king, that they might help over the king's household, and do according to his commandment. And Semei, the son of Gera, falling down before the king, when he was come over the Jordan,

19 Said to him: Impute not to me, my lord, the iniquity, nor remember the injuries of thy servant, on the day that thou, my lord the king, wentest out of Jerusalem, nor lay it up in thy heart, O king.

20 For I, thy servant, acknowledge my sin: and therefore, I am come this day the first of all the house of Joseph, and am come down to meet my lord the king.

21 But Abisai, the son of Sarvia, answering said: Shall Semei for these words not be put to death, because he cursed the Lord's anointed?

22 And David said: What have I to do with you, ye sons of Sarvia? why are you a satan this day to me? shall there any man be killed this day in Israel? do not I know that this day I am made king over Israel?

23 And the king said to Semei: Thou shalt not die. And he swore unto him.

24 And Miphiboseth, the son of Saul, came down to meet the king, and he had neither washed his feet, nor trimmed his beard, nor washed his garments, from the day that the king went out, until the day of his return in peace.

25 And when he met the king, at Jerusalem, the king said to him: Why camest thou not with me, Miphiboseth?

26 And he answering, said: My lord, O king, my servant despised me: for I thy servant spoke to him to saddle me an ass, that I might get on and go with the king: for I thy servant am lame.

27 ^bMoreover he hath also accused me, thy servant, to thee, my lord the king: but ^cthou, my lord the king, art as an angel of God, do what pleaseth thee.

28 For all of my father's house were no better than worthy of death before my lord the king; and thou hast set me, thy servant, among the guests of thy table: what just complaint therefore have I? or what right to cry any more to the king?

29 Then the king said to him: Why speakest thou any more? what I have said is determined: thou and Siba divide the possessions.

30 And Miphiboseth answered the king: Yea, let him take all, forasmuch as my lord, the king, is returned peaceably into his house.

31 Berzellai also, the Galaadite, coming down from Rogelim, brought the king over the Jordan, being ready also to wait on him beyond the river.

32 ^dNow Berzellai, the Galaadite, was of a great age, that is to say, fourscore years old, and he provided the king with sustenance when he abode in the camp: for he was a man exceedingly rich.

33 And the king said to Berzellai: Come with me, that thou mayst rest secure with me in Jerusalem?

34 And Berzellai said to the king: How many are the days of the years of my life, that I should go up with the king to Jerusalem?

35 ^eI am this day fourscore years old; are my senses quick to discern sweet and bitter? or can meat or drink delight thy servant? or can I hear any more the voice of singing men and singing women? why should thy servant be a burden to my lord the king?

36 I, thy servant, will go on a little way from the Jordan with thee: I need not this recompence.

insupportable to the king. David designed to transfer the authority of the latter, (C.) which he had now enjoyed twenty-three years, since the taking of Zion. David's promise did not oblige him to keep Joab in that office for life, if his conduct should prove unsatisfactory. Hence he appointed Amasa to pursue the rebels, and afterwards Abisai, setting Joab aside. But the haughty warrior supplanted both, and retained the command, as it were in spite of his sovereign. H.—Sanchez thinks that David made a compensation to Miphiboseth for what he left in the hands of his servant, as he not wish to disturb the harmony of the day, nor to inflict any punishment on offenders. 38 Then the king said to him: Let Chamaam go over with me, and I will do for him whatsoever shall please thee, and all that thou shalt ask of me, thou shalt obtain.

39 And when all the people and the king had passed over the Jordan, the king kissed Berzellai, and blessed him: and he returned to his own place.

40 So the king went on to Galgal, and Chamaam with him. Now all the people of Juda had brought the king over, and only half of the people of Israel were there.

41 Therefore all the men of Israel running together to the king, said to him: Why have our brethren, the men of Juda, stolen thee away, and have brought the king and his household over the Jordan, and all the men of David with him?

42 And all the men of Juda answered the men of Israel: Because the king is nearer to me: why art thou angry for this matter? have we eaten any thing of the king's, or have any gifts been given us?

43 And the men of Israel answered the men of Juda, and said: I have ten parts in the king more than thou, and David belongeth to me more than to thee: why hast thou done me a wrong, and why was it not told me first, that I might bring back my king? And the men of Juda answered more harshly than the men of Israel.

CHAP. XX.

Seba's rebellion. Amasa is slain by Joab. Abela is besieged: but upon the citizens casting over the wall the head of Seba, Joab departeth with his army.

AND there happened to be there a man of Belial, whose name was Seba, the son of Bochri, a man of Jemini: and he sounded the trumpet, and said: We have no part in David, nor inheritance in the son of Isai: return to thy dwellings, O Israel.

2 And all Israel departed from David, and followed Seba, the son of Bochri: but the men of Juda stuck to their king from the Jordan unto Jerusalem.

3 And when the king was come into his house at Jerusalem, he took the ten women, his concubines, whom he had left to keep the house, and put them in ward, allowing them provisions; but went not in unto them: so they were shut up unto the day of their death, living in widowhood.

4 And the king said to Amasa: Assemble to me all the men of Juda against the third day, and be thou here.

5 So Amasa went to assemble the men of Juda, but he tarried beyond the set time which the king had appointed him.

6 And David said to Abisai: Now will Seba, the son of Bochri, do us more harm than did Absalom: take thou, therefore, the servants of thy lord, and pursue after him, lest he find fenced cities, and escape us.

7 So Joab's men went out with him, and the Cerethi and the Phelethi: and all the valiant men went out of Jerusalem, to pursue after Seba, the son of Bochri.

8 And when they were at the great stone, which is in Gabaon, Amasa came and met them. And Joab had on a close coat of equal length with his habit, and over it was girded with a sword, hanging down to his flank in a scabbard, made in such manner as to come out with the least motion and strike.

9 And Joab said to Amasa: God save thee, my brother. And he took Amasa by the chin with his right hand to kiss him.

10 But Amasa did not take notice of the sword which Joab had, and he struck him in the side, and shed out his bowels to the ground, and gave him not a second wound, and he died. And Joab, and Abisai, his brother, pursued after Seba, the son of Bochri.

11 In the mean time, some men of Joab's company, stopping at the dead body of Amasa, said: Behold he that would have been in Joab's stead, the companion of David.

12 And Amasa, imbrued with blood, lay in the midst of the way. A certain man saw this, that all the people stood still to look upon him, so he removed Amasa out of the high-way, into the field, and covered him with a garment, that they who passed might not stop on his account.

C.—But the disproportion was by no means so great as ten to one; so that the Israelites unjustly pretended that they had so much greater pretensions to the honour of bringing the king to his capital, in a sort of triumph. David might perhaps have waited a little longer, (H.) and showed less predilection for his own tribe. C. Salien.—But what obligation was there for either? He had been long enough from Jerusalem, and eager to return, as soon as Amasa brought to him the tribe of Juda, and several of Benjamin, ver. 16. H.—First. Heb. may be, "Did not I first propose the bringing back the king?" ver. 11. C.—Israel. VER. 6. Lord, the king; or perhaps Joab. M.—A select company always attended the king; and some of these he sent, for greater expedition, to attack Seba, before he had become too strong. II.

VER. 7. Men. It seems Joab accompanied them, though in a manner divested of his command, by the king's appointing Amasa, and then Abisai, to his exclusion. After the slaughter of the former he resumed his authority (ver. 10); and David was forced to acquiesce, for fear of another civil war, reserving his punishment for more peaceable times. H.

C.—Prot. "Joab's garment, that he had put on, was girded unto him, and upon it a girdle with a sword, fastened upon his loins, in the sheath thereof, and as he went forth it fell out."

people went on following Joab, to pursue after Seba, the son of Bochri.

14 Now he had passed through all the tribes of Israel unto Abela and Bethmaacha: and all the chosen men were gathered together unto him.

15 And they came, and besieged him in Abela, and in Bethmaacha, and they cast up works round the city, and the city was besieged: and all the people that were with Joab, laboured to throw down the walls.

16 And a wise woman cried out from the city: Hear, hear, and say to Joab: Come near hither, and I will speak with thee.

17 And when he was come near to her, she said to him: Art thou Joab? And he answered: I am. And she spoke thus to him: Hear the words of thy handmaid. He answered: I do hear.

18 And she again said: A saying was used of old as a proverb: They that inquire, let them inquire in Abela: And so they made an end.

19 Arr. not I she that answer truth in Israel, and thou seekest to destroy the city, and to overthrow a mother in Israel? Why wilt thou throw down the inheritance of the Lord?

20 And Joab answering, said: God forbid, God forbid that I should; I do not throw down, nor destroy.

21 The matter is not so; but a man of Mount Ephraim, Seba, the son of Bochri by name, hath lifted up his hand against king David: Deliver him only, and we will depart from the city. And the woman said to Joab: Behold his head shall be thrown to thee from the wall.

22 So she went to all the people, and spoke to them wisely: and they cut off the head of Seba, the son of Bochri, and cast it out to Joab. And he sounded the trumpet, and they departed from the city, every one to their home: And Joab returned to Jerusalem to the king.

23 So Joab was over all the army of Israel: and Banaias, the son of Joiada, was over the Cerethites and Phelethites.

A famine of three years, for the sin of Saul against the Gabaonites, at whose desire seven of Saul's race are crucified. War again with the Philistines.

AND^b there was a famine in the days of David for three years successively: and David consulted the oracle of the Lord. And the Lord said: It is for Saul and his bloody house, because he slew the Gabaonites.

2 Then the king calling for the Gabaonites, said to them: (Now the Gabaonites were not of the children of Israel, but the remains of the Amorrites: "and the children of Israel had sworn to them, and Saul sought to slay them out of zeal, as it were, for the children of Israel and Juda.)

3 David, therefore, said to the Gabaonites: What shall I do for you? and what shall be the atonement for you, that you may bless the inheritance of the Lord?

4 And the Gabaonites said to him: We have no contest about silver and gold, but against Saul, and against his house: neither do we desire, that any man be slain of Israel. And the king said to them: What will you, then, that I should do for you?

5 And they said to the king: The man that crushed us and oppressed us unjustly, we must destroy in such manner, that there be not so much as one left of his stock in all the coasts of Israel.

6 Let seven men of his children be delivered unto us, that we may crucify them to the Lord, in Gabaa of Saul, once the chosen of the Lord. And the king said: I will give them.

7 And the king spared Miphiboseth, the son of Jonathan, the son of Saul, because of the oath of the Lord, that had been between David and Jonathan, the son of Saul.

8 So the king took the two sons of Respha, the daughter of Aia, whom she bore to Saul, Armoni, and Miphiboseth: and the five sons of Michol, the daughter of Saul, whom she bore to Hadriel, the son of Berzellai, that was of Molathi, 11 And it was told David, what Respha, the daughter of Aia, the concubine of Saul, had done.

12 And David went, and took the bones of Saul, and the bones of Jonathan, his son, from the men of Jabes Galaad,^b who had stolen them from the street of Bethsan, where the Philistines had hanged them, when they had slain Saul in Gelboe.

14 And they buried them with the bones of Saul, and of Jonathan, his son, in the land of Benjamin, in the side, in the sepulchre of Cis, his father: and they did all that the king had commanded, and God showed mercy again to the land after these things.

Some think it was towards the beginning of David's reign, since he leads his men to battle; or the Philistines might have made an irruption into his dominions, about three years after the death of Absalom. C.—David had offered to put himself at the head of the army against his son. Chap. xviii. 2. H.—Faint. He was now sixty-four years old. Salien.

VER. 16. Jesbibenob may signify, "Jesbi, the son of Ob." Sept. "Jesbe, of Nob, who was of the race of the giants." Arapha seems to have been one of great name, (ver. 18—22,) who had several children; unless other giants assumed his name. C.—Ounces. Heb. "sicles of brass, in weight."

VER. 18. Gob, as Gazer was called by the Philistines (1 Par. xx. 4. Salien); unless (H.) the former word be a mistake of the transcriber. C.—Sept. (Alex.) reads, Geth. H.—Sobochai, one of David's valiant men. 1 Par. xi. 29.—Saphai added in 1 Chron. xx.

VER. 19. Adeodatus, the son of Forrest. So it is rendered in the Latin Vulgate, by giving the interpretation of the Hebrew names, which are Elhanan, the son of Jaare. Ch.—We should translate all the proper names, or none; as the present mode is extremely perplexing. H.—Regularly proper names should be retained. C.—But the learned have often chosen to give the import of foreign names in the language in which they have been writing. See Du Thou's History.—An embroiderer. Prot. make this a part of the man's name, "Jaare-oregin." Sept. "the son of Ariorgeim." In 1 Par. xx. no notice is taken of his profession. H.

18 "There was also a second battle in Gob against the Philistines: then Sobochai, of Husathi, slew Saph, of the race of Arapha, of the family of the giants.

19 And there was a third battle in Gob against the Philistines, in which Adeodatus, the son of Forrest, an embroiderer, of Bethlehem, slew Goliath, the Gethite, the shaft of whose spear was like a weaver's beam.

20 A fourth battle was in Geth: where there was a man of great stature, that had six fingers on each hand, and six toes on each foot, four and twenty in all, and he was of the race of Arapha.

21 And he reproached Israel: and Jonathan, the son of Samaa, the brother of David, slew him.

22 These four were born of Arapha, in Geth, and they fell by the hand of David, and of his servants.

CHAP. XXII.

King David's psalm of thanksgiving for his deliverance from all his enemies.

AND David spoke to the Lord the words of this canticle, in the day that the Lord delivered him out of the hand of all his enemies, and out of the hand of Saul.

2 And he said: "The Lord is my rock, and my strength, and my saviour.

3 God is my strong one, in him will I trust. my shield, and the horn of my salvation: he lifteth me up, and is my refuge: my saviour, thou wilt deliver me from iniquity.

4 'I will call on the Lord who is worthy to be praised: and I shall be saved from my enemies.

5 For the pangs of death have surrounded me: the floods of Belial have made me afraid.

6 The cords of hell compassed me: the snares of death prevented me.

7 In my distress, I will call upon the Lord, and I will

* 1 Kings xvii. 7.—^d 1 Par. xx. 4.—^e Psal. xvii. 3.—^f Psal. xvii. 4.

—That passage will evince that Elhanan is not the same with David, as some would infer from the mention of Goliath's death, but the son of Jair, uncle of Joab, (chap. xxiii. 24,) who was born at Bethlehem, though the verse in Paral. would insinuate, less correctly, that the giant's name was Lechem, thus, "Elhanan . . slew Lechem, the brother," &c., as the copyist had written ath instead of bith. C.—Our version has not this mistake: "Adeodatus, the son of Saltus, a Bethlehemite, slew the brother of Goliath, the Gethite," &c. 1 Par. xx. 5. H.—"It would be difficult to find a passage more disfigured than the present; and without the help of the Paral. it would be impossible to make it out." C.—Kennicott makes a similar remark. Diss. 1, and 2. But he believes that the Book of Chronicles, though the latest, and usually the most corrupt, of the Old Testament, is here perfectly correct; and that the passage before us is strangely corrupted, "Jaare Oregim, a Bethlehemite," being placed instead of, . . "Jaar slew Lahmi," as he thinks that oregin, "weavers," has been inserted from the line below, p. 79. H.—Goliath. He might have the same name as his brother, who had been slain by David forty-three years before (Salien); or the title of brother may only signify that this giant resembled the former in size and strength. Prov xviii. 9.—Beam. See 1 Kings xvii. 7. C.

VER. 20. Fourth. Josephus says this was the last war with the Philistines, and Tostat supposes that they wished to retake the city of Geth. Salien.—Stature, or "of contradiction." Aquila.—Heb. Modun. Sept. leave it as the proper name of a place, "Madon," specified Jos. xi. 1, and xii. 19. Capel would read, "a man of Madian."

VER. 22. Of David, who was present, though it does not appear that he slew any of the four. C.

CHAP. XXII. VER. 1. Spoke, &c. By comparing this with the 17th Psalm we may be convinced how much the Hebrew varies, particularly if we examine also the MSS. Kennicott specifies no less than six hundred variations in this one canticle, and refutes the opinion of those who say that the 17th Psalm is a second edition, corrected by David's own hand, as the MSS. frequently show the inaccuracies of the printed copies. He has collated them with Walton's Polyglott. The variations are not, however, all distinct from each other, sometimes twenty MSS. having the same various readings, and many of them relate to the letter n. See Diss. 2, p. 565. We shall give the explication in the order of the Psalms. The collation of parallel passages is of infinite advantage. Frequently (H.) the words differ so as to explain one another.

cry to my God: and he will hear my voice out of his temple, and my cry shall come to his ears.

8 The earth shook and trembled, the foundations of the mountains were moved and shaken, because he was angry with them.

9 A smoke went up from his nostrils, and a devouring fire out of his mouth: coals were kindled by it.

10 He bowed the heavens, and came down: and darkness was under his feet.

11 And he rode upon the Cherubims, and flew: and slid upon the wings of the wind.

12 He made darkness a covering round about him: dropping water out of the clouds of the heavens.

13 By the brightness before him, the coals of fire were kindled.

14 The Lord shall thunder from heaven: and the Most High shall give forth his voice.

15 He shot his arrows, and scattered them: his lightning, and consumed them.

16 And the overflowings of the sea appeared, and the foundations of the world were laid open at the rebuke of the Lord, at the blast of the spirit of his wrath.

17 He sent from on high, and took me, and drew me out of many waters.

18 He delivered me from my most mighty enemy, and from them that hated me: for they were too strong for me.

19 He prevented me in the day of my affliction, and the Lord became my stay.

20 And he brought me forth into a large place, he delivered me, because I pleased him.

21 The Lord will reward me according to my justice: and according to the cleanness of my hands he will repay me.

22 Because I have kept the ways of the Lord, and have not wickedly departed from my God.

23 For all his judgments are in my sight: and his statutes I have not removed from me.

24 And I shall be perfect with him: and shall keep myself from my iniquity.

25 And the Lord will recompense me according to my justice: and according to the cleanness of my hands in the sight of his eyes.

26 With the holy one, thou wilt be holy: and with the valiant perfect.

27 With the elect, thou wilt be elect: and with the perverse, thou wilt be perverted.

28 And the poor people thou wilt save: and with thy eyes, thou wilt humble the haughty.

29 For thou art my lamp, O Lord: and thou, O Lord, wilt enlighten my darkness.

30 For through thee I shall be girded and run: through my God I shall leap over the wall.

* Psal. cxliiii. 1.—b Psal. xvii. 49.

VER. 7. Temple. David was now busy in making preparations for it.

VER. 14. Shall. Heb. as well in the past tense. "The Lord thundered," &c. H.

VER. 16. Overflowings. Heb. "channels," the waters receding as at the Red Sea, and at the passage of the Jordan.

VER. 22. God. Perhaps David might have written this before his fall; or, afterwards, his sincere repentance had restored him to his former state.

VER. 26. Holy; treating all according to their deserts. -H.

31 As for God, his way is spotless, the word of the Lord is tried by fire: he is the shield of all that trust in him.

32 Who is God but the Lord: and who is strong but our God?

33 God, who hath girded me with strength: and made my way perfect.

34 *Who maketh my feet like the feet of harts, and setteth me upon my high places.

35 Who teacheth my hands to war: and maketh my arms like a bow of brass.

36 Thou hast given me the shield of thy salvation: and thy mildness hath multiplied me.

37 Thou shalt enlarge my steps under me: and my ancles shall not fail.

38 I will pursue after my enemies, and crush them and will not return again till I consume them.

39 I will consume them, and break them in pieces, so that they shall not rise: they shall fall under my feet.

40 Thou hast girded me with strength to battle: thou hast made them that resisted me to bow under me.

41 My enemies, thou hast made to turn their back to me: and them that hated me, and I shall destroy them.

42 They shall cry, and there shall be none to save: to the Lord, and he shall not hear them.

43 I shall beat them as small as the dust of the earth: I shall crush them, and spread them abroad like the mire of the streets.

44 Thou wilt save me from the contradictions of my people: thou wilt keep me to be the head of the Gentiles: the people which I know not, shall serve me.

45 The sons of the stranger will resist me, at the hearing of the ear they will obey me.

46 The strangers are melted away, and shall be straitened in their distresses.

47 The Lord liveth, and my God is blessed: and the strong God of my salvation shall be exalted.

48 God, who giveth me revenge, and bringeth down people under me.

49 Who bringeth me forth from my enemies, and lifteth me up from them that resist me: ^bfrom the wicked man, thou shalt deliver me.

50 *Therefore will I give thanks to thee, O Lord, among the Gentiles, and will sing to thy name.

51 Giving great salvation to his king, and showing mercy to David, his anointed, and to his seed for ever

CHAP. XXIII.

The last words of David. A catalogue of his valiant men.

NOW these are David's last words. David, the son of Isai, said: The man to whom it was appointed concerning the Christ of the God of Jacob, ^dthe excellent psalmist of Israel, said:

* Rom. xv. 9.—d Acts ii. 10.

VER. 29. Lamp. Heb. Thair, "thou wilt light" my lamp, seems deficient, as it is found in some MSS., Syr., Arab., Psal. xvii., &c. Kennicott.

VER. 44. Me. Though David conquered some Gentiles, and some were converted to the true faith under the Old Testament, yet the fulness of the Gentiles belongs to the Church of Christ, the perpetual stability of which is here foretold, ver. 51. W.

CHAP. XXIII. VER. 1. Last words, which he spoke by inspiration, (M.) or which may be considered as the conclusion of his Psalms, and inserted after 2 The Spirit of the Lord hath spoken by me, and his word by my tongue.

3 The God of Israel said to me, the strong one of Israel spoke, the ruler of men, the just ruler in the fear of God.

4 As the light of the morning, when the sun riseth, shineth in the morning, without clouds, and as the grass springeth out of the earth by rain.

5 Neither is my house so great with God, that he should make with me an eternal covenant, firm in all things, and assured. For he is all my salvation, and all my will: neither is there aught thereof, that springeth not up.

6 But transgressors shall all of them be plucked up as thorns, which are not taken away with hands.

7 And if a man will touch them, he must be armed with iron, and with the staff of a lance: but they shall be set on fire, and burnt to nothing.

8 *These are the names of the valiant men of David. Jeshabam, sitting in the chair, was the wisest chief among the three; he was like the most tender little worm of the wood, who killed eight hundred men at one onset.

* 1 Par. xi. 11.

the seventy-first (C.); or as a preface or summary of those Divine canticles (D.); or they relate to the last ages, and to the Messias, (Chal.) the end of the law. H.—Christ, who should be born of him; or David himself was appointed to be “the king” of God’s people. Sept. “he whom God raised up, the Christ of,” &c. Heb. “sovereign anointed of,” &c.—Psalms. The Holy Spirit directs David to speak in his own praise. His psalms were always most highly esteemed in Israel. C.

VER. 3. Strong one. This is one of the most common titles of God, 1 Kings ii. 2. Heb. “the rock.”—In the fear. Heb. “of the fear;” that is, of the just, who live in the fear of God. C.

VER. 4. As the light, &c. So shall be the kingdom of Christ. Ch.—Heb. “Like the morning light, shall the sun arise.” But is this sense? Is not the sun the light of the morning? The oldest Heb. MS. in England has the word Jeve before sun, which seems to have been acknowledged by the Sept., though now unintelligible; and thus we are freed from this difficulty, and the passage is proved to be prophetic of the great Sun of justice. Mal. iv. 2; Isa. lx. 2. Kennicott, Dis. 1, p. 471.—The Heb. is extremely obscure. C.—Prot. And he shall be as the light of the morning, when the sun riseth, even a morning without clouds; as the tender grass springeth out of the earth by clear shining after rain. H.—We might expect that David was going to compare the glory of his reign and of his family with that of the rising sun. Judg. v. ult. But he does not finish the comparison, being filled with a sense of his own misery. C.

VER. 5. Neither is my house, &c. As if he should say: This everlasting covenant was not due to my house: but purely owing to his bounty, who is all my salvation, and my will; that is, who hath always saved me, and granted me what I desired of him; so that I and my house, through his blessing, have sprung up, and succeeded in all things. Ch.—He clearly distinguishes between the covenant made with him as to his earthly kingdom, and that which regards Christ. W.—Even the former should be of long duration. Psal. cxxxi. 11. H.—Up. Heb. seems to contradict all that had gone before; “for it shall not flourish.” C.—Prot. “although he make it not to grow” (H.); unless we read with an interrogation, “And shall not my family flourish?” which has a natural reference to ver. 4. C.—God had blessed David with the dew of heaven, and with the fatness of the earth. M.—His glory and happiness should not be of short duration, like the brightest summer-day, or a transient flower. H.

VER. 6. But. This word is neglected by the Sept., who subjoin this to the preceding verse. “Because the lawless man shall not flourish. They are all like thorns thrust out, for they shall not be handled,” lest they prick. H.

VER. 8. Jeshabam, the son of Hachamoni. For this was the name of this hero, as appears from 1 Chron. xi. 11. Ch.—But then sitting, &c. should not be retained. H.—Most tender, &c. He appeared like one tender and weak, but was indeed most valiant and strong. It seems the Latin has here given the interpretation of the Hebrew name of the hero, to whom Jeshabam was like, instead of the name itself, which was Adino, the Eznite, one much renowned of old for his valour. Ch.—The Vulg. has, contrary to custom, translated many of the proper names. C.—The French version would suppose that Adino, the Heznite, was the hero’s name; and queen Elizabeth’s version (1599) is, “He that sat in the seat of wisdom, being chief of the princes, was Adino, the Eznite.” H.—But no such person is mentioned any where else in the Bible; and these words have been corrupted, like many others in this chapter, as may be gathered from collating it with Chronicles, &c.—In the chair. Heb. Bosboth, “seems to be carelessly transcribed in here from the line above,” as Oregim was taken from the subsequent line. Chap. xxi. 19.—Wisest. Heb. “the Hachmonite.”—Three; it is in Heb. “the third;” and in Chron. thirty, improperly.—Killed, or “wound-

9 After him was Eleazar, the son of Dodo, the Ahohite, one of the three valiant men that were with David, when they defied the Philistines, and they were there gathered together to battle.

10 And when the men of Israel were gone away, he stood and smote the Philistines till his hand was weary and grew stiff with the sword: and the Lord wrought a great victory that day: and the people that were fled away, returned to take spoils of them that were slain.

11 And after him was Semma, the son of Age, of Arari. And the Philistines were gathered together in a troop: for there was a field full of lentils. And when the people were fled from the face of the Philistines, 12 He stood in the midst of the field, and defended it, and defeated the Philistines: and the Lord gave a great victory.

13 Moreover, also before this, these three who were princes^b among the thirty, went down, and came to David, in the harvest time, into the cave of Odollam: and the camp of the Philistines was in the valley of the giants.

14 And David was then in a hold: and there was a garrison of the Philistines then in Bethlehem.

ed,” is the general interpretation of elol; but it signifies also, “a soldier.”—Eight is three in Paral. Similar mistakes have probably arisen from the use of numeral letters. See 4 Kings viii. 26. We read that Abisai lifted up his spear against three hundred. This was, perhaps, a usual number for a regiment of three companies. 1 Kings xxix. 2. Both Jeshabam and Abisai ventured to contend, singly, with so superior a force; but the latter displayed rather less valour, so that he did not attain unto the glory of the former; which he ought to have done, if both had killed the same number. Adino, the Asoncan, is useless, (C.) as a proper name: when corrected, it is rendered, (H.) “he drew,” &c.

VER. 9. Dodo. In Latin, Patruj ejus, which is the interpretation of the Hebrew name Dodo. The same occurs in ver. 24, (Ch.) and signifies, “of his paternal uncle.” H.—Sept. read Dudia, (C.) “of his father’s brother.” He, or his father, is styled Dudai, 1 Par. xxvii. 4. C.—Sept. (Alex.) translate both Dodo and Dodi, “the son of his father’s brother,” the son of Sousei, or (Vat.) Doudei. Dodi seems to be the more accurate here, as he is thus more distinguished from Dodo, ver. 24; 1 Chron. xi. 26.—Defied. Heb. is incorrect, and ought to be a proper name, as is evident from the word there.—Josephus calls it, ἀσάμω, (perhaps originally ἀσάδαμω). Chron. Pasdammin, or Ephesdammin. 1 Kings xvii. 1. It is hardly probable that the Hebrews should defy or upbraid the Philistines, and immediately run away. We should therefore translate with 1 Par. men. “He was with David at Pasdammin. And when the Philistines were there gathered together to battle, and the men of Israel were gone away, he arose,” &c. Kennicott.

VER. 10. Sword; holding it, and exerting himself so long (Sanctius): or on account of the blood, which glued, as it were, his hand to the sword. Joseph. M.—This verse, and as far as troop in the following, is omitted in 1 Par.; so that Semma is not so much as mentioned, (H.) and of course the number thirty-seven cannot be found. Ken.—Perhaps Samaoth may be the same hero. 1 Par. ii. 27, and xxvii. 8. C.

VER. 11. Troop. Heb. Leie, has been much controverted: but it appears to be the name of Lechi, or Lehi, “the jaw-bone,” (Josephus and Sept. Complut.) so memorable for the exploit of Samson. Bochart Anni. p. 1. B. ii. 15.—Vulg. lit. in statione, “in a station.” Some copies of the Sept. “against wild beasts;” “To hunt wild beasts.” Syr. and Arab. But it is most probably the name of a place. C.—Lentils. 1 Par. Barley seems more correct, as the field could not be full of both at the same time (H.); and barley is of more general utility. Kennic.—Yet some would assert that there was barley in one part and lentils in the other. Buxtorf, &c.

VER. 13. Before this. The exploits performed before the death of Goliath have been recorded. The following took place soon after the taking of Jerusalem. Heb. simply, “And three of the Schalischim came to David at harvest-time, (Paral. more correctly, to the rocks), and into the cave,” &c. C.—Three is undoubtedly the proper word, though the printed Heb. copies have thirty in the text; except the most ancient edition of Ximenis, 1515, which retains three, with all the versions, and some Heb. MSS., and as the ver. 17 itself reads among, would be better above (ver. 23); as the three officers aforesaid were not of the body of thirty, but of a still higher order.—Harvest. Heb. al Kotsir, is never used elsewhere in this sense; and the Sept. have left the latter word as a proper name, “at Kasoar,” et sur seems to have been the original word, as in Paral. “to the rock.” Such places had frequently caverns or strong-holds, 1 Kings xxiv. 1—4.—Camp. The Sept. also seem to have read mene, as in Par., instead of eith, which never occurs for “a troop.” Ken.—This camp was distant from the station at Bethlehem, (M.) which was distant from Jerusalem “two hours’ travel.” Maundrell—Giants, or Raphaim, 2 Kings xxi. 18. M.

15 And David longed, and said: O that some man would give me a drink of the water out of the cistern, that is in Bethlehem, by the gate.

16 And the three valiant men broke through the camp of the Philistines, and drew water out of the cistern of Bethlehem, that was by the gate, and brought it to David: but he would not drink, but offered it to the Lord,

17 Saying: The Lord be merciful to me, that I may not do this: Shall I drink the blood of these men that went, and the peril of their lives? therefore he would not drink. These things did these three mighty men.

18 Abisai, also the brother of Joab, the son of Sarvia, was chief among three: and he lifted up his spear against three hundred, whom he slew; and he was renowned among the three,

19 And the noblest of three, and was their chief; but to the three first he attained not.

20 And Banaias, the son of Joiada, a most valiant man, of great deeds, of Cabseel: he slew the two lions of Moab, and he went down, and slew a lion in the midst of a pit, in the time of snow.

21 He also slew an Egyptian, a man worthy to be a sight, having a spear in his hand: but he went down to him with a rod, and forced the spear out of the hand of the Egyptian, and slew him with his own spear.

VER. 14. Garrison. Lit. "station," (H.) or advanced guard.—In. The b is omitted in Heb., as on many other occasions (4 Kings xiv. 14. Ken.); owing perhaps to the following word beginning with the same letter, H.

VER. 15. Gate. David had been educated in that town. M.—He expresses his wish to see his native place delivered from the hands of the enemy, more than for water (Sanctus. Ken.); or being very thirsty, he speaks his sentiments without designing that any should attempt to procure him the water. C.—The three valiant men considered his desire as a law. M.—They were not to be condemned of rashness, though it would have been such in ordinary men. Salien.—When they brought the water he would not drink, judging that precious things should be offered to God. W.

VER. 16. Camp, or station of soldiers, ver. 13, 14.—Offered it, as "a libation," according to the Heb. and Sept. Visee is commonly used; but vinsoe, in Par., is the truer reading, as "it contains the three radical letters; and it were greatly to be wished that the verbs in every other place had also those radical letters restored, which have been omitted by the Masorets, and supplied by their punctuations." Ken. Dis. 1, p. 154.—Lord, as a sacrifice, worthy of him, and to teach his followers to be temperate, (M.) and not to expose their lives unnecessarily. H.—"He had formerly indulged himself in forbidden pleasures." S. Greg.—David thus asked pardon for having, undesignedly, hazarded the lives of his men, (Ken.) and gave thanks for their safe return. Josephus.—A libation of water was solemnly made, 1 Kings vii. 6.

VER. 17. Drink. This word is acknowledged in 1 Par. and in all the ancient versions. Ken.—Prot. supply, "Is not this the blood of the men that went in jeopardy of their lives?"

VER. 18. Three. Sept. (Alex.) and Josephus read "six hundred," (H.) against all the rest.

VER. 19. Three. Heb. eci, seems to be mistaken for dosnim, "above two;" as one of the Greek versions in the Hexapla renders it, with the Sept. "Of the three he was more honourable than two; therefore he was their captain, and yet to." &c. Thus we see a double ternary fully established, ver. 8. Kennicott.

VER. 20. Banaias. The v at the end of this man's name is wanting in Par. It serves to distinguish him more from one of the thirty, who was the eleventh captain in waiting on the king (1 Par. xxvii. 14); whereas this was the third, (1b. 5.) and one of great renown. 3 Kings i. 32.—Lions. Heb. ari, "a lion," and al, "god," designate people "of extraordinary valour." Ken.—These two were noblemen, (Chal.) giants, (Joseph.) or fortresses 'Vatab.]; namely, Areopolis, which is divided into two parts by the Arnon. C.—Some suppose that he slew three real lions. The last, being in such a confined situation, enhanced his merit. Cajet. M.—The Alex. copy of the Sept. has a great omission of the words between slew, occasioned by the word recurring twice; as also ver. 21.

VER. 21. Sight, for size. Josephus.—Heb. "a man of great aspect," which 1 Par. properly explains "five cubits high."—Hand. Sept. supply what seems to be omitted, "like a weaver's beam," (Ken.) as it is found in Paral.—Rod, or rather "a staff," like David's. 1 Kings xvii. 43, and xl. 43. H.

VER. 23. Who were. Heb. "he was honourable above the thirty." Sept. erroneously read three; as he was only the second in this series, though superior to the body of thirty. See ver. 13. The versions seem here perplexed, for want of observing this distinction of ranks.—Council. Heb. "over his obedience," or "guard." Joseph. Chap. xx. 23.—Sept. "over his own country," moespethu.

22 These things did Banaias, the son of Joiada.

23 And he was renowned among the three valiant men, who were the most honourable among the thirty; but he attained not to the first three: And David made him of his privy council.

24 Asael, the brother of Joab, was one of the thirty; Elehanan, the son of Dodo, of Bethlehem, 25 Semma, of Harodi, Elica, of Harodi.

26 Heles, of Phalti, Hira, the son of Acces, of Thecua,

27 Abiezer, of Anathoth, Mobonnai, of Husati,

28 Selmon, the Ahohite, Maharai, the Netophathite,

29 Heled, the son of Baana, also a Netophathite, Ithai, the son of Ribai, of Gabaath, of the children of Benjamin,

30 Banaia, the Pharathonite, Heddai, of the torrent Gaas,

31 Abialbon, the Arbathite, Azmaveth, of Beromi,

32 Eliaba, of Salaboni: of the sons of Jassen, Jonathan,

33 Semma, of Oron, Aliam, the son of Sarar, the Arorite,

34 Eliphelet, the son of Aasbai, the son of Machati, Eliam, the son of Achitophel, the Gelonite,

35 Hesrai, of Carmel, Pharai, of Arbi,

36 Igaal, the son of Nathan, of Soba, Bonni, of Gadi,

37 Selec, of Ammoni, Naharai, the Berothite, armour-bearer of Joab, the son of Sarvia, instead of the present al mossmuthu, super auseultationem suam; or rather mossmortlu, custodiam suam. Grot. Ken.—Banaias held a very distinguished rank among the officers at court. He was like the king's eye and ear. H.

VER. 24. Was one. Heb. the preposition b is here used, which signifies "above;" as ver. 13, and 23, and as Junius renders it. H.—"Asael . . . was head of the thirty." Arab.—He could not be one of that body, as the number is complete without him, and he is necessary to fill up the second ternary. The Book of Chronicles does not point this out with so much precision as it had been already done. Kennicott.—Asael was slain by Abner. Chap. ii. 23. He was captain of the fourth band. 1 Par. xxvii. 7.—Elehanan, the first of the thirty.—Dodo. Lit. patruj ejus, "of his (Asael's) uncle," which might, perhaps, be as well translated as 1 Par. xi. 26. See chap. xxi. 19. The Sept. give both, "Dodei, the son of his father's brother," as ver. 9 (H.); or "rather those two translations are by some transcriber, or editor, injudiciously thrown together." Kennicott.

VER. 25. Semma. The same with the third hero, though his country is differently written, ver. 11. C.—But this is very improbable, as the number of thirty-seven would be thus destroyed. The former was an Hararite. The Sept. style the present captain, Semoth, in 1 Par.; Vulg. Sammoth; and the Ald. copy has Semoth here. He was the fifth captain (1 Par. xxvii. 8); and the four subsequent ones relieved each other in waiting on the king.—Harodi, more correct than Arorite, 1 Par., (H.) as the Sept. also there terminate with di.—Elica is omitted, 1 Par. xi., (Kennic.) as he perished soon; and Zabad succeeding to his honours, comes at the end of these thirty heroes. Ib. v. 30. Junius.

VER. 26. Phalti. Par. Phalonite. H.—Nu has been mistaken for t. This is the seventh captain in waiting. Heb. "Hcletz, the Pelonite." It is a pity that the Masorets have introduced a new mode of pronunciation, and that it has been adopted by the Prot., so that it is almost impossible to recognise in their work the Scriptural names of the most ancient versions of the Sept. and Vulg. H.

VER. 27. Mobonnai. Sept. have translated the Heb. "of the sons," mabni, (Kennicott.) which is corrupted from sobei, or (H.) Sobboelhai, who was a Hu-sathite. 1 Par. xi. 29. C.

VER. 28. Selmon, or Ilai.

VER. 29. Heled. Heb. ends improperly in b.

VER. 30. Heddai: d is exchanged for r in Paral. Hurari.

VER. 31. Abialbon, or Abiel.—Beromi, or Azmoth, a Bauramite.

VER. 32. Jonathan. David's nephew, (1 Par.,) of the sons of Assem, a Gezonite. This ought, perhaps, to be "Gouni, of the sons," &c., otherwise the name will be lost, contrary to the design of the sacred writer. The verse is not terminated at Jonathan. But he was the son of Soge, (or rather of Semma, as here, ver. 33,) an Ararite. 1 Par. H.

VER. 33. Aliam, &c. Par. Aham, the son of Sachar. The change is easy.

VER. 34. Eliphelet, &c., or Eliphai, the son of Ur; Hepher, a Muche-rathite; Ahia, a Phelonite; Hesro, a Carmelite. See 1 Par. xi. 35.

VER. 35. Arbi. Par. "Naari, the son of Azbai." H.

VER. 36. Igaal, or Joel, the brother of Nathan. To reconcile these texts we may say the person was adopted by his brother, or had married his daughter which was not prohibited by the law.—Bonni, or Mibahar, the son of Agara.

VER. 37. Bearer, or "squire." W.

38 Ira, the Jethrite, Gareb, also a Jethrite.

39 Urias, the Hethite; thirty and seven in all.

CHAP. XXIV.

David numbereth the people: God sendeth a pestilence, which is stopt by David's prayer and sacrifice.

AND^a the anger of the Lord was again kindled against Israel, and stirred up David among them, saying: Go, number Israel and Juda.

2 And the king said to Joab, the general of his army: Go through all the tribes of Israel, from Dan to Bersabee, and number ye the people, that I may know the number of them.

3 And Joab said to the king: The Lord thy God increase thy people, and make them as many more as they are now, and again multiply them a hundred-fold in the sight of my lord the king, but what meaneth my lord the king by this kind of thing?

4 But the king's words prevailed over the words of Joab, and of the captains of the army: and Joab, and the captains of the soldiers, went out from the presence of the king, to number the people of Israel.

5 And when they had passed the Jordan, they came to Aroer to the right side of the city, which is in the vale of Gad.

6 And by Jazer they passed into Galaad, and to the lower land of Hodsí, and they came into the woodlands of Dan. And going about by Sidon,

7 They passed near the walls of Tyre, and all the land of the Hevite, and the Chanaanite, and they came to the south of Juda, into Bersabee:

^a A. M. 2987, A. C. 1017. 1 Par. xxi.

VER. 39. Urias, the husband of Bathsheba. We have observed (ver. 25) that in Paral. the number of thirty-seven is completed by Zabab, instead of Elica. H.—Only thirty-six are specified in these catalogues, as the name of the sixth hero (ver. 18) is omitted, whom some take to be Sobati, Jonathan, (chap. xxi. 22,) Joiada, (ver. 20,) or Joab. C.—But the truth is, Joab is not mentioned here at all, as he was sufficiently known for the chief (1 Par. xi. 6); and he makes up the number of thirty-seven. The sixth, therefore, was Asael (ver. 24); and after him there are exactly thirty. For though Gouni be lost, (ver. 32,) Semma is substituted in the following verse. H.

CHAP. XXIV. VER. 1. Stirred up, &c. This stirring up was not the doing of God, but of Satan; as it is expressly declared, 1 Chron. xxi. 1. Ch.—David was moved by vanity, &c., thus to displease God.—Among. Heb. “against;” as the king could have done nothing more prejudicial to his people, seventy thousand of whom perished on this occasion, ver. 15. H.

VER. 3. Thing. He speaks in stronger terms, and adds, (1 Par. xxi. 3,) which may be imputed as a sin to Israel. Joab was not extremely religious; yet he perceived the evil consequences, and, along with the other captains, expressed his sentiments with more respect than on former occasions. H.

VER. 5. Gad, at the eastern extremity, on the banks of the Arnon.

VER. 6. Hodsí. Sept. Alex. (5) “of Gad and Eliazar, (6) and they came into Galaad, and into the land of Ethaon Adasai, and they went into Dan Jaran.” The other editions vary. Heb. means, “to the land of new subjects,” or “lately conquered” (Junius) from the Agarites, (1 Par. v. 10,) which agrees with this situation. C. Lyran.—The commissioners first took an account of the tribe of Ruben, (M.) and then proceeded northward, till they returned from Dan towards the south. H.

VER. 7. Tyre, the ancient; about four thousand paces from the new city, which stands in an island. Strabo 16. See Jos. xix. 29.

VER. 8. Land. Yet they did not number the Levites or Benjamin, nor even the rest exactly, as Joab acted with reluctance. 1 Par. xxi. 6, and xxvii. 24. M.

VER. 9. Eight . . . and five. Theodotion says nine and four, which comes to the same sum. H.—But 1 Par. xxi. 5 reads, eleven hundred thousand, and four hundred and seventy thousand fighting men; though even there the Arab. version has the number here specified, which is less incredible. The fighting men are not above a fifth part of the population; and we may allow that David might have about seven million subjects. It seems, therefore, best to abandon the latter number as incorrect, since all commentators confess that similar mistakes have been made by the transcribers; and to maintain the contrary would be indirectly to throw the blame upon the sacred writers. C.—Yet some account for the variation by saying that Joab gave not in the full number here, (M. Abul., &c.,) which seems contrary to the text, there were found, &c. H.—A. Lapide supposes that the excess of number was occasioned by the subsequent list of the Levites, &c.

8 And having gone through the whole land, after nine months and twenty days, they came to Jerusalem.

9 And Joab gave up the sum of the number of the people to the king, and there were found of Israel, eight hundred thousand valiant men that drew the sword: and of Juda, five hundred thousand fighting men.

10 ^bBut David's heart struck him, after the people were numbered: and David said to the Lord: I have sinned very much in what I have done: but I pray thee, O Lord, to take away the iniquity of thy servant, because I have done exceeding foolishly.

11 And David arose in the morning, and the word of the Lord came to Gad, the prophet, and the seer of David, saying:

12 Go, and say to David: Thus saith the Lord: I give thee thy choice of three things, choose one of them, which thou wilt, that I may do it to thee.

13 And when Gad was come to David, he told him, saying: Either seven years of famine shall come to thee in thy land: or thou shalt flee three months before thy adversaries, and they shall pursue thee: or for three days, there shall be a pestilence in thy land. Now therefore deliberate, and see what answer I shall return to him that sent me.

14 And David said to Gad: I am in a great strait: ^cbut it is better that I should fall into the hands of the Lord (for his mercies are many) than into the hands of men.

15 And the Lord sent a pestilence upon Israel, from the morning unto the time appointed, and there died of the people from Dan to Bersabee, seventy thousand men.

16 And when the angel of the Lord had stretched out

But could they amount to so many? C.—And what proof is there that they were numbered, after the anger of God had manifested itself so severely? H.—If Joab chose to diminish the numbers of Israel, why has he increased those of Juda? Did he wish to flatter the king's vanity, or partiality for his own tribe? It is difficult to say what interest Joab could have in withholding the truth; and for the sacred historian to countenance his delusion would expose us to the same danger of mistake, and overthrow the authority of Scripture, no less than if the author had been liable to error, and uninspired. It seems, therefore, most rational to suppose that we have here the true list of the warriors, and that the book of Paral. has been injured by the negligence of transcribers, as it has on many other occasions. H.

VER. 10. David's heart struck him, after the people were numbered. That is, he was touched with a great remorse for the vanity and pride which had put him upon numbering the people. Ch.—His sin must have been internal, and probably involved a secret confidence in his riches and power, without referring all to God, (H.) or trusting entirely in him. S. Amb. Pœn. c. ix. S. Aug. c. Faust. xxii. 66, &c.—There was otherwise no prohibition for David's taking this account, (C.) which is so natural for a prince, and may frequently prove of great service. H.—Struck him. Contrition and confession are specified here, as satisfaction is, ver. 12. Temporal sufferings are inflicted, even after the sin has been remitted. Ver. 16. W.

VER. 11. And seer. This was a peculiar distinction of the prophet, (H.) who was appointed to direct David, (M.) to whom he had been long attached. 1 Kings xxii. 5. C.

VER. 13. Seven. Par. three; which makes the contrast more striking. H.—The Sept., and some copies of the Arab. version, have the latter number. C.

VER. 14. Lord, and be exposed to the violence of pestilence, which attacks both rich and poor; whereas the rich can frequently escape the dangers of war, or of famine. C.—David knew that he had sinned, and he did not wish to screen himself from suffering the temporal punishment due to sin. H.—God punishes us equally by the hand of men, as by other means; but the king thus intimates that he looks upon Him as an indulgent father, who is less severe than the ministers of justice. M.

VER. 15. And. Sept. insert, “And David chose death (the pestilence, as they usually render it. Salicn). And it was the time of the wheat-harvest. And the Lord gave death in Israel, from morning till dinner-time.” H.—Appointed, for three days; though before the end of the last God took pity on the people. Ver. 16. C.—Bochart thinks the pestilence ceased to rage at some hour of the first day. Syr. and Arab. “till the sixth hour.”

VER. 16. Arenna. Heb. styles him, Araniah, (ver. 18. C.) i being substituted for u, and placed after n. He is called Ornan, 1 Par. xxi. 18, (H.) and has the title of Jebusite, as he was originally of that nation, and had been permitted his hand over Jerusalem, to destroy it, the Lord had pity on the affliction, and said to the angel that slew the people: It is enough: now hold thy hand: And the angel of the Lord was by the threshing-floor of Areuna, the Jebusite.

17 And David said to the Lord, when he saw the angel striking the people: It is I, I am he that have sinned, I have done wickedly: these that are the sheep, what have they done? let thy hand, I beseech thee, be turned against me, and against my father's house.

18 And Gad came to David that day, and said: Go up and build an altar to the Lord, in the threshing-floor of Areuna, the Jebusite.

19 And David went up according to the word of Gad, which the Lord had commanded him.

20 And Areuna looked, and saw the king and his servants coming towards him:

21 And going out he worshipped the king, bowing with his face to the earth, and said: Wherefore is my lord the king come to his servant? And David said to him: To buy the threshing-floor of thee, and build an altar to the Lord, that the plague, which rageth among the people, may cease.

22 And Areuna said to David: Let my lord the king take, and offer, as it seemeth good to him: thou hast here oxen for a holocaust, and the wain, and the yokes of the oxen for wood.

23 All these things, Areuna, as a king, gave to the king: And Areuna said to the king: The Lord thy God receive thy vow.

24 And the king answered him, and said: Nay, but I will buy it of thee, at a price, and I will not offer to the Lord my God holocausts, free-cost. So David bought the floor, and the oxen, for fifty sicles of silver:

25 And David built there an altar to the Lord, and offered holocausts and peace-offerings: and the Lord became merciful to the land, and the plague was stayed from Israel.

ted to retain his effects, on his embracing the true religion. Moria was his property, and seems not to have been much inhabited. It was not yet enclosed within the city walls. Here David saw the angel, in the air, ready to strike the inhabitants, and heard the voice from heaven. C.—He had already witnessed the death of many in the city. 1 Par. xxi. 14. The angel waited for God's orders how many to destroy. H.—He did not sheath his sword till David had offered sacrifice to appease the Lord (ver. 21); though others think that the sacrifice was to thank God for the deliverance. C.

VER. 17. Arc, like sheep. M.—They were not accountable for the fault of their shepherd, or king; nor were they punished for it, (H.) but for joining in the revolts of Absalom, Seba, &c., (Salien,) as well as for other secret offences. H.—Both king and people suffer, when either draws down the vengeance of heaven.

VER. 18. Altar. This was done by a positive order. People still had the liberty of sacrificing on the heights of Gabaon. C.—This place was honoured with the tabernacle; and David would have gone thither, if he had not been so much terrified. 1 Par. xxi. 30. H.

VER. 22. Wain. So Josephus reads. Sept. "wheels." Heb. "rollers," to beat out the corn. C.—Prot. "threshing-instruments, and other instruments of the oxen for wood." Paral. adds, that Areuna offered also wheat, and saw the angel, as his four sons, and probably most of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, did.

VER. 23. As a king. Lit. "king Areuna:" e may have been substituted for c, "like," though the latter word is often understood. H.

VER. 24. Free-cost, or given gratis. This shows that subjects have property, otherwise they could only yield what was due to the king, as his own. W.—Silver. Sept. "for the silver of fifty sicles." H.—Boehart explains, for the money of 50 sicles of gold, which make 600 sicles of silver. But the best method of reconciling this passage with 1 Par. is to say that David gave the 50 sicles for the oxen and floor, and afterwards purchased the whole piece of ground for 600 (C.) sicles of gold, (or 902l. 5s. sterling. H.) being informed that the temple was to be erected there, (C.) where Isaac had formerly been brought to be sacrificed. M.—We might also make a colon, or pause, at floor, as if its price were specified elsewhere, and the 50 sicles were given for the oxen. D. M.—The sum amounts to only about 17l. 14s. H.

THE THIRD BOOK OF KINGS.

This and the following Book are called by the holy Fathers, The Third and Fourth Book of Kings; but by the Hebrews, the First and Second. They contain the history of the kingdoms of Israel and Juda from the beginning of the reign of Solomon to the captivity. As to the writer of these books, it seems most probable that they were not written by one man, nor at one time; but as there was all along a succession of prophets in Israel, who recorded, by Divine inspiration, the most remarkable things that happened in their days, these books seem to have been written by these prophets. See 2 Paral., alias 2 Chron. ix. 29; xii. 15; xiii. 22; xx. 34; xxvi. 22; xxxii. 32. Ch.—This book informs us of the death of David, chap. ii. 11, where some Greek copies concluded the second book "of the reigns or kingdoms," as they style all the four books. Theodoret and Diodorus follow this division. The point is of no consequence; and the Hebrew editions have often varied. Origen observes that the Jews denoted these two books from the first words, "Oummelech David." Euseb. Hist. vi. 25. H.—In S. Jerom's time, the four books made only two. The present book details the actions of Solomon, (C.) till the end of the 12th chapter. Then we behold the division of the kingdom: Roboam, Abias, Asa, and Josaphat, reign over Juda; Jeroboam, &c., over Israel; while the prophets Abias, Elias, and Eliseus, appear in the remaining eleven chapters. W.—Though the memoirs seem to have been left by contemporary authors, (H.) one, and most probably Esdras, made the compilation after the captivity, inserting frequently the very words of his authors, yet so as to make some additional reflections. C.—The Rabbins generally attribute the work to Jeremias. H.—He is more attentive to the house of David, and to display the rewards of piety, and the punishment of vice, as well as the glory of the temple and of religion, than to describe the military exploits, which occupy so much of the profane history. C.

CHAPTER I.

King David growing old, Abisag, a Sunamitess, is brought to him. Adonias, pretending to reign, Nathan and Bethsabée obtain that Solomon should be declared, and anointed king.

NOW king David was old, and advanced in years: and when he was covered with clothes, he was not warm.

^a A. M. 2989, A. C. 1015.

CHAP. I. VER. 1. Years; sixty-nine, as he died when he was seventy years old. C. 2 Kings v. 4.—Warm. Though David was of a strong constitution, he had been so much exposed to fatigue, and so harassed with domestic broils, that his vigour was nearly decayed. C.

2 His servants, therefore, said to him: Let us seek for our Lord the king, a young virgin, and let her stand before the king, and cherish him, and sleep in his bosom, and warm our lord the king.

3 So they sought a beautiful young woman, in all the coasts of Israel, and they found Abisag, a Sunamitess, and brought her to the king.

VER. 3. Sunamitess. Sunam was not far from Thabor, in the tribe of Issachar. C.—This history leads us to explain the ambition and death of Adonias. H.

VER. 5. Him. He was not deterred by the fate of Absalom. H.—He was now the eldest son, and gave himself out for the presumptive heir. C.—David's

4 And the damsel was exceedingly beautiful, and she slept with the king, and served him, but the king did not know her.

5 And Adonias, the son of Haggith, exalted himself, saying: I will be king. And he made himself chariots and horsemen, and fifty men to run before him.

6 *Neither did his father rebuke him at any time, saying: Why hast thou done this? And he also was very beautiful, the next in birth after Absalom.

7 And he conferred with Joab, the son of Sarvia, and with Abiathar, the priest, who furthered Adonias's side.

8 But Sadoc, the priest, and Banaïas, the son of Joiada, and Nathan, the prophet, and Semei, and Rei, and the strength of David's army, were not with Adonias.

9 And Adonias having slain rams and calves, and all fat cattle, by the stone of Zohelēth, which was near the fountain Rogel, invited all his brethren, the king's sons, and all the men of Juda, the king's servants:

10 But Nathan, the prophet, and Banaïas, and all the valiant men, and Solomon, his brother, he invited not.

11 And Nathan said to Bethsabee, the mother of Solomon: Hast thou not heard that Adonias, the son of Haggith, reigneth, and our lord David knoweth it not?

12 Now then, come, take my counsel, and save thy life, and the life of thy son Solomon.

13 Go, and get thee in to king David, and say to him: Didst not thou, my lord, O king, swear to me, thy handmaid, saying: Solomon, thy son, shall reign after me, and he shall sit in my throne? why then doth Adonias reign?

14 And while thou art yet speaking there with the king, I will come in after thee, and will fill up thy words.

15 So Bethsabee went in to the king into the chamber. Now the king was very old, and Abisag, the Sunamitess, ministered to him.

16 Bethsabee bowed herself, and worshipped the king. And the king said to her: What is thy will?

17 She answered, and said: My lord, thou didst swear to thy handmaid, by the Lord thy God, saying: Solomon, thy son, shall reign after me, and he shall sit on my throne.

* 1 Kings ii. 29; 2 Kings xiii. 21, and xv. 1.

blamed for some remissness in not repressing him (Salien); as his conduct tended to excite confusion, and to frustrate the appointment of God. But the king was convinced that nothing would be able to disturb that order; and he would take measures, in due time, to curb the ambition of his eldest son, from which as yet he apprehended no danger. H.

VER. 7. Side. For their own interest, and because they supposed that the throne belonged of course to him. M.—This was the natural privilege, when no other disposition was made by God, or by the kings who succeeded David. They did not esteem themselves bound to leave the crown to their eldest sons. Hitherto God had made choice himself, as he had required. Deut. xvii. 15. In favour of David he pleased to grant the sovereignty to his descendants. But the king was expected to declare which he preferred, in case he chose to deviate from the natural order, ver. 20.

VER. 8. Sadoc, the rival of Abiathar, and a descendant of Eleazar. David had permitted both to perform the functions of the high priesthood (C.); or one had acted as the delegate of the other. Salien.—Banaïas was distinguished for his valour, 2 Kings xxiii. 20. He was in the flower of his age, and perhaps aspired at the authority of Joab, whose credit began to decline; as he was grown old, and was known to be rather disagreeable to David, and had been guilty of such horrid murders. Both the contending princes sought to ingratiate themselves with the army and with the priests, as their influence was of the utmost consequence. Solomon was more fortunate, in having also Nathan the prophet on his side; but the throne was secured to him much more on account of the Divine decree, 2 Kings vii. 12, and xii. 25. H.—Nathan is commonly considered as the tutor of the young prince, (M. and was styled his "father." C.—Semei, 18 And behold, now Adonias reigneth, and thou, my lord the king, knowest nothing of it.

19 He hath killed oxen, and all fat cattle, and many rams, and invited all the king's sons, and Abiathar, the priest, and Joab, the general of the army: but Solomon, thy servant, he invited not.

20 And now, my lord, O king, the eyes of all Israel are upon thee, that thou shouldst tell them, who shall sit on thy throne, my lord the king, after thee.

21 Otherwise it shall come to pass, when my lord the king sleepeth with his fathers, that I, and my son, Solomon, shall be accounted offenders.

22 As she was yet speaking with the king, Nathan, the prophet, came.

23 And they told the king, saying: Nathan, the prophet, is here. And when he was come in before the king, and had worshipped, bowing down to the ground, 24 Nathan said: My lord, O king, hast thou said: Let Adonias reign after me, and let him sit upon my throne?

25 Because he is gone down to-day, and hath killed oxen, and fatlings, and many rams, and invited all the king's sons, and the captains of the army, and Abiathar, the priest: and they are eating and drinking before him, and saying: God save king Adonias:

26 But me, thy servant, and Sadoc, the priest, and Banaïas, the son of Joiada, and Solomon, thy servant, he hath not invited.

27 Is this word come out from my lord the king, and hast thou not told me, thy servant, who should sit on the throne of my lord the king after him?

28 And king David answered, and said: Call to me Bethsabee. And when she was come in to the king, and stood before him,

29 The king swore, and said: As the Lord liveth, who hath delivered my soul out of all distress,

30 Even as I swore to thee, by the Lord, the God of Israel, saying: Solomon, thy son, shall reign after me, and he shall sit upon my throne in my stead, so will I do this day.

31 And Bethsabee, bowing with her face to the earth, worshipped the king, saying: May my lord David live for ever.

or Nabath, father of Jeroboam; and Rei, or Ira, who is styled the priest of David. 2 Kings xx. 26. S. Jer. Tradit. M.—To confound Semei with Nabath is wrong Salien.

VER. 9. Slain. Either for sacrifice, or simply for a feast (C.); though it is probable that victims of peace would be offered, as on similar occasions, on which the guests would afterwards feast. 1 Kings. xi. H.—Rogel, east of Jerusalem, in the vale of Josaphat. M.

VER. 12. Life. Both would have been in imminent danger if the ambitious projects of Adonias succeeded, as he knew that the throne had been promised to Solomon by his father, and he would consider him as a dangerous rival. C.

VER. 13. Swear. This he did, either when he comforted her, after the death of her first-born (2 Kings xii. 24); or rather, when Solomon had received so glorious a name, and was declared the heir by Nathan. 2 Kings vii. 12; 1 Par. xxii. 10, and xxviii. 5. Adonias acknowledges that God had made choice of his brother. Chap. ii. 15. C.

VER. 14. Words, and confirm what thou hast said, (M.) reminding the king of God's express declaration. H.

VER. 16. Worshipped. Prot. "did obeisance." Heb. "fell prostrate on the ground before the king," (C.) without any danger of idolatry. H.

VER. 18. Of it. So that thy authority is also contemned. M.

VER. 20. Thee. Adonias boasts that all Israel was on his side. Chap. i. 15. C.—But, in reality, the people waited for the final decision of David H.

VER. 28. Come in. Nathan went out at the same time (M.); so that each had a private audience. C.

32 King David also said : Call me Sadoc, the priest, and Nathan, the prophet, and Banaïas, the son of Joiada. And when they were come in before the king,

33 He said to them : Take with you the servants of your lord, and set my son Solomon upon my mule : and bring him to Gihon :

34 And let Sadoc, the priest, and Nathan, the prophet, anoint him there king over Israel : and you shall sound the trumpet, and shall say : God save king Solomon.

35 And you shall come up after him, and he shall come, and shall sit upon my throne, and he shall reign in my stead : and I will appoint him to be ruler over Israel, and over Juda.

36 And Banaïas, the son of Joiada, answered the king, saying : Amen : so say the Lord, the God of my lord the king.

37 As the Lord hath been with my lord the king, so be he with Solomon, and make his throne higher than the throne of my lord king David.

38 So Sadoc, the priest, and Nathan, the prophet, went down, and Banaïas, the son of Joiada, and the Cerethi, and Phelethi : and they set Solomon upon the mule of king David, and brought him to Gihon.

39 And Sadoc, the priest, took a horn of oil out of the tabernacle, and anointed Solomon : and they sounded the trumpet, and all the people said : God save king Solomon.

40 And all the multitude went up after him, and the people played with pipes, and rejoiced with a great joy, and the earth rang with the noise of their cry.

41 And Adonias, and all that were invited by him, heard it, and now the feast was at an end. Joab also, hearing the sound of the trumpet, said : What meaneth this noise of the city in an uproar ?

42 While he yet spoke, Jonathan, the son of Abiathar, the priest, came : and Adonias said to him : Come in, because thou art a valiant man, and bringest good news.

43 And Jonathan answered Adonias : Not so : for our lord, king David, hath appointed Solomon king :

44 And hath sent with him Sadoc, the priest, and Nathan, the prophet, and Banaïas, the son of Joiada, and the Cerethi, and the Phelethi, and they have set him upon the king's mule :

45 And Sadoc, the priest, and Nathan, the prophet, have anointed him king, in Gihon : and they are gone up from thence rejoicing, so that the city rang again : this is the noise that you have heard.

46 Moreover, Solomon sitteth upon the throne of the kingdom.

47 And the king's servants going in, have blessed our lord king David, saying : May God make the name of Solomon greater than thy name, and make his throne greater than thy throne. And the king adored in his bed :

48 And he said : Blessed be the Lord, the God of Israel, who hath given this day one to sit on my throne, my eyes seeing it.

49 Then all the guests of Adonias were afraid, and they all arose, and every man went his way.

50 And Adonias fearing Solomon, arose and went, and took hold of the horn of the altar.

51 And they told Solomon, saying : Behold Adonias, fearing king Solomon, hath taken hold of the horn of the altar, saying : Let king Solomon swear to me this day, that he will not kill his servant with the sword.

52 And Solomon said : If he be a good man, there shall not so much as one hair of his head fall to the ground : but if evil be found in him, he shall die.

53 Then king Solomon sent, and brought him out from the altar : and going in, he worshipped king Solomon : and Solomon said to him : Go to thy house.

CHAP. II.

David, after giving his last charge to Solomon, dieth. Adonias is put to death ; Abiathar banished ; Joab and Semei are slain.

AND ^athe days of David drew nigh that he should die, and he charged his son Solomon, saying :

2 I am going the way of all flesh : take thou courage and show thyself a man.

3 And keep the charge of the Lord thy God, to walk in his ways, and observe his ceremonies, and his precepts, and judgments, and testimonies, ^bas it is written in the law of Moses : that thou mayest understand all thou dost, and whithersoever thou shalt turn thyself :

4 That the Lord may confirm his words, which he hath spoken of me, saying : If thy children shall take heed to their ways, and shall walk before me in truth, with all their heart, and with all their soul, there shall not be taken away from thee a man on the throne of Israel.

5 Thou knowest also what Joab, the son of Survia, hath done to me, what he did to the two captains of the

VER. 5. Joab. These instructions given by David to his son, with relation to Joab and Semei, proceeded not from any rancour of heart, or private pique ; but from a zeal for justice : that crimes so public and heinous might not pass unpunished. Ch.—David and Solomon esteemed themselves, in a manner, defiled, as long as these continued unpunished, ver. 31. Joab had behaved to David with great insolence after the death of Absalom. H.—He had lately sided with Adonias. M.—But what touched the good old king more particularly, were the treacherous murders of two great generals, who had put themselves under his protection, and were endeavouring to promote his welfare. Only the fear of greater commotions had hitherto prevented David from bringing his nephew to public execution, as the people expected. He deemed it requisite to remind his successor of this obligation, when his power should be sufficiently strong ; that the impunity of such daring offenders might not destroy the commonwealth. H

6 Do, therefore, according to thy wisdom, and let not his hoary head go down to hell in peace.

7 But show kindness to the sons of Berzellai, the Gallaadite, and let them eat at thy table: ^b for they met me when I fled from the face of Absalom, thy brother.

8 *Thou hast also with thee Semei, the son of Gera, the son of Jemini, of Bahurim, who cursed me with a grievous curse, when I went to the camp: but because he came down to meet me when I passed over the Jordan, and I swore to him by the Lord, saying: I will not kill thee with the sword:

9 Do not thou hold him guiltless. But thou art a wise man, and knowest what to do with him, and thou shalt bring down his grey hairs with blood to the grave.

10 *So David slept with his fathers, and was buried in the city of David.

11 *And the days that David reigned in Israel, were forty years: in Hebron he reigned seven years, in Jerusalem thirty-three.

12 And Solomon sat upon the throne of his father, David, and his kingdom was strengthened exceedingly.

13 And Adonias, the son of Haggith, came to Bethsabee, the mother of Solomon. And she said to him: Is thy coming peaceable? He answered: It is peaceable.

14 And he added: I have a word to speak with thee. She said to him: Speak. And he said:

15 Thou knowest that the kingdom was mine, and all Israel had preferred me to be their king: but the kingdom is transferred, and is become my brother's: for it was appointed him by the Lord.

16 Now therefore, I ask one petition of thee; turn not away my face. And she said to him: Say on.

17 And he said: I pray thee speak to king Solomon (for he cannot deny thee any thing) to give me Abisag, the Sunamitess, to wife.

18 And Bethsabee said: Well, I will speak for thee to the king.

19 Then Bethsabee came to king Solomon, to speak to him for Adonias: and the king arose to meet her, and bowed to her, and sat down upon his throne: and a throne was set for the king's mother, and she sat on his right hand.

20 And she said to him: I desire one small petition of thee; do not put me to confusion. And the king said to her: My mother, ask, for I must not turn away thy face.

21 And she said: Let Abisag, the Sunamitess, be given to Adonias, thy brother, to wife.

22 And king Solomon answered, and said to his mother: Why dost thou ask Abisag, the Sunamitess, for Adonias? ask for him also the kingdom: for he is my elder brother, and hath Abiathar, the priest, and Joab, the son of Sarvia.

23 Then king Solomon swore by the Lord, saying: So and so may God do to me, and add more, if Adonias hath not spoken this word against his own life.

24 And now, as the Lord liveth, who hath established me, and placed me upon the throne of David, my father, and who hath made me a house, as he promised, Adonias shall be put to death this day.

25 And king Solomon sent by the hand of Banaias, the son of Joiada, who slew him, and he died.

26 And the king said also to Abiathar, the priest: Go to Anathoth, to thy lands, for indeed thou art worthy of death: but I will not at this time put thee to death, because thou didst carry the ark of the Lord God before David, my father, and hast endured trouble in all the troubles my father endured.

27 So Solomon cast out Abiathar from being the priest of the Lord, ^c that the word of the Lord might be fulfilled, which he spoke concerning the house of Heli in Silo.

28 And the news came to Joab, because Joab had turned after Adonias, and had not turned after Solomon: and Joab fled into the tabernacle of the Lord, and took hold on the horn of the altar.

29 And it was told king Solomon, that Joab was fled into the tabernacle of the Lord, and was by the altar: and Solomon sent Banaias, the son of Joiada, saying: Go, kill him.

30 And Banaias came to the tabernacle of the Lord, and said to him: Thus saith the king: Come forth. And

S. Chrys. hom. 77.—He prefigured Jesus Christ in a wonderful manner; in his birth, at the same city; his election, in preference to his brethren; his persecutions, and subsequent glory. Jesus was, in like manner, betrayed by a false friend, and obliged to go out of Jerusalem, laden with his cross. But he acquired fresh splendour by his sufferings, and purchased a more faithful people. The tomb of David remained for many ages. Acts ii. 29. S. Jerom often went to pray at this tomb. VER. 22. The kingdom. It was a maxim in most of the Oriental courts, that the things which had belonged to the king should not be enjoyed by any but his successor. Grotius.—Hence Adonias might be suspected of ambitious projects, as his party was still formidable. C.—The marriage seems also to be unlawful. M. See chap. i. 4.—Many condemn Solomon of precipitation and cruelty in his judgment (Cajet.); while others approve of his conduct, (Theod. q. 7,) and think any delay might have proved dangerous. C.

VER. 25. Banaias. The chief officers became executioners on such occasions. Dan. ii. 24. The Romans employed soldiers; which makes Tertullian (Coron. xi.) dissuade Christians from entering the service.

VER. 26. Priest. Sadoc had been anointed in his stead, probably by Nathan, in the general assembly, while David was present: they anointed . . . Sadoc to be high priest, 1 Par. xxix. 22. Salien.—But now Solomon orders Abiathar to retire to his estate, in punishment of his conspiracy. C.—He might have justly put him to death, if he had committed a crime worthy of it; as his dignity did not give him a right to disturb the peace of the state with impunity. H.—Solomon acted as a prophet. W.—God had long before denounced that the family of Eleazar should regain the dignity, which Heli had obtained by some means or other. 1 Kings ii. 31. H.—Solomon only put the Divine decree in execution. Pineta vi. 15.—Sadoc had perhaps also passed sentence, as the Levitical tribe had a great sway in the courts of judicature. M.—Abiathar was still honoured with his former title. Chap. iv. 4. But he was not permitted to officiate. (C.) nor to remain in the royal city, as he seemed now to be a dangerous man. H.—Anathoth was a sacerdotal town in Benjamin. M.

VER. 28. Joab. The Latin MSS. except one, and almost all the ancient editions of Sixtus, &c., read Solomon. "And a messenger came to Solomon that he said: I will not come forth, but here I will die. Banaias brought word back to the king, saying: Thus saith Joab, and thus he answered me.

31 And the king said to him: Do as he hath said; and kill him, and bury him, and thou shalt remove the innocent blood which hath been shed by Joab, from me, and from the house of my father:

32 And the Lord shall return his blood upon his own head; because he murdered two men, just and better than himself: and slew them with the sword, my father, David, not knowing it; *Abner, the son of Ner, general of the army of Israel, and Amasa, the son of Jether, general of the army of Juda;

33 And their blood shall return upon the head of Joab, and upon the head of his seed for ever. But to David and his seed, and his house, and to his throne, be peace for ever from the Lord.

34 So Banaias, the son of Joiada, went up, and setting upon him slew him, and he was buried in his house in the desert.

35 And the king appointed Banaias, the son of Joiada, in his room over the army; and Sadoc, the priest, he put in the place of Abiathar.

36 The king also sent, and called for Semei, and said to him: Build thee a house in Jerusalem, and dwell there: and go not out from thence any where.

37 For on what day soever thou shalt go out, and shalt pass over the brook Cedron, know that thou shalt be put to death: thy blood shall be upon thy own head.

38 And Semei said to the king: The saying is good: as my lord the king hath said, so will thy servant do. And Semei dwelt in Jerusalem many days.

39 And it came to pass after three years, that the servants of Semei ran away to Achis, the son of Maacha, the king of Geth: and it was told Semei that his servants were gone to Geth.

40 And Semei arose, and saddled his ass, and went to Achis, to Geth, to seek his servants, and he brought them out of Geth.

41 And it was told Solomon, that Semei had gone from Jerusalem to Geth, and was come back.

42 And sending he called for him, and said to him: Did I not protest to thee by the Lord, and tell thee before: On what day soever thou shalt go out and walk abroad any where, know that thou shalt die? And thou answeredst me: The word that I have heard is good.

43 Why then hast thou not kept the oath of the Lord, and the commandment that I laid upon thee?

44 And the king said to Semei: Thou knowest all the evil, of which thy heart is conscious, which thou didst to David, my father: the Lord hath returned thy wickedness upon thy own head.

45 And king Solomon shall be blessed, and the throne of David shall be established before the Lord for ever.

46 So the king commanded Banaias, the son of Joiada: and he went out and struck him; and he died.

CHAP. III.

Solomon marrieth Pharaoh's daughter. He sacrifices in Gabaon: in the choice which God gave him, he preferreth wisdom. His wise judgment between the two harlots.

AND^b the kingdom was established in the hand of Solomon, and he made affinity with Pharaoh, the king of Egypt: for he took his daughter, and brought her into the city of David: ^c until he had made an end of building his own house, and the house of the Lord, and the wall of Jerusalem round about.

2 But yet the people sacrificed in the high places: for there was no temple built to the name of the Lord until that day.

3 And Solomon loved the Lord, walking in the precepts of David, his father; only he sacrificed in the high places, and burnt incense.

4 He went therefore to Gabaon, to sacrifice there: for that was the great high place: a thousand victims for holocausts, did Solomon offer upon that altar, in Gabaon.

5 And the Lord appeared to Solomon in a dream by night, saying: Ask what thou wilt that I should give thee.

6 And Solomon said: Thou hast showed great mercy to thy servant David, my father, even as he walked before thee in truth, and justice, and an upright heart with thee; and thou hast kept thy great mercy for him, and hast given him a son to sit on his throne, as it is this day.

7 And now, O Lord God, thou hast made thy servant king instead of David, my father: and I am but a child, and know not how to go out and come in;

8 And thy servant is in the midst of the people which thou hast chosen, an immense people, which cannot be numbered nor counted for multitude.

VER. 2. But yet. It is not clear to what this refers. Heb. "for the rest, (C.) or only" (as also ver. 3); which may signify that the people, and their king, were blamable; or else that they zealously offered sacrifices to God, even before the temple was erected. H.—Those who afterwards left that sacred place, to imitate the conduct of idolaters, or of the ancient patriarchs, which was no longer tolerated, are justly condemned. C.—High places. That is, altars where they worshipped the Lord indeed, but not according to the ordinance of the law; which allowed of no other places for sacrifice but the temple of God. Among these high places, that of Gabaon was the chief, because there was the tabernacle of the testimony, which had been removed from Silo to Nob, and from Nob to Gabaon. Ch.—Hither David would have gone, as Solomon did, ver. 4. C.—Hence this was not, at least, one of those high places where it was unlawful to offer sacrifice; as the tabernacle was there, and the altar of holocausts, which Moses had erected. The obligation of sacrificing in no place except in that which the Lord had appointed, regarded the times while the ark was in the desert, and when it was placed in the temple. H.

JUDGMENT OF SOLOMON.

9 *Give therefore to thy servant an understanding heart, to judge thy people, and discern between good and evil. For who shall be able to judge this people, thy people, which is so numerous.

10 And the word was pleasing to the Lord, that Solomon had asked such a thing.

11 And the Lord said to Solomon: Because thou hast asked this thing, and hast not asked for thyself long life nor riches, nor the lives of thy enemies, but hast asked for thyself wisdom to discern judgment;

12 Behold I have done for thee according to thy words, and have given thee a wise and understanding heart, inasmuch that there hath been no one like unto thee, before thee, nor shall arise after thee.

13 ^bYea, and the things also which thou didst not ask, I have given thee; to wit, riches and glory: so that no one hath been like unto thee, among the kings, in all days heretofore.

14 And, if thou wilt walk in my ways, and keep my precepts and my commandments, as thy father walked, I will lengthen thy days.

15 And Solomon awaked, and perceived that it was a dream: and when he was come to Jerusalem, he stood before the ark of the covenant of the Lord, and offered holocausts, and sacrificed victims of peace-offerings, and made a great feast for all his servants.

16 Then there came two women that were harlots, to the king, and stood before him.

17 And one of them said: I beseech thee, my lord, I and this woman dwelt in one house, and I was delivered of a child with her in the chamber.

18 And the third day after I was delivered, she also was delivered; and we were together, and no other person with us in the house; only we two.

19 And this woman's child died in the night: for in her sleep she overlaid him

20 And rising in the dead time of the night, she took my child from my side, while I, thy handmaid, was asleep, and laid it in her bosom: and laid her dead child in my bosom.

21 And when I arose in the morning, to give my child suck, behold it was dead: but considering him more diligently, when it was clear day, I found that it was not mine which I bore.

22 And the other woman answered: It is not so as 23 Then said the king: The one saith, My child is alive, and thy child is dead. And the other answereth: Nay; but thy child is dead, and mine liveth.

24 The king therefore said: Bring me a sword. And when they had brought a sword before the king, 25 Divide, said he, the living child in two, and give half to the one and half to the other.

26 But the woman, whose child was alive, said to the king (for her bowels were moved upon her child); I beseech thee, my lord, give her the child alive, and do not kill it. But the other said: Let it be neither mine nor thine; but divide it.

27 The king answered, and said: Give the living child to this woman, and let it not be killed; for she is the mother thereof.

28 And all Israel heard the judgment which the king had judged, and they feared the king, seeing that the wisdom of God was in him to do judgment.

Solomon's chief officers. His riches and wisdom.

AND king Solomon reigned over all Israel:

2 And these were the princes which he had: Azarias, the son of Sadoc, the priest:

3 Elihoreph, and Ahia, the sons of Sisa, scribes: Josphat, the son of Ahilud, recorder:

4 Banaïas, the son of Joiada, over the army: and Sadoc, and Abiathar, priests.

5 Azarias, the son of Nathan, over them that were about the king: Zabud, the son of Nathan, the priest, the king's friend:

6 And Ahisar, governor of the house: and Adoniram, the son of Abda, over the tribute.

7 And Solomon had twelve governors over all Israel, who provided victuals for the king and for his household: for every one provided necessaries, each man his month in the year.

8 And these are their names: Benhur, in Mount Ephraim

9 Bendecar, in Maces, and in Salebim, and in Bethsames, and in Elon, and in Bethanan.

VER. 4. Abiathar. By this it appears that Abiathar was not altogether deposed from the high priesthood; but only banished to his country house; and by that means excluded from the exercise of his functions. Ch.—He retained the name, as bishops still do, after they have resigned their see. C.—Some think that Solomon reinstated Abiathar in his office. E.

VER. 8. Benhur. Ben here, and in the following verses, may signify "the son of" Hur, &c. C.—Sept. retain both the original term and its explanation. "Ben, the son of Or." But they afterwards read only "the son of Dakar . . . of Esed . . . of Abinadab . . . and Gaber."

12 Bana, the son of Ahilud, who governed Thanac, and Mageddo, and all Bethsan, which is by Sarthana, beneath Jezrael, from Bethsan unto Abelmehula, over against Jecmaan.

13 Bengaber, in Ramoth Galaad : he had the towns of Jair, the son of Manasses, in Galaad : he was chief in all the country of Argob, which is in Basan, threescore great cities with walls, and brazen bolts.

14 Ahınadab, the son of Addo, was chief in Manaim.

15 Achimaas, in Nephtali : he also had Basemath, the daughter of Solomon, to wife.

16 Baana, the son of Husi, in Aser, and in Baloth.

17 Josaphat, the son of Pharue, in Issachar.

18 Semei, the son of Ela, in Benjamin.

19 Gaber, the son of Uri, in the land of Galaad, in the land of Sehon, the king of the Amorrites, and of Og, the king of Basan, over all that were in that land.

20 Juda and Israel were innumerable, as the sand of the sea in multitude ; eating and drinking, and rejoicing.

21 *And Solomon had under him all the kingdoms, from the river to the land of the Philistines, even to the border of Egypt : and they brought him presents, and served him all the days of his life.

22 And the provision of Solomon, for each day, was thirty measures of fine flour, and threescore measures of meal ;

23 Ten fat oxen, and twenty out of the pastures and a hundred rams ; besides venison of harts, roes, and buffaloes, and fatted fowls.

24 For he had all the country which was beyond the river, from Thaphsa to Gazan, and all the kings of those countries : and he had peace on every side round about.

25 And Juda, and Israel, dwelt without any fear, every one under his vine, and under his fig-tree, from Dan to Bersabee, all the days of Solomon.

26 *And Solomon had forty thousand stalls of chariot horses, and twelve thousand for the saddle.

27 And the foresaid governors of the king fed them : and they furnished the necessaries also for king Solomon's table, with great care, in their time.

28 They brought barley also, and straw for the horses and beasts, to the place where the king was, according as it was appointed them.

29 And God gave to Solomon wisdom, and understanding exceeding much, and largeness of heart, as the sand that is on the sea shore.

30 And the wisdom of Solomon surpassed the wisdom of all the Orientals, and of the Egyptians ;

31 *And he was wiser than all men : wiser than Ethan, the Ezrahite, and Heman, and Chalcol, and Dorda, the sons of Mahol, and he was renowned in all nations round about.

32 Solomon also spoke three thousand parables : and his poems were a thousand and five.

33 And he treated about trees, from the cedar that is in Libanus, unto the hyssop that cometh out of the wall :

VER. 19. Land. Heb. "the only officer who was in the land," (H.) except in the towns of Jair, ver. 13. C.—His province had belonged to two kings. M.

VER. 20. Multitude. We may suppose seven millions ; though, if the calculation of Chronicles be more accurate, they were much more numerous. See 2 Kings xxiv. 9. H.

VER. 21. The river. Euphrates. Ch.—To, or "of the land," terre. H.—This river may denote the torrent Besor, as Solomon's dominions extended not only as far as Gaza, but also to the oriental branch of the Nile, ver. 24. Thus one verse explains the other. There were, indeed, no kingdoms (C.) in this portion of land, which is now quite barren ; but formerly it had several cities, and they belonged to various kings of Egypt, Arabia, the Philistines, &c. H.—Heb. may be rendered, "from the river, (Euphrates,) the land of the Philistines, and to the border," &c., (C.) agreeably to 2 Par. ix. 26, He exercised authority over all the kings from the river Euphrates to the land, &c. Heb. "the river even unto," &c. Solomon had all the kings of Syria, Ammon, the Philistines, &c., under him ; so that his empire took in all that had been promised to Abraham. H. See S. Aug. q. 21. Josue.

VER. 22. Measures (cori). Each of which contained little less than 300 pints. C.—A corus is equivalent to 30 modii, and would support as many men a day ; so that the family of Solomon would contain two thousand seven hundred people. A. Lapide. M.

VER. 23. Buffaloes. Jemur means also a sort of wild goat, like a stag. Deut. xiv. 5. Bochart, Anim. 1. B. iii. 22. C.

VER. 24. Beyond. Heb. "on the side of," without determining on which. Deut. i.—Thaphsa. The famous Thapsacus, on the Euphrates.—To Gazan. Heb. Gozan. This name is written in a different manner from Gaza, and may signify a country of the Medes, on the frontiers of Armenia. But as it is pronounced almost alike, and the parallel passage determines for the country of the Philistines, (ver. 21,) we may explain it of Gaza. C.

VER. 25. Vine. This expression is often used to imply a state of peace and happiness. The people were then content with rural pleasures. C.

VER. 26. Forty : 2 Par. ix. 25, has four in the Heb. Sept. read in both places forty thousand mares, for chariots, and twelve thousand horses. C.—The Alex. copy has forty here, and four thousand in the latter place ; where, instead of horses, it gives horsemen, with the Vulg. These two words are often used as synonymous by the best authors. But it is more difficult to reconcile the number (C.), as (2 Par. xiv.) we read again differently, he had one thousand four hundred chariots, and twelve thousand horsemen. H.—Forty might easily be mistaken for four, by only adding in at the end of arbā. Bochart. Grot.—Instead of stalls Calmet supposes stables to be understood, and in each he would place ten horses, which completes the number here assigned. If this be admitted, no change is necessary ; but as præsepe signifies "a stall," we may adhere to the Vulg., which has forty thousand in both places ; whereas the Heb. varies, though the sense may be the same. The number of Solomon's chariots was one thousand four hundred. As two horses were usually employed to draw them, two thousand eight hundred, or, allowing for accidents, changes, &c., four thousand horses, would have been amply sufficient. It seems, therefore, that we should admit only so many horses or stalls. H.—His empire was become more extensive, and his works more splendid ; so that what might appear a useless parade in some, might be worthy of praise in Solomon. The law is not so precise. He shall not multiply horses to himself, nor lead back the people into Egypt, being lifted up with the number of his horsemen. Deut. xvii. 16. There is a like prohibition of many wives and treasures.

VER. 27. Fed them and is omitted in Heb. and Sept. H.

VER. 28. Beasts. Rocoss denotes horses of extraordinary swiftness, (Boenart,) or dromedaries, &c. Junius translates, "post-horses."—King : so also the Sept. Prot. "the officers were, every man according to his charge." The twelve governors employed others to bring all necessary provisions (H.) to the places where the king was travelling (C.) ; or they took care not only of the king's table, but they had also the general inspection over his stables. H.—Few oats are grown in the East. They feed their horses in barley and straw. C.

VER. 29. Heart ; magnanimity, which pride often attempts to imitate, and is therefore designated by the same expression. Prov. xxi. 4. The genius of Solomon was also most penetrating and comprehensive. C.

VER. 30. Orientals of Chaldea, Arabia, Idumea, &c. Dan. ii. 2 ; Abd. viii. ; Num. xxii. 5. Job and his friends were of this description. The Greeks acknowledged that they had received their philosophy from the barbarians (Laert. Proem.) ; and Casaubon observes, that the ancient defendants of the Christian faith proved the same truth. Not. Ibid. They showed that all true saving knowledge had been derived from the Hebrews. H.—God had communicated to Solomon all that was of real use in those sciences in a superior degree. Wisd. vii. 17 ; Joseph. viii. 2. C.

VER. 31. All men. Ethan is the same as Adithun. The title of Ezrahite does not seem to belong to him ; and Chalcol and Dorda seem to be inserted here by some transcriber from 1 Par. ii. 6, where we read, the sons of Zara . . . Ethan and Eman, and Chalchal and Dara, of the tribe of Juda. But they were different from these men, who were probably Levites. C.—Solomon was eminent in both respects, as well as in poetry ; as he is compared with those who were most noted for compositions and music. Sanctius.

VER. 32. Three thousand parables. These works are all lost, excepting some part of the parables extant in the book of Proverbs, and his chief poem, called the Canticle of Canticles. Ch.—The title of Psalm cxvi. attributes it to Solomon. But its authority is not sufficiently established. The Book of Proverbs contains at present only six hundred and fifty-eight, (A. Lap.) or eight hundred parables. Clarius.

VER. 33. Wall. Some deny that azub means hyssop. Kimchi, Levinus, &c. But there is a species which grows on mountains, and even out of walls. Bochart. Sanctius.—It is a small odoriferous plant ; whereas the cedar was the largest tree and he discoursed of beasts, and of fowls, and of creeping things, and of fishes.

34 And they came from all nations to hear the wisdom of Solomon, and from all the kings of the earth, who heard of his wisdom.

CHAP. V.

Hiram, king of Tyre, agreeth to furnish timber and workmen for building the temple: the number of workmen and overseers.

AND^a Hiram, king of Tyre, sent his servants to Solomon: for he heard that they had anointed him king in the room of his father: for Hiram had always been David's friend.

2 Solomon sent to Hiram, saying:

3 Thou knowest the will of David, my father, and that he could not build a house to the name of the Lord his God, because of the wars that were round about him, until the Lord put them under the soles of his feet.

4 But now the Lord my God hath given me rest round about; and there is no adversary nor evil occurrence.

5 Wherefore I purpose to build a temple to the name of the Lord my God, as the Lord spoke to David, my father, saying: "Thy son, whom I will set upon the throne, in thy place, he shall build a house to my name."

6 Give orders, therefore, that thy servants cut me down cedar trees, out of Libanus, and let my servants be with thy servants: and I will give thee the hire of thy servants whatsoever thou wilt ask: for thou knowest how there is not among my people a man that has skill to hew wood like to the Sidonians.

7 Now when Hiram had heard the words of Solomon, he rejoiced exceedingly, and said: Blessed be the Lord God this day, who hath given to David a very wise son over this numerous people.

8 And Hiram sent to Solomon, saying: I have heard with which the Jews were acquainted. C.—On Libanus there are found such trees above 36 feet in circumference; which extend their branches 111 feet around them. Maundrell, Jerus., p. 239.—Solomon examined all. Wisd. vii. 17, &c.

VER. 34. Wisdom. The Scriptures relate the coming of the queen of Saba. Chap. x. Solomon's wisdom is compared to a great river, inundating the whole earth. Eccl. xlvii. 16.

CHAP. V. VER. 1. Hiram. Josephus says that the temple was built in the eleventh year of this prince. He must therefore have been the son of David's friend, as the former had sent artificers to build David's house, (2 Kings v. 11. C.) above thirty years before. But there may be a mistake in the number, as the Scripture evidently speaks of the same king; and Josephus had said before, "Hiram rejoiced exceedingly that Solomon had succeeded to the throne (for he had been the friend of David); and he sent ambassadors to congratulate with him on his present felicity, by whom Solomon wrote," &c. The mutual letters of these kings were still preserved in the archives of Tyre; and this author confidently appeals to them, as he deems it "impious to insert any fiction" in his history. Ant. viii. 2. He quotes Dius and Menander; who asserted that these princes proposed enigmas to each other; and that Hiram was obliged to pay a large sum of money, as he could not explain that which Solomon had proposed, &c. C. Ap. 1. H.

VER. 3. Wars. Many interpreters assert that this was the real impediment, (Tostat, Salien, &c.) rather than the blood which David had already spilt, 2 Kings vii., and 1 Par. xxii. 8.

VER. 4. Adversary. Lit. "Satan." Adad of Idumea, and another of Syria, and Jeroboam, began to molest Solomon only towards the end of his reign. Chap. xi. 25.

VER. 6. Libanus. It belonged to Israel, since the victory of David, 2 Kings x. 18. Solomon built some fortresses on the mountain. Chap. ix. 19. The cedar-trees grow chiefly towards Phœnicia, above Biblos.—Sidonians. It seems they were subject to the king of Tyre, or this was the common title of all the Phœnicians. C.

VER. 7. Lord (Jave) God "of Israel," as it is expressed, 2 Par. ii. 12. H.—This pagan prince adored and erected temples and altars in honour of Baal, Antarte, and Hercules (Josephus, &c.); yet he did not hesitate to acknowledge the all thou hast desired of me; and I will do all thy desire concerning cedar-trees, and fir-trees.

9 My servants shall bring them down from Libanus to the sea: and I will put them together in floats, on the sea, and convey them to the place, which thou shalt signify to me, and will land them there, and thou shalt receive them: and thou shalt allow me necessaries to furnish food for my household.

10 So Hiram gave Solomon cedar-trees, and fir-trees, according to all his desire.

11 And Solomon allowed Hiram twenty thousand measures of wheat, for provision for his house, and twenty measures of the purest oil: thus gave Solomon to Hiram every year.

12 And the Lord gave wisdom to Solomon, as he promised him: and there was peace between Hiram and Solomon, and they two made a league together.

13 And king Solomon chose workmen out of all Israel, and the levy was of thirty thousand men.

14 And he sent them to Libanus, ten thousand every month, by turns, so that two months they were at home: and Adoniram was over this levy.

15 And Solomon had seventy thousand to carry burdens, and eighty thousand to hew stones in the mountain:

16 Besides the overseers who were over every work, in number three thousand and three hundred, that ruled over the people, and them that did the work.

17 And the king commanded that they should bring great stones, costly stones, for the foundation of the temple, and should square them:

18 And the masons of Solomon, and the masons of Hiram, hewed them: and the Giblyans prepared timber and stones to build the house.

^b 2 Kings vii. 13; 1 Par. xxii. 10.—^c Supra, iii. 12.

God of Israel, as he supposed that there was a god for each nation. See chap. xx. 28; 4 Kings xvii. 27. C.—Thus many think that they may serve the God of unity by going to hear the sermons of men who preach a contradictory doctrine; but God will admit of no rival, nor can he sanction any but the true religion. H.

VER. 8. Fir-trees. Some take these to be another species of cedars, as they say fir is too slender and corruptible (Martin, &c.); and Solomon had not asked for it, ver. 6; though he does in 2 Par. ii. 8, where (H.) the word is translated archeuthina, "juniper-trees," by the Sept. and S. Jerom. C.—Brussim is rendered fir-trees by Pagnin; box or cedars, &c., by others. The precise import of the Heb. names of plants, animals, &c., is not sufficiently known. M.

VER. 9. There. Joppe was fixed upon, as the port nearest to Jerusalem, 2 Par. ii. 16. The trees were squared and rolled, (C.) or dragged (H.) from the mountain-top to the river Adonis, or the plain of Biblos, and then sent in floats by sea. C.—Household, for the workmen employed in cutting the wood (2 Par. M.); and also for Hiram's other servants, as the kings of the East paid them not with money. C.—The Tyrians neglected agriculture. Servius.

VER. 11. Wheat, "ground or beaten." Heb. Paral. H.—By comparing this passage with chap. iv. 22, we may see how much the court of Solomon surpassed that of Hiram. The former consumed 90 measures of flour a day; and 20,000 of wheat sufficed for the Tyrian prince's family a whole year.—Twenty. It is supposed by many commentators that thousand is to be supplied from the former sentence; as there seems, otherwise, to be no proportion between the wheat and the oil. Piscat., &c.—The Sept., Syr., &c. read 20,000. C.

VER. 14. Levy, or tribute. The men had only to procure stones, as the Tyrians had engaged to do all which regarded the wood. C.—These were Israelites. M.

VER. 15. Mountain of Libanus. C.—Par. mountains: but the Heb. is singular in both places. They were all proselytes or strangers.

VER. 16. Three hundred. In 2 Par. (ii. 2, and 18) we read six hundred (H.); as there are three hundred superior officers included. C. M., Sa., &c.—But these three thousand six hundred are all overseers. H.

VER. 18. Giblyans. Ezechiel (xxvii. 9) commands them for building ships. Giblos of Gebal is supposed to be the town which profane authors style Biblos, at the foot of Libanus. Ptolemy also mentions Gabala, to the east of Tyre. C.

CHAP. VI.

The building of Solomon's temple.

AND^a it came to pass in the four hundred and eightieth year after the children of Israel came out of the land of Egypt, in the fourth year of the reign of Solomon over Israel, in the month Zio, (the same is the second month,) he began to build a house to the Lord.

2 And the house, which king Solomon built to the Lord, was threescore cubits in length, and twenty cubits in breadth, and thirty cubits in height.

3 And there was a porch before the temple, of twenty cubits in length, according to the measure of the breadth of the temple: and it was ten cubits in breadth, before the face of the temple.

4 And he made in the temple oblique windows.

5 And upon the wall of the temple, he built floors round about, in the walls of the house, round about the temple and the oracle, and he made chambers in the sides round about.

6 The floor that was underneath was five cubits in breadth, and the middle floor was six cubits in breadth, and the third floor was seven cubits in breadth. And he put beams in the house round about on the outside, that they might not be fastened in the walls of the temple.

7 And the house, when it was in building, was built of stones, hewed and made ready: so that there was neither hammer nor axe, nor any tool of iron heard in the house when it was in building.

8 The door, for the middle side, was on the right hand of the house: and by winding stairs they went up to the middle room, and from the middle to the third.

^a A. M. 2992, A. C. 1012. 2 Par. iii. 1.

CHAP. VI. VER. 1. Eightieth year. This chronology meets with the approbation of most people. See Usher, Chap. xii. Some, however, find a difficulty in reconciling it with Acts xiii, 20, which seems to attribute 450 years to the government of the judges. C.—Second of the sacred year, corresponding with our April. Syr. Chaldees style it “of the splendour of flowers.” M.—At first the Hebrews only described the months by their order; “first, second,” &c. In Solomon's time we begin to find other names, taken from the Phenicians, (Scalig.) Chaldees, (Grot.) or Egyptians. Hardouin, A. 2993.—After the captivity, at least, the Chaldees names were adopted (H.); 1. Nisan; 2. Jar; 3. Sivan; 4. Tammuz; 5. Ab; 6. Elul; 7. Tisri; 8. Marševan; 9. Caslen; 10. Thebet; 11. Schebet; 12. Adar (C.); 13. Veadar, the intercalary month, when requisite, according to the lunar system, which was not perhaps yet adopted.

VER. 2. House. Heb. Hecal, “the palace” of the God of Israel, where the priests alone had access. It was surrounded by various courts and apartments, as the ancient temples were very different from ours. All these appendages sometimes go under the common name of the temple. C.—Cubits. The common one contained half a yard. The sacred cubit amounted to 21,888 inches. Arbuthnot, Ezech. xliii. 13.—Calmet makes the cubit consist of 24 fingers' breadth, or little less than 20 inches of the French measure, which is greater than ours. H.—Hence the temple would be 102½ feet long, 34 feet 2 inches broad, 51 feet 3 inches high to the ceiling. C.—The walls are not included; else the breadth would be almost 60 cubits, the length 100, and the height 50. Villalpand, ii. 5, 14. M.

VER. 4. Oblique windows. Which were made slanting, that the light might be more easily communicated within. H.—On the outside they were not so large. W. M.—Heb. “windows to see through, shut,” with lattices, (C.) or blinds. Prot. “he made windows of narrow lights.” H.—Curtains might be hung before them, as no glass was yet used. C.—These windows occupied the 5 cubits above the chambers, which were built on the west end, and on the sides of the temple, 15 cubits high. C.—No windows were permitted in the holy of holies. M.

VER. 5. Upon the wall. That is, joining to the wall.—He built floors round about. Chambers or cells adjoining to the temple, for the use of the temple and of the priests, so contrived as to be between the inward and outward wall of the temple, in three stories, one above another.—The oracle. The inner temple, or holy of holies, where God gave his oracles. Ch.—Sides. Prot. “he made chambers round about.” H.

VER. 7. Made ready, &c. So the stones for the building of God's eternal temple, in the heavenly Jerusalem, (who are the faithful,) must first be hewn and polished here by many trials and sufferings, before they can be admitted to have a place in that celestial structure. Ch.—Those who have the happiness to be chosen 9 So he built the house, and finished it: and he covered the house with roofs of cedar.

10 And he built a floor over all the house, five cubits in height, and he covered the house with timber of cedar.

11 And the word of the Lord came to Solomon, saying:

12 As for this house, which thou art building, if thou wilt walk in my statutes, and execute my judgments, and keep all my commandments, walking in them, I will fulfil my word to thee, ^bwhich I spoke to David thy father.

13 ^cAnd I will dwell in the midst of the children of Israel, and I will not forsake my people Israel.

14 So Solomon built the house, and finished it.

15 And he built the walls of the house on the inside, with boards of cedar, from the floor of the house to the top of the walls, and to the roofs, he covered it with boards of cedar on the inside: and he covered the floor of the house with planks of fir.

16 And he built up twenty cubits with boards of cedar at the hinder part of the temple, from the floor to the top: and made the inner house of the oracle to be the holy of holies.

17 And the temple itself, before the doors of the oracle, was forty cubits long.

18 And all the house was covered within with cedar, having the turnings, and the joints thereof artfully wrought, and carvings projecting out: all was covered with boards of cedar: and no stone could be seen in the wall at all.

19 And he made the oracle in the midst of the house, in the inner part, to set there the ark of the covenant of the Lord.

20 Now the oracle was twenty cubits in length, and will be no more disturbed with the noise or inconvenience of persecution, (H.) which they ought to bear in silence upon earth. W.—Building. Screw nails were probably used. The ancient Romans wrought the mouldings, &c. of their pillars after they were erected. We may form a grand idea of the workmen employed by Solomon, when we consider that they were able to prepare all things with such exactitude, at a distance. C.

VER. 8. Middle side. Sept. “lower story.” C.—“The door of the lower story (rib or side, πλευράς; Chal. the lower appendage) was under the right wing of the house, and a winding staircase led to the middle, and from the middle to the third story. H.—This sense is very clear. Heb. intimates that the staircase was round like a screw, and was formed in the wall at one end of the rooms.—Right hand of those who entered the temple, or on the north; though the south is commonly thus designated. The doors opened into the porch, as the temple was not to be made a thoroughfare. C.

VER. 9. Roofs. Prot. “beams and boards of cedar.” None of the stones appeared within, ver. 18. H.

VER. 10. Height. To prevent the excessive heats. Five other cubits were also subtracted, ver. 20. Some translate, “he made also stories of all the temple, each five cubits high;” so that the three stories occupied half the height of the walls, which were thirty cubits in height, ver. 2. C.—Covered. Heb. “took (or bound together) the house,” &c. The roof was flat. C.—Villalpand maintains the contrary, (in Ezech. xli.) with Sanchez, &c. Salien gathers, from many of the ancients, that the floor here mentioned was a balustrade, or the pinnule of the temple, (Matt. iv.,) where people might walk or pray. M.

VER. 15. Fir. Or perhaps of another species of cedar, resembling the juniper-tree. It is found in Phenicia, and in Lycia. See chap. v. 8. It is doubted whether the sanctuary was also boarded, as we read that it was paved with marble. Heb. “with precious or costly stones,” 2 Par. iii. 6. But boards might be laid upon them, as they were on other parts of the temple. The magnificence of Solomon appears in his using such costly things, even where they would not be exposed to view. The floor was again covered with plates of gold, ver. 30.

VER. 16. The inner house of the oracle. That is, the sanctuary, which is separated from the other part of the temple with this partition of cedar, instead of the veil, which in the tabernacle of Moses hung before the sanctuary. Ch.—It was a square of twenty cubits, extending from the western end. H.—Hither none but the high priest was allowed to enter, and he but once a year. C.

VER. 18. Out. Heb. “and the cedar boards of the house within were carved with knops (fruits) and open flowers,” (H.) alternately. C.

VER. 20. Pure gold. Heb. “reserved” by David, or “gold locked up,” &c.

twenty cubits in breadth, and twenty cubits in height. And he covered it, and overlaid it with most pure gold. And the altar also he covered with cedar.

21 And the house before the oracle he overlaid with most pure gold, and fastened on the plates with nails of gold.

22 And there was nothing in the temple that was not covered with gold: the whole altar of the oracle he covered also with gold.

23 And he made in the oracle two cherubims of olive-tree, of ten cubits in height.

24 One wing of the cherub was five cubits, and the other wing of the cherub was five cubits: that is, in all ten cubits, from the extremity of one wing to the extremity of the other wing.

25 The second cherub also was ten cubits: and the measure and the work was the same in both the cherubims:

26 That is to say, one cherub was ten cubits high, and in like manner the other cherub.

27 And he set the cherubims in the midst of the inner temple: and the cherubims stretched forth their wings, and the wing of the one touched one wall, and the wing of the other cherub touched the other wall: and the other wings in the midst of the temple touched one another.

28 And he overlaid the cherubims with gold.

29 And all the walls of the temple round about he carved with divers figures and carvings: and he made in them cherubims and palm-trees, and divers representations, as it were standing out, and coming forth from the wall.

* A. M. 3000, A. C. 1004.

most precious. Thin plates were laid on, so as to fit all the various mouldings, flowers, &c.—Cedar. The altar was probably of stone; and upon the cedar boards gold was laid, that the ark might rest upon it. The altar of perfumes was not in the most holy place. C.

VER. 21. Before, ver. 17. The holy and the most holy place were equally covered with plates of gold. H.—Heb. "So Solomon overlaid the inner temple with gold reserved, and he made a partition with chains of gold, before the sanctuary, and he overlaid it with gold." H.—The chains were destined to fasten the doors, before locks were invented.

VER. 23. Olive. Heb. "trees full of oil or resin," distinguished from olive-trees, &c.—Cedar. Vatab. translates, "pine;" others, "cypress-wood." C.—Height. Their gigantic stature served to denote the magnificence and greatness of God. They looked towards the east. M.—Their wings extended equalled their height; so that the two cherubims occupied the whole space from north to south, (H.) covering the smaller cherubim of Moses. They only reached half the height of the sanctuary. Their form is not clearly ascertained. See Exod. xxv. 18. C.

VER. 29. And divers, &c. Heb. "and open (full-blown) flowers within and without" the sanctuary. We read also of chains of gold connected together. 2 Par. iii. 5. C.—It is clear that sacred pictures were authorized to be set up in the temple for God's honour, (W.) though the Jews were so prone to idolatry. H.

VER. 32. And carvings, &c. Heb. "and flowers full-blown." The term, anaglyphus, denotes a sculpture in relief, (C.) or projecting. II.

VER. 34. Fir-tree, or some species of cedar, ver. 15.—Double. In the large doors other smaller were made, that the priests might pass more easily. M.—And so, &c. Lit. "and holding each other, was opened." Both the great and the small doors might open at the same time (Sanchez); or rather the latter would afford a passage while the great folding-doors were shut. M.

VER. 35. And carved, &c. Heb. "and open flowers, (as ver. 32.) and overlaid them with gold, fitted upon the sculpture" (H.); so that the shape of every thing appeared.

VER. 36. Court of the priests.—Cedar. Some think that the court was surrounded with galleries, supported on three rows of pillars; or one gallery was above another, on pillars of stone, with a third supported by cedar pillars. M.—But Josephus takes no notice of these galleries. Others think that the wall of separation consisted only of two rows of stone, with a third of wood, in all three cubits high. Joseph. viii. 2. Villal.—But the sacred writers seem rather to indicate that beams of cedar were fixed in the walls, at the distance of three courses of stone, even to the top. This mode of architecture is clearly mentioned, chap. vii. 12; 1 Esd. vi. 3, 4, and v. 8; Habac. ii. 11. H.

VER. 38. Bul, afterwards styled Marchesvan. Pagnin thinks that the former name alludes to "the inundation" of rain at that season, corresponding with our 30 And the floor of the house he also overlaid with gold within and without.

31 And in the entrance of the oracle, he made little doors of olive-tree, and posts of five corners,

32 And two doors of olive-tree: and he carved upon them figures of cherubims, and figures of palm-trees, and carvings very much projecting; and he overlaid them with gold: and he covered both the cherubims and the palm-trees, and the other things, with gold.

33 And he made in the entrance of the temple posts of olive-tree four square:

34 And two doors of fir-tree, one of each side: and each door was double, and so opened with folding-leaves.

35 And he carved cherubims, and palm-trees, and carved work standing very much out: and he overlaid all with golden plates in square work by rule.

36 And he built the inner court with three rows of polished stones, and one row of beams of cedar.

37 In the fourth year was the house of the Lord founded, in the month Zio:

38 And in the eleventh year, in the month Bul, (which is the eighth month,) the house was finished in all the works thereof, and in all the appurtenances thereof: and he was seven years in building it.

Solomon's palace, his house in the forest, and the queen's house: the work of the two pillars: the sea (or laver) and other vessels.

AND Solomon built his own house in thirteen years, and brought it to perfection.

October and November. Chal. "the month of collected fruits." M.—Years. It is wonderful that Solomon could complete this most stupendous structure (H.) in so short a time. It is reported that 360,000 men were employed for twenty years to build a pyramid of Egypt (C.); which was designed, perhaps, for no other purpose but to show the pride and magnificence of the king while living, and to contain his ashes after death. Many of the materials for the temple had indeed been collected by David, (1 Par. xxii.,) so that Solomon was enabled to finish it in a much shorter time than his own palace, which took him almost thirteen years to bring to perfection. They were almost contiguous to each other, though built on separate hills. The temple occupied the whole of Moria, which was levelled a great deal, to allow space sufficient for such an amazing structure. It was thus founded upon a rock, as an emblem of the perpetuity of the true religion, which has subsisted from the beginning of the world: as may be seen at large in Dr. Worthington, who, on this occasion, gives a retrospective view of what had taken place in the Jewish state, with respect to this most important subject, during the fourth age, or for the space of the last 480 years. See Douay Bible in loc., &c. H.—Building it. The dedication was deferred till the following year, probably on account of the jubilee recurring at that time. Usher, A. 3000. C.—But this is very uncertain. Salien fixes upon the year 3030, which was not a year of jubilee; and he rather thinks that the delay was occasioned by the vessels, the brazen sea, &c., which had to be brought from the other side of the Jordan. We may also recollect that the rainy season was set in before the temple was quite finished; so that it would have been very inconvenient for all Israel to assemble at that time. After the dedication, the temple continued to be adorned, till it was destroyed by Nebuchadonoser, (H.) A. 3416, and lay in ruins fifty-two years, when the Jews were authorized by Cyrus to rebuild it. They could not however finish the work, so as to proceed to a fresh dedication, till the reign of Darius Hystaspes, A. 3489. Herod undertook to rebuild (Button) the greatest part of this second temple, and to adorn it, in the most magnificent manner, A. 3986. This place was honoured by the presence of the Son of God, who foretold the destruction, which took place within that generation. A. D. 70. II.

CHAP. VII. VER. 1. Thirteen. He was only twelve years and a half; since he finished both the temple and the palace in twenty years. Chap. ix. 10. Salien observes that Solomon's house was connected with the queen's, as well as with that part which was styled the forest of Libanus, for their mutual recreation. A. C. 1023. The Rom. Sept. places the thirteen first verses at the end, ver. 51. II.

VER. 2. Libanus. So it was called, on account of the many cedar pillars brought from that mountain; or because many trees and shrubs were planted in the vicinity. C.—The palace stood on the eastern part of Sion, and to the west of the temple. M.—The vale between them had been filled up, at a vast expense, and a sort of bridge erected, which was called Mello. Thus the palace of David, on the cubits, and the height thirty cubits: and four galleries between pillars of cedar: for he had cut cedar-trees into pillars.

3 And he covered the whole vault with boards of cedar, and it was held up with five and forty pillars. And one row had fifteen pillars,

4 Set one against another,

5 And looking one upon another, with equal space between the pillars, and over the pillars were square beams in all things equal.

6 And he made a porch of pillars of fifty cubits in length, and thirty cubits in breadth: and another porch before the greater porch, and pillars, and capitals upon the pillars.

7 He made also the porch of the throne wherein is the seat of judgment; and covered it with cedar-wood from the floor to the top.

8 And in the midst of the porch was a small house, where he sat in judgment of the like work. He made also a house for the daughter of Pharaoh ("whom Solomon had taken to wife) of the same work as this porch;

9 All of costly stones, which were sawed by a certain rule and measure, both within and without: from the foundation to the top of the walls, and without, unto the great court.

10 And the foundations were of costly stones, great stones of ten cubits or eight cubits.

11 And above there were costly stones of equal measure hewed, and in like manner planks of cedar.

12 And the great court was made round with three rows of hewed stones, and one row of planks of cedar, which also was observed in the inner court of the house of the Lord, and in the porch of the house.

west of Sion, and this of Solomon, served to protect the temple and to keep the citizens in awe. Salic.—Sanchez declines giving the dimensions of this palace, as they are not satisfactory. M.—Here Solomon resided, and was served in gold, (C.) adorning his palace with shields and targets of the same precious metal. Chap. x. 16–21.—Cubits. The more sacred part of the temple was only 60, 20, and 30 cubits. Chap. vi. 2. But there were various other appendages and towers. This palace must have been very extensive.—And four. Heb. "upon four rows of cedar pillars, with cedar beams upon the pillars." H.—One row of these might be rather pilasters, against the wall (ver. 3); so that there would be three covered galleries before the apartments, each supported on fifteen pillars. C.

VER. 4. Set, &c. Heb. "and windows in three rows, over against one another; (5) and all the doors and posts square with the windows: and light was against light, in three rows." H.—The palace had three stories; but the galleries before it were of equal height with it.

VER. 6. Porch. Sept. seem to retain the original word aulom, as they read αυλαμ; whence our hall, and the Lat. aula, may be derived. H.—It was a court surrounded by pillars and galleries in front of the palace. C.—Another. Heb. "the porch before them (pillars) and the pillars, and the thick beam before them."

VER. 7. Top. Heb. "the other side." H.—The eastern princes generally sit before their palace to give judgment; and hence that of the Ottoman emperors is styled the Porte, (C.) or "gate."

VER. 8. House. In the form of a recess or alcove at the end of one of the aforesaid porches, and probably in that which was nearer the palace. Guards would be stationed in the other. H.—Pharaoh. Till it was finished this lady had lodged in David's palace; though, as it was deemed in a manner sacred, on account of the presence of the ark, it was judged expedient to remove her. 2 Par. viii. 11. H.

VER. 12. Cedar, in regular courses with the stones. Chap. vi. 36. Public places were often made in a circular form, and were thus rendered more beautiful. The palace of Solomon might have enclosed the court in this manner, or there were buildings on all the four sides, made of three courses of fine large stones, with the fourth of cedar beams, till the whole was completed. The ancients built for posterity, as we may perceive from the huge stones, well connected, which still remain in the ruins of Egyptian, Greek, and Roman architecture.

VER. 14. Nephtali: 2 Par. (ii. 14) we read of Dan. But the king of Tyre might be under a mistake, (Sanctius,) or he may only insinuate that she lived at 13 And king Solomon sent, and brought Hiram from Tyre.

14 The son of a widow woman, of the tribe of Nephtali, whose father was a Tyrian, an artificer in brass, and full of wisdom, and understanding, and skill to work all work in brass. And when he was come to king Solomon, he wrought all his work.

15 And he cast two pillars in brass, each pillar was eighteen cubits high: ^band a line of twelve cubits compassed both the pillars.

16 He made also two chapters of molten brass, to be set upon the tops of the pillars: the height of one chapter was five cubits, and the height of the other chapter was five cubits:

17 And a kind of net-work, and chain-work wreathed together with wonderful art. Both the chapters of the pillars were cast: seven rows of nets were on one chapter, and seven nets on the other chapter.

18 And he made the pillars, and two rows round about each net-work to cover the chapters, that were upon the top, with pomegranates: and in like manner did he to the other chapter.

19 And the chapters that were upon the top of the pillars, were of lily-work, in the porch of four cubits.

20 And again there were other chapters on the top of the pillars above, according to the measure of the pillar over against the net-work: and of pomegranates there were two hundred, in rows round about the other chapter.

21 And he set up the two pillars in the porch of the temple: and when he had set up the pillar on the right hand, he called the name thereof Jachin: in like manner he set up the second pillar, and called the name thereof Booz.

the city of that name, in the tribe of Nephtali. M.—One of her husbands might be a Danite, (Grot.) though resident at Tyre.—Father may also denote a master or officer; in which sense we read in Par., My father, Hiram. H. S. Jer. Trad. M.

VER. 15. Eighteen. Both together are said, in Par., to be thirty-five, as it half a cubit too much had been here assigned, which is not unusual with regard to imperfect numbers, ver. 1. But Jeremias (lii. 21) agrees with this passage; and the book of Par. may not have included a cubit of solid metal at the base or plinth. A. Lap.—The rest was hollow. The chapters of five cubits, and the bases, which were perhaps as large, are not contained in the eighteen cubits, which might otherwise appear to be disproportionate with the circumference of twelve cubits. C.

VER. 16. Five. Comprising all the ornaments. The body was only three cubits, 4 Kings xxv. 17. If we include the circles, which join it to the pillar, it would be four (ver. 19); and with the rose, and ornaments at the top, five cubits high.

VER. 19. Of lily-work, seems also transposed. Calmet would translate Heb. "and he made pomegranates, two rows round each net, to cover the chapter, which was at the top of the pillar, and in, &c., (19) and the chapter, which was above the pillars of the court, (or porch,) four cubits high. And he made rows of two hundred pomegranates, all round, to cover one of the crowns of the pillars, and he did the like for the other crown; (20) and he also made a chapter, like a rose, (or lily), at the top of the pillars, above, and over against the body, which was beyond the nets." The rose seemed to grow out of the pillar. The chapters were not square, but of a circular form. Pelletier supposes that these pillars were of the ancient Doric order. It is certain that all the chapter was not in the form of a lily, as the Heb. would now insinuate, but only the top part of it. Chap. v. 22. The long addition of one of the crowns, &c., may be unnecessary, if the original signify either; (as ver. 15,) "to cover either crown."

VER. 20. Chapter (capitelli secundi). H.—Villalpand thinks this "second chapter" is rather the cornice, round which the pomegranates hung. M.—Sept. "and of roses, five rows, all round, upon the second circle." H.

VER. 21. Temple. Against the wall, (Jer. lii. 23,) on each side of the door, which leads to the holy place. The pillars might be twenty-eight cubits high, ver. 15. H.—Jachin. That is, firmly established.—Booz. That is, in its strength. By recording these names in holy writ the Spirit of God would have us understand the invincible firmness and strength of the pillars on which the true temple of God, which is the Church, is established. Ch.

22 And upon the tops of the pillars he made lily-work : so the work of the pillars was finished.

23 *He made also a molten sea, of ten cubits, from brim to brim, round all about ; the height of it was five cubits, and a line of thirty cubits compassed it round about.

24 And a graven work, under the brim of it, compassed it for ten cubits going about the sea : there were two rows cast of chamfered sculptures.

25 And it stood upon twelve oxen, of which three looked towards the north, and three towards the west, and three towards the south, and three towards the east : and the sea was above upon them, and their hinder parts were all hid within.

26 And the laver was a hand-breadth thick : and the brim thereof was like the brim of a cup, or the leaf of a crisped lily : it contained two thousand bates.

27 And he made ten bases of brass, every base was four cubits in length, and four cubits in breadth, and three cubits high.

28 And the work itself of the bases, was intergraven : and there were gravings between the joinings.

29 And between the little crowns and the ledges, were lions, and oxen, and cherubims ; and in the joinings likewise above : and under the lions and oxen, as it were bands of brass hanging down.

30 And every base had four wheels, and axletrees of brass and at the four sides were undersetters, under the laver molten, looking one against another.

31 The mouth also of the laver within, was in the top of the chapter : and that which appeared without, was of one cubit all round, and together it was one cubit and a half : and in the corners of the pillars were divers engravings : and the spaces between the pillars were square, not round.

32 And the four wheels, which were at the four corners of the base, were joined one to another under the base : the height of a wheel was a cubit and a half.

33 And they were such wheels as are used to be made in a chariot : and their axletrees, and spokes, and strakes, and naves, were all cast.

VER. 23. Brim, in diameter. The circumference was about thirty cubits ; for it is not exactly three times as much as the diameter. C.—The latter is as 7 to 22, with respect to the circumference. M.

VER. 24. Ten cubits. All was not therefore ornamented. Prot. "there were knobs compassing it, ten in a cubit . . . the knobs were cast in two rows, when it was cast." H.—The signification of Pohaim is not ascertained, whether it be "apples, balls," &c., or perhaps a corrupt word for Bokrim, "oxen," or "ox heads ;" as 2 Par. (iv. 3) clearly explains it. C.—There also it is insinuated that the carvings commenced only towards the bottom, where the circumference was reduced to ten cubits. M.

VER. 25. Oxen. Josephus and the Jews would condemn Solomon for making these figures ; but it is clear that his present was acceptable to God, as well as his person. C.—Within. The oxen were of solid brass, to support such a weight. M.

VER. 26. Two thousand bates. That is, about ten thousand gallons. This was the quantity of water which was usually put into it ; but it was capable, if brim-full, of holding three thousand. See 2 Par. iv. 5, 7. Ch.—The batus contained about five gallons. W.—Instead of a hand's breadth, it is lit. "three ounces," or the fourth part of a Roman foot ; which is equivalent to four fingers' (H.) breadth, or a "hand's breadth," as the Heb. topē implies, or a little above three inches.—Crisped, or "full-blown lily." The Chaldee supposes it was thus ornamented. Heb. "with flowers of lilies," (C.) or "roses." Ssussan. H.

34 And the four undersetters, that were at every corner of each base, were of the base itself, cast and joined together.

35 And on the top of the base, there was a round compass of half a cubit, so wrought that the laver might be set thereon, having its gravings, and divers sculptures of itself.

36 He engraved also in those plates, which were of brass, and in the corners, cherubims, and lions, and palm-trees, in likeness of a man standing, so that they seemed not to be engraven, but added round about.

37 After this manner, he made ten bases, of one casting and measure, and the like graving.

38 He made also ten lavers of brass : one laver contained four bates, and was of four cubits : and upon every base, in all ten, he put as many lavers.

39 And he set the ten bases, five on the right side of the temple, and five on the left : and the sea he put on the right side of the temple, over against the east, southward.

40 And Hiram made cauldrons, and shovels, and basins, and finished all the work of king Solomon in the temple of the Lord.

41 The two pillars and the two cords of the chapters, upon the chapters of the pillars : and the two net-works, to cover the two cords, that were upon the top of the pillars.

42 And four hundred pomegranates for the two net-works : two rows of pomegranates for each net-work, to cover the cords of the chapters, which were upon the tops of the pillars.

43 And the ten bases, and the ten lavers on the bases.

44 And one sea, and twelve oxen under the sea.

45 And the cauldrons, and the shovels, and the basins. All the vessels that Hiram made for king Solomon, for the house of the Lord, were of fine brass.

46 In the plains of the Jordan, did the king cast them in a clay ground, between Socoth and Sarthan.

47 And Solomon placed all the vessels : but for its exceeding great multitude the brass could not be weighed.

48 And Solomon made all the vessels for the house of the Lord : the altar of gold, and the table of gold, upon which the loaves of proposition should be set :

M.—S. Justin (ap. 2) observes, that the pagans imitated this custom. But this ought not to hinder Christians from employing a thing which is innocent in itself, and calculated to make them aspire to the greatest purity, when they approach to God. H.

VER. 40. Shovels. Scutras may also signify "cauldrons," from their resemblance with a shield. These terms occur Exod. xxvii. 3, (C.) and are here properly translated, shovels, &c. H.

VER. 41. Cords : no mention of these had been made before. The same terms are frequently expressed in a different manner. Ver. 15—20. Heb. "the two pillars and the chapters round, (C.) which were on the top of the pillars, and the two nets to cover the two bowls of (or the two circular) chapters," &c. II.

VER. 45. Fine brass (aurichalco). Some pretended that gold was mixed with this sort of brass. But Pliny (xxxiv. 2) informs us that it came out of the mines, without dross. Heb. "polished (or refined) brass." C.—It might resemble the Corinthian brass. M.

VER. 46. Sarthan. This place was on the west, and Socoth on the east of the Jordan, near Bethsan. Chap. iv. 12. C.—Jos. iii. 16. H.—Adrichomius places both on the east, in the tribe of Gad. M.

VER. 47. Weighed. It was deemed unnecessary, and too troublesome. H.—Heb. "And Solomon would not have all the vessels weighed," on account of the too great number : the weight of the brass was not discovered. Vatable.

VER. 48. Altar, not that on which the ark was placed, (chap. vi. 20. C.) though some are of that opinion (M. &c.) ; but perhaps the altar of incense. In 1 Par. iv. 8 we find ten specified, one between each candlestick, in the holy place. C.

49 And the golden candlesticks, five on the right hand, and five on the left, over against the oracle, of pure gold: and the flowers like lilies, and the lamps over them of gold: and golden snuffers,

50 And pots, and flesh-hooks, and bowls, and mortars, and censers, of most pure gold: and the hinges for the doors of the inner house of the holy of holies, and for the doors of the house of the temple, were of gold.

51 *And Solomon finished all the work that he made in the house of the Lord, and brought in the things that David, his father, had dedicated, the silver and the gold, and the vessels, and laid them up in the treasures of the house of the Lord.

CHAP. VIII.

The dedication of the temple: Solomon's prayer and sacrifices.

THEN ^aall the ancients of Israel, with the princes of the tribes, and the heads of the families of the children of Israel, were assembled to king Solomon, in Jerusalem: that they might carry the ark of the covenant of the Lord, out of the city of David, that is, out of Sion.

2 And all Israel assembled themselves to king Solomon, on the festival day, in the month of Ethanim, the same is the seventh month.

3 And all the ancients of Israel came, and the priests took up the ark,

4 And carried the ark of the Lord, and the tabernacle of the covenant, and all the vessels of the sanctuary, that were in the tabernacle: and the priests and the Levites carried them.

5 And king Solomon, and all the multitude of Israel, that were assembled unto him, went with him before the ark, and they sacrificed sheep and oxen, that could not be counted or numbered.

6 And the priests brought in the ark of the covenant of the Lord into its place, into the oracle of the temple, into the holy of holies, under the wings of the cherubims.

7 For the cherubims spread forth their wings over the place of the ark, and covered the ark, and the staves thereof above.

8 And whereas the staves stood out, the ends of them were seen without, in the sanctuary before the oracle, but

CHAP. VIII. VER. 2. Ethanim was afterwards called Tisri. H.—Usher places the dedication on Friday, 30th October, the 8th of the seventh month. The people continued at Jerusalem till the 23rd. The feast of expiation fell on the 10th, (H.) during the octave of the dedication. After this, the feast of tabernacles commenced on the fifteenth, for other seven days.

VER. 4. Ark, from the city of David, along with the tabernacle, (Salien,) which had been made for it in the palace. VER. 1. They also (H.) brought the Mosaic tabernacle from Gabaon, (C. Josephus, &c.,) and reposed both (H.) in the treasury of the temple, as they were now of no other service. Jeremias was authorized to take the ark, the tabernacle, and the altar of incense, in order to prevent their falling into the hands of the Chaldees. He placed them in a cave, where they have never been discovered. 2 Mac. ii. 4.

VER. 5. Sacrificed, by the hands of the priests, (M.) or at least (H.) gave them the blood to offer upon the altars, which were placed at six paces from one another, in imitation of David. 2 Kings vi. 13. C.—Could not. See chap. vii. 47.

VER. 6. Wings. These covered the smaller cherubim, upon the ark. H. Chap. vi. 23, 27.—They formed a sort of throne, with their wings extended from one side of the building to the other, (C.) twenty cubits long. H.

VER. 8. Out. In the days of Moses these staves had touched the veil of the tabernacle; but now, as the place for the ark was twice as large, they were no longer perceived; though they remained in the holes prepared for them by Moses, till the author wrote; which must have been before the captivity. C.

VER. 9. Nothing else, &c. There was nothing else but the tables of the law within the ark. But on the outside of the ark, or near the ark, were also the rod were not seen farther out, and there they have been unto this day.

9 Now in the ark there was nothing else but the two tables of stone, which Moses put there at Horeb, when the Lord made a covenant with the children of Israel, when they came out of the land of Egypt.

10 And it came to pass, when the priests were come out of the sanctuary, that a cloud filled the house of the Lord,

11 And the priests could not stand to minister because of the cloud: for the glory of the Lord had filled the house of the Lord.

12 Then Solomon said: ^aThe Lord said that he would dwell in a cloud.

13 Building, I have built a house for thy dwelling, to be thy most firm throne for ever.

14 And the king turned his face, and blessed all the assembly of Israel: for all the assembly of Israel stood.

15 And Solomon said: Blessed be the Lord the God of Israel, who spoke with his mouth to David, my father, and with his own hands hath accomplished it, saying:

16 Since the day that I brought my people Israel out of Egypt, I chose no city out of all the tribes of Israel, for a house to be built, that my name might be there: but I chose David to be over my people Israel.

17 ^aAnd David, my father, would have built a house to the name of the Lord, the God of Israel:

18 And the Lord said to David, my father: Whereas, thou hast thought in thy heart to build a house to my name, thou hast done well in having this same thing in thy mind.

19 Nevertheless, thou shalt not build me a house, but thy son, that shall come forth out of thy loins, he shall build a house to my name.

20 The Lord hath performed his word which he spoke, and I stand in the room of David, my father, and sit upon the throne of Israel, as the Lord promised: and have built a house to the name of the Lord, the God of Israel.

21 And I have set there a place for the ark, where is the covenant of the Lord, which he made with our fathers, when they came out of the land of Egypt.

22 And Solomon stood before the altar of the Lord, in of Aaron, and a golden urn with manna. Heb. ix. 4. Ch. W.—These might have been in the ark while it was not fixed; but after the temple was built, all but the tables was placed in the treasury; where, we find, the book or the law was discovered, under Joas. Deut. xxxi. 26; 2 Par. xxiv. 14. C.—In arca might easily signify ad, or juxta arcam, "near the ark." So'ier.

VER. 12. Cloud. He alludes to Lev. xvi. 2. M.—God had so frequently appeared in this manner, that Solomon was authorized to consider it as the symbol of his presence. Exod. xiv. 19; xxiv. 16, and xl. 32; Isai. xvii. 12. This luminous cloud filled the whole temple, to convince all that the Lord was pleased with the devotion of the king, and of his people. C.

VER. 14. Stood. It is pretended that the king alone was allowed to sit. C.—But here Solomon stood, upon an eminence made of brass. 2 Par. vi. 13. H.—He pronounced the blessing, (part of which is given, ver. 15—22,) with his face turned towards the people, as he was also in the court of Israel. Then turning himself to the altar (C.) of holocausts, (M.) with his hands uplifted, he began to pray. Ver. 23—54. See Exod. xxxix. 43; 2 Kings vi. 18, where Moses and David blessed the people, on similar occasions. C.—Thus the priests of the Catholic Church turn to the people, when they bless or speak to them; and look towards the altar, when they pour forth their supplications for them to God. Sectaries would always behold the face of the preacher. H.

VER. 22. Heaven, falling on his knees. Ver. 54; 2 Par. vi. 13. This is the first instance we find of people praying on their knees, which was common afterwards. 1 Esd. ix. 5; Isa. xlv. 24; Dan. vi. 10; Acts ix. 40, and xx. 36. The Christian Church generally adopts this custom.

the sight of the assembly of Israel, and spread forth his hands towards heaven, 23 And said: Lord God of Israel, there is no God like thee, in heaven above, or on the earth beneath: who keepest covenant and mercy with thy servants, that have walked before thee with all their heart.

24 Who hast kept with thy servant David, my father, what thou hast promised him: with thy mouth thou didst speak, and with thy hands thou hast performed, as this day proveth.

25 Now, therefore, O Lord God of Israel, keep with thy servant David, my father, what thou hast spoken to him, saying: "There shall not be taken away of thee a man in my sight, to sit on the throne of Israel: yet so that thy children take heed to their way, that they walk before me as thou hast walked in my sight."

26 And now, Lord God of Israel, let thy words be established, which thou hast spoken to thy servant David, my father.

27 Is it then to be thought that God should indeed dwell upon earth? for if heaven, and the heavens of heavens, cannot contain thee, how much less this house which I have built?

28 But have regard to the prayer of thy servant, and to his supplications, O Lord, my God: hear the hymn and the prayer, which thy servant prayeth before thee this day:

29 That thy eyes may be open upon this house, night and day: upon the house of which thou hast said: "My name shall be there: that thou mayest hearken to the prayer which thy servant prayeth, in this place to thee:"

30 That thou mayest hearken to the supplication of thy servant, and of thy people Israel, whatsoever they shall pray for in this place, and hear them in the place of thy dwelling in heaven; and when thou hearest, show them mercy.

31 If any man trespass against his neighbour, and have an oath upon him, wherewith he is bound, and come, because of the oath, before thy altar, to thy house, 32 Then hear thou in heaven: and do and judge thy servants, condemning the wicked, and bringing his way upon his own head, and justifying the just, and rewarding him according to his justice.

33 If thy people Israel shall fly before their enemies, (because they will sin against thee,) and doing penance,

VER. 25. Sight. Solomon was aware of the conditions on which he held his crown and the Divine favour, so that his fall is the more inexcusable. H.—His posterity lost a great part of the kingdom, though they had the right to rule over Juda till the coming of Christ. W.

VER. 27. Earth. Full of admiration, he breaks out into this pathetic exclamation, wondering that God should deign to accept of what he had done; and that, by the symbol of his presence, he should engage to honour this temple in a more particular manner, and to shower down his graces with a more liberal hand on those who should there present themselves before him. This wise prince was not ignorant that God's immensity fills all places.—Heavens. We know not how many heavens the Jews admitted. We find, 1. the air, 2. the region of the stars, 3. the residence of God, thus specified; and this last is here denoted as the most excellent of all. S. Paul styles it the third heaven. 2 Cor. xii. 2.

VER. 29. My name. It shall be called the house of God. H.—There people shall come to do homage to the Lord. C.

VER. 34. Fathers. In the place of their captivity they might turn, like and confessing to thy name, shall come and pray, and make supplications to thee in this house:

34 Then hear thou in heaven, and forgive the sin of thy people Israel, and bring them back to the land which thou gavest to their fathers.

35 If heaven shall be shut up, and there shall be no rain, because of their sins, and they, praying in this place, shall do penance to thy name, and shall be converted from their sins, by occasion of their afflictions:

36 Then hear thou them in heaven, and forgive the sins of thy servants, and of thy people Israel: and show them the good way wherein they should walk, and give rain upon thy land, which thou hast given to thy people in possession.

37 If a famine arise in the land, or a pestilence, or corrupt air, or blasting, or locust, or mildew; if their enemy afflict them, besieging the gates, whatsoever plague, whatsoever infirmity,

38 Whatsoever curse or imprecation shall happen to any man of thy people Israel: when a man shall know the wound of his own heart, and shall spread forth his hands in this house;

39 Then hear thou in heaven, in the place of thy dwelling, and forgive, and do so as to give to every one according to his ways, as thou shalt see his heart; (for thou only knowest the heart of all the children of men;)

40 That they may fear thee all the days that they live upon the face of the land, which thou hast given to our fathers.

41 Moreover also the stranger, who is not of thy people Israel, when he shall come out of a far country for thy name's sake, (for they shall hear every where of thy great name, and thy mighty hand, 42 And thy stretched out arm,) so when he shall come, and shall pray in this place,

43 Then hear thou in heaven, in the firmament of thy dwelling-place, and do all those things, for which that stranger shall call upon thee: that all the people of the earth may learn to fear thy name, as do thy people Israel, and may prove that thy name is called upon on this house, which I have built.

44 If thy people go out to war against their enemies, by what way soever thou shalt send them, they shall pray to thee towards the way of the city, which thou hast chosen, and towards the house, which I have built to thy name:

VER. 38. Heart: his offence. Sept. ἀφῆν, "touching, or compunction." H.—Let a man go to the source of the evil, and be sorry for his sins. C.

VER. 41. Stranger. God watches over all mankind; and oblations were received from all sorts of people, even from idolaters. The kings of Persia and Egypt, the Roman emperors, &c., made great presents. 1 Esd. iii. 7, and vii. 21, Joseph. xi., and xii. 2. It seems the court of the Gentiles was only made after the captivity. Some of these adored the true God, like Cornelius, &c. Acts viii. 27, and x. 1. Some were drawn by curiosity; others desired to be converted. To thee, kings shall offer presents, Psal. lxxi. 10. C.

VER. 44. Name. It was the practice of the religious Jews to pray with their eyes turned towards the holy place, ver. 48. 46 But if they sin against thee, (^afor there is no man who sinneth not,) and thou being angry, deliver them up to their enemies, so that they be led away captives into the land of their enemies, far or near;

47 Then if they do penance in their heart, in the place of captivity, and being converted, make supplication to thee in their captivity, saying: We have sinned, we have done unjustly, we have committed wickedness:

48 And return to thee with all their heart, and all their soul, in the land of their enemies, to which they have been led captives: and pray to thee towards the way of their land, which thou gavest to their fathers, and of the city which thou hast chosen, and of the temple which I have built to thy name:

49 Then hear thou in heaven, in the firmament of thy throne, their prayers, and their supplications, and do judgment for them:

50 And forgive thy people, that have sinned against thee, and all their iniquities, by which they have transgressed against thee: and give them mercy before them that have made them captives, that they may have compassion on them.

51 For they are thy people, and thy inheritance, whom thou hast brought out of the land of Egypt, from the midst of the furnace of iron.

52 That thy eyes may be open to the supplication of thy servant, and of thy people Israel, to hear them in all things for which they shall call upon thee.

53 For thou hast separated them to thyself for an inheritance, from amongst all the people of the earth, as thou hast spoken by Moses, thy servant, when thou broughtest our fathers out of Egypt, O Lord God.

54 And it came to pass, when Solomon had made an end of praying all this prayer and supplication to the Lord, that he rose from before the altar of the Lord: for he had fixed both knees on the ground, and had spread his hands towards heaven.

55 And he stood, and blessed all the assembly of Israel with a loud voice, saying:

56 Blessed be the Lord, who hath given rest to his people Israel, according to all that he promised: there hath not failed so much as one word of all the good things that he promised by his servant Moses.

57 The Lord our God be with us, as he was with our fathers, and not leave us, nor cast us off:

58 But may he incline our hearts to himself, that we may walk in all his ways, and keep his commandments, and his ceremonies, and all his judgments, which he commanded our fathers.

59 And let these my words, wherewith I have prayed before the Lord, be nigh unto the Lord our God day and night, that he may do judgment for his servant, and for his people Israel, day by day:

60 That all the people of the earth may know, that the Lord he is God, and there is no other besides him.

61 Let our hearts also be perfect with the Lord our God, that we may walk in his statutes, and keep his commandments, as at this day.

62 And the king, and all Israel with him, offered victims before the Lord.

63 And Solomon slew victims of peace-offerings, which he sacrificed to the Lord, two and twenty thousand oxen, and a hundred and twenty thousand sheep: so the king, and all the children of Israel, dedicated the temple of the Lord.

64 In that day the king sanctified the middle of the court, that was before the house of the Lord; for there he offered the holocaust, and sacrifice, and the fat of the peace-offerings: because the brazen altar that was before the Lord, was too little to receive the holocaust, and sacrifice, and the fat of the peace-offerings.

65 And Solomon made at the same time a solemn feast, and all Israel with him, a great multitude, from the entrance of Emath to the river of Egypt, before the Lord our God, seven days and seven days, that is, fourteen days.

66 And on the eighth day, he sent away the people: and they blessed the king, and went to their dwellings, rejoicing, and glad in heart, for all the good things that the Lord had done for David, his servant, and for Israel, his people.

CHAP. IX.

The Lord appeareth again to Solomon: he buildeth cities: he sendeth a fleet to Ophir.

AND it came to pass when Solomon had finished the building of the house of the Lord, and the king's house, and all that he desired and was pleased to do,

2 That the Lord appeared to him the second time, ^aas he had appeared to him in Gabaon.

3 And the Lord said to him: I have heard thy prayer and thy supplication, which thou hast made before me: I have sanctified this house, which thou hast built, to put my name there for ever; and my eyes, and my heart, shall be there always.

4 And if thou wilt walk before me, as thy father walked, in simplicity of heart, and in uprightness: and 5 "I will establish the throne of thy kingdom over Israel for ever, as I promised David, thy father, saying: There shall not fail a man of thy race upon the throne of Israel.

6 But if you and your children, revolting, shall turn away from following me, and will not keep my commandments, and my ceremonies, which I have set before you, but will go and worship strange gods, and adore them:

7 I will take away Israel from the face of the land which I have given them; and the temple which I have sanctified to my name, I will cast out of my sight; and Israel shall be a proverb, and a by-word among all people.

8 And this house shall be made an example of: every one that shall pass by it, shall be astonished, and shall hiss, and say: "Why hath the Lord done thus to this land, and to this house?"

9 And they shall answer: Because they forsook the Lord their God, who brought their fathers out of the land of Egypt, and followed strange gods, and adored them, and worshipped them: therefore hath the Lord brought upon them all this evil.

If they indulge their passions, he will suffer these holy places to be profaned, as a dreadful warning of his displeasure. The Jews enjoyed prosperity while they continued faithful. Mello was a palace, fortification, (C.) or bridge, erected in the vale, (Salien,) from the palace to the temple, (M.) lying between Sion and the old Jerusalem. David had begun to build here, and Solomon perfected the works. Ezechias repaired the wall, 2 Par. xxxii. 5. In this palace Joas was slain, 4

14 And Hiram sent to king Solomon a hundred and twenty talents of gold.

15 This is the sum of the expenses, which king Solomon offered to build the house of the Lord, and his own house, and Mello, and the wall of Jerusalem, and Hesper, and Mageddo, and Gazer.

16 Pharaoh, the king of Egypt, came up and took Gazer, and burnt it with fire: and slew the Chanaanite that dwelt in the city, and gave it for a dowry to his daughter, Solomon's wife.

17 So Solomon built Gazer, and Bethhoron the nether, 18 And Baalath, and Palmira, in the land of the wilderness.

19 And all the towns that belonged to himself, and were not walled, he fortified; the cities also of the chariots, and the cities of the horsemen, and whatsoever he had a mind to build in Jerusalem, and in Libanus, and in all the land of his dominion.

22 But of the children of Israel, Solomon made not any to be bond-men, but they were warriors, and his servants, and his princes, and captains, and overseers of the chariots and horses.

23 And there were five hundred and fifty chief officers set over all the works of Solomon, and they had people under them, and had charge over the appointed works.

24 "And the daughter of Pharaoh came up out of the city of David to her house, which Solomon had built for her: then did he build Mello.

CHAP. X.

The queen of Saba cometh to king Solomon : his riches and glory.

AND^a the queen of Saba having heard of the fame of Solomon in the name of the Lord, came to try him with hard questions.

2 And entering into Jerusalem, with a great train, and riches, and camels that carried spices, and an immense quantity of gold, and precious stones, she came to king Solomon, and spoke to him all that she had in her heart.

3 And Solomon informed her of all the things she proposed to him : there was not any word the king was ignorant of, and which he could not answer her.

4 And when the queen of Saba saw all the wisdom of Solomon, and the house which he had built,

5 And the meat of his table, and the apartments of his servants, and the order of his ministers, and their apparel, and the cup-bearers, and the holocausts, which he offered in the house of the Lord, she had no longer any spirit in her ;

6 And she said to the king : The report is true, which I heard in my own country,

7 Concerning thy words, and concerning thy wisdom. And I did not believe them that told me, till I came myself, and saw with my own eyes, and have found that the half hath not been told me : thy wisdom and thy works exceed the fame which I heard.

8 Blessed are thy men, and blessed are thy servants, who stand before thee always, and hear thy wisdom.

9 Blessed be the Lord thy God, whom thou hast pleased, and who hath set thee upon the throne of Israel, because the Lord hath loved Israel for ever, and hath appointed thee king, to do judgment and justice.

10 ^bAnd she gave the king a hundred and twenty talents of gold, and of spices a very great store, and precious stones : there was brought no more such abundance of spices as these which the queen of Saba gave to king Solomon.

11 (^cThe navy also of Hiram, which brought gold from Ophir, brought from Ophir great plenty of thyine-trees, and precious stones.

12 And the king made of the thyine-trees the rails of the house of the Lord, and of the king's house, and citterns and harps for singers : there were no such thyine-trees as these brought nor seen unto this day.)

13 And king Solomon gave the queen of Saba all that she desired, and asked of him : besides what he offered her of himself of his royal bounty. And she returned, and went to her own country, with her servants.

14 And the weight of the gold that was brought to Solomon every year, was six hundred and sixty-six talents of gold :

15 Besides that which the men brought him that were over the tributes, and the merchants, and they that sold by retail, and all the kings of Arabia, and the governors of the country.

16 And Solomon made two hundred shields of the purest gold : he allowed six hundred sicles of gold for the plates of one shield.

17 And three hundred targets of fine gold : three hun-

Jerom. 2 Par. ii. 8. C.—Solomon had desired Hiram to send him some al gum, or "gum-bearing" wood ; but as there was not sufficient, or so fine, in Libanus as in Ophir, or in foreign parts, he procured more from those countries. The wood might probably resemble that of settin, or of black acacia, (Exod. xxv. 5,) whence the gum of Arabia is extracted. VER. 17. Targets, smaller than the former, and resembling a crescent.—Par. reads, shields.—Fine. Sept. "ductile." Heb. ssut, "beaten, refined," &c.—Hundred is omitted in Heb. and Sept., (H.) but is found in 2 Par., (ix. 16,) where we read three hundred of gold, in like manner as six hundred of gold in the preceding verse, without specifying the particular weight in either. These targets, or shields, seem to have been heavier than the former, and designed only for ornament, being placed in the great hall, as they weighed each 375 Roman pounds, or 18,000 sicles (C.) ; unless mina, pound, be here put for sicle ; as Josephus (ii. 3) says the sons of Jacob sold their brother for twenty pieces of silver. Gen. xxxvii. 28. M.—Salien thinks that two hundred shields were each worth 600 sicles, and these three hundred targets weighed each 300 sicles of gold. H dred pounds of gold covered one target: and the king put them in the house of the forest of Libanus.

18 King Solomon also made a great throne of ivory: and overlaid it with the finest gold.

19 It had six steps: and the top of the throne was round behind: and there were two hands on either side holding the seat: and two lions stood, one at each hand.

20 And twelve little lions stood upon the six steps, on the one side and on the other: there was no such work made in any kingdom.

21 Moreover, all the vessels out of which king Solomon drank, were of gold: and all the furniture of the house of the forest of Libanus was of most pure gold: there was no silver, nor was any account made of it in the days of Solomon:

22 For the king's navy, once in three years, went with the navy of Hiram by sea to Tharsis, and brought from thence gold, and silver, and elephants' teeth, and apes, and peacocks.

23 And king Solomon exceeded all the kings of the earth in riches and wisdom.

24 And all the earth desired to see Solomon's face, to hear his wisdom, which God had given in his heart.

25 And every one brought him presents, vessels of silver and of gold, garments, and armour, and spices, and horses, and mules, every year.

26 *And Solomon gathered together chariots and horsemen, and he had a thousand four hundred chariots, and twelve thousand horsemen: and he bestowed them in fenced cities, and with the king in Jerusalem.

* 2 Par. i. 14.—b Deut. xvii. 17; Eccl. xlvii. 21.

VER. 18. Ivory. Heb. "of the tooth" (or horn) of elephants.—Finest. Heb. "gold of Uphas." This was the country whence it was brought (Jer. x. 9); probably Colchis, where the river Phasis, or Phison, flows. Gen. ii. 11. C.—The Chaldee calls Uphas, (in Jeromias,) Ophir; and Huet supposes that Paz and Parvaim designate the same place. Chap. ix. 28; Job xxviii. 17. D.—In Paral. we only read, pure gold, which would suffer the ivory to appear in some places. C.

VER. 19. Behind, like an alcove, (H.) placed in the porch of the palace. Chap. vii. 8.—Hands, for the elbows to rest on. In Paral. S. Jerom translates, "little" arms. The feet might also be made in this shape. Josephus (viii. 5) represents them as forming the seat (C.); and the Sept. place them on each side: "the fore-parts of oxen projected from the back of the throne, and hands on the throne, on each side of the seat." In Paral. also we find, a footstool of gold. H.

VER. 21. No silver vessels, (C.) though there was a great abundance of that metal, ver. 27. It was not deemed worthy to be admitted at the king's table. H.

VER. 22. To Tharsis. This word in Heb. signifies, "the sea." Isa. ii. 16, and xxiii. 10. M.—"Ships of Tharsis," often denote such as were fit for a long voyage; and of this description were the fleets of Solomon and of Hiram, which sailed from Asiongaber to Ophir, and touched at various ports, where they procured what they wanted. C.—Heb. "the king had at sea a navy of Tharsis . . once in three years: the navy of Tharsis came, bringing gold," &c. H.—Teeth. Heb. sson ebim. The latter word is commonly rendered elephants, h being lost at the beginning. Bochart.—Syriac and Arab. intimate that the elephants were brought alive. Perhaps n may be dropped after b; so that we should read, ebnim, as Ezec. xxvii. 15, and translate ivory and ebony; the one being remarkable for its white, and the other for its black colour. Both might be procured on the coasts of Ethiopia, by which the fleet passed. The Persians, and Sesostris, required the people of the country to pay both for tribute. Pliny xii. 14; Diod. i. —Apes. Heb. Kupim. Greek, Kynoc.—Peacocks is not expressed in the Sept. C.—The Roman edition, instead of elephants, &c., inserts "stones," &c., intended for the various edifices and towns which Solomon fortified, to keep under the nations of Chanaan, whom he forced to labour, &c. But the Alexandrian copy has ταῦντων, "peacocks," as thucim is rendered (H.) by the Chal., Syr., &c. C.—Huet observes that these birds were scarcely known in the time of Alexander, and would therefore understand psittacos, "parrots." D.—But peacocks were called "birds of Media," as they were very common in that country, (C.) and about Babylon. Diod. 2.

VER. 27. Sycamores, (Heb. ssokmim), which were formerly very common in Palestine, as they are still about Cairo, in Egypt. The fruit resembles figs, as the leaves do the mulberry-tree; whence the name is a compound of σῦκον, "a fig," and μῦσα, "a mulberry;" though some would prefer μῦρος, "a fool," to denote that the fruit is "insipid." It is however sweeter than wild figs, and proceeds from the trunk of the tree. C.

27 And he made silver to be as plentiful in Jerusalem as stones: and cedars to be as common as sycamores which grow in the plains.

28 And horses were brought for Solomon out of Egypt, and Coa: for the king's merchants brought them out of Coa, and bought them at a set price.

29 And a chariot of four horses came out of Egypt, for six hundred sicles of silver, and a horse for a hundred and fifty. And after this manner did all the kings of the Hethites, and of Syria, sell horses.

CHAP. XI.

Solomon, by means of his wives, falleth into idolatry: God raiseth him adversaries, Adad, Razon, and Jeroboam: Solomon dieth.

AND king Solomon ^bloved many strange women, besides the daughter of Pharao, and women of Moab, and of Ammon, and of Edom, and of Sidon, and of the Hethites:

2 Of the nations concerning which the Lord said to the children of Israel: "You shall not go in unto them, neither shall any of them come into yours: for they will most certainly turn away your heart to follow their gods. And to these was Solomon joined with a most ardent love.

3 And he had seven hundred wives as queens, and three hundred concubines: and the women turned away his heart.

4 And when he was now old, ^dhis heart was turned away by women to follow strange gods: and his heart was not perfect with the Lord his God, as was the heart of David, his father.

* Exod. xxxiv. 16.—4 A. M. 3023, A. C. 981.

VER. 29. Fifty, upon an average.—Hethites: some had retired, and built Lusa (Judg. i. 26); others dwelt beyond Libanus. 4 Kings vii. 6. These kings sold horses to Solomon; or, according to the Heb., the Jews had the traffic of horses in their own hands. C.—Prot. "and so for all the kings . . did they bring them out by their means." Sept. "thus to all the kings . . of Syria, on the sea-shore, they came out." H.—The merchants sold horses to these kings, at 150 sicles a piece. C.

CHAP. XI. VER. 1. Strange women, who had been brought up in the service of idols, and were not sincerely converted. H.—Riches engaged Solomon in the love of pleasure, and this brought on his ruin. C.—He began with the spirit, but ended in the flesh. Gal. iii. 3; Eccles. xlvii. 21. He was aware of the dangerous conversation of women. Eccles. xix. 2. Yet he has left us in his own person an example of that dreadful truth, that it is difficult to love with discretion. H.—Nothing could be more beautiful than the commencement of his reign, nor more terrible than the latter part of it. Thou hast stained thy glory, &c. Eccl. xlvii. 22. C.

VER. 2. Gods. See Exod. xxxiv. 16; Deut. vii. 4. The law only forbids expressly the marrying of the women of Chanaan. But it was easy to discern that the spirit of the law equally prohibited connexions with others who were addicted to idol-worship. See 1 Esd. x. 3. Such alliances are always dangerous, and generally prove fatal. H.

VER. 3. Concubines, or secondary wives. H.—Those who have any sense of modesty, can hardly read this without blushing. Salien.—Solomon was guilty not only of intemperance, but also of a transgression of the precept. M. Deut. xvii. 17, He shall not have many wives: though as that command is indefinite, and David had eighteen, without blame, (2 Kings iii. 3,) it is difficult to say how many a person might have, at that time, without exceeding the bounds of moderation. H.—But a thousand wives for one man is certainly far too great a number.

VER. 4. Old; about fifty. Salien. C.—This is an aggravation of his guilt. H.—Solomon spent the first thirty years of his reign in virtue: but towards the termination of it he gave in to idolatry and excesses. H.—Heart, and mind also, ver. 9. He sacrificed to idols not only externally, but gave them internal worship (Salien); so much was his understanding darkened, unless (H.) he acted against his better knowledge. Eccles. ii. 9. T.—Father, who did not continue long in sin. D.—"The wisdom, which had been given to him, entirely abandoned his heart, which the discipline even of the smallest tribulation had not guarded." S. Greg. Pastoral. p. 3.—"He had commenced his reign with an ardent desire of wisdom, and when he had obtained it by spiritual love, he lost it by carnal affections." S. Aug. Doct. iii. 21.—"Prosperity, which is a severe trial for the wise, was more disadvantageous to him than wisdom herself had been profitable." De Civ. xvii. 23.—The Fathers do not attempt to palliate the guilt of Solomon; and those aggravate his crime, who endeavour to excuse him by saying that his mind was 5 But Solomon worshipped Astarthe, the goddess of the Sidonians, and Moloch, the idol of the Ammonites.

6 And Solomon did that which was not pleasing before the Lord, and did not fully follow the Lord, as David, his father.

7 Then Solomon built a temple for Chamos, the idol of Moab, on the hill that is over against Jerusalem, and for Moloch, the idol of the children of Ammon.

8 And he did in this manner for all his wives that were strangers, who burnt incense, and offered sacrifice to their gods.

9 And the Lord was angry with Solomon, because his mind was turned away from the Lord, the God of Israel, *who had appeared to him twice;

10 And had commanded him concerning this thing, that he should not follow strange gods: but he kept not the things which the Lord commanded him.

11 The Lord therefore said to Solomon: Because thou hast done this, and hast not kept my covenant, and my precepts, which I have commanded thee, I will divide and rend thy kingdom, and will give it to thy servant.

12 *Nevertheless, in thy days I will not do it, for David thy father's sake: but I will rend it out of the hand of thy son.

13 Neither will I take away the whole kingdom; but I will give one tribe to thy son, for the sake of David, my servant, and Jerusalem, which I have chosen.

14 And the Lord raised up an adversary to Solomon, Adad the Edomite, of the king's seed, in Edom.

15 *For when David was in Edom, and Joab, the general of the army, was gone up to bury them that were slain, and had killed every male in Edom,

16 (For Joab remained there six months with all Israel, till he had slain every male in Edom.)

17 Then Adad fled, he and certain Edomites of his father's servants, with him, to go into Egypt: and Adad was then a little boy.

18 And they arose out of Madian, and came into Pharan, and they took men with them from Pharan, and went into Egypt, to Pharaoh, the king of Egypt: who gave him a house, and appointed him victuals, and assigned him land.

19 And Adad found great favour before Pharaoh, inasmuch that he gave him to wife the own sister of his wife, Taphnes, the queen.

20 And the sister of Taphnes bore him his son, Genubath; and Taphnes brought him up in the house of Pharaoh: and Genubath dwelt with Pharaoh among his children.

21 And when Adad heard in Egypt that David slept with his fathers, and that Joab, the general of the army, was dead, he said to Pharaoh: Let me depart, that I may go to my own country.

22 And Pharaoh said to him: Why, what is wanting to thee with me, that thou seekest to go to thy own country? But he answered: Nothing; yet I beseech thee to let me go.

23 God also raised up against him an adversary, Razon, the son of Eliada, *who had fled from his master, Adarezer, the king of Soba.

24 And he gathered men against him, and he became a captain of robbers, when David slew them of Soba: and they went to Damascus, and dwelt there, and they made him king in Damascus.

25 And he was an adversary to Israel all the days of Solomon: and this is the evil of Adad, and his hatred against Israel; and he reigned in Syria.

26 *Jeroboam also, the son of Nabat, an Ephrathite, of Sareda, a servant of Solomon, whose mother was named Sarua, a widow woman, lifted up his hand against the king.

27 And this is the cause of his rebellion against him, for Solomon built Mello, and filled up the breach of the city of David, his father.

28 And Jeroboam was a valiant and mighty man: and Solomon seeing him a young man ingenious and industrious, made him chief over the tributes of all the house of Joseph.

still convinced that there could be but one God, and that his adoration of idols was merely external, and out of complaisance to his wives. See Sanctius, &c. C.

VER. 5. Astarthe. Heb. Astaroth, "cwcs," is in the plural form, as if to denote many idols. But the moon, or the queen of heaven, (Jer. vii. 18,) is particularly designated. Judg. ii. 12. H.—Some explain it of Venus, (Sanctius,) or Juno. T.—Moloch. Heb. Melchom, (their king,) "the abomination" (H.); supposed to be the sun, (Sanctius,) or Saturn. T. See 4 Kings xiii. 10.

VER. 7. Chamos. Bacchus or Priapus, called Kūpos by the Greeks, as he presided over "feasting."—The temples erected by Solomon were not entirely demolished till the reign of Josias. T.—Hill. Heb. "Then Solomon erected a high place (temple, altar, or grove) to Chamos, the abomination of Moab, on the, &c., hill;" it is supposed of Olives, (H.) to the east of Jerusalem, which was hence called, the mount of offence. 4 Kings xiii. 13. C.—Yet no place was consecrated to idols within the city. M.

VER. 9. Twice, or repeatedly. See chap. ix. 2. H.—He had appeared to him at Gabaon, and after the consecration of the temple, (M.) besides sending a prophet to him while he was building. Chap. vi. 12. Abul.—God was not content with giving him the general commandments; he had condescended to caution him in a most particular and earnest manner (H.); so that his transgression is more horrible and ungrateful. C.

VER. 12. Sake. As David placed this son upon the throne, the disgrace would seem to revert on him. M.—Here we behold the reward of piety, and how desirable a thing it is to have saints for our parents. H.

VER. 13. One tribe. Besides that of Juda, his own native tribe. Ch.—That of Benjamin had been so reduced, that it scarcely deserved the name of a tribe. It was also invariably connected with the adjoining tribe of Juda; as many of the other tribes, after the captivities of Assyria and Babylon, went by the common title of Jews. T.—The Levites, and many of the Israelites, came to inhabit in the land of Juda, for the sake of the true religion. Chap. xii. 17; 2 Par. xi. 15—16. Jeroboam banished the tribe of Levi from his dominions, that he might more easily introduce a change of religion among his subjects. The two kingdoms were thus almost equal in strength. C.—Chosen for the abode of holiness, and the seat of government. Salien.

VER. 14. Adversary. Heb. Satan. Nothing of this kind could molest him, while he continued faithful. Chap. v. 4. But now he sees the arm of God stretched out, pressing him to repent.

VER. 15. In Edom, in the fifteenth year of his reign. Salien.—Abisai was the general in this expedition. 2 Kings viii. and 1 Par. xviii. 12.

VER. 19. Full. Sept. "elder sister of his wife Thekemina." H.

VER. 23. Razon. He must have been now about ninety-four years old; unless this was the son of Adarezer's general. Salien. M.

VER. 24. Robbers, or (Heb. and Sept.) "a band" with whom he made depredations. H.—Damascus, with David's consent, on their admitting a garrison, (2 Kings viii. 6,) and consenting to pay tribute (M.); or Razon might make himself master of this place only after the apostacy of Solomon. His successors became very formidable to the Jews, particularly Razin, (4 Kings xv. and xvi.,) who was slain by Thelathphalassar, ib. ver. 9. C.

VER. 25. Solomon, after he once began. H.—Adad. Heb. "and with the evil of Adad, and he detested Israel." M.—Razon and Adad conspired to attack Solomon. H.

VER. 26. King, attempting to draw the people into rebellion, as he perceived that they were discontent with the buildings at Mello. He had a command over them; and though he was, for the present, obliged to save himself by flight, he had sown the seeds of rebellion by his discourses in such a manner that the imprudent answer of Roboam (C.) easily brought them to maturity. H.

VER. 28. Joseph, Ephraim, and Manasses. M.—He was of the former tribe. Salien.—At first Solomon employed none of the Israelites to work. Chap. ix. 22.

29 *So it came to pass at that time, that Jeroboam went out of Jerusalem, and the prophet Ahias, the Silonite, clad with a new garment, found him in the way: and they two were alone in the field.

30 And Ahias taking his new garment, wherewith he was clad, divided it into twelve parts:

31 And he said to Jeroboam: Take to thee ten pieces: for thus saith the Lord, the God of Israel: Behold, I will rend the kingdom out of the hand of Solomon, and will give thee ten tribes.

32 But one tribe shall remain to him for the sake of my servant, David, and Jerusalem, the city which I have chosen out of all the tribes of Israel:

33 Because he hath forsaken me, and hath adored Astarthe, the goddess of the Sidonians, and Chamos, the god of Moab, and Moloch, the god of the children of Ammon: and hath not walked in my ways, to do justice before me, and to keep my precepts, and judgments, as did David, his father.

34 Yet I will not take away all the kingdom out of his hand, but I will make him prince all the days of his life, for David my servant's sake, whom I chose, who kept my commandments, and my precepts.

35 But I will take away the kingdom out of his son's hand, and will give thee ten tribes:

36 And to his son I will give one tribe, that there may remain a lamp for my servant, David, before me always in Jerusalem, the city which I have chosen, that my name might be there.

37 And I will take thee, and thou shalt reign over all that thy soul desireth, and thou shalt be king over Israel.

38 If then thou wilt hearken to all that I shall command thee, and wilt walk in my ways, and do what is right before me, keeping my commandments, and my precepts, as David, my servant, did: I will be with thee,

But he afterwards oppressed them grievously. The king's right was to make his subjects cultivate his lands, &c. 1 Kings viii. 11. They did not pay money, (Matt. xvii. 24,) but wrought for the king. Heb. "he made him ruler over all the charge," (or levy). H.

VER. 29. Garment. Ssolme occurs sixteen times in this sense, and ssomle twenty-seven. The latter, we may presume, is the true reading, as it is in the Sam. Pentateuch invariably; Exod. xxii. 26, 27, both words are printed in the Heb. Bible. But it is not probable that Moses should have written them so. Shamal, in Arabic, signifies "he clothed himself all over." Kennieott.—Way leading to Ephraim, (M.) his department. C.—Field. Sept. "he drew him aside out of the road: and Ahias had on a new cloak, and both were in the field." H.—Jeroboam would not probably go unattended (M.); and it seems this transaction soon transpired, and came to the ears of Solomon. H.

VER. 30. Parts. He speaks by his actions, (M.) thus foretelling what should happen, as was customary with the prophets. Osee i. 2; Jer. xxvii. 2; Eze. xii. 7; Acts xxi. 11. C.—This tended to make a deeper impression on the mind, (H.) and to convince all that what was spoken was not in jest. W.

VER. 36. A lamp. Posterity, (2 Kings xxi. 17,) power, and glory. 4 Kings viii. 19.

VER. 37. Desireth. It seems he was already disposed to revolt. C.

VER. 39. For this infidelity of Solomon, (H.) afflict, by raising up a rival. M.—For ever. Notwithstanding the wickedness of many of its princes, this family was to subsist, in a distinguished rank, till the coming of the Messiah; that the completion of the promises might be more observable. C.—After two hundred and fifty years the throne of Israel was subverted. M.

VER. 40. Therefore, being apprized of what had passed, as well as to prevent the further attempts of Jeroboam. H.—Sesac. He is the first whose proper name is given in Scripture. Whether he was of the same family as the Pharaoh whose daughter Solomon had married, cannot be ascertained. C.

VER. 41. Words, or transactions. H.—Book. This book is lost, with divers others mentioned in holy writ. Ch.—Nathan, Ahias, and Addo, composed these journals. 2 Par. ix. 29. H.—The books of days, are cited in the Paral., so that we cannot suppose that these journals are the same with that work. C.

VER. 42. Forty. Josephus says eighty; and some suppose that the Scripand will build thee up a faithful house, as I built a house for David, and I will deliver Israel to thee:

39 And I will for this afflict the seed of David, but yet not for ever.

40 Solomon, therefore, sought to kill Jeroboam: but he arose, and fled into Egypt, to Sesac, the king of Egypt, and was in Egypt till the death of Solomon.

41 And the rest of the words of Solomon, and all that he did, and his wisdom: behold they are all written in the Book of the words of the days of Solomon.

42 And the days that Solomon reigned in Jerusalem, over all Israel, were forty years.

43 And^b Solomon slept with his fathers, and was buried in the city of David, his father; and Roboam, his son, reigned in his stead.

CHAP. XII.

Roboam, following the counsel of young men, alienateth from him the minds of the people. They make Jeroboam king over ten tribes: he setteth up idolatry.

AND^c Roboam went to Sichem: for thither were all Israel come together to make him king.

2 But Jeroboam, the son of Nabat, who was yet in Egypt, a fugitive from the face of king Solomon, hearing of his death, returned out of Egypt.

3 And they sent and called him: and Jeroboam came, and all the multitude of Israel, and they spoke to Roboam, saying:

4 Thy father laid a grievous yoke upon us: now, therefore, do thou take off a little of the grievous service of thy father, and of his most heavy yoke, which he put upon us, and we will serve thee.

5 And he said to them: Go till the third day, and come to me again. And when the people was gone, ture only specifies the years during which Solomon reigned virtuously. Pezron is of the same opinion as Josephus. H.—Others contend that it is a manifest mistake. Immoderate pleasures hastened his old age and death, when he was about fifty-eight years old. His repentance is a problem. C.

VER. 43. Solomon slept, &c. That is, died. He was then about fifty-eight years of age, having reigned forty years. Ch.—S. Chrysostom, at different times, seems to have entertained opposite opinions on this head, (H.) which has been a matter of controversy among the Fathers, as it is at present with us. We ought to adore and imitate, with trembling, the silence of Scripture. C.—Sept. seem favourable to Solomon (Prov. xxiv. 32): "At last I did penance, and looked forward, to embrace discipline." H.—But the Heb., Chal., and Vulg., have nothing similar. C.—Some think that the Book of Proverbs, as well as that of Ecclesiastes, was composed by him after his repentance; and that he expresses his sentiments of affliction and self-condemnation, (Prov. xxx. 2,) and his opinion of all earthly gratifications. Eccles. i. 2, &c. H.—Yet this dreadful uncertainty may serve to keep us all in humble fear, and teach us to work out our salvation with trembling. C.

CHAP. XII. VER. 1. King, or to acknowledge his right, provided he would grant their request. The discontented assembled at Sichem, rather than at Jerusalem, as they would be under less restraint. C.—They appointed Jeroboam to prefer their petition. M.—Roboam was probably the only son whom Solomon had by his wives. C.—We read of two daughters, Japheth and Basemath. Chap. iv. 11, and 15. H.—Naama, the Ammonite, was the mother of Roboam, who, though forty years old, was devoid of good sense. 2 Par. xiii. 7; Eccles. ii. 18; Eeeli. xlvii. 27. C.

VER. 2. Hearing of. Heb. "It (the assembly) and Jeroboam dwelt in Egypt." H.—But in 2 Par. x. 2, we find he returned. It is probable that both texts agreed in the days of S. Jerom; as the same letters, if read in a different manner, may have both meanings. C.—Sept. have also "returned." H.

VER. 4. Yoke, of personal service, (C.) first to build the temple, and afterwards to erect palaces, fortify cities, &c. The works of Mello gave the greatest discontent. H.

VER. 6. Old men. Banaías and Jahiel. S. Jer. Trad.

VER. 7. They said. Heb. "he said." The transcribers, probably not under-he said: What counsel do you give me, that I may answer this people?

7 They said to him: If thou wilt yield to this people to-day, and condescend to them, and grant their petition, and wilt speak gentle words to them, they will be thy servants always.

8 But he left the counsel of the old men, which they had given him, and consulted with the young men that had been brought up with him, and stood before him.

9 And he said to them: What counsel do you give me, that I may answer this people, who have said to me: Make the yoke, which thy father put upon us, lighter.

10 And the young men that had been brought up with him, said: Thus shalt thou speak to this people, who have spoken to thee, saying: Thy father made our yoke heavy, do thou ease us. Thou shalt say to them: My little finger is thicker than the back of my father.

11 And now my father put a heavy yoke upon you, but I will add to your yoke: my father beat you with whips, but I will beat you with scorpions.

12 So Jeroboam, and all the people, came to Roboam the third day, as the king had appointed, saying: Come to me again the third day.

13 And the king answered the people roughly, leaving the counsel of the old men, which they had given him,

14 And he spoke to them according to the counsel of the young men, saying: My father made your yoke heavy, but I will add to your yoke: My father beat you with whips, but I will beat you with scorpions.

15 And the king condescended not to the people: for the Lord was turned away from him, to make good his word,* which he had spoken in the hand of Ahias, the Silonite, to Jeroboam, the son of Nabat.

16 Then the people, seeing that the king would not hearken to them, answered him, saying: What portion have we in David? or what inheritance in the son of Isai? Go home to thy dwellings, O Israel: now, David, look to thy own house. So Israel departed to their dwellings

17 But as for all the children of Israel that dwelt in the cities of Juda, Roboam reigned over them.

18 Then king Roboam sent Aduram, who was over the tribute: and all Israel stoned him, and he died. Wherefore king Roboam made haste to get him up into his chariot, and he fled to Jerusalem:

19 ^bAnd Israel revolted from the house of David, unto this day.

20 And it came to pass when all Israel heard that Jeroboam was come again, that they gathered an assembly, and sent and called him, and made him king over all Israel, and there was none that followed the house of David but the tribe of Juda only.

21 And Roboam came to Jerusalem, and gathered together all the house of Juda, and the tribe of Benjamin, a hundred fourscore thousand chosen men for war, to fight against the house of Israel, and to bring the kingdom again under Roboam, the son of Solomon.

22 ^cBut the word of the Lord came to Semeias, the man of God, saying:

23 Speak to Roboam, the son of Solomon, the king of Juda, and to all the house of Juda, and Benjamin, and the rest of the people, saying:

24 Thus saith the Lord: You shall not go up, nor fight against your brethren, the children of Israel: let every man return to his house, for this thing is from me. They hearkened to the word of the Lord, and returned from their journey, as the Lord had commanded them.

25 And Jeroboam built Sichem in Mount Ephraim, and dwelt there, and going out from thence, he built Phaniel.

26 And Jeroboam said in his heart: Now shall the kingdom return to the house of David.

27 If this people go up to offer sacrifices in the house of the Lord at Jerusalem: and the heart of this people will turn to their lord Roboam, the king of Juda, and they will kill me, and return to him.

28 ^dAnd finding out a device, he made two golden calves, and said to them: Go ye up no more to Jerusastanding what they wrote, frequently mistake singular for plural verbs. So ver. 21, "they came," instead of he came. Some MSS. and the ancient versions are correct. Kennicott.—Yield. Heb. "serve." By the submission of one day he might have acquired the kingdom.

VER. 8. Him. They were young, compared with the former, though they might be forty years old. M.—It was frequently the custom in the eastern courts to educate young noblemen along with the heir to the crown.

VER. 10. Finger is not expressed in Heb. or Sept., but the Syr. and Josephus agree with the Vulg. In Paral. we read loins, instead of back. Heb. and Sept. my little (Prot. supply finger). Sept. "my littleness," μικρότης; but in Paral. finger is added. H.—Chal. "my weakness is stronger than my father's strength." C.

VER. 11. Scorpions. Chal. "thorns." Heb. has both significations. Like a tyrant, Roboam threatens to beat the people with sharp thorns. M.

VER. 15. Turned. Heb. "for the cause (revolution) was from the Lord, (C.) that he might verify his word." H.—God permitted the king to act imprudently, and disposed things in such a manner, that the prediction took effect. C.—Indeed, the prophet had only spoken, because things would happen. H.—"There are two sorts of persecutors, those who blame, and those who flatter: the tongue of the flatterer persecutes more than the hand of him who kills." S. Aug. in Psal. lxxix. D.—Roboam fell a prey to his evil counsellors. H.—That, (ver. 16,) denotes the sequel, not the final cause, as chap. xiv. 9. W.

VER. 16. Look to. Chal. "rule over thy own tribe." They imitate those who give a bill of divorce. C.—Herein they were not excusable, no more than those who persecuted God's people, though he permitted their wickedness, to chastise the guilty. M.

VER. 17. Them, as well as over many who came into his territory, that they might practise the true religion without restraint. H. Chap. xi. 13.—The kings of Juda afterwards made various conquests. Chap. xiii. 19. Hence they were able to contend with the other tribes (C.) with advantage. H.—Even at first Roboam put himself at the head of 180,000 chosen men, ver. 21. Abia had an army of 400,000, and Asa near 600,000; while Josaphat had 1,100,000 soldiers. 2 Par. xiii. 3, and xiv. 8, and xvii. 14.

VER. 18. Aduram. One of the same name had occupied this post under David. 2 Kings xx. 24. C.—Some suppose that this is the same with Adoniram. Chap. iv. 6.—Haste. Heb. "he strengthened himself," or obstinately persisted in his resolution of reducing the people by force; and thus those, who might now have been easily reclaimed, were driven to choose another king, and the evil became irremediable. C.

VER. 20. Again, from Egypt, ver. 2. H.—He had not been present, it seems, at the second assembly; or at least he had retired as soon as Roboam had given his decision. But the people having stoned Aduram, and thus rendered a reconciliation very difficult, Jeroboam was invited to accept the crown. C.—As this was conformable to his utmost desires and the prophet's declaration, he made no demur. Chap. xi. 37. H.—Only. Benjamin was a small tribe, and so intermixed with the tribe of Juda (the very city of Jerusalem being partly in Juda, partly in Benjamin) that they are here counted but as one tribe. Ch.

VER. 24. Them. This shows the great authority of Semeias. He wrote the history of Roboam. 2 Par. xii. 15. He also foretold the irruption of Seseac, to punish the house of Israel; but not to destroy it. C.—The obedience of Roboam deserves applause; though it would have been a vain attempt to resist God, who was resolved to punish his family. M.

VER. 25. Built, or "had built," while Roboam was preparing for his invasion. Salien.—Sichem and Phaniel had been ruined by Abimelech, and by Gedeon. Judg. viii. 17, and ix. 45. C.—By means of these fortresses he secured both sides of the Jordan. H.—Jeroboam afterwards fixed his residence at Thirsa, where the court was kept till Amri built Samaria.

leu :^a Behold thy gods, O Israel, who brought thee out of the land of Egypt.

29 And he set the one in Bethel, and the other in Dan :

30 And this thing became an occasion of sin : for the people went to adore the calf as far as Dan.

31 And he made temples in the high places, ^band priests of the lowest of the people, who were not of the sons of Levi.

32 And he appointed a feast in the eighth month, on the fifteenth day of the month, after the manner of the feast that was celebrated in Juda. And going up to the altar, he did in like manner in Bethel, to sacrifice to the calves, which he had made : and he placed in Bethel priests of the high places, which he had made.

33 And he went up to the altar, which he had built in Bethel, on the fifteenth day of the eighth month, which he had devised of his own heart : and he ordained a feast to the children of Israel, and went upon the altar to burn incense.

CHAP. XIII.

A prophet sent from Juda to Bethel, foretelleth the birth of Josias, and the destruction of Jeroboam's altar. Jeroboam's hand, offering violence to the prophet, withereth, but is restored by the prophet's prayer : the same prophet is deceived by another prophet, and slain by a lion.

AND ^cbehold there came a man of God out of Juda, by the word of the Lord, to Bethel, when Jeroboam was standing upon the altar, and burning incense.

2 And he cried out against the altar in the word of the Lord, and said : O altar, altar, thus saith the Lord : ^dBehold a child shall be born to the house of David, Josias by name, and he shall immolate upon thee the priests of the high places, who now burn incense upon thee, and he shall burn men's bones upon thee.

3 And he gave a sign the same day, saying : This shall be the sign, that the Lord hath spoken : Behold the altar shall be rent, and the ashes that are upon it, shall be poured out.

4 And when the king had heard the word of the man

^a Exod. xxxii. 8.—^b 2 Par. xi. 15.

VER. 28. Device. Wicked policy, to make religion subservient to the state. W.—Calves. It is likely, by making his gods in this form, he mimicked the Egyptians, among whom he had sojourned, who worshipped their Apis and their Osiris under the form of a bullock. Ch. S. Jerom in Osce iv. 15, and v., &c.

VER. 29. Bethel and Dan. Bethel was a city of the tribe of Ephraim, in the southern parts of the dominion of Jeroboam, about six leagues from Jerusalem : Dan was in the extremity of his dominions, to the north, on the confines of Syria. Ch.—The Israelites did not hesitate to travel so far. Ver. 30. C.—Those who lived nearer Bethel went thither along with their king. Salien.—The latter city was assigned to Benjamin. Jos. xviii. 22. M.—But probably many of the subjects of Jeroboam dwelt in it ; so that it was the most southern city of his dominions. It had been consecrated by Jacob, (Gen. xxviii. 19,) and was a famous place of devotion. 1 Kings x. 3. Sept. (Alex.) and S. Cyril (in Osce p. 5) read Galgal. Dan had been long before infected with idolatry. Judg. xviii. 30.

VER. 30. Sin, almost irreparable, which brought on the ruin of the ten tribes. Though the calves were taken away along with them into captivity, the people did not return to the service of the Lord ; but the greatest part imitated the conduct of the pagans, with whom they mixed ; while some few returned with the tribe of Juda, and made a part of that kingdom. The Samaritans, who were sent to inhabit their country, were not of the race of Jacob. C.

VER. 31. Places, to other idols or devils, (2 Par. xi. 15. H.) not merely at Bethel. Chap. xiii.

VER. 32. Day. God had prescribed the seventh month, (C.) and this wicked prince purposely made choice of another, that the observance of the days appointed might be obliterated. Thus the Jacobins, in France, decreed that the tenth day should be the day of rest, instead of Sunday. H.—Religious assemblies tend greatly to promote the spirit of concord and peace.

VER. 33. To : lit. "upon," (super.) as at the end of the verse. H.—The altars were very high and large. C.—Month. Sept. add, "on the festival which," &c. M.—Heart. Heb. reads molbod (præter.) instead of molbu, (ex corde suo).

of God, which he had cried out against the altar in Bethel, he stretched forth his hand from the altar, saying : Lay hold on him. And his hand which he stretched forth against him, withered : and he was not able to draw it back again to him.

5 The altar also was rent, and the ashes were poured out from the altar, according to the sign which the man of God had given before in the word of the Lord.

6 And the king said to the man of God : Entreat the face of the Lord thy God, and pray for me, that my hand may be restored to me. And the man of God besought the face of the Lord, and the king's hand was restored to him, and it became as it was before.

7 And the king said to the man of God : Come home with me to dine, and I will make thee presents

8 And the man of God answered the king : If thou wouldst give me half thy house, I will not go with thee, nor eat bread, nor drink water in this place :

9 For so it was enjoined me by the word of the Lord, commanding me : Thou shalt not eat bread, nor drink water, nor return by the same way that thou camest.

10 So he departed by another way, and returned not by the way that he came into Bethel.

11 Now a certain old prophet dwelt in Bethel, and his sons came to him, and told him all the works that the man of God had done that day in Bethel : and they told their father the words which he had spoken to the king.

12 And their father said to them : What way went he ? His sons showed him the way by which the man of God went, who came out of Juda.

13 And he said to his sons : Saddle me the ass. And when they had saddled it, he got up,

14 And went after the man of God, and found him sitting under a turpentine-tree : and he said to him : Art thou the man of God who camest from Juda : He answered : I am.

15 And he said to him : Come home with me, to eat bread.

^c A. M. 3030.—^d 4 Kings xxiii. 16.

Some MSS. retain the latter word, as it is printed also in the marginal keri.—Jeroboam has a mind to do honour to his new worship, and unites in his own person the sacerdotal and regal dignity, as the Roman emperors did. C.—Incense. Scpt. "to sacrifice." H.—From this period many learned men date the 390 years of the iniquity of Israel. Eze. iv. 5. D.

CHAP. XIII. VER. 1. A man. Some suppose his name was Addo. 2 Par. ix. 29. But this is quite uncertain.—Incense, or victims. C.

VER. 2. Altar, in which the prodigy was to take place, for the instruction of all. M.—Name : 340 (C.) or 350 years after. Salien.—This prediction proves the truth of the religion ; for though the author of this book might have seen it verified, yet he would undoubtedly insert the very words of the prophet, which were known to all the people. 4 Kings xxiii. 15. In this passage we do not read that Josias destroyed the priests. But ver. 19 and 20, it is clearly insinuated. C.—Who now. He will reduce their bones to ashes upon this altar ; or, those who shall imitate these priests shall be there burnt alive. H.

VER. 3. Sign. This would take place immediately, to convince the king that what he had said would be accomplished. So Moses and Achaz were treated. Exod. iii. 2—12 ; Isa. vii. 14—16: C.

VER. 6. Thy God. He does not say my, being conscious that he had abandoned his service. M.—Before. We may be surprised that God thus heals a man whose heart was not changed, ver. 33. E.—But miracles do not always work a conversion. Pharaoh, Saul, and Achaz beheld them in vain : only one of the ten lepers returned to give thanks, Luke xvii. 17. This miracle rendered Jeroboam still more inexcusable. C.

VER. 10. Bethel, which was defiled. 1 Kings xxi. 5. God would thus caution us to keep at the greatest distance (T.) possible from evil company, (H.) and from whatever may lead to sin. M.

VER. 11. Bethel, originally (H.) from Samaria. 4 Kings xxiii. 18. M.—Josias would have burnt his bones, like those of the false prophets, if they had not been blended with those of the man of God. C.

16 But he said: I must not return, nor go with thee, neither will I eat bread, or drink water in this place:

17 Because the Lord spoke to me, in the word of the Lord, saying: Thou shalt not eat bread, and thou shalt not drink water there, nor return by the way thou wentest.

18 He said to him: I also am a prophet like unto thee: and an angel spoke to me, in the word of the Lord, saying: Bring him back with thee into thy house, that he may eat bread, and drink water. He deceived him, 19 And brought him back with him: so he ate bread, and drank water in his house.

20 And as they sat at table, the word of the Lord came to the prophet that brought him back:

21 And he cried out to the man of God who came out of Juda, saying: Thus saith the Lord: Because thou hast not been obedient to the Lord, and hast not kept the commandment which the Lord thy God commanded thee,

22 And hast returned, and eaten bread, and drunk water in the place wherein he commanded thee that thou should not eat bread, nor drink water, thy dead body shall not be brought into the sepulchre of thy fathers.

23 And when he had eaten and drunk, he saddled his ass for the prophet, whom he had brought back.

24 And when he was gone, a lion found him in the way, and killed him, and his body was cast in the way: and the ass stood by him, and the lion stood by the dead body.

25 And behold, men passing by, saw the dead body cast in the way, and the lion standing by the body. And they came and told it in the city, wherein that old prophet dwelt.

26 And when that prophet, who had brought him back out of the way, heard of it, he said: It is the man of God, that was disobedient to the mouth of the Lord, and the Lord hath delivered him to the lion, and he hath torn him, and killed him, according to the word of the Lord, which he spoke to him.

27 And he said to his sons: Saddle me an ass. And when they had saddled it, 28 And he was gone, he found the dead body cast in the way, and the ass and the lion standing by the carcass: the lion had not eaten of the dead body, nor hurt the ass.

29 And the prophet took up the body of the man of God, and laid it upon the ass, and going back brought it into the city of the old prophet, to mourn for him.

30 And he laid his dead body in his own sepulchre: and they mourned over him, saying: Alas! alas, my brother.

31 And when they had mourned over him, he said to his sons: When I am dead, bury me in the sepulchre wherein the man of God is buried: lay my bones beside his bones.

32 For assuredly the word shall come to pass which he hath foretold in the word of the Lord, against the altar that is in Bethel: and against all the temples of the high places, that are in the cities of Samaria.

33 After these words, Jeroboam came not back from his wicked way: but on the contrary, he made of the meanest of the people priests of the high places: whosoever would, he filled his hand, and he was made a priest of the high places.

34 And for this cause did the house of Jeroboam sin, and was cut off, and destroyed from the face of the earth.

CHAP. XIV.

Ahiah prophesieth the destruction of the family of Jeroboam. He dieth, and is succeeded by his son Nadab. The king of Egypt taketh and pillageth Jerusalem. Roboam dieth, and his son Abiam succeedeth.

AT that time Abia, the son of Jeroboam, fell sick.

2 And Jeroboam said to his wife: Arise, and change thy dress, that thou be not known to be the wife of Jeroboam, and go to Silo, where Ahias, the prophet is, who told me that I should reign over this people.

3 Take also with thee ten loaves, and cracknels, and a

• Supra, xi. 31.

VER. 18. An angel spoke to me, &c. This old man of Bethel was indeed a prophet, but he sinned in thus deceiving the man of God; the more, because he pretended a revelation for what he did (Ch. W.); though he did it with a good intention, and supposed that the prophet had only been forbidden to eat with Jeroboam and his followers. Theod. q. 42.—This lie might cause him to be styled "a false prophet," by Josephus. Abulensis thinks he was a wicked man, like Balaam; and many suppose that he was the chief instrument in deluding the king. Josep., S. Greg., &c.—After the man of God had been torn to pieces, he might easily persuade the people that he was only an impostor, and that the pretended miracles were merely the effects of natural causes. "It is not certain that this man was inspired by God, ver. 20.—Deceived. Heb. "he lied unto him," (C.) and thus caused him to transgress. W.

VER. 20. Back. Some translate, "whom he had brought back." Junius, Syr., &c.—This would destroy the principal proof of those who esteem the man of Bethel to have been a true prophet. C.—Prot. agree with us; and the context seems to assert that God addressed his servant by another's mouth. H.

VER. 24. Killed him. Thus the Lord often punishes his servants here that he may spare them hereafter. For the generality of divines are of opinion that the sin of this prophet, considered with all its circumstances, was not mortal. Ch.—He had received a positive order, and ought to have tried the spirits, whether they were from God. 1 John iv. 1; Gal. vi. 18. Every prophecy which contradicts the word of God comes from an evil principle. C.—The prophet might suppose, however, that some cause had intervened, which authorized him to eat with this his brother, (ver. 30,) whom he probably revered as a true prophet. Many of God's commands are conditional. M.—S. Augustine (Cura, c. 7) doubts not of the prophet's salvation.—Body, without even hurting the ass, ver. 28. H.—God protected the relics of his servant, by stationing the lion for a guard. Procop. M.—How impenetrable are the counsels of God! He suffers Jeroboam, and the prophet who had seduced his servant, to live; while he punishes the latter for a fault which he had committed undesignedly. But he thus purified him from guilt, (C.) while he reserved Jeroboam for more lasting torments in another world. H.—Nothing could prove more forcibly the existence of future rewards and punishments. C.

VER. 31. Bones. Sept. add, "that my bones may be saved along with his." The conduct and faith of this man would lead us to conclude that he had done wrong, without any malicious design, ver. 18. H.

VER. 32. Samaria. The city was built by Amri, fifty years after the death of Jeroboam. Chap. xvi. 24. But the sacred writer speaks of places by the names which they bore in his time. C.—If this man was a prophet, he might easily mention Samaria, which would give its name to the kingdom of Israel. There was also probably a village of this name long before, on the mountain Samir, where one of the judges was buried. Judg. x. 2. H.

VER. 33. Way. Every thing promotes the salvation of the just, while the wicked pervert the most gracious designs of Providence to their own ruin. The king concluded that the prediction deserved no regard, ver. 18. C.—Meanest. Chap. xii. 31. Thus he wished to eradicate all sense of religion. H.

VER. 34. Earth. Heb. "to destroy it from the face of the earth." The Vulg. insinuates that it had taken place before the author wrote. In the third year of Asa, twenty-two years after this revolt, Baasa slew the whole family. Chap. xv. 29.

CHAP. XIV. VER. 1. Time. This expression does not determine the year. S. Chrys., &c.—The passage in the Vat. Sept. seems to place this death before Jeroboam ascended the throne; but it took place rather at the end of his reign, ver. 14. Abia seems to have been his eldest son, and fit for command; so that the people mourn for him, which they would hardly have done for an infant. C.

VER. 2. Dress. As if the prophet, who could dive into futurity, could be thus imposed upon. Jeroboam was aware that he would be full of indignation at the changes which had been introduced. He might also fear lest his wife might be exposed to danger in (C.) or near (H.) the enemy's country, (C.) and the people would have been more convinced of the vanity of their idols, if they had seen that it was necessary to have recourse to a prophet of the true God. M.—The mother might ask without the least suspicion, "Will my son recover?"

VER. 3. Cracknels. Heb. nokdim, "cakes full of holes," &c. Jos. ix. 12. C.—Sept. give a double translation, "cakes and raisins." Arab. "fruits." Syr. adds "dried." It was customary to make presents to the prophets, 1 Kings ix. 7. C.—But these were mean, that the woman might not be known. D.

pot of honey, and go to him: for he will tell thee what will become of this child.

4 Jeroboam's wife did as he told her: and rising up, went to Silo, and came to the house of Ahias; but he could not see, for his eyes were dim by reason of his age.

5 And the Lord said to Ahias: Behold the wife of Jeroboam cometh in, to consult thee concerning her son, that is sick: thus and thus shalt thou speak to her. So when she was coming in, and made as if she were another woman,

6 Ahias heard the sound of her feet, coming in at the door, and said: Come in, thou wife of Jeroboam: why dost thou feign thyself to be another? But I am sent to thee with heavy tidings.

7 Go, and tell Jeroboam: Thus saith the Lord, the God of Israel: Forasmuch as I exalted thee from among the people, and made thee prince over my people Israel;

8 And rent the kingdom away from the house of David, and gave it to thee, and thou hast not been as my servant, David, who kept my commandments, and followed me with all his heart, doing that which was well pleasing in my sight:

9 But hast done evil above all that were before thee, and hast made thee strange gods, and molten gods, to provoke me to anger, and hast cast me behind thy back:

10 Therefore, behold I will bring evils upon the house of Jeroboam, and will cut off from Jeroboam him that pisseth against the wall, and him that is shut up, and the last in Israel: and I will sweep away the remnant of the house of Jeroboam, as dung is swept away till all be clean.

11 Them that shall die of Jeroboam in the city, the dogs shall eat: and them that shall die in the field, the birds of the air shall devour: for the Lord hath spoken it.

12 Arise thou, therefore, and go to thy house: and when thy feet shall be entering into the city, the child shall die,

13 And all Israel shall mourn for him, and shall bury him: for he only of Jeroboam shall be laid in a sepulchre, because in his regard there is found a good word from the Lord, the God of Israel, in the house of Jeroboam.

14 And the Lord hath appointed himself a king over

* Infra, xv. 29.—b 2 Par. xli. 13.

VER. 9. Strange gods; that is, foreign gods: which expression destroys the opinion of those who imagine that Jeroboam designed by his calves to worship the Lord God of Israel. Ch.—Back. Lit. "body."

VER. 10. Wall. Every male child, or every dog. See 1 Kings xxv. 22. H.—The Heb. word maslin, in Spanish and French, signifies "a shepherd's dog." —Israel. This proverbial expression signifies, that even those who keep at home, and meddle not with the affairs of war, will not escape (C.); nor shall those who have run away from the field of battle, (H.) nor the most precious or contemptible things be spared. Deut. xxxii. 36; 4 Kings xiv. 26. M.

VER. 13. Word from. Heb. or "thought towards." Grot.—He has entertained sentiments of piety (C.) in the midst of a wicked court; therefore God will hasten to draw him out of the midst of iniquity. H.

VER. 14. Time. Prot. "But what? even now." The young prince, (H.) who was the firmest support of the family, was presently hurried away. Abia, king of Juda, slew above 500,000 of Jeroboam's subjects at once; and Baasa exterminated his family. C.—The latter had now begun his conspiracy. Abulensis, q. 26.

VER. 15. Water. The kingdom of Israel was continually agitated with wars. —River Euphrates, by degrees. The kings of Assyria verified these predictions; and we know not what is become of these ten tribes. C.—To provoke. These people did not perhaps design (H.) to make God their enemy, no more than their king did. Ver. 9. But their actions had that effect.

VER. 16. Sin. This is the common effect of evil example in kings. The crimes of kings are seldom confined to their own persons. C.

VER. 17. Thersa. Sept. inform us that Jeroboam had built this place, which they call Sarira while he was employed by Solomon. No wonder, therefore,

Israel, who shall cut off the house of Jeroboam in this day, and in this time:

15 And the Lord God shall strike Israel as a reed is shaken in the water: and he shall root up Israel out of this good land, which he gave to their fathers, and shall scatter them beyond the river: because they have made to themselves groves, to provoke the Lord.

16 And the Lord shall give up Israel for the sins of Jeroboam, who hath sinned, and made Israel to sin.

17 And the wife of Jeroboam arose, and departed, and came to Thersa: and when she was coming in to the threshold of the house, the child died, 18 And they buried him. And all Israel mourned for him, according to the word of the Lord, which he spoke by the hand of his servant Ahias, the prophet.

19 And the rest of the acts of Jeroboam, how he fought, and how he reigned, behold they are written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Israel.

20 And the days that Jeroboam reigned, were two and twenty years: and he slept with his fathers: and Nadab, his son, reigned in his stead.

21 And Roboam, the son of Solomon, reigned in Juda: Roboam was one and forty years old when he began to reign: and he reigned seventeen years in Jerusalem, the city which the Lord chose out of all the tribes of Israel to put his name there. And his mother's name was Naama, an Ammonitess.

22 And Juda did evil in the sight of the Lord, and provoked him above all that their fathers had done, in their sins which they committed.

23 For they also built them altars, and statues, and groves, upon every high hill, and under every green tree:

24 There were also the effeminate in the land, and they did according to all the abominations of the people, whom the Lord had destroyed before the face of the children of Israel.

25 And in the fifth year of the reign of Roboam, Sesac, king of Egypt, came up against Jerusalem.

26 And he took away the treasures of the house of the Lord, and the king's treasures, and carried all off: as also the shields of gold which Solomon had made:

that it is not mentioned by Josue. Its exact situation is not known, though it must have been very delightful, since Solomon compares the spouse to it. C.—Where we read sweet, (Cant. vi. 3,) Heb. has, "Thou art beautiful . . . as Thersa, and comely as Jerusalem." Hither Jeroboam had removed his court from Siehem. T.—House. Heb. "door," or gate of the city, when the prophet had denounced that the child should die, (ver. 12,) unless the palace was contiguous to the walls. H.

VER. 19. The Book of the words of the days of the kings of Israel. This book, which is often mentioned in the Book of Kings, is long since lost. For as to the books of Paralipomenon, or Chronicles, (which the Hebrews call the words of the days,) they were certainly written after the Book of Kings, since they frequently refer to them (Ch.); and they also remit us to these journals for further information. H.

VER. 21. Forty. Some suspect there is a mistake, and that it should be twenty-one. See 1 Par. xxii. 5. Grotius. D.—Hardouin dates from the era of Solomon. Roboam was young, in the Scripture style. But he might be forty-one years old. Chap. xii. 10. C.

VER. 23. High hill. Such places of devotion had been tolerated before the temple was built; but now they were deemed profane. C.

VER. 24. The effeminate. Catamites, or men addicted to unnatural lust. Ch.—This crime had been punished in the Sodomites, and in the people of Chanaan, and of Benjamin. Yet they continued prevalent in the country. Chap. xv. 12, and 4 Kings xxiii. 7, and Isa. ii. 6, and 2 Mac. iv. 12. C.

VER. 25. Sesac. See chap. xi. 40. He was allied to Jeroboam, (C.) so that he might come to his assistance, (H.) being attracted by the immense riches of Jerusalem. C.

27 And Roboam made shields of brass instead of them, and delivered them into the hand of the captains of the shield-bearers, and of them that kept watch before the gate of the king's house.

28 And when the king went into the house of the Lord, they whose office it was to go before him, carried them: and afterwards they brought them back to the armoury of the shield-bearers.

29 Now the rest of the acts of Roboam, and all that he did, behold they are written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Juda.

30 And there was war between Roboam and Jeroboam always.

31 And Roboam slept with his fathers, and was buried with them, in the city of David: and his mother's name was Naama, an Ammonitess: and Abiam, his son, reigned in his stead.

CHAP. XV.

The acts of Abiam, and of Asa, kings of Juda. And of Nadab, and Baasa, kings of Israel.

NOW ^ain the eighteenth year of the reign of Jeroboam, the son of Nabat, Abiam reigned over Juda.

2 He reigned three years in Jerusalem: ^bthe name of his mother was Maacha, the daughter of Abessalom.

3 And he walked in all the sins of his father, which he had done before him: and his heart was not perfect with the Lord his God, as was the heart of David, his father.

4 But for David's sake the Lord his God gave him a lamp in Jerusalem, to set up his son after him, and to establish Jerusalem:

5 Because David had done that which was right in the eyes of the Lord, and had not turned aside from any thing that he commanded him, all the days of his life,^c except the matter of Urias, the Hethite.

6 But there was war between Roboam and Jeroboam all the time of his life.

^a A. M. 3046, A. C. 958.—^b 2 Par. xiii. 2.—^c 2 Kings xi. 14.—^d 2 Par. xiii. 3.

VER. 30. Always. The two kingdoms were constantly divided, and did each other all the harm they could; though we know not that they ever came to a pitched battle. Roboam was too great a coward. 2 Par. xiii. 7.

VER. 31. Roboam. He deserved some commendation for procuring provisions, and fortifying his dominions (2 Par. xi. 5, 12); but was a prince devoid of wisdom or religion. He married eighteen wives and sixty concubines. The son of Maacha, his most favourite queen, succeeded him, after he had reigned seventeen years, and lived fifty-eight. C.—Semeias and Addo wrote his history. 2 Par. xii. 15.

CHAP. XV. VER. 2. Years, wanting some months.—Maacha. She is called, elsewhere, Michaia, daughter of Uriel; but it was a common thing in those days for the same person to have two names. Ch.—Abessalom and Absalom, the son of David, are the same. 2 Par. xi. 21. C.—S. Jerom (Trad.) is of a different opinion. M.—Josephus (viii. 10) intimates that Maacha was daughter of Thamar. The eldest daughter, in the kingdom of Gessur, seems to have been usually styled Maacha. Ver. 10. T.

VER. 5. Hethite. This could not be excused. But all his other imperfections might not appear criminal in the eyes of the world, as they had some pretext of virtue; so that God reserves the judgment of them to himself, and to David's conscience, who confessed that he had sinned. 2 Kings xxiv. 10. T.—Except David, Ezechias, and Josias, all the kings of Juda committed sin (Eccli. xlix. 5. C.); and not one of those who ruled over Israel gave an example of virtue. H.

VER. 6. Roboam. This had been remarked, chap. xiv. 30. H.—There was a domestic quarrel between the two families. C.—Some suspect that Roboam is placed to designate his successors, or that we ought to read, Abia. Sanchez.

VER. 9. Year complete, when the 21st was running on. Usner.—Sept. "the 24th." C.—But Grabe's edition agrees with the Heb. H.

VER. 10. His mother's, &c. That is, his grandmother; unless we suppose, which is not improbable, that the Maacha here named is different from the Maacha mentioned ver. 2. Ch.—She was probably another grand-daughter of David's son, (C.) as such are frequently styled simply daughters. So David is called the father of Asa, (ver. 11. H.) though he was really his great-grandfather. M.

VER. 13. Priapus. He would not spare such abominations in his own family. M.—He took from his mother the direction of the palace, (Vatab.) and her guards. Grot.

7 And the rest of the words of Abiam, and all that he did, are they not written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Juda?^d And there was war between Abiam and Jeroboam

8 And Abiam slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the city of David:^e and Asa, his son, reigned in his stead.

9 So in the twentieth year of Jeroboam, king of Israel, reigned Asa, king of Juda.

10 And he reigned one and forty years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Maacha, the daughter of Abessalom.

11 And Asa did that which was right in the sight of the Lord, as did David, his father:

12 And he took away the effeminate out of the land, and removed all the filth of the idols, which his father had made.

13 Moreover, he also removed his mother, Maacha, from being the princess in the sacrifices of Priapus, and in the grove which she had consecrated to him: and he destroyed her den, and broke in pieces the filthy idol, and burnt it by the torrent Cedron:

14 But the high places he did not take away. Nevertheless, the heart of Asa was perfect with the Lord all his days:

15 And he brought in the things which his father had dedicated, and he had vowed, into the house of the Lord, silver and gold, and vessels.

16 And there was war between Asa, and Baasa, king of Israel, all their days.

17 And Baasa, king of Israel, went up against Juda, and built Rama, that no man might go out or come in of the side of Asa, king of Juda.

18 Then Asa took all the silver and gold that remained in the treasures of the house of the Lord, and in the treasures of the king's house, and delivered it into the VER. 14. The high places. There were exelsa, or high places, of two different kinds. Some were set up and dedicated to the worship of idols, or strange gods: and these Asa removed. 2 Par. xiv. 2. Others were only altars of the true God, but were erected contrary to the law, which allowed of no sacrifices but in the temple; and these were not removed by Asa. Ch.—They had been built before the temple, and tolerated by the prophets (C.); and though they were now improper for sacrifices, (H.) Asa thought it would be imprudent to molest them, (C.) as perhaps he could not take them away. D.—He left also the ruins of (H.) the temples built by Solomon, (W.) on Mount Olivet, (4 Kings xxiii. M.) as no longer dangerous. Salic.—Lord. Asa had his faults; but never forsook the worship of the Lord. Ch.—In the same sense David is so often praised as a just prince. Asa threw a prophet into prison, and placed his trust as much in physicians, &c. 2 Par. xvi. 10, 12. But he did penance, and deserves to be ranked (C.) among the few just kings of Juda. H.

VER. 15. Vowed. Heb. "which he himself had dedicated," or vowed. 2 Par. xv. 18. H.—Asa made liberal presents to the Lord, and gave what his father had promised, (M.) probably during the famous battle against Jeroboam. 2 Par. xiii. 5. Abulens. q. 17.—Abiam was a wicked prince, and had neglected this duty, though he reigned three years. Hence he was slain by God. Ib. v. 20. It seems that heirs were bound to execute the vows of their parents, though Moses does not express it. C.

VER. 16. Their days: not that they were always fighting. H.—Open war was declared only in the 35th year of Asa, (2 Par. xv. 19,) which must be dated from the schism, and not from the commencement of his reign; since his rival, Baasa, enjoyed the sovereignty only twenty-four years, and died in the 26th of Asa, which was the 36th from the division of the two kingdoms.

VER. 17. Rama, fortifying it with a wall all round. 2 Par. xvi. H.—Rama signifies "a height." This fort commanded a narrow pass between the two kingdoms, (C.) and cut off all communication; which Baasa dreaded, lest his subjects should return to the service of the true God, and of Juda. H.—Josue (xviii. 25) mentions Rama, near Gabaa, (C.) about five miles north of Jerusalem. S. Jerom.—There was another towards the south. M.—But there the king of Israel would have no power. H.

VER. 18. House. Sesac had not carried off all the treasures, (C.) and the hands of his servants: and sent them to Benadad, son of Tabremon, the son of Hezion, king of Syria, who dwelt in Damascus, saying:

19 There is a league between me and thee, and between my father and thy father: therefore I have sent thee presents of silver and gold: and I desire thee to come, and break thy league with Baasa, king of Israel, that he may depart from me.

20 Benadad, hearkening to king Asa, sent the captains of his army against the cities of Israel, and they smote Ahion, and Dan, and Abel-beth-maacha, and all Ceneroth; that is, all the land of Nephtali.

21 And when Baasa had heard this, he left off building Rama, and returned into Thersa.

22 But king Asa sent word into all Juda, saying: Let no man be excused: and they took away the stones from Rama, and the timber thereof, wherewith Baasa had been building, and with them king Asa built Gabaa of Benjamin, and Maspha.

23 But the rest of all the acts of Asa, and all his strength, and all that he did, and the cities that he built, are they not written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Juda? But in the time of his old age he was diseased in his feet.

24 And he slept with his fathers, and was buried with them in the city of David, his father.^a And Josaphat, his son, reigned in his place.

25 But Nadab, the son of Jeroboam, reigned over Israel the second year^b of Asa, king of Juda: and he reigned over Israel two years.

26 And he did evil in the sight of the Lord, and walked in the ways of his father, and in his sins, wherewith he made Israel to sin.

27 And Baasa, the son of Ahias, of the house of Issachar, conspired against him, and slew him in Gebbethon, which is a city of the Philistines: for Nadab and all Israel besieged Gebbethon.

28 So Baasa slew him in the third year^c of Asa, king of Juda, and reigned in his place.

29^d And when he was king, he cut off all the house of Jeroboam: he left not so much as one soul of his seed, till he had utterly destroyed him, according to the word of the Lord, which he had spoken in the hands of Ahias, the Silonite:

losses had been since in a great measure repaired, ver. 15. H.—Asa thought himself justified in employing these treasures in such a pressing necessity, (C.) perhaps (H.) without reason, as the danger was not so great; and he might have gained the victory without having recourse to an infidel, if he had placed more confidence in God. 2 Par. xvi. 7, 9. M.—He had already discomfited Zara, king of Ethiopia, and had an army of 580,000 men. C. 2 Par. xiv. 8.—Tabremon, "Good Remembrance," idol of Damascus. H.—Hezion, the same with Razon. In Paral. Abel-maim, "Abela of the waters." 2 Kings xx. 14.—Ceneroth, near the sea of Tiberias. Jos. xi. 2. Benadad kept possession of some of these places, and even built streets in Samaria. Chap. xx. 34.

VER. 22. Excused. "When the country is to be defended, all exemptions cease." Leg. ult. C.—Sept. seem to preserve the terms of the original untranslated, "Asa called all . . . to Annaeim." Heb. ain noki, (H.) means, "no one exempt." C.—Rama belonged to the enemy; and, as it appears from this passage, was in the vicinity of Maspha. 31 But the rest of the acts of Nadab, and all that he did, are they not written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Israel?

32 And there was war between Asa and Baasa, the king of Israel, all their days.

33 In the third year of Asa, king of Juda, Baasa, the son of Ahias, reigned over all Israel, in Thersa, four and twenty years.

34 And he did evil before the Lord, and walked in the ways of Jeroboam, and in his sins, wherewith he made Israel to sin.

CHAP. XVI.

Jehu prophesieth against Baasa: his son Ela is slain, and all his family destroyed by Zambri: of the reign of Anuri, father of Achab.

THEN the word of the Lord came to Jehu, the son of Hanani, against Baasa, saying:

2 Forasmuch as I have exalted thee out of the dust, and made thee prince over my people Israel, and thou hast walked in the way of Jeroboam, and hast made my people Israel to sin, to provoke me to anger with their sins:

3 Behold I will cut down the posterity of Baasa, and the posterity of his house, and I will make thy house as the house of Jeroboam, the son of Nabat.

4^e Him that dieth of Baasa in the city, the dog^g shall eat: and him that dieth of his in the country, the fowls of the air shall devour.

5^h But the rest of the acts of Baasa, and all that he did, and his battles, are they not written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Israel?

6 So Baasa slept with his fathers, and was buried in Thersa: and Ela, his son, reigned in his stead.

7 And when the word of the Lord came in the hand of Jehu, the son of Hanani, the prophet, against Baasa, and against his house, and against all the evil that he had done before the Lord, to provoke him to anger by the works of his hands, to become as the house of Jeroboam: for this cause he slew him; that is to say, Jehu, the son of Hanani, the prophet.

8 In the six and twentieth year of Asa, king of Juda,

CHAP. XVI. VER. 1. Jehu was different from one of the same name and parentage who came to Josaphat (2 Par. xix. 2. D. T.); though, if Baasa did not put him to death, as there is some reason to doubt, he might be the same, ver. 7. C.—Hanani had been sent to Asa, 2 Par. xvi. 7. Abulens. q. 3.

Ela, the son of Baasa, reigned over Israel, in Thersa, two years.

9 And his servant Zambri, who was captain of half the horsemen, rebelled against him: now Ela was drinking in Thersa, and drunk in the house of Arsa, the governor of Thersa.

10 And Zambri rushing in, struck him, and slew him, in the seven and twentieth year of Asa, king of Juda; and he reigned in his stead.

11 And when he was king, and sat upon his throne, he slew all the house of Baasa, and he left not one thereof to piss against a wall, and all his kinsfolks and friends.

12 And Zambri destroyed all the house of Baasa, according to the word of the Lord, that he had spoken to Baasa, in the hand of Jehu, the prophet,

13 For all the sins of Baasa, and the sins of Ela, his son, who sinned, and made Israel to sin, provoking the Lord, the God of Israel, with their vanities.

14 But the rest of the acts of Ela, and all that he did, are they not written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Israel?

15 In the seven and twentieth year of Asa, king of Juda, Zambri reigned seven days in Thersa: now the army was besieging Gebbethon, a city of the Philistines.

16 And when they heard that Zambri had rebelled, and slain the king, all Israel made Amri their king, who was general over Israel in the camp that day.

17 And Amri went up, and all Israel with him, from Gebbethon, and they besieged Thersa.

18 And Zambri, seeing that the city was about to be taken, went into the palace, and burnt himself with the king's house: and he died

19 In his sins, which he had sinned, doing evil before the Lord, and walking in the way of Jeroboam, and in his sin, wherewith he made Israel to sin.

20 But the rest of the acts of Zambri, and of his conspiracy and tyranny, are they not written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Israel?

21 Then were the people of Israel divided into two parts: one half of the people followed Thebni, the son of Gineth, to make him king: and one half followed Amri.

22 But the people that were with Amri, prevailed over the people that followed Thebni, the son of Gineth: and Thebni died, and Amri reigned.

VER. 18. Himself. Heb. may also signify, "he (Amri) burnt him."—Zambri, his rival. But the other sense is more natural. C.

VER. 21. Parts. Those who had not chosen Amri were mortified at the election made by the army, and therefore set up another king. C.—The contest seems to have lasted four years. Houbigant.

VER. 22. Died in the battle, wherewith Amri prevailed. M.

VER. 23. In the one and thirtieth year, &c. Amri began to reign in the seven and twentieth year of Asa; but had not the quiet possession of the kingdom till the death of his competitor, Thebni, which was in the one and thirtieth year of Asa's reign. VER. 24. Silver: 6842. 7s. 6d. sterling. Arbuthnot.—Somer dwelt there; and several houses had been already erected, (chap. xiii. 32.) and even streets, by the king of Syria, for the convenience of his merchants. Chap. xx. 34. H.—

23 In the one and thirtieth year of Asa, king of Juda, Amri reigned over Israel twelve years: in Thersa he reigned six years.

24 And he bought the hill of Samaria of Somer, for two talents of silver: and he built upon it, and he called the city which he built Samaria, after the name of Somer, the owner of the hill.

25 And Amri did evil in the sight of the Lord, and acted wickedly above all that were before him.

26 And he walked in all the way of Jeroboam, the son of Nabat, and in his sins, wherewith he made Israel to sin: to provoke the Lord, the God of Israel, to anger with their vanities.

27 Now the rest of the acts of Amri, and the battles he fought, are they not written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Israel?

28 And Amri slept with his fathers, and was buried in Samaria, and Achab, his son, reigned in his stead.

29 Now Achab, the son of Amri, reigned over Israel in the eight and thirtieth year of Asa, king of Juda. And Achab, the son of Amri, reigned over Israel in Samaria two and twenty years.

30 And Achab, the son of Amri, did evil in the sight of the Lord above all that were before him.

31 Nor was it enough for him to walk in the sins of Jeroboam, the son of Nabat: but he also took to wife Jezabel, daughter of Ethbaal, king of the Sidonians. And he went, and served Baal, and adored him.

32 And he set up an altar for Baal, in the temple of Baal, which he had built in Samaria;

33 And he planted a grove: and Achab did more to provoke the Lord, the God of Israel, than all the kings of Israel that were before him.

34 In his days Hiel, of Bethel, built Jericho: in Abiram, his first-born, he laid its foundations: and in his youngest son, Segub, he set up the gates thereof: according to the word of the Lord, which he spoke in the hand of Josue, the son of Nun.

Thersa had lately been so much ruined by civil wars, that Amri thought proper to choose a new seat of government. Samaria was greatly adorned by succeeding kings. Chap. xxii. 39. It stood in a delightful and commanding situation, and gave its name to the adjacent territory, and to the whole kingdom of Israel. Benadad besieged it twice; and Salmanasar took it. Hyrcanus levelled it with the ground.

VER. 31. Jezabel, whose name is become proverbial, to designate a proud, lewd, cruel, and impious woman. Apoc. ii. 20. She was the chief promoter of all the evils of Achab's reign. He did not insist that she should embrace the true religion, when he married her; as it is supposed former kings had done, when they espoused women who had been brought up in idolatry. C.—He even introduced a new country's gods, and thus enhanced upon the wickedness of his predecessors. H.

VER. 34. Hand. Josue had committed this curse to writing. H.—Hiel, an idolater, did not regard it, and Achab had not zeal to attempt to hinder him. But Divine Providence punished his audacity. C.—All his sons perished while the city was rebuilding. W. See Jos. vi. 26. C.

CHAP. XVII. VER. 1. Elias means, "the strong God." Some Greeks derive the name of the prophet from ἡλιος, "the sun," improperly. His parentage is not known, nor even his tribe. Thesbe was situated in the tribe of Gad. The Fathers agree that Elias never was married. He seems to have had no fixed nor rain these years, but according to the words of my mouth.

2 And the word of the Lord came to him, saying:

3 Get thee hence, and go towards the east, and hide thyself by the torrent of Carith, which is over against the Jordan;

4 And there thou shalt drink of the torrent: and I have commanded the ravens to feed thee there.

5 So he went, and did according to the word of the Lord: and going, he dwelt by the torrent Carith, which is over against the Jordan.

6 And the ravens brought him bread and flesh in the morning, and bread and flesh in the evening; and he drank of the torrent.

7 But *after some time the torrent was dried up: for it had not rained upon the earth.

8 Then the word of the Lord came to him, saying:

9 Arise, and go to Sarephta, of the Sidonians, and dwell there: for I have commanded a widow woman there to feed thee.

10 *He arose, and went to Sarephta. And when he was come to the gate of the city, he saw the widow woman gathering sticks, and he called her, and said to her: Give me a little water in a vessel, that I may drink.

11 And when she was going to fetch it, he called after her, saying: Bring me also, I beseech thee, a morsel of bread in thy hand.

12 And she answered: As the Lord thy God liveth, I have no bread, but only a handful of meal in a pot, and a little oil in a cruise: behold I am gathering two sticks, that I may go in and dress it, for me and my son, that we may eat it and die.

13 And Elias said to her: Fear not; but go, and do as thou hast said: but first make for me of the same meal a little hearth-cake, and bring it to me, and after make for thyself and thy son.

14 For thus saith the Lord, the God of Israel: The pot of meal shall not waste, nor the cruise of oil be diminished, until the day wherein the Lord will give rain upon the face of the earth.

15 She went, and did according to the word of

Elias: and he eat, and she, and her house: and from that day

16 The pot of meal wasted not, and the cruise of oil was not diminished, according to the word of the Lord, which he spoke in the hand of Elias.

17 And it came to pass after this, that the son of the woman, the mistress of the house, fell sick, and the sickness was very grievous, so that there was no breath left in him.

18 And she said to Elias: What have I to do with thee, thou man of God? art thou come to me, that my iniquities should be remembered, and that thou shouldst kill my son?

19 And Elias said to her: Give me thy son. And he took him out of her bosom, and carried him into the upper chamber where he abode, and laid him upon his own bed.

20 And he cried to the Lord, and said: O Lord, my God, hast thou afflicted also the widow, with whom I am after a sort maintained, so as to kill her son?

21 And he stretched, and measured himself upon the child three times, and cried to the Lord, and said: O Lord, my God, let the soul of this child, I beseech thee, return into his body.

22 And the Lord heard the voice of Elias: and the soul of the child returned into him, and he revived.

23 And Elias took the child, and brought him down from the upper chamber to the house below, and delivered him to his mother, and said to her: Behold thy son liveth.

24 And the woman said to Elias: Now by this I know that thou art a man of God, and the word of the Lord in thy mouth is true.

Elias cometh before Achab. He convinceth the false prophets by bringing fire from heaven: he obtaineth rain by his prayer.

AFTER *many days, the word of the Lord came to Elias, in the third year, saying: Go, and show thyself to Achab, that I may give rain upon the face of the earth.

VER. 4. Ravens. Heb. ēaurbim, (H.) is sometimes rendered "Arabs," by the Vulg. 2 Par. xxi. 16. Others would translate, "merchants," or the inhabitants of Arabo, which was near Carith. They suppose that the ravens, being unclean birds, would never have been employed. But they were only forbidden to be eaten or touched when dead; and God is not restricted by his own laws. He might thus choose to display his wonderful providence. S. Jerom relates how S. Paul, the first hermit, was fed thus by a raven, with half a loaf a day; and a whole one was sent when S. Anthony went to see him. C.

VER. 13. First. He puts the faith of the widow to a severe trial; and the gospel requires nothing more perfect than what she practised. The true faith, which she then received, was her first and most precious recompence; and we shall soon see that her guest drew down blessings upon her. C.

CHAP. XVIII. VER. 1. Year of his sojourning at Sarephta. As other six months elapsed before the drought was removed, it is probable that Elias had spent them at Carith. S. James v. 17. C.

3 And Achab called Abdias the governor of his house : now Abdias feared the Lord very much.

4 For when Jezabel killed the prophets of the Lord, he took a hundred prophets, and hid them by fifty and fifty in caves, and fed them with bread and water.

5 And Achab said to Abdias : Go into the land unto all fountains of waters, and into all valleys, to see if we can find grass, and save the horses and mules, that the beasts may not utterly perish.

6 And they divided the countries between them, that they might go round about them : Achab went one way, and Abdias another way by himself.

7 And as Abdias was on the way, Elias met him : and he knew him, and fell on his face, and said : Art thou my lord Elias ?

8 And he answered : I am. Go, and tell thy master : Elias is here.

9 And he said : What have I sinned, that thou wouldst deliver me, thy servant, into the hand of Achab, that he should kill me ?

10 As the Lord thy God liveth, there is no nation or kingdom, whither my lord hath not sent to seek thee : and when all answered : He is not here : he took an oath of every kingdom and nation, because thou wast not found.

11 And now thou sayest to me : Go and tell thy master : Elias is here.

12 And when I am gone from thee, the Spirit of the Lord will carry thee into a place that I know not : and I shall go in and tell Achab ; and he, not finding thee, will kill me : but thy servant feareth the Lord from his infancy.

13 Hath it not been told thee, my lord, what I did when Jezabel killed the prophets of the Lord ; how I hid a hundred men of the prophets of the Lord, by fifty and fifty in caves, and fed them with bread and water ?

14 And now thou sayest : Go and tell thy master : Elias is here : that he may kill me.

15 And Elias said : As the Lord of hosts liveth, before whose face I stand, this day I will show myself unto him.

16 Abdias therefore went to meet Achab, and told him : and Achab came to meet Elias.

17 And when he had seen him, he said : Art thou he that troublest Israel ?

18 And he said : I have not troubled Israel, but thou and thy father's house, who have forsaken the commandments of the Lord, and have followed Baalim.

19 Nevertheless send now, and gather unto me all Israel, unto Mount Carmel, and the prophets of Baal four hundred and fifty, and the prophets of the groves four hundred, who eat at Jezabel's table.

20 Achab sent to all the children of Israel, and gathered together the prophets unto Mount Carmel.

21 And Elias coming to all the people, said : How long do you halt between two sides ? If the Lord be God, follow him : but if Baal, then follow him. And the people did not answer him a word.

22 And Elias said again to the people : I only remain a prophet of the Lord : but the prophets of Baal are four hundred and fifty men.

23 Let two bullocks be given us, and let them choose one bullock for themselves, and cut it in pieces, and lay it upon wood, but put no fire under : and I will dress the other bullock, and lay it on wood, and put no fire under it.

24 Call ye on the names of your gods, and I will call on the name of my Lord : and the God that shall answer by fire, let him be God. And all the people answering, said : A very good proposal.

25 Then Elias said to the prophets of Baal : Choose you one bullock and dress it first, because you are many : and call on the names of your gods ; but put no fire under.

26 And they took the bullock, which he gave them, and dressed it : and they called on the name of Baal from morning even until noon, saying : O Baal, hear us. But there was no voice, nor any that answered : and they leaped over the altar that they had made.

27 And when it was now noon, Elias jested at them, saying : Cry with a louder voice : for he is a god ; and perhaps he is talking, or is in an inn, or on a journey ; or perhaps he is asleep, and must be awaked.

28 So they cried with a loud voice, and cut themselves

VER. 6. Himself. So Providence ordered it, that the prophet might declare his sentiments to him freely. H.—Achab would go in person, another way, that he might not be imposed upon. He was more solicitous for his cattle than for his subjects. M.

VER. 9. Kill me, as an impostor, or an accomplice of thy escape, if afterwards thou shouldst disappear. Ver. 12. C.

VER. 10. An oath of every kingdom, adjuring all his neighbours to tell if they knew any thing about Elias. H.—Achab wished to make him restore rain, or to punish him for the refusal. C.—How stupid must he have been not to perceive that God was punishing him ! H.

VER. 12. Spirit. Abdias supposed that the prophet had been transported to some unknown country, (C.) as he was afterwards to paradise. His disciples imagined, by a violent wind. 4 Kings ii. 16. H.—Thus the Spirit of the Lord took away Philip, (Acts viii. 39,) and conducted Jesus into the desert. Matt. iv. 1 ; Mark i. 12. C.—Infancy. This he mentions that the prophet might take pity on him. M.

VER. 13. A hundred. Hence we may judge how numerous they were. These prophets were not perhaps all inspired ; but they had such at their head ; and spent their time in working and in the Divine praises. They were the salt and light of the earth, the pillars of the true religion, against whom Jezabel bent all her fury during the first years of the drought. C.

VER. 16. Meet Elias, out of respect, (Abulensis,) or rather to upbraid him.

VER. 17. Troublest Israel ? Thus the wicked esteem those disturbers of the public repose, who will not suffer them to go on in their wickedness unmolested. Thus the Jews complain of Jesus Christ. Luke xxiii. 5. Such a war is better than a false peace : and Achab, in fact, proclaims the praise of Elias, who strove by easy means to make the people open their eyes and return to their God. C.

VER. 19. Fifty, attached to Baal, and fed by the king ; while the prophets of the groves, or of Astarte, lived at the queen's expense. They imitated the lives of the true prophets, to delude the people.—Carmel was long after famous for the worship of Apollo, who was the same with Baal, or the sun. Jos. xix. 26. C.—No mention is made of rain ; but it was understood that it would be given, when the people should assemble to hear God's determination. M.—Achab durst not therefore refuse to convoke them. H.

VER. 21. Sides : sometimes adoring God ; at other times the devil. C.—Such an expostulation ought to be made to those who are indifferent about religion. W.—You cannot serve two masters. C.—They wished to unite the service of both, foolishly supposing that there might be many gods ; as some, at present, assert that many religions may be pleasing to Heaven. H.

VER. 22. I. Heb. repeats "I," to make the contrast more striking. Elias alone was present, in this assembly, as the prophet of the Lord. H.—He knew that Abdias had preserved one hundred ; but they were concealed.—Men. The other four hundred of Jezabel did not appear.

VER. 24. Call ye. He does not order them to invoke idols ; but challenges them to prove their divinity, if they can.—By fire. On such trying occasions, it is not tempting God to ask for a miracle. God had given this proof of fire repeatedly. Gen. xv. 17 ; Lev. ix. 24, and 2 Par. vii. 1.

VER. 26. That they. Heb. "which he (Achab) had made" (C.) ; or, "which was made." H.—The altar of Elias was erected afterwards. Ver. 30. The prophets of Baal acted in a foolish manner, (C.) as if in jest, but really despairing of success. H.

VER. 27. Talking to some of his prophets, (C.) or in deep contemplation. Mont.—An iux. Sept. "giving oracles ;" or, "he is pursuing" Pagnin.

after their manner with knives and lancets, till they were all covered with blood.

29 And after mid-day was past, and while they were prophesying, the time was come of offering sacrifice, and there was no voice heard, nor did any one answer, nor regard them as they prayed.

30 Elias said to all the people: Come ye unto me. And the people coming near unto him, he repaired the altar of the Lord, that was broken down:

31 And he took twelve stones, according to the number of the tribes of the sons of Jacob, to whom the word of the Lord came, saying: "Israel shall be thy name.

32 And he built with the stones an altar to the name of the Lord: and he made a trench for water, of the breadth of two furrows, round about the altar.

33 And he laid the wood in order, and cut the bullock in pieces, and laid it upon the wood.

34 And he said: Fill four buckets with water, and pour it upon the burnt-offering, and upon the wood. And again he said: Do the same the second time. And when they had done it the second time, he said: Do the same also the third time. And they did so the third time.

35 And the water run round about the altar, and the trench was filled with water.

36 And when it was now time to offer the holocaust, Elias, the prophet, came near and said: O Lord God of Abraham, and Isaac, and Israel, show this day that thou art the God of Israel, and I thy servant, and that according to thy commandment I have done all these things.

37 Hear me, O Lord, hear me: that this people may earn that thou art the Lord God, and that thou hast turned their heart again.

38 Then the fire of the Lord fell, and consumed the holocaust, and the wood, and the stones, and the dust, and licked up the water that was in the trench.

39 And when all the people saw this, they fell on their faces, and they said: The Lord, he is God; the Lord, he is God.

40 And Elias said to them: Take the prophets of Baal, and let not one of them escape. And when they had taken them, Elias brought them down to the torrent Cison, and killed them there.

41 And Elias said to Achab: Go up, eat and drink: for there is a sound of abundance of rain.

42 Achab went up to eat and drink. and Elias went up to the top of Carmel, and casting himself down upon the earth, put his face between his knees,

43 And he said to his servant: Go up, and look towards the sea. And he went up, and looked, and said: There is nothing. And again he said to him: Return seven times.

44 And at the seventh time: Behold a little cloud arose out of the sea like a man's foot. And he said: Go up, and say to Achab: Prepare thy chariot, and go down, lest the rain prevent thee.

45 And while he turned himself this way and that way, behold the heavens grew dark, with clouds and wind, and there fell a great rain. And Achab getting up, went away to Jezrahel:

46 And the hand of the Lord was upon Elias, and he girded up his loins, and ran before Achab, till he came to Jezrahel.

CHAP. XIX.

Elias, fleeing from Jezabel, is fed by an angel in the desert; and by the strength of that food walketh forty days, till he cometh to Horeb, where he hath a vision of God.

AND Achab told Jezabel all that Elias had done, and how he had slain all the prophets with the sword.

2 And Jezabel sent a messenger to Elias, saying: Such and such things may the gods do to me, and add still more, if by this hour to-morrow I make not thy life as the life of one of them.

3 Then ^bElias was afraid, and rising up, he went whithersoever he had a mind: and he came to Bersabee of Juda, and left his servant there,

4 And he went forward, one day's journey into the desert. And when he was there, and sat under a juniper-tree, he requested for his soul that he might die, and said: It is enough for me, Lord; take away my soul: for I am no better than my fathers.

VER. 31. Twelve stones, (as Exod. xxiv., &c.,) intimating that he acted in the name of all (M.); and in order that all Israel might return with one heart to the service of God. H.—The prophet did not follow his own spirit in erecting this altar. C.

VER. 32. Furrows. Heb. "of two (seah) measures of seed." These furrows Elias filled with water, to impede the natural activity of fire, and to show the miracle in a more striking light (H.); as also to convince all that there was no deceit.

VER. 34. Time. So that the wood was less disposed to catch fire. M.

VER. 37. Again. This effect he hoped for from the miracle.

VER. 38. Trench, as if it had been of an inflammable nature. Julian himself was forced to acknowledge this miracle. "This," says he, "once happened under Moses, and, a long while after, again under Elias, the Thesbite."

VER. 40. Cison, at the foot of Carmel. Adrichomius.—Achab durst not protect his prophets, being confounded by the evidence of the miracle, (M.) and the unanimity of the people's cry. H.—Killed them, by God's inspiration, (C.) as impostors, who had deluded the people, and were worthy of death.

Elias requested to die, not out of impatience or pusillanimity, but out of zeal against sin; and that he might no longer be witness of the miseries of his people, and the war they were waging against God and his servants. See ver. 10. Ch.—He does not wish to fall into the hands of Jezabel, lest the idolaters should triumph: but he is willing to die, if God so order it. C.—Mathathias entertained the like sentiments. 1 Mac. ii. 7.—Fathers: that I should live longer than they did. M. Eccli. xxx. 17.—If he had been weary of life, why did he flee? His answer to Achab shows that he was by no means timid. C.

5 And he cast himself down, and slept in the shadow of the juniper-tree: and behold an angel of the Lord touched him, and said to him: Arise and eat.

6 He looked, and behold there was at his head a hearthcake, and a vessel of water: and he ate and drank, and he fell asleep again.

7 And the angel of the Lord came again the second time, and touched him, and said to him: Arise, eat: for thou hast yet a great way to go.

8 And he arose, and ate and drank, and walked in the strength of that food forty days and forty nights, unto the Mount of God, Horeb.

9 And when he was come thither, he abode in a cave: and behold the word of the Lord came unto him, and he said to him: What dost thou here, Elias?

10 And he answered: With zeal have I been zealous for the Lord God of hosts: for the children of Israel have forsaken thy covenant: they have thrown down thy altars, they have slain thy prophets with the sword, and I alone am left, and they seek my life to take it away.

11 And he said to him: Go forth, and stand upon the mount before the Lord: and behold the Lord passeth, and a great and strong wind before the Lord, overthrowing the mountains, and breaking the rocks in pieces: but the Lord was not in the wind. And after the wind, an earthquake: but the Lord was not in the earthquake.

12 And after the earthquake, a fire: but the Lord was not in the fire. And after the fire, a whistling of a gentle air.

VER. 7. Go. Heb. "the journey is too great for thee," without this support. H.—He spent forty days in this journey, as he did not follow the straightest road. C.

VER. 8. In the strength of that food, &c. This bread with which Elias was fed in the wilderness was a figure of the bread of life, which we receive in the blessed sacrament: by the strength of which we are to be supported in our journey through the wilderness of this world, till we come to the true mountain of God, and his vision in a happy eternity. Ch.—Horeb signifies "a rock, or dry wilderness." C.

VER. 10. Altars. Some had been erected by the prophets, (E.) as the king would suffer none to go to Jerusalem. H.—The idolaters threw them down. Chap. xviii. 30. Such altars would have been unlawful in Juda. C.—I alone am left; viz. of the prophets in the kingdom of Israel, or of the ten tribes: for in the kingdom of Juda religion was at that time in a very flourishing condition, under the kings Asa and Josaphat.

VER. 12. Air. Something similar happened at the giving of the law, and at the promulgation of the gospel. Exod. xix. 9, 16; Acts ii. 2. The Lord was pleased to show his prophet the difference between the two laws: the one was full of terror, the other of mildness. Grotius.—He insinuated likewise that he could easily exterminate the offenders, but he chose to bear patiently with them (T.); and taught his prophet to moderate his zeal, and, after terrifying sinners, to bring them to a sense of their duty by gentle means. It does not appear that Elias performed this commission in person, but by the hand of Eliseus. 4 Kings viii. 12. 15 And the Lord said to him. Go, and return on thy way, through the desert, to Damascus: and when thou art come thither, thou shalt anoint Hazael to be king over Syria;

16 ^bAnd thou shalt anoint Jehu, the son of Namsi, to be king over Israel: and Eliseus, the son of Saphat, of Abelmeula, thou shalt anoint to be prophet in thy room.

17 And it shall come to pass, that whosoever shall escape the sword of Hazael, shall be slain by Jehu: and whosoever shall escape the sword of Jehu, shall be slain by Eliseus.

18 ^cAnd I will leave me seven thousand men in Israel, whose knees have not been bowed before Baal, and every mouth that hath not worshipped him, kissing the hands.

19 And Elias departing from thence, found Eliseus, the son of Saphat, ploughing with twelve yoke of oxen: and he was one of them that were ploughing with twelve yoke of oxen: and when Elias came up to him, he cast his mantle upon him.

20 And he forthwith left the oxen, and ran after Elias, and said: Let me, I pray thee, kiss my father and my mother, and then I will follow thee. And he said to him: Go, and return back: for that which was my part, I have done to thee.

21 And returning back from him, he took a yoke of oxen, and killed them, and boiled the flesh with the plough of the oxen, and gave to the people, and they ate: and rising up, he went away, and followed Elias, and ministered to him.

No mention is made of unction. C.—Yet the Fathers have hence inferred that prophets received it, as well as priests and kings. Sanctius.

VER. 17. Shall be slain by Eliseus. Eliseus did not kill any of the idolaters with the material sword; but he is here joined with Hazael and Jehu, the great instruments of God in punishing the idolatry of Israel, because he foretold to the former his exaltation to the kingdom of Syria, and the vengeance he would execute against Israel, and anointed the latter by one of his disciples to be king of Israel, with commission to extirpate the house of Achab. Ch.

VER. 18. Will leave. Heb. also, "I have left," as Rom. xi. 4. Sept. "thou shalt leave." H.—After answering the first part of the prophet's complaint, and informing him that the guilty should not pass unpunished, God lets him know that he is not left alone, but that many thousands (C.) even in Israel still continue faithful; so far was the true Church from being in danger of perishing entirely. H.—Seven is often put for a great number. Prov. xxiv. 16. Yet some suppose (C.) that only this number served God out of 1,110,000 men in Israel. 1 Par. xxi. 5. him, and horses, and chariots: and going up, he fought against Samaria, and besieged it.

2 And sending messengers to Achab, king of Israel, into the city,

3 He said: Thus saith Benadad: Thy silver and thy gold is mine: and thy wives and thy goodliest children are mine.

4 And the king of Israel answered: According to thy word, my lord, O king, I am thine, and all that I have.

5 And the messengers came again, and said: Thus saith Benadad, who sent us unto thee: Thy silver and thy gold, and thy wives and thy children, thou shalt deliver up to me.

6 To-morrow, therefore, at this same hour, I will send my servants to thee, and they shall search thy house, and the houses of thy servants: and all that pleaseth them, they shall put in their hands, and take away.

7 And the king of Israel called all the ancients of the land, and said: Mark, and see that he layeth snares for us. For he sent to me for my wives, and for my children, and for my silver and gold: and I said not nay.

8 And all the ancients, and all the people said to him: Hearken not to him, nor consent to him.

9 Wherefore he answered the messengers of Benadad: Tell my lord, the king: All that thou didst send for to me, thy servant, at first, I will do: but this thing I cannot do.

10 And the messengers returning brought him word. And he sent again, and said: Such and such things may the gods do to me, and more may they add, if the dust of Samaria shall suffice for handfuls for all the people that follow me.

11 And the king of Israel answering, said: Tell him: Let not the girded boast himself as the ungirded.

12 And it came to pass, when Benadad heard this word, that he and the kings were drinking in pavilions, and he said to his servants: Beset the city. And they beset it.

VER. 4. Have. Achab is not in earnest, but strives to pacify the barbarian. M.

VER. 6. Servants, or subjects. The king of Israel has thus a plea to interest all his people, as the danger was common. Salien.—He assumes the character of disinterestedness, as if he had been willing to abandon all his private property; knowing that Benadad would not accede even to that hard proposal. H.

VER. 10. Handfuls. Heb. ssal means also “foxes,” as the Sept. render it, “suffice for the foxes, for all the people, (even for) my infantry” (H.); as if his forces were so numerous as to cover the whole land, and leave no room for even foxes to occupy. The hyperbole is equally great, supposing that his soldiers could by each taking a handful, or what might stick to his feet, (Chal.) carry off all Samaria.

VER. 11. Let not the girded, &c. Let him not boast before the victory: it will then be time to glory when he putteth off his armour, having overcome his adversary. Ch.—“Let not him who goes to battle, though well armed, boast; but the man who returns victorious.” Chal. “Enough: let not the man with a crooked back boast, as one that is upright.” Sept. “Let not him that girdeth, (H.) or is bound,” (Heb.) or rather “shuteth up, boast, as he that openeth.” Syriae. It is easy to besiege; but the city does not always fall. Neither people in arms, nor the unarmed, have reason to boast; as the former are often made prisoners as soon as the latter. C.—A despised enemy sometimes proves most dangerous. H.—Those who distrust in themselves, and place their confidence in God, prevail: a necessary lesson both in temporal and spiritual warfare. W.

14 And Achab said: By whom? And he said to him: Thus saith the Lord: By the servants of the princes of the provinces. And he said: Who shall begin to fight? And he said: Thou.

15 So he mustered the servants of the princes of the provinces, and he found the number of two hundred and thirty-two: and he mustered after them the people, all the children of Israel, seven thousand:

16 And they went out at noon. But Benadad was drinking himself drunk in his pavilion, and the two and thirty kings with him, who were come to help him.

17 And the servants of the princes of the provinces went out first. And Benadad sent. And they told him, saying: There are men come out of Samaria.

18 And he said: Whether they come for peace, take them alive: or whether they come to fight, take them alive.

19 So the servants of the princes of the provinces went out, and the rest of the army followed:

20 And every one slew the man that came against him: and the Syrians fled, and Israel pursued after them. And Benadad, king of Syria, fled away on horseback with his horsemen.

21 But the king of Israel going out overthrew the horses and chariots, and slew the Syrians with a great slaughter.

22 (And a prophet coming to the king of Israel, said to him: Go, and strengthen thyself, and know, and see what thou dost: for the next year the king of Syria will come up against thee.)

23 But the servants of the king of Syria said to him: Their gods are gods of the hills, therefore they have overcome us: but it is better that we should fight against them in the plains, and we shall overcome them.

24 Do thou, therefore, this thing: Remove all the kings from thy army, and put captains in their stead:

25 And make up the number of soldiers that have been slain of thine, and horses, according to the former horses, and chariots, according to the chariots which thou hadst before: and we will fight against them in the plains, and thou shalt see that we shall overcome them. He believed their counsel, and did so.

Heb. “set, and they set against the city.” Chal. “hold yourselves in readiness, and they laid ambushes round the city.” The siege had not been yet commenced in form, as it was never expected that Achab would dare to make any resistance.

VER. 13. Prophet. It does not appear who this and the other prophets were who address Achab so boldly during these wars; if indeed they were different persons: Elias is never mentioned. Did Jezebel leave the rest alone? or did these wars break out before she began to persecute them? C.

VER. 18. Alive. This he said out of contempt, and too great confidence (M.); and this gave occasion to his defeat. For, while his men were endeavouring to execute his orders punctually, the Israelites cut many in pieces, and routed the rest. Salien.

VER. 23. Hills. All the high places of Israel were covered with idols. Samaria, Bethel, Dan, &c., were built on eminences. M.—Altars had also been erected to the true God on the most famous mountains. The law had been given at Sinai, and promulgated at Garizim. The late miracle at Carmel was known to all. Hence the pagans, (C.) conformably to their notions of assigning different parts of the creation to different gods, suspected that the God of Israel might preside only over the mountains. H.

VER. 26. Aphec, belonging to the tribe of Aser, though it does not appear that they ever obtained possession of it. Jos. xix. 30. A subterraneous fire and earthquake have caused the city to sink; and a lake, nine miles in circumference, now occupies its place. The ruins may still be discerned in its waters. It is mustered the Syrians, and went up to Aphec, to fight against Israel.

27 And the children of Israel were mustered, and taking victuals, went out on the other side, and encamped over against them, like two little flocks of goats: but the Syrians filled the land.

28 (And a man of God coming, said to the king of Israel: Thus saith the Lord: Because the Syrians have said: The Lord is God of the hills, but is not God of the valleys: I will deliver all this great multitude into thy hand, and you shall know that I am the Lord.)

29 And both sides set their armies in array one against the other seven days, and on the seventh day the battle was fought: and the children of Israel slew, of the Syrians, a hundred thousand footmen in one day.

30 And they that remained fled to Aphec, into the city: and the wall fell upon seven and twenty thousand men, that were left. And Benadad fleeing, went into the city, into a chamber, that was within a chamber.

31 And his servants said to him: Behold, we have heard that the kings of the house of Israel are merciful: so let us put sackcloths on our loins, and ropes on our heads, and go out to the king of Israel: perhaps he will save our lives.

32 So they girded sackcloths on their loins, and put ropes on their heads, and came to the king of Israel, and said to him: Thy servant, Benadad, saith: I beseech thee let me have my life. And he said: If he be yet alive, he is my brother.

33 The men took this for good luck: and in haste caught the word out of his mouth, and said: thy brother, Benadad. And he said to them: Go, and bring him to me. Then Benadad came out to him, and he lifted him up into his chariot.

34 And he said to him: The cities which my father took from thy father, I will restore: and do thou make thee streets in Damascus, as my father made in Samaria, and having made a league, I will depart from thee. So he made a league with him, and let him go.

35 Then a certain man of the sons of the prophets, said to his companion, in the word of the Lord: Strike me. But he would not strike.

VER. 30. Went, or had gone before, and commanded his men to defend the walls of Aphec. H.—But the slaughter of these 27,000 is joined to the preceding. Benadad does not appear to have complied with these 36 Then he said to him: Because thou wouldst not hearken to the word of the Lord, behold thou shalt depart from me, and a lion shall slay thee. And when he was gone a little from him, a lion found him, and slew him.

37 Then he found another man, and said to him: Strike me. And he struck him and wounded him.

38 So the prophet went, and met the king in the way, and disguised himself by sprinkling dust on his face and his eyes.

39 And as the king passed by, he cried to the king, and said: Thy servant went out to fight hand to hand: and when a certain man was run away, one brought him to me, and said: Keep this man: and if he shall slip away, thy life shall be for his life, or thou shalt pay a talent of silver.

40 And whilst I, in the hurry, turned this way and that, on a sudden he was not to be seen. And the king of Israel said to him: This is thy judgment, which thyself hast decreed.

41 But he forthwith wiped off the dust from his face, and the king of Israel knew him, that he was one of the prophets.

42 And he said to him: Thus saith the Lord: * Because thou hast let go out of thy hand a man worthy of death, thy life shall be for his life, and thy people for his people.

43 And the king of Israel returned to his house, slighting to hear, and raging came into Samaria.

Naboth, for denying his vineyard to king Achab, is, by Jezabel's command falsely accused and stoned to death: for which crime Elias denounceth to Achab the judgments of God. Upon his humbling himself, the sentence is mitigated.

AND ^bafter these things, Naboth, the Jezrahelite, who was in Jezrahel, had at that time a vineyard, near the palace of Achab, king of Samaria.

2 And Achab spoke to Naboth, saying: Give me thy vineyard, that I may make me a garden of herbs, because it is nigh, and adjoining to my house; and I will give thee for it a better vineyard: or if thou think it more convenient for thee, I will give thee the worth of it in money.

Heb., Chal., &c. place this after vineyard, and read which, referring it to the ground; which we might naturally suppose would be the place of Naboth's nativity, as it was his paternal estate, 4 Kings ix. 21. 3 Naboth answered him : The Lord be merciful to me, and not let me give thee the inheritance of my fathers.

4 And Achab came into his house angry and fretting, because of the word that Naboth, the Jezrahelite, had spoken to him, saying : I will not give thee the inheritance of my fathers. And casting himself upon his bed, he turned away his face to the wall, and would eat no bread.

5 And Jezabel, his wife, went in to him, and said to him : What is the matter that thy soul is so grieved ? and why eatest thou no bread ?

6 And he answered her : I spoke to Naboth, the Jezrahelite, and said to him : Give me thy vineyard, and take money for it : or if it please thee, I will give thee a better vineyard for it. And he said : I will not give thee my vineyard.

7 Then Jezabel, his wife, said to him : Thou art of great authority indeed, and governest well the kingdom of Israel. Arise, and eat bread, and be of good cheer ; I will give thee the vineyard of Naboth, the Jezrahelite.

8 So she wrote letters in Achab's name, and sealed them with his ring, and sent them to the ancients, and the chief men that were in his city, and that dwelt with Naboth.

9 And this was the tenor of the letters : Proclaim a fast, and make Naboth sit among the chief of the people ;

10 And suborn two men, sons of Belial, against him, and let them bear false witness ; that he hath blasphemed God and the king : and then carry him out, and stone him, and so let him die.

11 And the men of his city, the ancients and nobles, that dwelt with him in the city, did as Jezabel had commanded them : and as it was written in the letters which she had sent to them ;

12 They proclaimed a fast, and made Naboth sit among the chief of the people.

13 And bringing two men, sons of the devil, they made them sit against him : and they, like men of the devil, bore witness against him before the people : saying : Naboth hath blasphemed God and the king. Wherefore they brought him forth without the city, and stoned him to death.

14 And they sent to Jezabel, saying : Naboth is stoned, and is dead.

15 And it came to pass, when Jezabel heard that Naboth was stoned, and dead, that she said to Achab : Arise, and take possession of the vineyard of Naboth, the Jezrahelite, who would not agree with thee, and give it thee for money : for Naboth is not alive, but dead.

16 And when Achab heard this, to wit, that Naboth was dead, he arose, and went down into the vineyard of Naboth, the Jezrahelite, to take possession of it.

17 And the word of the Lord came to Elias, the Thesbite, saying :

18 Arise, and go down to meet Achab, king of Israel, who is in Samaria : behold he is going down to the vineyard of Naboth, to take possession of it :

19 And thou shalt speak to him, saying : Thus saith the Lord : Thou hast slain : moreover also thou hast taken possession. And after these words thou shalt add : Thus saith the Lord : "In this place, wherein the dogs have licked the blood of Naboth, they shall lick thy blood also."

20 And Achab said to Elias : Hast thou found me thy enemy ? He said : I have found thee, because thou art sold to do evil in the sight of the Lord.

21 "Behold I will bring evil upon thee, and I will cut down thy posterity, and I will kill of Achab him that pisseth against the wall, and him that is shut up, and the last in Israel."

22 And I will make thy house like the house of Jeroboam, the son of Nabat, and like the house of Baasa, the son of Abias : for what thou hast done to provoke me to anger, and for making Israel to sin.

The Syrians delight in seeing gardens filled with melons, onions, &c., and they cannot conceive what pleasure we can find in rambling round our long walks for the sake of exercise.—Money. Hence we perceive that, notwithstanding the despotic power of the kings of Israel, they did not imagine that they had a right to take their subjects' lands. 1 Kings viii. 14. C.

VER. 3. Fathers. He would have deemed it a mark of disrespect and a crime, as he was not in a state of indigence ; which alone could authorize him to sell his property, and then only till the year of jubilee (Lev. xxv. 23) : and as his field was to be turned into a royal garden, and the law was disregarded by the king, there was no prospect of his regaining it at that period. The law of Moses was still in force ; and there were some, like Naboth, who were resolved to comply with it, (C.) even at the hazard of their lives. T.

VER. 9. Fast, as in a case of the greatest importance, where the welfare of the king and of the state are concerned. We have frequent mention of such extraordinary fasts. 2 Par. xx. 3 ; 1 Esd. viii. 21 ; Joel i. 14, &c. Some would translate, "Call an assembly." Vatab.—But the Chal., &c. are for the fast.

VER. 10. Belial, without restraint or conscience.—Blasphemed. Heb. "blessed."—Alein, (H.) or god, the gods, magistrates, &c. C.—Blessing is equally put, to avoid the horrible sound of blaspheming. W. Job i. 5, and ii. 9.—Martin de Ron (i. 9) maintains that the word implies to "bid adieu," or quit ; as if Naboth had relinquished the service both of God and of the king. He was accused as a traitor. The law did not condemn the person to death who had spoken ill of the prince. Exod. xxii. 28. But the wicked judges complied with the intimation of Jezabel (C.), as she pretended that he had also blasphemed God. H.—All Naboth's family were involved in his ruin (4 Kings ix. 26. T.) ; as it was necessary for Achab's purpose.

VER. 13. Devil. Heb. Belial, ver. 10. Prot. "and the men of Belial witnessed against him."—City, as was requisite. C.—Stoned him, for blasphemy. Lev. xxiv. 16, and 23.

VER. 16. Of it, on the title of confiscation, as Naboth had been condemned for high treason (see 2 Kings ix. 7. M.) ; or because there was no heir left, ver. 10. Achab only waited one day, and then Elias met him to denounce to him a similar fate after he was dead. 4 Kings ix. 26. Sept. have, "he tore his garments, and put on sackcloth : and it came to pass afterwards, that Achab arose," &c. This addition would intimate that the king pretended to be sorry. They repeat the same thing, ver. 27, "he had put on sackcloth, on the day when he slew Naboth, and went along cast down." It is probable that Achab might assume this garb to make people suppose that he had no hand in the death of Naboth ; but this was all hypocrisy, and Elias boldly accused him of guilt. Thou hast slain, &c., ver. 19. H.—He knew, at least, of his wife's machinations. Salicn.

VER. 19. Possession, by desire ; though he was yet only on the road. M.—Perhaps he had sent his servants before. H.—Place, not precisely, as Achab was slain in Samaria. M.—But Naboth's vineyard, perhaps, was not far distant from the pool, where dogs licked the blood of the king. H.—On account of Achab's repentance the sentence was (ver. 20. C.) rather changed, and his son Joram was substituted in his stead. 4 Kings ix. 25. H.

VER. 20. Thy enemy. Have I done thee any harm, whenever thou hast appeared before me ? Heb. and Sept. "O my enemy." H.—To find, often means to attack or take by surprise. Art thou come thus, to fall upon me on the road ? C.—Sold. That is, so addicted to evil, as if thou hadst sold thyself to the devil, to be his slave to work all kind of evil. Ch. W. S. Greg. in Ezec. hom. 10.—The expression strongly marks the empire of the passions. Achab was sovereignly wicked, without any restraint. C.—Sold, or "abandoned," are used in the same sense. Psal. xliii. 13.

23 *And of Jezabel also, the Lord spoke, saying: The dogs shall eat Jezabel in the field of Jezrahel.

24 If Achab die in the city, the dogs shall eat him: but if he die in the field, the birds of the air shall eat him.

25 Now, there was not such another as Achab, who was sold to do evil in the sight of the Lord: for his wife, Jezabel, set him on.

26 And he became abominable, insomuch that he followed the idols which the Amorrhites had made, whom the Lord destroyed before the face of the children of Israel.

27 And when Achab had heard these words, he rent his garments, and put hair-cloth upon his flesh, and fasted, and slept in sackcloth, and walked with his head cast down.

28 And the word of the Lord came to Elias, the Thesbite, saying:

29 Hast thou not seen Achab humbled before me? therefore, because he hath humbled himself, for my sake, I will not bring the evil in his days,^b but in his son's days will I bring the evil upon his house.

Some believe that it was insincere, and only external. H. Others suppose that Achab really repented for what he had done, but presently relapsed at the instigation of Jezabel; though S. CHAP. XXII. VER. 1. Israel, from the time when Benadad and Achab had made a league. Chap. xx. 34.

VER. 2. Josaphat. It is wonderful that a prince of so great piety should be on terms of such strict friendship with a most wicked king. God did not approve about four hundred men, and he said to them: Shall I go to Ramoth-Galaad to fight, or shall I forbear? They answered: Go up, and the Lord will deliver it into the hand of the king.

7 And Josaphat said: Is there not here some prophet of the Lord, that we may inquire by him?

8 And the king of Israel said to Josaphat: There is one man left, by whom we may inquire of the Lord; Micheas, the son of Jemla: but I hate him, for he doth not prophesy good to me, but evil. And Josaphat said: Speak not so, O king.

9 Then the king of Israel called an eunuch, and said to him: Make haste, and bring hither Micheas, the son of Jemla.

10 And the king of Israel, and Josaphat, king of Juda, sat each on his throne, clothed with royal robes, in a court, by the entrance of the gate of Samaria, and all the prophets prophesied before them.

11 And Sedecias, the son of Chanaana, made himself horns of iron, and said: Thus saith the Lord: With these shalt thou push Syria, till thou destroy it.

12 And all the prophets prophesied in like manner, saying: Go up to Ramoth-Galaad, and prosper, for the Lord will deliver it into the king's hands.

13 And the messenger that went to call Micheas, spoke to him, saying: Behold the words of the prophets with one mouth declare good things to the king: let thy word, therefore, be like to theirs, and speak that which is good.

14 But Micheas said to him: As the Lord liveth, whatsoever the Lord shall say to me, that will I speak.

15 So he came to the king, and the king said to him: Micheas, shall we go to Ramoth-Galaad to battle, or shall we forbear? He answered him: Go up, and prosper, and the Lord shall deliver it into the king's hands.

16 But the king said to him: I adjure thee again and again, that thou tell me nothing but that which is true, in the name of the Lord.

21 And there came forth a spirit, and stood before the Lord, and said: I will deceive him. And the Lord said to him: By what means?

22 And he said: I will go forth, and be a lying spirit, in the mouth of all his prophets. And the Lord said: Thou shalt deceive him, and shalt prevail: go forth, and do so.

23 Now, therefore, behold the Lord hath given a lying spirit, in the mouth of all thy prophets that are here, and the Lord hath spoken evil against thee.

24 And Sedecias, the son of Chanaana, came, and struck Micheas on the cheek, and said: Hath then the spirit of the Lord left me, and spoken to thee?

25 And Micheas said: Thou shalt see, in the day when thou shalt go into a chamber, within a chamber, to hide thyself.

26 And the king of Israel said: Take Micheas, and let him abide with Amon, the governor of the city, and with Joas, the son of Amalech;

27 And tell them: Thus saith the king: Put this man in prison, and feed him with bread of affliction, and water of distress, till I return in peace.

VER. 19. He, Micheas, added, (M.) not fearing the king's displeasure, who seemed to regard his former denunciation as an effect of his ill-will. Hence he explains his vision more at large.

VER. 20. The Lord said, &c. God standeth not in need of any counsellor; nor are we to suppose that things pass in heaven in the manner here described; but this representation was made to the prophet, to be delivered by him in a manner adapted to the common ways and notions of men. Ch. S. Greg. Mor. ii. 21, &c. W.

VER. 22. Go forth, and do so. This was not a command, but a permission; for God never ordaineth lies, though he often permiteth the lying spirit to deceive those who love not the truth. 2 Thess. ii. 10. And in this sense it is said, in the following verse, The Lord hath given a lying spirit in the mouth of all thy prophets. Ch.—What is translated in the imperative, denotes frequently what will come to pass, though it be displeasing to God. C.—He permits it, therefore, only by not exerting his power to prevent the execution. H.—The devils can do nothing without such a permission. Achab deserved to be deceived by the false prophets, as he would not hearken to a true one. S. Aug. con. Jul. v. 4, and q. 63. inter. 83.

VER. 25. Go into a chamber, &c. This happened when he heard the king was slain, and justly apprehended that he should be punished for his false prophecy (Ch.); though this be no where recorded, (C.) except in Josephus. W.—He probably escaped death. Salien.

VER. 27. Distress, both "in small quantity," (Paral.,) and very bad. Grot. T. Isa. xxx. 20.—Peace, when I will punish thee, as an impostor. M.—How grating must this have been to the good king Josaphat; and still he does not abandon the company of such infatuated people! Ver. 29. 11.

VER. 30. Thy own. Sept. "I will disguise myself, and go into the battle; and do thou put on my garment." Hence the Syrians mistook Josaphat for Achab, (ver. 32. C.) as "it had been agreed between them, that he should wear the robes of Achab, to elude more easily the prediction of Micheas." Joseph. viii. 15.—Vain and impious attempt! Providence found him out, though unadorned.

29 So the king of all Israel, and Josaphat, king of Juda, went up to Ramoth-Galaad.

30 And the king of Israel said to Josaphat: Take thy armour, and go into the battle, and put on thy own garments. But the king of Israel changed his dress, and went into the battle.

31 And the king of Syria had commanded the two and thirty captains of the chariots, saying: You shall not fight against any, small or great, but against the king of Israel only.

32 So when the captains of the chariots saw Josaphat, they suspected that he was the king of Israel, and making a violent assault, they fought against him: and Josaphat cried out.

33 And the captains of the chariots perceived that he was not the king of Israel, and they turned away from him.

34 And a certain man bent his bow, shooting at a venture, and chanced to strike the king of Israel, between the lungs and the stomach. But he said to the driver of his chariot: Turn thy hand, and carry me out of the army, for I am grievously wounded.

35 And the battle was fought that day, and the king of Israel stood in his chariot against the Syrians, and he died in the evening: and the blood ran out of the wound into the midst of the chariot.

36 And the herald proclaimed through all the army, before the sun set, saying: Let every man return to his own city, and to his own country.

37 And the king died, and was carried into Samaria: and they buried the king in Samaria.

38 And they washed his chariot in the pool of Samaria, and the dogs licked up his blood, and they washed the reins according to the word of the Lord which he had spoken.

39 But the rest of the acts of Achab, and all that he did, and the house of ivory that he made, and all the cities that he built, are they not written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Israel?

b A. M. 3107.—c Supra, xxi. 19.

H.—Achab might pretend thus to honour the king of Juda (M.); and perhaps he had been apprized of the order given to the Syrians, to single him out, ver. 31. What could prompt such an order cannot be easily ascertained.

VER. 31. Captains of, or mounted "on chariots." There would hardly be so many general officers over the chariots alone. The same number of kings had been in a former engagement, and they had been replaced by these captains. Chap. xx. 24. C.—Only. Not that the Syrians were to avoid hurting anybody else, as they could not thus come at the king (Salien); and we find one shot an arrow at the army of Israel (ver. 34. H.); but the main onset was to be directed against Achab, either to kill or to take him prisoner. M.

VER. 32. Cried out. Par. add, to the Lord, and he helped him, and turned them away from him. The Jews (in Seder. Olam 17) acknowledge the same thing; and thus it was known that Josaphat was not the king of Israel, who would rather have invoked Baal. M.

VER. 34. Stomach. Par. between the neck and the shoulders. The arrow went in at the lungs, and came out at the shoulders, as it was shot from a lower ground. M.—Some explain the Heb. "between the joints and the coat of mail." Prot. "joints of the harness." Sept. "between the lungs and the thorax." H.—Syr. "between the juncture of the coat of mail," where it is connected with the armour of the thighs. Grot.—God directed the random shot. Salien. W.

VER. 35. Evening. Achab had only retired to the hinder ranks, while Josaphat, by his valour, maintained the day, till the death of the former put an end to the war.

VER. 38. Of Samaria. Josephus says, of Jezara, (Jezrahel,) conformably to the prediction. But God had relented in that particular, on Achab's repentance (C. Chap. xxi. 24, 25); unless it regarded his son Joram. H. Salien.—Reins. Heb. zone, may also signify "arms," (Munster,) and "harlots." Sept. Some suspect that such were painted upon the chariot. Josephus intimates, with the Sept., that "harlots bathed in the blood," (Ant. viii. 15,) which would tend to the greater contempt of Achab. M.—Spoken, respecting dogs licking up Achab's blood. No mention had been made of the chariot. God was thus pleased to show how easily he could have executed the sentence in all its rigour.

40 So Achab slept with his fathers; and Ochozias, his son, reigned in his stead.

41 But Josaphat, the son of Asa, began to reign over Juda, in the fourth year^a of Achab, king of Israel.

42 He was five and thirty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned five and twenty years in Jerusalem: the name of his mother was Azuba, the daughter of Salai.

43 And he walked in all the way of Asa, his father, and he declined not from it: and he did that which was right in the sight of the Lord.

44 Nevertheless, he took not away the high places: for as yet the people offered sacrifices, and burnt incense in the high places.

45 And Josaphat had peace with the king of Israel.

46 But the rest of the acts of Josaphat, and his works which he did, and his battles, are they not written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Juda?

47 And the remnant also of the effeminate, who remained in the days of Asa, his father, he took out of the land.

^a A. M. 3090, A. C. 914.—^b A. M. 3108.

VER. 44. He took not away, &c. He left some of the high places, viz. those in which they worshipped the true God; but took away all others, 2 Par. xvii. 6 (Ch.); and even those also, before the end of his reign (C.); as they were contrary to the law. M.

VER. 45. Israel. The five subsequent verses are omitted in the Rom. Sept.

VER. 48. Edom. Heb. and Chal. "but a deputy king," or viceroy (T.); so that the kings of Juda might equip fleets at Asiongaber, as the country of Idumea was subject to them ever since the time of David. 2 Par. viii. 17.

VER. 50. Would not. He had been reprehended before for admitting such a partner: and therefore would have no more to do with him. Ch.—They had 48 And there was then no king appointed in Edom.

49 But king Josaphat made navies on the sea, ^bto sail into Ophir for gold: but they could not go, ^cfor the ships were broken in Asiongaber.

50 Then Ochozias, the son of Achab, said to Josaphat: Let my servants go with thy servants in the ships. And Josaphat would not.

51 And ^dJosaphat slept with his fathers, and was buried with them in the city of David, his father: and Joram, his son, reigned in his stead.

52 And Ochozias, the son of Achab, began to reign over Israel, in Samaria, in the seventeenth year of^e Josaphat, king of Juda, and he reigned over Israel two years.

53 And he did evil in the sight of the Lord, and walked in the way of his father and his mother, and in the way of Jeroboam, the son of Nabat, who made Israel to sin.

54 He served also Baal, and worshipped him, and provoked the Lord, the God of Israel, according to all that his father had done.

formerly joined in equipping such a fleet, (2 Par. xx. 36, and 37. C.) and it had been dashed to pieces in the very port. H.

VER. 52. Years, not complete as the first is comprised in the reign of Achab, and the last in that of Joram. 4 Kings iii. 1. Usher, A. 3108.—Yet his very short reign was memorable for many disasters; the revolt of the dependent king of Moab, the ruin of his navy, &c., that he might thus be reclaimed from his evil ways. Salien, A. C. 915.—Houbigant allows this king two full years; and rejects the notion of his being associated by his father, as he does on other similar occasions, where the Scripture is silent. He makes Ochozias commence in the nineteenth, and end in the twenty-second of Josaphat, and not in the second of Joram 4 Kings i. 17. The Heb. and Greek copies vary. H.

FOURTH BOOK OF KINGS.

This Book brings us to the conclusion of the kingdom of Israel, (chap. xvii.) and to the captivity of Juda, at Babylon. Chap. xxv. We behold some virtuous princes reigning over the two tribes, while the ten were uniformly governed by men of perverse morals. W.—Yet there were some who adhered to the Lord in both kingdoms. David and his descendants (H.) occupy the throne near 480 years; and, after the captivity, continue in some degree of honour till the coming of Christ. W.—But various families rule over Israel; some by usurpation, (H.) others by God's appointment: who thus chooses to chastise the wicked. He still watches over his Church, and sends his prophets for the instruction of all. W.—We have inquired in the preface to the former Book who composed this. H.—The kingdom of Israel subsists about 250, (W.) or 254 years. This Book contains the transactions of 308 years. C.—But the chronology is extremely perplexed. To the sixth year of Ezechias, when Israel was led away captive, the kingdom of Juda seems to have lasted 260, and that of Israel only 241 years, though they both commenced at the same period. The errors regard the kings of Israel, according to Houbigant, who would assign the following years to the respective kings of Juda and of Israel. I. Of Juda: Solomon, 40; Roboam, 17; Abiam, 3; Asa, 41; Josaphat, 25; Joram, 8; Ochozias, 1; (the same is said to have begun to reign in the preceding year, the 11th of Joram, 4 Kings ix. 29, incorrectly;) Athalia, 6; Joas, 40; Amasias, 29; (he reigns 15 after the death of Joas, king of Israel;) Azarias, 52; Joathan, 16; Achaz, 16; Ezechias, 6; in which year, the 300th from the commencement of Solomon's reign, and the 260th of the kingdom of Juda, Samaria was taken. II. The kings of Israel: Jeroboam, 22; Nadab, 2; Baasa, 24; Ela, 2; Zambri, 7 days; Amri, 12; Achab, 22; Ochozias, 2; Joram, 12; Jehu, 28; Joachaz, 17; Joas, 16; Jeroboam, 41; Zacharias, 10; (in the text 10 is omitted. H.); Sellum, 1 month; Manahem, 10; Phacee, 2; Phacee, 30 (in the text, 20. H.); Osce, 9; in all, 261½ years, (Houbig. Chron. Sac.) or 261 years and 7 months. The variation of 19 months, which still appears, may be owing to some of the years being incomplete. H.—III. After a reign of 28 years over Juda, Ezechias is succeeded by Manasses, who reigns 55; Amon, 2; Josias, 31; Joachaz, a few months; Eliacim, or Joakim, 11; Joachin, Conias, or Jeebonias, had reigned 10 years with his father. After 3 months and 10 days reigning alone, he is led away to Babylon with part of the people. Matthanias, or Sedecias, is appointed in his stead; but proving refractory, is also, after 9 years, deprived of his sight, and conducted, with 832 of his subjects, to Babylon. Nabuchodonosor had already led away 3023, under Joakim. After the death of Godolias, who was left to govern the miserable remains of the people, A. 3417, he made 745 more captives, and thus an end was put to the kingdom of Juda. The scourge had been retarded for some time, by the repentance of Manasses, and the prayers of the prophets. C.

CHAPTER I.

Ochozias sendeth to consult Beelzebub: Elias foretelleth his death: and causeth fire to come down from heaven, upon two captains and their companies.

AND Moab rebelled against Israel, after the death of Achab.^a

^a A. M. 3108, A. C. 896.

CHAP. I. VER. 1. Rebelleth: lit. "prevaricated." H.—The kings of Israel kept some of the nations, which David had conquered, in subjection, while the kings of Juda ruled over the others. In consequence of the late disaster these people began to throw off the yoke. T.—Joram made war upon Moab. Chap. iii. 5. God began to punish the house of Achab by these means. C.

2 And Ochozias fell through the lattices of his upper chamber, which he had in Samaria, and was sick: and he sent messengers, saying to them: Go, consult Beelzebub, the god of Accaron, whether I shall recover of this my illness.

VER. 2. Lattices, by a skylight, (H.) or trap-door, designed to give light to bite, saying: Arise, and go up to meet the messengers of the king of Samaria, and say to them: Is there not a God in Israel, that ye go to consult Beelzebub, the god of Accaron?

4 Wherefore thus saith the Lord: From the bed, on which thou art gone up, thou shalt not come down, but thou shalt surely die. And Elias went away.

5 And the messengers turned back to Ochozias. And he said to them: Why are you come back?

6 But they answered him: A man met us, and said to us: Go, and return to the king, that sent you, and you shall say to him: Thus saith the Lord: Is it because there was no God in Israel, that thou sendest to Beelzebub, the god of Accaron? Therefore thou shalt not come down from the bed, on which thou art gone up, but thou shalt surely die.

7 And he said to them: What manner of man was he who met you, and spoke these words?

8 But they said: A hairy man, with a girdle of leather about his loins. And he said: It is Elias, the Thesbite.

9 And he sent to him a captain of fifty, and the fifty men that were under him. And he went up to him, and as he was sitting on the top of a hill, he said to him: Man of God, the king hath commanded that thou come down.

10 And Elias answering, said to the captain of fifty: If I be a man of God, let fire come down from heaven and consume thee, and thy fifty. And there came down fire from heaven and consumed him, and the fifty that were with him.

11 And he again sent to him another captain of fifty men, and his fifty with him. And he said to him: Man of God: Thus saith the king: Make haste and come down.

the room below, into which the king fell. The roofs are generally flat in the East, and covered with earth mixed with straw, with the light at the top, to prevent the excessive heats.—Of. Heb., &c., "into." C.—If the lattices be understood to mean the rails, which were ordered to be placed round the roof, (Deut. xxii. 8,) Ochozias might fall into the street. M.—Josephus thinks he fell from the staircase. At any rate he was much hurt, (H.) and thus was made to feel the indignation of God. T.—God. Sept. "Baal, the god-fly" (C.); the Jupiter of the Greeks, or their chief god; and the prince of devils. Matt. xii.—Accaron. He was supposed to free the people of the country from being infested with flies; or the many victims offered up to him drew those insects together. Vatable.

VER. 5. Messengers. They were perhaps citizens of Accaron, who had extolled the sagacity of their god, but were totally unacquainted with Elias. Yet as he showed his knowledge of secret things, by telling them what they were going about, (Salien,) and spoke with such assurance, (H.) they thought proper to return, lest they should incur a similar punishment. M.

VER. 8. Man. Heb. aiss Bāl sar, "a man lord of hair," or all covered with it, having a long beard, like the ancient sages, (S. Jer. in Ezech. xxxv.,) and clothed with a skin, (Bochart,) as the first inhabitants of the earth, the heroes, prophets, and S. John Baptist, are described. Heb. xi. 37; Matt. iii. 4. C.—Elias. He was known by his long hair and distinct garment, from ordinary men. W.

VER. 9. Under him; his own guards. The captain was to request him to pray for the king's recovery (C.); or rather (H.) to punish him for what he had said to the messengers. C.—Of God. Procopius and others think that he spoke contemptuously, and was therefore punished. M.—Down. The prophets are not bound to obey kings in the exercise of their ministry. Grotius.—Elias complies as soon as he had orders from God. C.

VER. 10. Let fire, &c. Elias was inspired to call down fire from heaven upon these captains, who came to apprehend him; not out of a desire to gratify any private passion, but to punish the insult offered to religion, to confirm his mission, and to show how vain are the efforts of men against God and his servants, whom he has a mind to protect. Ch.—Elias acted as God's envoy, and the insult reverted upon him. S. Tho. ii. 2, q. 108, a. 2.—The Manichæes have blamed the conduct of the prophet: but the miracle justifies him, as God would never countenance the private revenge of any one; and the Holy Ghost places this transaction on a level with that when Elias shut up the heavens. Eccli. xlviii. 3. S. Peter was moved with the like zeal. Acts v. 5.

VER. 11. Another not knowing what was become of the first, or why he did 12 Elias answering, said: If I be a man of God, let fire come down from heaven, and consume thee, and thy fifty. And fire came down from heaven, and consumed him and his fifty.

13 Again he sent a third captain of fifty men, and the fifty that were with him. And when he was come, he fell upon his knees before Elias, and besought him, and said: Man of God, despise not my life, and the lives of thy servants that are with me.

14 Behold fire came down from heaven, and consumed the two first captains of fifty men, and the fifties that were with them: but now I beseech thee to spare my life.

15 And the angel of the Lord spoke to Elias, saying. Go down with him, fear not. He arose therefore, and went down with him to the king,

16 And said to him: Thus saith the Lord: Because thou hast sent messengers to consult Beelzebub, the God of Accaron, as though there were not a God in Israel, of whom thou mightest inquire the word; therefore, from the bed on which thou art gone up, thou shalt not come down, but thou shalt surely die.

17 So he died, according to the word of the Lord, which Elias spoke; and Joram, his brother, reigned in his stead, in the second year of Joram, the son of Josaphat, king of Juda, because he had no son.

18 But the rest of the acts of Ochozias, which he did, are they not written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Israel?

CHAP. II.

Eliseus will not part from Elias. The water of the Jordan is divided by Elias's cloak. Elias is taken up in a fiery chariot, and his double spirit is given to Eliseus. Eliseus healeth the waters by casting in salt. Boys are torn by bears, for mocking Eliseus.

not return; as Ochozias was eager to have the prophet in his power. M.—If he were acquainted with his fate, (H.) this second captain was guilty of greater insolence.

VER. 17. The second year of Joram, &c., counted from the time that he was associated to the throne by his father Josaphat (Ch.); so that it is said that he reigned also in the 18th year of Josaphat. Chap. iii. 1. See also chap. viii. 16. To obviate these apparent contradictions, chronologists suppose that Joram reigned over Israel in the 18th of Josaphat, king of Juda, and in the second year after the latter had appointed his son Joram viceroy. He was associated with his father on the throne two years before his death, and in the 5th of Joram, king of Israel. Examples of this kind are frequent among the Hebrews, and particularly among the Persians, whose chronology is thus rendered very difficult. Why should we allow that the numbers are erroneous, when this explanation will suffice? C.—Grotius leaves the matter undecided. D.—Capel (Crit. p. 414) maintains that the numbers have been ill transcribed; and so does Houbigant, who asserts that such a mode of writing would not be tolerable in a profane author; thus to mention different dates, without intimating how they are to be reconciled. If we should read that Heraclius began to reign "in the 18th year of Chosroes," and a little after that he ascended the throne "in the second year of the son of Chosroes," without ever specifying how Heraclius began his reign at two different periods, who would not suspect a mistake? Is it not more rational to throw the blame on the transcriber, than on the author? The modern chronologists seem to have invented the idea of viceroys and simultaneous kings among the Hebrews merely to get over difficulties; though the Scripture be entirely silent on this head. Houbigant would therefore read, "in the 22nd year of Josaphat," as the mention of Joram seems here improper, (absurda.) his father reigning 25 years. Ochozias began to reign when Josaphat had almost completed his 17th year. See 3 Kings xxii. 52. H.—His brother is not specified in Heb., Chal., Arab., and in some copies of the Sept., but it is in most others, as well as in the Syriac, (C.) Josephus, &c. (H.); and this is the common opinion. The Roman edition here inserts (C.) after Elias spoke, (18) "And the, &c. . . and Joram," &c., nearly as chap. iii. 1—3; only for father it substitutes, "not like his brothers;" and adds, "the wrath of the Lord was enkindled against the house of Achab." No mention is made of the second year of Joram, &c. (H.) in any edition of the Sept. Capel.—In the mean time Josaphat, being returned from the unfortunate expedition with Achab, set his kingdom in order, purifying it from all the vestiges of idolatry, as much as he was able, and appointing proper judges. 2 Par. xix.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. Heaven. By heaven here is meant, the air, the lowest

AND it came to pass, when the Lord would take up Elias, into heaven, by a whirlwind,* that Elias and Eliseus were going from Galgal.

2 And Elias said to Eliseus: Stay thou here, because the Lord hath sent me as far as Bethel. And Eliseus said to him: As the Lord liveth, and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee. And when they were come down to Bethel,

3 The sons of the prophets, that were at Bethel, came forth to Eliseus, and said to him: Dost thou know that, this day, the Lord will take away thy master from thee? And he answered: I also know it: hold your peace.

4 And Elias said to Eliseus: Stay here, because the Lord hath sent me to Jericho. And he said: As the Lord liveth, and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee. And when they were come to Jericho,

5 The sons of the prophets, that were at Jericho, came to Eliseus, and said to him: Dost thou know that, this day, the Lord will take away thy master from thee? And he said: I also know it: hold your peace.

6 And Elias said to him: Stay here, because the Lord hath sent me as far as the Jordan. And he said: As the Lord liveth, and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee. And they two went on together.

7 And fifty men, of the sons of the prophets, followed them, and stood in sight, at a distance: but they two stood by the Jordan.

8 And Elias took his mantle, and folded it together, and struck the waters, and they were divided hither and thither, and they both passed over on dry ground.

9 And when they were gone over, Elias said to Eliseus: Ask what thou wilt have me to do for thee, before I be taken away from thee. And Eliseus said: I beseech thee, that in me may be thy double spirit.

10 And he answered: Thou hast asked a hard thing; of the heavenly regions, (Ch.) through which he was carried by the ministry of angels, who directed the storm, (H.) to the place designed for him.—It is generally supposed to be Paradise, (C.) whither Henoch had been translated. W.—Eccli. xlviii. 10. M.—Some suppose it is still in some unknown region of the earth: others place it above the sky, (M.) or in the bosom of Abraham. C.

VER. 3. The sons of the prophets. That is, the disciples of the prophets; who seem to have had their schools, like colleges or communities, in Bethel, Jericho, and other places, in the days of Elias and Eliseus. Ch.—Many of these disciples might be also their children. Elias collected some fervent souls together even at Bethel, to preserve the true religion as much as possible. He visited them before his departure. C.—Peace: let not Elias hear us. H.

VER. 8. Mantle. Sept. μηλωρην, “sheep-skin,” (M.) such as the prophets wore. The Syriac explains it of an ornament or bandage of the head; others, of a leathern mantle to keep off rain.

VER. 9. Double spirit. A double portion of thy spirit, as thy eldest son and heir: or thy spirit, which is double, in comparison of that which God usually imparteth to his prophets (Ch.); or the power of working miracles, as well as of prophesying. W.—He wishes to excel his fellow disciples rather than his master. T. Cajet. Amama.—Double often means, great and perfect. Jer. xvii. 18. If Eliseus even begged that he might perform more and greater wonders than his master, (as Christ enabled his disciples to surpass himself in this particular, John xiv. 12. H.) he might do it without pride, purely for the glory of God. He certainly shone forth with peculiar splendour; and some have enumerated sixteen or twenty-four of his miracles, while they can only find eight (Lyran.) or twelve recorded of Elias. See A. Lapidé, in Eccli. xlviii. 13. C.

VER. 10. Hard thing. Heb. lit. “thou art hardened to ask” a thing so difficult, and which I have not the power to grant. But I will pray that thou mayst receive it (C.); and I feel confident that thou wilt, if God shall grant thee the power to see me at my departure. H.—This he did, ver. 12. M.

VER. 11. Horses. Angels assumed these forms, (Grotius,) or a cloud, resembling a fiery chariot and horses, was impelled by a strong wind, under their guidance. Tostat. M. Salien, A. C. 914.—Heaven, (see ver. 1,) where he lives free from all disturbance. T.—It is a constant belief that he will come again before nevertheless, if thou see me when I am taken from thee, thou shalt have what thou hast asked: but if thou see me not, thou shalt not have it.

11 And as they went on, walking and talking together, behold, a fiery chariot and fiery horses parted them both asunder: and Elias went up by a whirlwind into heaven.

12 And Eliseus saw him, and cried: My father, my father, the chariot of Israel, and the driver thereof. And he saw him no more: and he took hold of his own garments, and rent them in two pieces.

13 And he took up the mantle of Elias, that fell from him: and going back, he stood on the bank of the Jordan;

14 And he struck the waters with the mantle of Elias, that had fallen from him, and they were not divided. And he said: Where is now the God of Elias? And he struck the waters, and they were divided hither and thither, and Eliseus passed over.

15 And the sons of the prophets, at Jericho, who were over against him, seeing it, said: The spirit of Elias hath rested upon Eliseus. And coming to meet him, they worshipped him, falling to the ground,

16 And they said to him: Behold, there are with thy servants, fifty strong men, that can go, and seek thy master, lest, perhaps, the spirit of the Lord, hath taken him up and cast him upon some mountain, or into some valley. And he said: Do not send.

17 But they pressed him, till he consented, and said: Send. And they sent fifty men: and they sought three days, but found him not.

18 And they came back to him: for he abode at Jericho, and he said to them: Did I not say to you? Do not send.

19 And the men of the city said to Eliseus: Behold, the last judgment; as his representative, the Baptist, announced the first appearance of our Redeemer. S. Greg. hom. 7, in Ev. Of this the Jews were convinced. S. Justin, Dial. See Mal. iv. 5.

VER. 12. Thereof. Thou alone wast equal to an army in our defence. Chariots were then very common. C.—Chal. and Vatab. “Thou wast, by thy prayer, better to Israel than chariots and horses.” So we should call a person, a pillar of the state, &c. T.—In giving the character of Elias the Holy Ghost dwells in a particular manner on his burning zeal. C.—Elias stood up as a fire, and his word burnt like a torch . . . he brought down fire from heaven thrice, on the holocaust, and on the captains. H.—Who can glory like to thee? Eccli. xlviii. 1, 4. See SS. Amb. and Chrys. on Elias. His resemblance with Christ is very striking. His name puts us in mind of Christ’s divinity; who burnt with zeal for God’s house, (John ii. 17.) was persecuted, (C.) raised the dead to life, rose again, and ascended triumphant into heaven, having imparted his blessing (H.) and his sacraments to his disciples. C.—No more, as he was taken from the company of men. H.—Pieces, to express his grief at being deprived of so excellent a master. M.

VER. 13. Mantle, as an earnest of his affection. By the imposition of this mantle he had been called to be a prophet. 3 Kings xix. 19.

VER. 14. Not divided. God thus prevented him from giving way to vanity, (Abul. q. 28,) or thinking that he could do any thing of himself. H.—Elias. Heb. “where is he?” C.—The original and Sept. (Alex. and Vat.) do not specify that he struck the waters twice, or that they did not divide at first. H.—This is taken from other copies of the Sept. Amama.—The exclamation contains a most fervent prayer. Heb. “He smote the waters,” and said, “Where is the Lord God of Elias? and when he had stricken thee,” &c., which removes the idea of presumption, which (H.) some discover in the words of Eliseus. T. Sanctius.

VER. 15. They worshipped him; viz. with an inferior, yet religious veneration, not for any temporal, but spiritual excellency. Ch. W.—They had stopped on a hill, (M.) to see the event, ver. 7. H.—Jericho itself is two hours’ journey from the Jordan. Adric.—The sons of the prophets had seen what had happened at the translation of Elias, and perceiving that Eliseus was invested with his mantle, and with the power of working miracles, they did not hesitate to acknowledge him for their superior during the absence of Elias, who they expected would return. C.

VER. 17. Send. He acquiesces, lest they might think that he was afraid of losing his superiority. M.

the situation of this city is very good, as thou, my lord, seest: but the waters are very bad, and the ground barren.

20 And he said: Bring me a new vessel, and put salt into it. And when they had brought it, 21 He went out to the spring of the waters, and cast the salt into it, and said: Thus saith the Lord: I have healed these waters, and there shall be no more in them death or barrenness.

22 And the waters were healed unto this day, according to the word of Eliseus, which he spoke.

23 And he went up from thence to Bethel: and as he was going up by the way, little boys came out of the city and mocked him, saying: Go up, thou bald-head, go up, thou bald-head.

24 And looking back, he saw them, and cursed them in the name of the Lord: and there came forth two bears, out of the forest, and tore of them, two and forty boys.

25 And from thence he went to Mount Carmel, and from thence he returned to Samaria.

CHAP. III.

The kings of Israel, Juda, and Edom, fight against the king of Moab. They want water, which Eliseus procureth without rain; and prophesieth victory. The king of Moab is overthrown: his city is besieged: he sacrificeth his first-born son: so the Israelites raise the siege.

AND Joram, the son of Achab, reigned over Israel, in Samaria, in the eighteenth year of Josaphat, king of Juda. And he reigned twelve years.

2 And he did evil before the Lord, but not like his father and his mother: for he took away the statues of Baal, which his father had made.

3 Nevertheless, he stuck to the sins of Jeroboam, the son of Nabat, who made Israel to sin, nor did he depart from them.

4 Now Messa, king of Moab, nourished many sheep, and he paid to the king of Israel a hundred thousand lambs, and a hundred thousand rams, with their fleeces.

5 And when Achab was dead, he broke the league which he had made with the king of Israel.

• A. M. 3108, A. C. 896.

VER. 19. Barren, owing to the salt or bituminous waters. Some think that they were muddy and of a noisome smell. The fountain is still to be seen, very abundant and excellent, watering the plain on the west of the city. Its source is about two miles distant on the road to Jerusalem. Maundrell, p. 134. C.—Other parts of the environs were very fertile. M.

VER. 20. Put salt. He removes every suspicion of imposture: if the waters were already saline, the remedy would seem contrary to his design, but it would display the miracle in a stronger light. H.

VER. 23. Bald-head. It is not known whether Eliseus was really bald, or only wore his hair short, like the priests of the Lord, and the monks at present.

VER. 24. Cursed them. This curse, which was followed by so visible a judgment of God, was not the effect of passion, or of a desire of revenging himself; but of zeal for religion, which was insulted by these boys, in the person of the prophet, and of a Divine inspiration; God being determined to punish in this manner the inhabitants of Bethel, (the chief seat of the calf-worship,) who had trained up their children in a prejudice against the true religion and its ministers. Ch.—The boys themselves were not so little as not to be aware of the insult they were offering to a minister of the God of Juda; and probably they acted thus out of hatred to him, at the instigation of their idolatrous parents. Sanc. C.—Lord. He called on him (M.) to revenge his own cause, (H.) "that the people might learn to take care of their souls, by the fear of death." S. Aug. D.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. Achab. Joram succeeded his brother. Chap. i. 17.

VER. 2. Baal. This happened after his victory over Moab, ver. 13. C.—Salien thinks rather that Josaphat refused to assist him, except he would destroy what had been lately introduced by his parents, as the league with Achab had been blamed. See 2 Par. xix. 2. M.—Joram was not so wicked as might have been expected. C.

VER. 4. Nourished. Heb. norod, a term which the Sept. leave untranslated, means lit. "marked" with some colour by the master.—Sheep, Sym. "large

6 And king Joram went out that day from Samaria, and mustered all Israel.

7 And he sent to Josaphat, king of Juda, saying: The king of Moab is revolted from me: come with me against him to battle. And he answered: I will come up: he that is mine, is thine: my people are thy people: and my horses, thy horses.

8 And he said: Which way shall we go up? But he answered: By the desert of Edom.

9 So the king of Israel, and the king of Juda, and the king of Edom, went, and they fetched a compass of seven days' journey, and there was no water for the army, and for the beasts, that followed them.

10 And the king of Israel said: Alas, alas, alas, the Lord hath gathered us three kings together, to deliver us into the hands of Moab.

11 And Josaphat said: Is there not here a prophet of the Lord, that we may beseech the Lord by him? And one of the servants of the king of Israel answered: Here is Eliseus, the son of Saphat, who poured water on the hands of Elias.

12 And Josaphat said: The word of the Lord is with him. And the king of Israel, and Josaphat, king of Juda, and the king of Edom, went down to him.

13 And Eliseus said to the king of Israel: What have I to do with thee? go to the prophets of thy father, and thy mother. And the king of Israel said to him: Why hath the Lord gathered together these three kings, to deliver them into the hands of Moab?

14 And Eliseus said to him: As the Lord of hosts liveth, in whose sight I stand, if I did not reverence the face of Josaphat, king of Juda, I would not have hearkened to thee, nor looked on thee.

15 But now bring me hither a minstrel. And when the minstrel played, the hand of the Lord came upon him, and he said:

16 Thus saith the Lord: Make the channel of this torrent full of ditches.

cattle."—Fleeces; it is commonly supposed every year. This mode of tribute was more usual than paying money. The Moabites were chiefly employed in feeding sheep and cattle; so that it is not wonderful that they should have such great numbers.

VER. 8. Edom, though more circuitous (C.) than to cross over the Jordan at Galgal, as the enemy might thus be taken unawares, (M.) and fresh recruits might be procured from the tributary king of Edom, ver. 9. H. Yet the want of water made this road more dangerous.

VER. 11. Elias, a proverbial expression to denote that he waited upon him.

VER. 13. Mother, whom thou supportest. This is not an order, but a sarcasm, (H.) which the king deserved. C.—Christ said to Judas, What thou doest, do quickly, John xiii. 27. H.—With what liberty does the prophet speak to an impious king! showing himself worthy to succeed Elias, and actuated by the like zeal for God.

VER. 15. Minstrel. The priests and Levites, who officiated in the temple, accompanied the army. Eliseus wants no profane music, (C.) but by this request shows his respect for the true religion, (H.) and by sounding forth the Divine praises in some of David's psalms, wishes to obtain of God the favour which was desired. Theodore. M.—The surprising effects of ancient music to calm the passions are well attested. 1 Kings xvi. 17. By this means S. Francis was raised to the contemplation of heavenly things; and S. Augustine says of himself, "How I wept when I heard thy hymns and canticles, being greatly moved at the delightful harmony of thy church:" suavisonantis Ecclesie tue vocibus commotus acriter. Conf. ix. 6, de C. xiv. 24.—Upon him, so that he experienced that enthusiasm which showed that he was actuated by the Divine Spirit, to speak with all the authority requisite.

VER. 16. Ditches. It was then quite dry; the water which should come in the night, would both refresh the army, and bring on the ruin of the Moabites.

17 For thus saith the Lord: You shall not see wind, nor rain: and yet this channel shall be filled with waters, and you shall drink, you and your families, and your beasts.

18 And this is a small thing in the sight of the Lord: moreover, he will deliver, also, Moab into your hands.

19 And you shall destroy every fenced city, and every choice city, and shall cut down every fruitful tree, and shall stop up all the springs of waters, and every goodly field you shall cover with stones.

20 And it came to pass, in the morning, when the sacrifices used to be offered, that behold, water came by the way of Edom, and the country was filled with water.

21 And all the Moabites hearing that the kings were come up to fight against them, gathered together all that were girded with a belt upon them, and stood in the borders.

22 And they rose early in the morning, and the sun being now up, and shining upon the waters, the Moabites saw the waters over against them red, like blood,

23 And they said: It is the blood of the sword: the kings have fought among themselves, and they have killed one another: go now, Moab, to the spoils.

24 And they went into the camp of Israel: but Israel, rising up, defeated Moab, who fled before them. And they being conquerors, went and smote Moab.

25 And they destroyed the cities: And they filled every goodly field, every man casting his stone: and they stopt up all the springs of waters: and cut down all the trees that bore fruit, so that brick walls only remained: and the city was beset by the slingers, and a great part thereof destroyed.

26 And when the king of Moab saw this, to wit, that the enemies had prevailed, he took with him seven hundred men that drew the sword, to break in upon the king of Edom: but they could not.

27 Then he took his eldest son, that should have reigned in his stead, and offered him for a burnt-offering upon the wall: and there was great indignation in Israel, and presently they departed from him, and returned into their own country.

VER. 19. Tree. This was an exception from the general law (Deut. xx. 19. C.); or it might only regard the land of Chanaan, which the Hebrews should occupy. M. W.—Stones, which had been gathered off into heaps. Isa. v. 1.

VER. 21. Upon them. Heb. "and upward," both soldiers and those who were usually exempt from service.

VER. 22. Blood. The clouds have frequently a reddish colour at sun-rise, which would be reflected in the waters: the sand might also be red. As the Moabites knew that no water could be expected there at that season of the year, and as some examples had occurred of people turning their arms one against another in the night, (Judg. vii. 22; 1 Kings xiv. 20,) they concluded that what they saw was blood. C.

VER. 24. Moab. Heb. adds, "even in the country."

VER. 25. Brick walls. It was the proper name of the city of the Moabites. In Hebrew, Kir-Haraseth. Ch.—Isa. xv. and xvi. 7. It was also called Ar, or Areopolis.—Remained. Heb. adds, "with the stones unmolested." They laid siege to it. H.—Slingers. Grotius would understand those who attended the machines designed to throw stones, &c. But the slingers kept off the enemy, while others undermined the walls. C.

VER. 26. Edom, hoping that he would favour their escape, or because that part seemed the weakest.

VER. 27. Wall, to Chamos, the idol of Moab (M.); or to Moloe, to appease the wrath of the gods. Horrible blindness! H.—Indignation, at such a cruel action. M.—Sept. "there was great repentance" and sorrow. The text may also imply that God was displeased at Israel for pushing the king to such an extremity; or they became an object of horror to the surrounding nations. C.—The first explanation seems the best; as the Israelites thought the king had been sufficiently punished, and therefore retired. They had no reason to suspect that he would have given way to such madness, nor were they to blame for it. H.

Miracles of Eliseus. He raiseth a dead child to life.

NOW a certain woman of the wives of the prophets, cried to Eliseus, saying: Thy servant, my husband, is dead, and thou knowest that thy servant was one that feared God, and behold the creditor is come to take away my two sons to serve him.

2 And Eliseus said to her: What wilt thou have me do for thee? Tell me, what hast thou in thy house? And she answered: I, thy handmaid, have nothing in my house but a little oil, to anoint me.

3 And he said to her: Go, borrow of all thy neighbours empty vessels, not a few.

4 And go in, and shut thy door, when thou art within, and thy sons: and pour out thereof into all those vessels: and when they are full, take them away.

5 So the woman went, and shut the door upon her, and upon her sons: they brought her the vessels, and she poured in.

6 And when the vessels were full, she said to her son: Bring me yet a vessel. And he answered: I have no more. And the oil stood.

7 And she came, and told the man of God. And he said: Go, sell the oil, and pay thy creditor: and thou and thy sons live of the rest.

8 And there was a day when Eliseus passed by Sunam: now there was a great woman there, who detained him to eat bread: and as he passed often that way, he turned into her house to eat bread.

9 And she said to her husband: I perceive that this is a holy man of God, who often passeth by us.

10 Let us, therefore, make him a little chamber, and put a little bed in it for him, and a table, and a stool, and a candlestick, that when he cometh to us he may abide there.

11 Now, there was a certain day, when he came, and turned into the chamber, and rested there.

12 And he said to Giezi, his servant: Call this Sunamitess. And when he had called her, and she stood before him, CHAP. IV. VER. 1. Serve him, not as slaves, for the Hebrews were not thus to be sold, except they had committed some crime. Salien, A. C. 913. See Lev. xxv. 39.—But the condition of mercenaries was perhaps little different (H.); and we find that people were sold for debt. Exod. xxi. 7; Isa. l. 1. C.—After being entertained the first day with the family, they might retire, and live as if they were at home; some presents being sent to them daily, at least among the Greeks of rank. 13 He said to his servant: Say to her: Behold, thou hast diligently served us in all things; what wilt thou have me to do for thee? Hast thou any business, and wilt thou, that I speak to the king, or to the general of the army? And she answered: I dwell in the midst of my own people.

14 And he said: What will she then that I do for her? And Giezi said: Do not ask, for she hath no son, and her husband is old.

15 Then he bid him call her. And when she was called, and stood before the door, 16 He said to her: At this time, and this same hour, if life be in company, thou shalt have a son in thy womb. But she answered: Do not, I beseech thee, my lord, thou man of God, do not lie to thy handmaid.

17 And the woman conceived, and brought forth a son in the time, *and at the same hour that Eliseus had said.

18 And the child grew. And on a certain day, when he went out to his father to the reapers, 19 He said to his father: My head acheth, my head acheth. But he said to his servant: Take him, and carry him to his mother.

20 And when he had taken him, and brought him to his mother, she set him on her knees, until noon, and then he died.

21 And she went up, and laid him upon the bed of the man of God, and shut the door: and going out, 22 She called her husband, and said: Send with me, I beseech thee, one of thy servants, and an ass, that I may run to the man of God, and come again.

23 And he said to her: Why dost thou go to him? to-day is neither new moon nor sabbath. She answered: I will go.

24 And she saddled an ass, and commanded her servant: Drive, and make haste, make no stay in going: And do that which I bid thee.

25 So she went forward, and came to the man of God, to Mount Carmel: and when the man of God saw her coming towards, he said to Giezi, his servant: Behold that Sunamitess.

26 Go, therefore, to meet her, and say to her: Is all well with thee, and with thy husband, and with thy son? And she answered: Well.

27 And when she came to the man of God, to the mount, she caught hold on his feet: and Giezi came to remove her. And the man of God said: Let her alone, for her soul is in anguish, and the Lord hath hid it from me, and hath not told me.

28 And she said to him: Did I ask a son of my lord? did I not say to thee: Do not deceive me?

29 Then he said to Giezi: Gird up thy loins, and take my staff in thy hand, and go. If any man meet thee, salute him not: and if any man salute thee, answer him not: and lay my staff upon the face of the child.

30 But the mother of the child said: As the Lord liveth, and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee. He arose, therefore, and followed her.

31 But Giezi was gone before them, and laid the staff upon the face of the child, and there was no voice nor sense: and he returned to meet him, and told him, saying: The child is not risen.

32 Eliseus, therefore, went into the house, and behold the child lay dead on his bed:

33 And going in, he shut the door upon him, and upon the child, and prayed to the Lord.

34 And he went up, and lay upon the child: and put his mouth upon his mouth, and his eyes upon his eyes, and his hands upon his hands: and he bowed himself upon him, and the child's flesh grew warm.

35 Then he returned and walked in the house, once to and fro: and he went up, and lay upon him: and the child gaped seven times, and opened his eyes.

36 And he called Giezi, and said to him: Call this Sunamitess. And she being called, went in to him: and he said: Take up thy son.

37 She came and fell at his feet, and worshipped upon the ground: and took up her son, and went out.

VER. 31. The child is not risen. By the staff of Eliseus is represented the rod of Moses, or the old law, which was incapable of restoring life to mankind, then dead by sin. Aug. (c. Faust. xii. 35) shows that many like things recorded in the Old Testament are figures of the New. W.—Many of the Fathers observe that this miracle was intended to show the necessity of the incarnation to redeem lost man. The staff did not therefore restore life. 40 And they poured it out for their companions to eat: and when they had tasted of the pottage, they cried out, saying: Death is in the pot, O man of God. And they could not eat thereof.

41 But he said: Bring some meal. And when they had brought it, he cast it into the pot, and said: Pour out for the people, that they may eat. And there was now no bitterness in the pot.

42 And a certain man came from Baalsalisa, bringing to the man of God, bread of the first-fruits, twenty loaves of barley, and new corn in his scrip. And he said: Give to the people, that they may eat.

CHAP. V.

Naaman, the Syrian, is cleansed of his leprosy. He professeth his belief in one God, promising to serve him. Giezi taketh gifts of Naaman, and is struck with leprosy.

NAAMAN, general of the army, of the king of Syria, was a great man with his master, and honourable: for by him the Lord gave deliverance to Syria: and he was a valiant man, and rich, but a leper.

2 Now there had gone out robbers from Syria, and had led away captive out of the land of Israel, a little maid, and she waited upon Naaman's wife.

3 And she said to her mistress: I wish my master had been with the prophet that is in Samaria: he would certainly have healed him of the leprosy which he hath.

4 Then Naaman went in to his lord, and told him, saying: Thus and thus said the girl from the land of Israel.

5 And the king of Syria said to him: Go; and I will send a letter to the king of Israel. And he departed, and took with him ten talents of silver, and six thousand pieces of gold, and ten changes of raiment;

6 And brought the letter to the king of Israel, in these words: When thou shalt receive this letter, know that I have sent to thee Naaman, my servant, that thou mayest heal him of his leprosy.

7 And when the king of Israel had read the letter, he rent his garments, and said: Am I God, to be able to kill and give life, that this man hath sent to me to heal a man of his leprosy? mark, and see how he seeketh occasions against me.

8 And when Eliseus, the man of God, had heard this, to wit, that the king of Israel had rent his garments, he sent to him, saying: Why hast thou rent thy garments? let him come to me, and let him know that there is a prophet in Israel.

9 So Naaman came with his horses and chariots, and stood at the door of the house of Eliseus:

10 And Eliseus sent a messenger to him, saying: Go, and wash seven times in the Jordan, and thy flesh shall recover health, and thou shalt be clean.

11 Naaman was angry, and went away, saying: I thought he would have come out to me, and standing, would have invoked the name of the Lord, his God, and touched with his hand the place of the leprosy, and healed me.

12 Are not the Abana, and the Pharphar, rivers of Damascus, better than all the waters of Israel, that I may wash in them, and be made clean? So as he turned, and was going away with indignation, 13 His servants came to him, and said to him: Father if the prophet had bid thee do some great thing, surely thou shouldst have done it: how much rather what he now hath said to thee: Wash, and thou shalt be clean?

14 Then he went down, and washed in the Jordan seven times, according to the word of the man of God; and his flesh was restored, like the flesh of a little child: and he was made clean.

15 And returning to the man of God, with all his train, he came, and stood before him, and said: In truth, I know there is no other God, in all the earth, but only in Israel: I beseech thee, therefore, take a blessing of thy servant.

VER. 39. Wild herbs. Heb. aruth. Sept. ἀρούρη, may denote any thing that could be "gathered."—Gourds: colocynthidas. They resembled cucumbers; but were so bitter, that they were styled "the gall of the earth." Valerius (Phil. c. 36).

VER. 42. Baalsalisa, fifteen miles south of Diospolis, and to the north of Jerusalem. C.—His scrip. Prot. "in the husk thereof." Cormol means a greenish ear of corn, (H.) which might be rubbed in the hand, and so eaten. C.

CHAP. V. VER. 1. King, Benadad, who had defeated Achab, and was slain by Hazael (chap. viii. T.); or, according to Salien, Hazael was already king. M.—Leprosy. This malady did not exclude him from court. The Hebrews allowed such to appear in public till the priests had declared them unclean; and other nations viewed the leprosy with less horror.

VER. 2. Robbers; soldiers. T. 2 Kings iv. 2.—Such invaded the dominions of Joachin. Chap. xxiv. 2. Irruptions of this nature were then very common, (see Judg. xi. 3; Job i. 15,) and regarded as noble military exploits. The Arabs still maintain their right to live upon their neighbours. VER. 10. Messenger. Eliseus supports the dignity of God's envoy, and shows the general that his cure was to be attributed not to the presence of the prophet, but to the will and goodness of God.

VER. 12. Pharphar. Benjamin (p. 53) informs us that the former river serves to water the city, and the second the surrounding gardens. The Orontes, which is supposed to be one of these rivers, flows by Antioch into the Mediterranean Sea. C.

VER. 15. A blessing. A present, (Ch.) accompanied with wishes of happiness on both sides. We have seen that the prophets generally received such presents. But Eliseus acts with more reserve in regard of this stranger, as S. Paul 16 But he answered: As the Lord liveth, before whom I stand, I will receive none. And when he pressed him, he still refused.

17 And Naaman said: As thou wilt: but I beseech thee, grant to me, thy servant, to take from hence two mules' burthen of earth: for thy servant will not henceforth offer holocausts, or victims, to other gods, but to the Lord.

18 But there is only this, for which thou shalt entreat the Lord for thy servant; when my master goeth into the temple of Remmon, to worship there, and he leaneth upon my hand; if I bow down in the temple of Remmon, when he boweth down in the same place, that the Lord pardon me, thy servant, for this thing.

19 And he said to him: Go in peace. So he departed from him, in the spring time of the earth.

20 But Giezi, the servant of the man of God, said: My master hath spared Naaman, this Syrian, in not receiving of him that which he brought: as the Lord liveth, I will run after him, and take something of him.

21 And Giezi followed after Naaman: and when he saw him running after him, he leapt down from his chariot to meet him, and said: Is all well?

22 And he said: All is well: my master hath sent me to thee, saying: Just now there are come to me from Mount Ephraim, two young men of the sons of the prophets: give them a talent of silver, and two changes of garments.

VER. 17. Earth, to make brick for an altar, or to enclose within a box of brass, as was done in the altar of holocausts in the desert; or, in fine, to sprinkle on some clean place, where an altar might be erected in honour of the true God. He does not inquire what ceremonies were used in the land of Israel, (C.) as he was not enrolled by circumcision, among the Hebrews, as an observer of their law; but intended to serve God, like Job, and many other righteous Gentiles, who kept themselves clear of idolatry, and observed the ancient patriarchal religion with a clean heart. H.—As God had sanctified the land by the observance of his true religion, Naaman rightly judged that it was fitter for an altar than the earth of his own country. W.—The Jews had a particular veneration for it. Psal. ci. 15. They built a synagogue in Persia with earth and stones taken from Jerusalem. Benjamin.—Christians sometimes carried away the same earth. Out of Palestine the Gentiles were not prohibited to offer sacrifice to the true God any where; nor were they under any obligation of following the law of Moses. Abulens. T.

VER. 18. Remmon denotes "a pomegranate," or something "elevated," and is probably an epithet of the sun, the chief idol of the Syrians, which was also styled Adad, "one," as both are united. Zach. xii. 11.—Remphan is probably the same divinity. Acts vii. 43. Sept. here read, Remman. Hesychius explains Ramas, "the highest god." Selden thinks the Eliou of the Phœnicians is understood; Grotius, that Saturn, the highest of the planets, is meant. Scriverius declares for Venus, to whom pomegranates were sacred; and P. Martyr for Juno, who held one of these apples in her hand. Pausan. in Corinth.—Remmon occurs no where else.—Hand. This was an honour of the chief favourite. Chap. vii. 2. C.—Thing. He does not ask leave to commit sin, which would be absurd; though Protestants are not ashamed to accuse the Catholic Church, as if her "indulgences" were pardons for sins to come; though they be in reality no pardon for sin at all, but only a remission of temporal punishment, after the sin has been remitted by penance.—When he. Heb. "when I bow," &c. H.

VER. 19. Go in peace. What the prophet here allowed was not an outward conformity to an idolatrous worship, but only a service which by his office he owed to his master; who, on all public occasions, leaned on him: so that his bowing down when his master bowed himself down was not in effect adoring the idols; nor was it so understood by the standers-by. (since he publicly professed himself a worshipper of the only true and living God,) but it was no more than doing a civil office to the king, his master, whose leaning upon him obliged him to bow at the same time that he bowed. Ch.—Some formerly pleaded this example to excuse their occasional conformity in going to the Protestant churches, as the law required. But the case was very different. They had not to act in the capacity of Naaman; and their attendance was considered as a profession of a false religion. Their directors loudly condemned the practice. They ought rather 23 And Naaman said: It is better that thou take two talents. And he forced him, and bound two talents of silver in two bags, and two changes of garments, and laid them upon two of his servants, and they carried them before him.

24 And when he was come, and now it was the evening, he took them from their hands, and laid them up in the house, and sent the men away, and they departed.

25 But he went in, and stood before his master. And Eliseus said: Whence comest thou, Giezi? He answered: Thy servant went no whither.

26 But he said: Was not my heart present, when the man turned back, from his chariot, to meet thee? So now thou hast received money, and received garments, to buy olive-yards and vineyards, and sheep, and oxen, and men-servants, and maid-servants.

27 But the leprosy of Naaman shall also stick to thee, and to thy seed for ever. And he went out from him a leper, as white as snow.

to have imitated Eleazar, &c., who refused to eat swine's flesh. 2 Mac. vi. and vii. W.—Go in peace. These words do not expressly solve the difficulty; but the mode in which they were uttered might intimate either that the general would be no longer under that embarrassment, (as we do not read that he ever attended the king of Syria into the temple afterwards,) or that God had forgiven his former offences, and particularly the scandalous idolatry which now gave him so much pain. The original, ver. 18, which is generally translated in the present or future, (H.) may be better rendered in the past tense, as the Chal. has it. "In this thing the Lord pardon thy servant. My master going into the temple of Remmon to worship there, and leaning upon my hand, and I worshipped in the temple of Remmon, when I did worship in the temple of Remmon, that the Lord pardon," &c. S. Jerom and the Sept. seem to have read more correctly, when he, &c. We may also render it in the present tense, "and I worship," or, "am wont to adore;" not that he means to prevaricate any longer. The Syr. and Arab. read with an interrogation. "When I shall adore . . . (C. or bow down, H.) will the Lord pardon me?" But this rather increases the difficulty. C.—We may therefore conclude either that Naaman had no decision, or that he had leave to serve his master (H.) in a civil capacity even in the temple (M. T. Alex. 2 dis. 7. Sanctius, &c.); or that he obtained pardon for his past transgressions. Bochart, C. &c.—Earth, as the expression is rendered, Gen. xxxv. 16, though here it is lit. "at the chosen season;" electo, not verno. The sense is the same. Cobroth, untranslated by the Sept., may denote a certain space, or village (H.); "a furrow," of 240 feet long, and half that breadth (C.); "a mile" (Chal. Pagnin); or a portion of time allotted by the law, about a quarter of an hour, during which a mile, or sabbath-day's journey, might be performed. T.—Prot. "a little way."

VER. 23. Ilm. The weight must have been considerable, (6000 sicles, ver. 26; Exod. xxxviii. 25. H.) otherwise Giezi would have preferred carrying them himself, that his master might not know. C.

VER. 24. Evening. Sept., Syr., &c. seem to have read aupol, instead of the present Heb. ēnupol, "eminence," (C.) Prot. "tower," (H.) at or near Samaria; when Giezi thought proper to take the burden himself to prevent detection. C.

VER. 26. Present is not expressed in Heb., but must be understood. Prot. "Went not mine heart with thee." H.—God has revealed the whole transaction to me. M.—Heart, in Scripture, often denotes the spirit, or soul. H.

VER. 27. For ever. Not perhaps to those who might be already born, unless they were accomplices in the crime. The leprosy is hereditary. Giezi was punished for simony, in selling the miracle, as well as for lying and disobedience. C.—But Eliseus would probably take care to give him better information. T.—He did not require his servant to give up what he had unjustly received, as the general had made over the property to him; and he thought proper to leave it in the hands of Giezi, to indemnify him for past services, and that he might have wherewith to support himself, as he now dismissed him from his company. Salien, A. C. 903.—Snow, and therefore more incurable. T.—See Lev. xiii. C.—"All the covetous and misers, together with their riches, possess the leprosy of Giezi: thesaurum criminum congregarunt. S. Amb. Giezi prefigured Judas, the false apostle of Christ, and all those who buy or sell spiritual things. By their avarice they procure infamy in this world, and damnation in the next. S. 2 Let us go as far as the Jordan, and take out of the wood every man a piece of timber, that we may build us there a place to dwell in. And he said: Go.

3 And one of them said: But come thou also with thy servants. He answered: I will come.

4 So he went with them. And when they were come to the Jordan, they cut down wood.

5 And it happened, as one was felling some timber, that the head of the ax fell into the water: and he cried out, and said: Alas, alas, alas, my lord, for this same was borrowed.

6 And the man of God said: Where did it fall? and he showed him the place: Then he cut off a piece of wood, and cast it in thither: and the iron swam.

7 And he said: Take it up. And he put out his hand, and took it.

8 And the king of Syria warred against Israel, and took counsel with his servants, saying: In such and such a place, let us lay an ambush.

9 And the man of God sent to the king of Israel, saying: Beware that thou pass not to such a place: for the Syrians are there in ambush.

10 And the king of Israel sent to the place which the man of God had told him, and prevented him, and looked well to himself there not once nor twice.

11 And the heart of the king of Syria was troubled for this thing. And calling together his servants, he said: Why do you not tell me who it is that betrays me to the king of Israel?

12 And one of his servants said: No one, my lord, O king: but Eliseus, the prophet, that is in Israel, telleth the king of Israel all the words, that thou speakest in thy privy chamber.

13 And he said to them: Go, and see where he is: that I may send and take him. And they told him: saying: Behold he is in Dothan.

14 Therefore, he sent thither horses, and chariots, and the strength of an army: and they came by night, and beset the city.

15 And the servant of the man of God, rising early, went out, and saw an army round about the city, and horses and chariots: and he told him, saying: Alas, alas, alas, my lord, what shall we do?

16 But he answered: Fear not: for there are more with us than with them.

17 And Eliseus prayed, and said: Lord, open his eyes, that he may see. And the Lord opened the eyes of the servant, and he saw: and behold, the mountain was full of horses, and chariots of fire round about Eliseus.

18 And the enemies came down to him: but Eliseus prayed to the Lord, saying: Strike, I beseech thee, this people with blindness: And the Lord struck them with blindness, according to the word of Eliseus.

19 And Eliseus said to them: This is not the way, neither is this the city: follow me, and I will show you the man whom you seek. So he led them into Samaria.

20 And when they were come into Samaria, Eliseus said: Lord, open the eyes of these men, that they may see. And the Lord opened their eyes, and they saw themselves to be in the midst of Samaria.

21 And the king of Israel said to Eliseus, when he saw them: My father, shall I kill them?

22 And he said: Thou shalt not kill them: for thou didst not take them with thy sword, or thy bow, that thou mayest kill them: but set bread and water before them, that they may eat and drink, and go to their master.

23 And a great provision of meats was set before them, and they ate and drank; and he let them go: and they went away to their master: and the robbers of Syria came no more into the land of Israel.

24 And it came to pass, after these things, that Benadad, king of Syria, gathered together all his army, and went up and besieged Samaria.

25 And there was a great famine in Samaria: and so long did the siege continue, till the head of an ass was sold for fourscore pieces of silver, and the fourth part of a cake of pigeons' dung, for five pieces of silver.

26 And as the king of Israel was passing by the wall, a certain woman cried out to him, saying: Save me, my lord, O king.

VER. 18. Blindness. The blindness here spoken of was of a particular kind, which hindered them from seeing the objects that were really before them, and represented other different objects to their imagination; so that they no longer perceived the city of Dothan, nor were able to know the person of Eliseus; but were easily led by him, whom they took to be another man, to Samaria. So that he truly told them, This is not the way, neither is this the city, &c., because he spoke with relation to the way and to the city which was represented to them. Ch.—Stratagems in war are lawful. S. Chrys., &c. Grot. Jur. iii. 1, 17. The words

29 So we boiled my son, and eat him. And I said to her on the next day : Give thy son, that we may eat him. And she hath hid her son.

30 When the king heard this, he rent his garments, and passed by upon the wall. And all the people saw the hair-cloth which he wore within next to his flesh.

31 And the king said : May God do so and so to me, and may he add more, if the head of Eliseus, the son of Saphat, shall stand on him this day.

32 But Eliseus sat in his house, and the ancients sat with him. So he sent a man before : and before the messenger came, he said to the ancients : Do you know that this son of a murderer hath sent to cut off my head ? Look then when the messenger shall come, shut the door, and suffer him not to come in : for behold the sound of his master's feet is behind him.

33 While he was yet speaking to them, the messenger appeared, who was coming to him. And he said : Behold, so great an evil is from the Lord : what shall I look for more from the Lord ?

CHAP. VII.

Eliseus prophesieth a great plenty, which presently ensueth upon the sudden flight of the Syrians ; of which four lepers bring the news to the city. The incredulous nobleman is trod to death.

AND Eliseus said : Hear ye the word of the Lord : Thus saith the Lord : To-morrow, about this time, a bushel of fine flour shall be sold for a stater, and two bushels of barley for a stater, in the gate of Samaria.

2 Then one of the lords, upon whose hand the king leaned, answering the man of God, said : If the Lord should make flood-gates in heaven, can that possibly be, which thou sayest ? And he said : Thou shalt see it with thy eyes, but shalt not eat thereof.

3 Now there were four lepers, at the entering in of the gate : and they said one to another : What mean we, to stay here, till we die ?

4 If we will enter into the city, we shall die with the famine : and if we will remain here, we must also die : come therefore, and let us run over to the camp of the Syrians. If they spare us, we shall live : but if they kill us, we shall but die.

5 So they arose in the evening, to go to the Syrian camp. And when they were come to the first part of the camp of the Syrians, they found no man there.

6 For the Lord had made them hear, in the camp of Syria, the noise of chariots, and of horses, and of a very great army : and they said one to another : Behold, the king of Israel hath hired against us the kings of the Hethites, and of the Egyptians ; and they are come upon us.

7 Wherefore they arose, and fled away in the dark, and left their tents, and their horses and asses in the camp, and fled, desiring to save their lives.

8 So when these lepers were come to the beginning of the camp, they went into one tent, and eat and drank : and they took from thence silver, and gold, and raiment, and went, and hid it : and they came again, and went into another tent, and carried from thence in like manner, and hid it.

9 Then they said one to another : We do not well : for this is a day of good tidings. If we hold our peace, and do not tell it till the morning, we shall be charged with a crime : come, let us go, and tell it in the king's court.

10 So they came to the gate of the city, and told them, saying : We went to the camp of the Syrians, and we found no man there, but horses, and asses tied, and the tents standing.

11 Then the guards of the gate went, and told it within in the king's palace.

12 And he arose in the night, and said to his servants : I tell you what the Syrians have done to us : They know that we suffer great famine, and therefore they are gone out of the camp, and lie hid in the fields, saying : When they come out of the city, we shall take them alive, and then we may get into the city.

13 And one of his servants answered : Let us take the five horses that are remaining in the city, (because there are no more in the whole multitude of Israel, for the rest are consumed,) and let us send and see.

14 They brought therefore two horses, and the king sent into the camp of the Syrians, saying : Go, and see.

"Let us send thither five horsemen who remain ; if they escape, we shall look upon them as those Israelites who continue alive ; if they perish, they will be numbered with the other Israelites who are dead." Both horses and horsemen were dreadfully lean, and they could not expect a better fate than those already consumed by famine. C.

15 And they went after them, as far as the Jordan: and behold, all the way was full of garments, and vessels, which the Syrians had cast away, in their flight, and the messengers returned, and told the king.

16 And the people going out, pillaged the camp of the Syrians: and a bushel of fine flour was sold for a stater, and two bushels of barley for a stater, according to the word of the Lord.

17 And the king appointed that lord on whose hand he leaned, to stand at the gate: and the people trod upon him in the entrance of the gate; and he died, as the man of God had said, when the king came down to him.

18 And it came to pass, according to the word of the man of God, which he spoke to the king, when he said: Two bushels of barley shall be for a stater, and a bushel of fine flour for a stater, at this very time to-morrow, in the gate of Samaria.

19 When that lord answered the man of God, and said: Although the Lord should make flood-gates in heaven, could this come to pass which thou sayest? And he said to him: Thou shalt see it with thy eyes, and shalt not eat thereof.

20 And so it fell out to him, as it was foretold: and the people trod upon him in the gate, and he died.

CHAP. VIII.

After seven years' famine foretold by Eliseus, the Sunamitess returning home, recovereth her lands and revenues. Eliseus foreshoweth the death of Benadad, king of Syria, and the reign of Hazael. Joram's wicked reign in Juda. He dieth, and his son, Ochozias, succeedeth him.

AND Eliseus spoke to the woman,^a whose son he had restored to life, saying: Arise, and go thou, and thy household, and sojourn wheresoever thou canst find: for the Lord hath called a famine, and it shall come upon the land seven years.

2 And she arose, and did according to the word of the man of God: and going with her household, she sojourned in the land of the Philistines many days.

3 ^b And when the seven years were ended, the woman returned out of the land of the Philistines, and she went forth to speak to the king for her house, and for her lands.

4 And the king talked with Giezi, the servant of the man of God, saying: Tell me all the great things that Eliseus hath done.

5 And when he was telling the king how he had raised one dead to life, the woman appeared, whose son he had restored to life, crying to the king for her house and her lands. And Giezi said: My lord, O king, this is the woman, and this is her son, whom Eliseus raised to life.

6 And the king asked the woman: and she told him. And the king appointed her an eunuch, saying: Restore her all that is hers, and all the revenues of the lands, from the day that she left the land to this present.

7 Eliseus also came to Damascus, and Benadad, king of Syria, was sick; and they told him, saying: The man of God is come hither.

8 And the king said to Hazael: Take with thee presents, and go to meet the man of God, and consult the Lord by him, saying: Can I recover of this my illness?

9 And Hazael went to meet him, taking with him presents, and all the good things of Damascus, the burdens of forty camels. And when he stood before him, he said: Thy son, Benadad, the king of Syria, hath sent me to thee, saying: Can I recover of this my illness?

10 And Eliseus said to him: Go tell him: Thou shalt recover: but the Lord hath showed me that he shall surely die.

11 And he stood with him, and was troubled so far as to blush: and the man of God wept.

12 And Hazael said to him: Why doth my lord weep? And he said: Because I know the evil that thou wilt do to the children of Israel. Their strong cities thou wilt burn with fire, and their young men thou wilt kill with the sword, and thou wilt dash their children, and rip up their pregnant women.

13 And Hazael said: But what am I, thy servant, a dog, that I should do this great thing? And Eliseus said: The Lord hath showed me that thou shalt be king of Syria.

14 And when he was departed from Eliseus he came to his master, who said to him: What said Eliseus to thee? And he answered: He told me: Thou shalt recover.

15 And on the next day, he took a blanket, and poured water on it, and spread it upon his face: and he died, and Hazael reigned in his stead.

16 In the fifth year of Joram, son of Achab, king of Israel, and of Josaphat, king of Juda, reigned Joram, son of Josaphat, king of Juda.

VER. 10. Tell him: Thou shalt recover. By these words the prophet signified that the king's disease was not mortal; and that he would recover, if no violence were used. Or he might only express himself in this manner by way of giving Hazael to understand that he knew both what he would say and do; that he would indeed tell the king he should recover, but would be himself the instrument of his death. Ch.—The imperative is often used for the future tense. Gloss. iii. 3. John ii. 19. The present Heb. reads, "Thou shalt not live: for," &c., which removes the difficulty. But the Chal., Sept., Syr., &c. agree with the Vulgate, (C.) as the Prot. version also does. "Thou mayest certainly recover, howbeit the Lord," &c. H.

VER. 11. Blush. This may be referred either to Hazael, who was astonished at the words and looks of the prophet, (H.) or to Eliseus. M.—Sept. Complut. Though this has the appearance of a gloss, it is perhaps most conformable to the Heb., and to an ancient Greek version. C.—Prot. "he settled his countenance stedfastly, until he was ashamed."

17 ^aHe was two and thirty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned eight years in Jerusalem.

18 And he walked in the ways of the kings of Israel, as the house of Achab had walked: for the daughter of Achab was his wife: and he did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord.

19 ^bBut the Lord would not destroy Juda, for David his servant's sake, as he had promised him, to give him a light, and to his children always.

20 ^cIn his days Edom revolted from being under Juda, and made themselves a king.

21 ^dAnd Joram came to Seira, and all the chariots with him: and he arose in the night, and defeated the Edomites that had surrounded him, and the captains of the chariots, but the people fled into their tents.

22 So Edom revolted from being under Juda, unto this day. Then Lobna also revolted at the same time.

23 But the rest of the acts of Joram, and all that he did, are they not written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Juda?

24 And Joram slept with his fathers, and was buried with them in the city of David, and Ochozias, his son, reigned in his stead.

25 ^eIn the twelfth year of Joram, the son of Achab, king of Israel, reigned^f Ochozias, son of Joram, king of Juda.

26 Ochozias was two and twenty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned one year in Jerusalem: the name of his mother was Athalia, the daughter of Amri, king of Israel.

27 And he walked in the ways of the house of Achab: and he did evil before the Lord, as did the house of Achab: for he was the son-in-law of the house of Achab.

28 ^gHe went also with Joram, son of Achab, to fight against Hazael, king of Syria, in Ramoth Galaad, and the Syrians wounded Joram:

29 And he went back to be healed, in Jezrahel: because the Syrians had wounded him in Ramoth, when he fought against Hazael, king of Syria. And Ochozias, the son of Joram, king of Juda, went down to visit Joram, the son of Achab, in Jezrahel, because he was sick there.

The Syriac and Arab. explain it in a contrary sense, as the Heb. may well signify, and the sequel seems to prove, as the Edomites became independent. Heb. "he rose, . . and attacked Edom that surrounded him, (with superior numbers,) and the princes, . . and the people (of Israel) fled." But the text will also bear the sense of the Vulg., which is more conformable to 2 Par. xxi. 9, which does not say the people, &c., though these words may be understood of the Edomites. Joram could not derive such advantage from his victory, as to reduce the nation under his obedience. C.

All the Oriental versions, and many copies of the Sept., read "twenty-two" in both passages; and those who would admit no mistake, are forced to have recourse to explanations which can give no satisfaction. De Dieu would include in the reign of Ochozias the six years of Athalia's usurpation, and the thirteen of Joas, during his minority. Others would date from the separation of the two kingdoms, &c. CHAP. IX.

Jehu is anointed king of Israel, to destroy the house of Achab and Jezabel. He killeth Joram, king of Israel, and Ochozias, king of Juda. Jezabel is eaten by dogs.

AND^a Eliseus the prophet, called one of the sons of the prophets, and said to him: Gird up thy loins, and take this little bottle of oil in thy hand, and go to Ramoth Galaad.

2 ^bAnd when thou art come thither, thou shalt see Jehu, the son of Josaphat, the son of Namsi: and going in, thou shalt make him rise up from amongst his brethren, and carry him into an inner chamber.

3 Then taking the little bottle of oil, thou shalt pour it on his head, and shalt say: Thus saith the Lord: I have anointed thee king over Israel. And thou shalt open the door and flee, and shalt not stay there.

4 So the young man, the servant of the prophet, went away to Ramoth Galaad,

5 And went in thither: and behold, the captains of the army were sitting, and he said: I have a word to thee, O prince. And Jehu said: Unto whom of us all? And he said: To thee, O prince.

6 And he arose, and went into the chamber: and he poured the oil upon his head, and said: Thus saith the Lord God of Israel: I have anointed thee king over Israel, the people of the Lord.

7 And thou shalt cut off the house of Achab, thy master, and I will revenge the death of my servants, the prophets, and the blood of all the servants of the Lord, at the hand of Jezabel.

8 ^cAnd I will destroy all the house of Achab, and I will cut off from Achab, him that pisseth against the wall, and him that is shut up, and the meanest in Israel.

12 But they answered: It is false; but rather do thou tell us. And he said to them: Thus and thus did he speak to me: and he said: Thus saith the Lord: I have anointed thee king over Israel.

13 Then they made haste, and taking every man his garment, laid it under his feet, after the manner of a judgment-seat, and they sounded the trumpet, and said: Jehu is king.

14 So Jehu, the son of Josaphat, the son of Namsi, conspired against Joram. *Now Joram had besieged Ramoth Galaad, he, and all Israel, fighting with Hazael, king of Syria:

15 And was returned to be healed in Jezrahel of his wounds; for the Syrians had wounded him, when he fought with Hazael, king of Syria. And Jehu said: If it please you, let no man go forth or flee out of the city, lest he go, and tell in Jezrahel.

16 And he got up, and went into Jezrahel: for Joram was sick there, and Ochozias, king of Juda, was come down to visit Joram.

17 The watchman therefore, that stood upon the tower of Jezrahel, saw the troop of Jehu coming, and said: I see a troop. And Joram said: Take a chariot, and send to meet them, and let him that goeth say: Is all well?

18 So there went one in a chariot to meet him, and said: Thus saith the king: Are all things peaceable? And Jehu said: What hast thou to do with peace? go behind and follow me. And the watchman told, saying: The messenger came to them, but he returneth not.

19 And he sent a second chariot of horses: and he came to them, and said: Thus saith the king: Is there peace? And Jehu said: What hast thou to do with peace? pass, and follow me.

20 And the watchman told, saying: He came even to them, but returneth not: and the driving is like the driving of Jehu, the son of Namsi; for he drives furiously.

21 And Joram said: Make ready the chariot. And they made ready his chariot: and Joram, king of Israel, and Ochozias, king of Juda, went out, each in his chariot, and they went out to meet Jehu, and met him in the field of Naboth, the Jezrahelite.

24 But Jehu bent his bow with his hand, and shot Joram between the shoulders: and the arrow went out through his heart, and immediately he fell in his chariot.

25 And Jehu said to Badacer, his captain: Take him, and cast him into the field of Naboth, the Jezrahelite: for I remember, when I and thou, sitting in a chariot, followed Achab, this man's father, that the Lord laid this burthen upon him, saying:

Jehu destroyeth the house of Achab: abolisheth the worship of Baal, and killeth the worshippers: but sticks to the calves of Jeroboam. Israel is afflicted by the Syrians.

AND ^bAchab had seventy sons in Samaria: so Jehu wrote letters, and sent to Samaria, to the chief men of the city, and to the ancients, and to them that brought up Achab's children, saying:

2 As soon as you receive these letters, ye that have your master's sons, and chariots, and horses, and fenced cities, and armour,

3 Choose the best, and him that shall please you most of your master's sons, and set him on his father's throne, and fight for the house of your master.

4 But they were exceedingly afraid, and said: Behold two kings could not stand before him, and how shall we be able to resist?

5 Therefore they that were over the king's house, and the rulers of the city, and the ancients, and the bringers up of the children, sent to Jehu, saying: We are thy servants: whatsoever thou shalt command us we will do; we will not make us any king: do thou all that pleaseth thee.

6 And he wrote letters the second time to them, saying: If you be mine, and will obey me, take the heads of the sons of your master, and come to me to Jezrahel by to-morrow at this time. Now the king's sons, being seventy men, were brought up with the chief men of the city.

7 And when the letters came to them, they took the king's sons, and slew seventy persons, and put their heads in baskets, and sent them to him to Jezrahel.

8 And a messenger came, and told him, saying: They have brought the heads of the king's sons. And he said: Lay ye them in two heaps by the entering in of the gate until the morning.

9 And when it was light, he went out, and standing, said to all the people: You are just: if I conspired against my master, and slew him; who hath slain all these?

10 "See therefore now that there hath not fallen to the ground any of the words of the Lord, which the Lord spoke concerning the house of Achab; and the Lord hath done that which he spoke in the hand of his servant Elias."

11 So Jehu slew all that were left of the house of Achab in Jezrahel, and all his chief men, and his friends, and his priests, till there were no remains left of him.

12 And he arose, and went to Samaria: and when he was come to the shepherds' cabin in the way,

13 He met with the brethren of Ochozias, king of Juda, and he said to them: Who are you? And they answered: We are the brethren of Ochozias, and are come down to salute the sons of the king, and the sons of the queen.

14 And he said: Take them alive. And they took them alive, and killed them at the pit by the cabin, two and forty men, and he left not any of them.

15 And when he was departed thence, he found Jonadab, the son of Rechab, coming to meet him, and he blessed him. And he said to him: Is thy heart right as my heart is with thy heart? And Jonadab said: It is. If it be, said he, give me thy hand. He gave him his hand. And he lifted him up to him into the chariot, 17 And brought him into Samaria. And he slew all that were left of Achab, in Samaria, to a man, according to the word of the Lord which he spoke by Elias.

court, (2 Kings viii. 18,) and those who offered sacrifice to idols, (C.) being of Achab's descendants. M.—He afterwards inveigled all the priests of Baal, to their entire ruin, ver. 19. H.

VER. 12. Cabin. Heb. Beth-āhod, (H.) a term which the Sept. do not translate. It means, "house of tying," as the sheep were tied to be shorn. M.

VER. 13. Brethren. The Arabs had destroyed all his brothers by the same mother (2 Par. xxii. 1); but these were near relations, and they durst not deny the fact. M.—In 2 Par. xxii. 8 they are styled princes of Juda, and sons of the brethren of Ochozias. Jehu must have used surprising diligence (C.) and secrecy (H.) to prevent the many important transactions and changes which had lately taken place from being known at Jerusalem, or even at Bethakod, ver. 12, which was so little distant from Samaria. C.—Queen. The wife of Joram, or the children of Jezabel, (M.) with whom they were connected by affinity and friendship, to their great detriment. H.

VER. 15. Jonadab, a holy personage. Jer. xxxv. 6. The Rechabites were a sort of religious, descended from Jethro and the Cinites. C.—They dwelt in the country, and fed sheep, &c. Num. x. 29. T.—John of Jerus. (c. 25,) says that Jonadab was a disciple of Eliseus, and followed his institute in all things, excepting continuity. M.—Blessed him, wishing him peace and prosperity. M.—It is not clear whether Jehu or Jonadab pronounced this blessing. H.—Heart. Art thou friendly to my cause?—Thy hand, in sign of concord, and to help him up into his chariot. C.

VER. 18. I will worship him more. Jehu sinned in thus pretending to worship Baal, and causing sacrifices to be offered to him: because evil is not to be done that good may come of it. Rom. iii. 8. Ch. W.—S. Jervon, &c., excuse him from mortal sin, as his intention was good. T.—But God rewarded his zeal, and not his falsehood. C.

and all his servants, and all his priests: let none be wanting, for I have a great sacrifice to offer to Baal: whosoever shall be wanting, shall not live. Now Jehu did this craftily, that he might destroy the worshippers of Baal.

20 And he said: Proclaim a festival for Baal. And he called,

21 And he sent into all the borders of Israel; and all the servants of Baal came: there was not one left that did not come. And they went into the temple of Baal: and the house of Baal was filled, from one end to the other.

22 And he said to them that were over the wardrobe: Bring forth garments for all the servants of Baal. And they brought them forth garments.

23 And Jehu, and Jonadab, the son of Rechab, went to the temple of Baal, and said to the worshippers of Baal: Search, and see that there be not any with you of the servants of the Lord, but that there be the servants of Baal only.

24 And they went in to offer sacrifices and burnt-offerings: but Jehu had prepared him fourscore men without, and said to them: If any of the men escape, whom I have brought into your hands, he that letteth him go, shall answer life for life.

25 And it came to pass, when the burnt-offering was ended, that Jehu commanded his soldiers and captains, saying: Go in, and kill them: let none escape. And the soldiers and captains slew them with the edge of the sword, and cast them out: and they went into the city of the temple of Baal,

26 And brought the statue out of Baal's temple, and burnt it,

27 And broke it in pieces. They destroyed also the temple of Baal, and made a jakes in its place unto this day.

28 So Jehu destroyed Baal out of Israel:

29 But yet he departed not from the sins of Jeroboam, the son of Nabat, who made Israel to sin, nor did he forsake the golden calves that were in Bethel, and Dan.

30 And the Lord said to Jehu: Because thou hast diligently executed that which was right and pleasing in my eyes, and hast done to the house of Achab according to all that was in my heart: thy children shall sit upon the throne of Israel to the fourth generation.

31 But Jehu took no heed to walk in the law of the Lord, the God of Israel, with all his heart: for he departed not from the sins of Jeroboam, who had made Israel to sin.

32 In those days the Lord began to be weary of Israel: and Hazael ravaged them in all the coasts of Israel, 33 From the Jordan eastward, all the land of Galaad, and Gad, and Ruben, and Manasses, from Aroer, which is upon the torrent Arnon, and Galaad, and Basan.

34 But the rest of the acts of Jehu, and all that he did, and his strength, are they not written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Israel?

35 And Jehu slept with his fathers, and they buried him in Samaria: and Joachaz, his son, reigned in his stead.

36 And the time that Jehu reigned over Israel, in Samaria, was eight and twenty years.

CHAP. XI.

Athalia's usurpation and tyranny. Joas is made king. Athalia is slain.

AND^b Athalia, the mother of Ochozias, seeing that her son was dead, arose and slew all the royal seed.

2 But Josaba, the daughter of king Joram, sister of Ochozias, took Joas, the son of Ochozias, and stole him from among the king's sons that were slain, out of the bed-chamber with his nurse: and hid him from the face of Athalia; so that he was not slain.

3 And he was with her six years, hid in the house of the Lord. And Athalia reigned over the land.

4 And in the seventh year Joiada sent, and taking the centurions and soldiers, brought them in to him into the temple of the Lord, and made a covenant with them: and taking an oath of them in the house of the Lord, showed them the king's son:

5 And he commanded them, saying: This is the thing that you must do.

6 Let a third part of you go in on the sabbath, and keep the watch of the king's house. And let a third part be at the gate of Sur; and let a third part be at the

VER. 30. Generation. So Joachaz, Joas, Jeroboam II., and Zacharias, succeeded to the throne. This small temporal reward he obtained for the little good which he had done; while, on the other hand, he was punished for his manifold transgressions. Osee (i. 4) reproaches him even for the blood which he had spilt in Jezrahel; for, though Achab and Joram were guilty, was Jehu innocent? Can this murder of Ochozias be justified? the Jordan, to dismember the provinces on the east, and to commit the horrid ravages foretold by Eliseus. Chap. viii. 12. H.

CHAP. XI. VER. 1. Seed. What cruelties are occasioned by ambition! W.—This is one of the most extraordinary proofs recorded in history. Agrippina was but a faint copy of the unnatural Athalia, (C.) who knew that she was destined for slaughter, if she should fall into the hands of Jehu. M.

VER. 2. Sister. She had probably a different mother, as she consented to the death of Athalia. C.—But the crimes of the latter required such a punishment; and even a daughter would have done wrong to screen her. H.—Josabeth, as she is called in 2 Par. xxii. 11, was married to Joiada, the high priest, ibid.—Out of. Heb. and Paral. Heb. adds, "the rains," (C.) to denote "the captains (Prot.) and the runners," or guards. H.—Joiada was a man of great authority, virtue, and discretion; so that he was able to manage this delicate affair, and no one gave information to Athalia, as she was detested. The Levites and principal men of Juda were admonished, underhand, to be present on the day appointed. The quality of high priest, and the known probity and zeal for the public good, which were conspicuous in Joiada, as well as his being so nearly related to the lawful heir to the crown, made the people readily come forward. C.

VER. 6. Sabbath. On this day the Levites replaced each other; so that many might assemble without suspicion. They guarded the king's apartments in gate behind the dwelling of the shield-bearers; and you shall keep the watch of the house of Messa.

7 But let two parts of you all that go forth on the sabbath, keep the watch of the house of the Lord about the king.

8 And you shall compass him round about, having weapons in your hands: and if any man shall enter the precinct of the temple, let him be slain: and you shall be with the king, coming in and going out.

9 And the centurions did according to all things that Joiada, the priest, had commanded them: and taking every one their men, that went in on the sabbath, with them that went out in the sabbath, came to Joiada, the priest.

10 And he gave them the spears, and the arms of king David, which were in the house of the Lord.

11 And they stood, having every one their weapons in their hands, from the right side of the temple, unto the left side of the altar, and of the temple, about the king.

12 And he brought forth the king's son, and put the diadem upon him, and the testimony: and they made him king, and anointed him: and clapping their hands, they said: God save the king.

13 And Athalia heard the noise of the people running: and going in to the people into the temple of the Lord, 14 She saw the king standing upon a tribunal, as the manner was, and the singers, and the trumpets near him, and all the people of the land rejoicing, and sounding the trumpets: and she rent her garments, and cried: A conspiracy, a conspiracy.

15 But Joiada commanded the centurions that were over the army, and said to them: Have her forth without the precinct of the temple, and whosoever shall follow her, let him be slain with the sword. For the priest had said: Let her not be slain in the temple of the Lord.

16 And they laid hands on her: and thrust her out by the way by which the horses go in, by the palace, and she was slain there.

18 And all the people of the land went into the temple of Baal, and broke down his altars, and his images they broke in pieces thoroughly: they slew also Mathan, the priest of Baal, before the altar. And the priest set guards in the house of the Lord.

19 And he took the centurions, and the bands of the Cerethi, and the Phelethi, and all the people of the land, and they brought the king from the house of the Lord: and they came by the way of the gate of the shield-bearers into the palace, and he sat on the throne of the kings.

20 And all the people of the land rejoiced, and the city was quiet: but Athalia was slain with the sword in the king's house.

21 Now Joas was seven years old when he began to reign.

CHAP. XII.

The temple is repaired. Hazael is bought off from attacking Jerusalem. Joas is slain.

IN the seventh year of Jehu, Joas began to reign: and he reigned forty years in Jerusalem. The name of his mother was Sebia, of Bersabee.

2 And Joas did that which was right before the Lord all the days that Joiada, the priest, taught him.

3 But yet he took not away the high places: for the people still sacrificed and burnt incense in the high places.

4 And Joas said to the priests: "All the money of the sanctified things, which is brought into the temple of the Lord by those that pass, which is offered for the price of a soul, and which of their own accord, and of their own free heart, they bring into the temple of the Lord:

Voluntary contributions, like that of the widow, (Luke xxi. 2,) were also recommended; and Joas sent Levites throughout the land every year to collect what they could for the reparation of the temple. 2 Par. xxiv. 5.

7 And king ^aJoas called Joiada, the high priest, and the priests, saying to them : Why do you not repair the temple ? Take you, therefore, money no more according to your order, but restore it for the repairing of the temple.

8 And the priests were forbidden to take any more money of the people, and to make the repairs of the house.

9 And Joiada, the high priest, took a chest, and bored a hole in the top, and set it by the altar at the right hand of them that came into the house of the Lord ; and the priests that kept the doors, put therein all the money that was brought to the temple of the Lord.

10 And when they saw that there was very much money in the chest, the king's scribe, and the high priest, came up, and poured it out, and counted the money that was found in the house of the Lord :

11 And they gave it out by number and measure into the hands of them that were over the builders of the house of the Lord : and they laid it out to the carpenters, and the masons, that wrought in the house of the Lord,

12 And made the repairs : and to them that cut stones, and to buy timber, and stones to be hewed, that the repairs of the house of the Lord might be completely finished, and wheresoever there was need of expenses to uphold the house.

13 But there were not made of the same money for the temple of the Lord, bowls, or flesh-hooks, or censers, or trumpets, or any vessel of gold and silver, of the money that was brought into the temple of the Lord :

14 For it was given to them that did the work, that the temple of the Lord might be repaired.

15 And they reckoned not with the men that received the money to distribute it to the workmen, but they bestowed it faithfully.

16 But the money for trespass, and the money for sins, they brought not into the temple of the Lord, because it was for the priests.

17 ^bThen Hazael, king of Syria, went up, and fought against Geth, and took it, and set his face to go up to Jerusalem.

18 Wherefore Joas, king of Juda, took all the sanctified things, which Josaphat, and Joram, and Ochozias, his fathers, the kings of Juda, had dedicated to holy uses, and which he himself had offered : and all the silver that could be found in the treasures of the temple of the Lord, and 21 For Josachar, the son of Semaath, and Jozabad, the son of Somer, his servants, struck him, and he died : and they buried him with his fathers in the city of David ; and Amasias, his son, reigned in his stead.

CHAP. XIII.

The reign of Joachaz, and of Joas, kings of Israel. The last acts and death of Eliseus, the prophet : a dead man is raised to life by the touch of his bones.

IN the three and twentieth year^c of Joas, son of Ochozias, king of Juda, Joachaz, the son of Jehu, reigned over Israel, in Samaria, seventeen years.

2 And he did evil before the Lord, and followed the sins of Jeroboam, the son of Nabat, who made Israel to sin ; and he departed not from them.

3 And the wrath of the Lord was kindled against Israel, and he delivered them into the hand of Hazael, the king of Syria, and into the hand of Benadad, the son of Hazael, all days.

4 But Joachaz besought the face of the Lord, and the Lord heard him : for he saw the distress of Israel, because the king of Syria had oppressed them :

5 And the Lord gave Israel a saviour, and they were delivered out of the hand of the king of Syria : and the children of Israel dwelt in their pavilions as yesterday and the day before.

6 But yet they departed not from the sins of Jeroboam, who made Israel to sin, but walked in them : and there still remained a grove also in Samaria.

7 And Joachaz had no more left of the people than fifty horsemen, and ten chariots, and ten thousand footmen : for the king of Syria had slain them, and had brought them low as dust by threshing in the barn-floor.

8 But the rest of the acts of Joachaz, and all that he did, and his valour, are they not written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Israel ?

11 And he did that which is evil in the sight of the Lord: he departed not from all the sins of Jeroboam, the son of Nabat, who made Israel to sin; but he walked in them.

12 But the rest of the acts of Joas, and all that he did, and his valour wherewith he fought against Amasias, king of Juda, are they not written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Israel?

13 And Joas slept with his fathers; and Jeroboam sat upon his throne. But Joas was buried in Samaria, with the kings of Israel.

14 Now Eliseus was sick of the illness whereof he died: and Joas, king^a of Israel, went down to him, and wept before him, and said: O my father, my father, the chariot of Israel, and the guder thereof.

15 And Eliseus said to him: Bring a bow and arrows. And when he had brought him a bow and arrows,

16 He said to the king of Israel: Put thy hand upon the bow. And when he had put his hand, Eliseus put his hands over the king's hands,

17 And said: Open the window to the east. And when he had opened it, Eliseus said: Shoot an arrow. And he shot. And Eliseus said: The arrow of the Lord's deliverance, and the arrow of the deliverance from Syria: and thou shalt strike the Syrians in Aphec, till thou consume them.

18 And he said: Take the arrows. And when he had taken them, he said to him: Strike with an arrow upon the ground. And he struck three times, and stood still.

19 And the man of God was angry with him, and said. If thou hadst smitten five or six, or seven times, thou hadst smitten Syria even to utter destruction: but now three times shalt thou smite it.

20 And Eliseus died, and they buried him. And the rovers from Moab came into the land the same year.

21 ^bAnd some that were burying a man, saw the rovers, and cast the body into the sepulchre of Eliseus. And when it had touched the bones of Eliseus, the man came to life, and stood upon his feet.

22 Now Hazael, king of Syria, afflicted Israel all the days of Joachaz.

23 And the Lord had mercy on them, and returned to them, because of his covenant, which he had made with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob: and he would not destroy them, nor utterly cast them away, unto this present time.

24 And Hazael, king of Syria, died; and Benadad, his son, reigned in his stead.

25 Now Joas, ^cthe son of Joachaz, took the cities out of the hand of Benadad, the son of Hazael, which he had taken out of the hand of Joachaz, his father, by war; three times did Joas beat him, and he restored the cities to Israel.

Amasias reigneth in Juda: he overcometh the Edumites, but is overcome by Joas, king of Israel. Jeroboam, the second, reigneth in Israel.

IN the second year^d of Joas, son of Joachaz, king of Israel, reigned Amasias, son of Joas, king of Juda.

2 ^eHe was five and twenty years old when he began to reign; and nine and twenty years he reigned in Jerusalem; the name of his mother was Joadan, of Jerusalem.

4 But this only, that he took not away the high places; for yet the people sacrificed, and burnt incense in the high places:

5 And when he had possession of the kingdom, he put his servants to death that had slain the king, his father.

6 But the children of the murderers he did not put to death, according to that which is written in the Book of the law of Moses, wherein the Lord commanded, saying: 'The fathers shall not be put to death for the children, neither shall the children be put to death for the fathers: but every man shall die for his own sin.

VER. 17. East, looking towards Galaad, (H.) which the Syrians occupied. M.—These actions were all significative and prophetic. The throwing of a dart was formerly the mode of declaring war. Virg. 9.

VER. 18. Still. This showed a degree of remissness. H.—It was natural for the king to conclude that the more he struck the earth the greater would be his success (C.); and the prophet had perhaps insinuated as much. M.

VER. 19. Angry. Sept. "grieved." H.—Or seven is omitted in Heb. and Sept. This text proves that God knows what would take place conditionally. T.—If, &c. By this it appears that God had revealed to the prophet that the king should overcome the Syrians as many times as he should then strike on the ground; but, as he had not, at the same time, revealed to him how often the king would strike, the prophet was concerned to see that he struck but thrice. Ch.—Joas was assured that he should consume the Syrians. But this was to be understood, provided he performed his part, (M. T.) and that destruction was not said to be entire. H.

VER. 20. Buried him, near Samaria. M.—He had been chosen by Elias sixty-eight years before, and had lived eleven with him. His perfect character is given, Eccl. xlviii. 13. His double spirit represents the plenitude of grace in Jesus Christ; as his raising of the child to life, in such a wonderful manner, denotes his incarnation. The waters of Jericho made sweet, and the healing of Naaman, set before us the virtue of baptism; as the widow's oil shows the great graces which are bestowed by Christ upon his Church. The children devoured, and the Syrians struck blind, remind us of the perversity and blindness of infidels, who will not acknowledge the truth. Matt. xiii. 14. We must now see how the bones of Eliseus prophesied: 1. By raising the dead to life, as a confirmation of all his former predictions; 2. as a proof of a future resurrection, of the virtue of relics, and of the influence of the saints in heaven, whose souls were formerly united to their bodies, and were filled with the Holy Spirit (S. Cyr. of Jer. cat. 18, Illum.); 3. inasmuch as this miracle was a figure of Christ's resurrection, who raised himself to life, and those who believe in him (C.): while Eliseus, in the like state of death, had only raised another. VER. 21. Eliseus. His tomb was not in the city, but in a spacious cave, the entrance to which was secured with a stone, according to custom. This was removed in the hurry, and the corpse thrown into the same recess which had been prepared for the remains of the prophet.

8 Then Amasias sent messengers to Joas, son of Joachaz, son of Jehu, king of Israel, saying: Come, let us see one another.

9 And Joas, king of Israel, sent again to Amasias, king of Juda, saying: A thistle of Libanus sent to a cedar-tree, which is in Libanus, saying: Give thy daughter to my son to wife. And the beasts of the forest, that are in Libanus, passed, and trod down the thistle.

10 Thou hast beaten and prevailed over Edom, and thy heart hath lifted thee up; be content with this glory, and sit at home; why provokest thou evil, that thou shouldst fall, and Juda with thee?

11 But Amasias did not rest satisfied. So Joas, king of Israel, went up; and he and Amasias, king of Juda, saw one another in Bethsames, a town in Juda.

12 And Juda was put to the worse before Israel, and they fled every man to their dwellings.

13 But Joas, king of Israel, took Amasias, king of Juda, the son of Joas, the son of Ochozias, in Bethsames, and brought him into Jerusalem; and he broke down the wall of Jerusalem, from the gate of Ephraim to the gate of the corner, four hundred cubits.

14 And he took all the gold and silver, and all the vessels that were found in the house of the Lord, and in the king's treasures, and hostages, and returned to Samaria.

23 In the fifteenth year of Amasias, ^cson of Joas, king of Juda, reigned Jeroboam, the son of Joas, king of Israel, in Samaria, one and forty years:

24 And he did that which is evil before the Lord. He departed not from all the sins of Jeroboam, the son of Nabat, who made Israel to sin.

25 He restored the borders of ^dIsrael from the entrance of Emath, unto the sea of the wilderness, according to the word of the Lord, the God of Israel, which he spoke by his servant, ^eJonas, the son of Amathi, the prophet, who was of Geth, which is in Opher.

26 For the Lord saw the affliction of Israel, that it was exceedingly bitter, and that they were consumed even to them that were shut up in prison, and the lowest persons, and that there was no one to help Israel.

27 And the Lord did not say that he would blot out the name of Israel from under heaven; but he saved them by the hand of Jeroboam, the son of Joas.

28 But the rest of the acts of Jeroboam, and all that he did, and his valour, wherewith he fought, and how he restored Lamsacus and Emath to Juda, in Israel, are they not written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Israel?

29 And Jeroboam slept with his fathers, the kings of Israel; and Zacharias, his son, reigned in his stead.

CHAP. XV.

The reign of Azarias, and Joathan, in Juda: and of Zacharias, Sellum, Manuhen, Phaceia, and Phacec, in Israel.

IN the seven and twentieth year of Jeroboam, king of Israel, reigned Azarias, son of Amasias, king of Juda.

2 He was sixteen years old when he began to reign, mira, towards Bosra, 3 Kings ix. 18.—Rock. Petra, the capital of the country, formerly called Rekem Arke, or Hagor. Most of the houses are hewn out of the rock. Heb. Solā signifies "a rock;" and many think that this was some other place, whence the Idumeans were hurled down after the victory.

VER. 8. Let us see one another. This was a challenge to fight. Ch. W.—Amasias had many reasons to be displeased with the king of Israel. He might justly re-demand part of the money, (C.) as he had not employed the soldiers. H.—They had also committed depredations in Juda. Paral. Jehu had slain Ochozias, and many of his relations. C.—Josephus also observes that he now required Israel to return to his obedience, and acknowledge the power of the lawful descendants of David. Sanctius.

VER. 9. Thistle. Heb. ēre, something prickly (H.); "a thorn." Syr. and Arab. "a plum-tree." Nothing could be more cutting (C.) than this answer of Joas, to show the king of Juda how much he despised his power. H.—The ancients were much pleased with such ingenious similes. See Judg. ix. 7.

VER. 11. Saw, or fought, ver. 8; chap. xxiii. 29. Bethsames was in the tribe of Dan, (C.) but belonging to the king of Juda.

VER. 13. Cubits. Josephus says 300, and that he led Amasias in triumph through the ruins, (Ant. ix. 10,) on the west side, (C.) or on the north. Villalp. M.

VER. 14. Hostages, as he left Amasias, on condition he should pay tribute, (M.) and took "the children of the nobles" (Chal.) to secure his fidelity. H.

VER. 19. Lachis, in the tribe of Dan. Some say that the king resided there twelve years, in a kind of exile. Malvenda.—But the conspiracy only took place in the last year of his reign. Usher, A. 3194.—Some powerful men rose up against him, and the people were displeased with his conduct. M.

VER. 21. Azarias. Heb. Azriū. Sometimes printed more correctly Azieu, at others, Azrien, (H.) by the blundering of transcribers, who have confounded the name of the king Ozihu (Azieu or Ozias) with that of the priest Ozriehu (Azrien).

VER. 22. Built, or rebuilt Elath; which gives its name to the eastern branch of the Red Sea. David had possessed all Idumea. Amasias had reconquered a great part, and his son pushed his conquests still further.

VER. 25. Wilderness, or the Dead Sea, to which place the dominion of Israel originally extended under Jeroboam I. C.—Opher, in the tribe of Zabulon. Ch.—Prot. "which was of Gath-hepher." H.—Here we learn at what time Jonas lived. M.

VER. 26. In prison is not expressed in the original, (C.) which has, "not any shut up, nor last." Neither those who had strong castles, nor the poorest people, were exempt from suffering. H.—None durst appear. 3 Kings xiv. 10. M.

VER. 28. To Juda, or "of Juda;" Judā (H.); as those strong cities had been conquered by David. The Syr. and Arab. omit this word entirely, and suppose, with many others, that Jeroboam kept possession of these cities. C. T.—In Israel, or "to Israel," over which he reigned. H.

CHAP. XV. VER. 1. Twentieth. Houbigant endeavours to show it should be "the 14th;" Capellus says the 17th (H.); and others have suspected that the number is incorrectly printed. Grot., &c.—But this expedient ought only to be adopted when no other can give satisfaction, and this difficulty may be obviated by saying that Jeroboam's reign with his father continued six years, and that after he had held the sceptre nineteen alone, Azarias commenced (C. Usher); or that there was an interregnum of eleven years, which is not probable. Capel.—Azarias; otherwise called Ozias (Ch.); and this was his real name. Grot. See chap. xiv. 21. H. and he reigned two and fifty years in Jerusalem: the name of his mother was Jechelia, of Jerusalem.

3 And he did that which was pleasing before the Lord, according to all that his father, Amasias, had done.

4 But the high places he did not destroy, for the people sacrificed, and burnt incense in the high places.

5 And the Lord struck the king, so that he was a leper unto the day of his death, and he dwelt in a free house apart: but Joathan, the king's son, governed the palace, and judged the people of the land.

6 And the rest of the acts of Azarias, and all that he did, are they not written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Juda?

7 And Azarias^b slept with his fathers: and they buried him with his ancestors in the city of David, and Joathan, his son, reigned in his stead.

8 In the eight and thirtieth year of Azarias, king of Juda, reigned Zacharias, son of Jeroboam, over Israel, in Samaria, six months:

9 And he did that which is evil before the Lord, as his fathers had done: he departed not from the sins of Jeroboam, the son of Nabat, who made Israel to sin.

10 And Sellum, the son of Jabes, conspired against him: and struck him publicly, and killed him, and reigned in his place.

11 Now the rest of the acts of Zacharias, are they not written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Israel?

12 This was the word of the Lord, which he spoke to Jehu, saying: Thy children, to the fourth generation, shall sit upon the throne of Israel. And so it came to pass.

13 Sellum, the son of Jabes, began to reign in the nine and thirtieth year of Azarias, king of Juda: and reigned one month in Samaria.

14 And Manahem, the son of Gadi, went up from Thersa, and he came into Samaria, and struck Sellum, the son of Jabes, in Samaria, and slew him, and reigned in his stead.

15 And the rest of the acts of Sellum, and his conspiracy which he made, are they not written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Israel?

16 Then Manahem destroyed Thapsa and all that were in it, and the borders thereof from Thersa, because they would not open to him: and he slew all the women thereof that were with child, and ripped them up.

17 In the nine and thirtieth year of Azarias, king of Juda, reigned Manahem, son of Gadi, over Israel, ten years, in Samaria.

18 And he did that which was evil before the Lord: he departed not from the sins of Jeroboam, the son of Nabat, who made Israel to sin, all his days.

19 And Phul, king of the Assyrians, came into the land, and Manahem gave Phul a thousand talents of silver, to aid him and to establish him in the kingdom.

20 And Manahem laid a tax upon Israel, on all that were mighty and rich, to give the king of the Assyrians, each man fifty sicles of silver: so the king of the Assyrians turned back, and did not stay in the land.

21 And the rest of the acts of Manahem, and all that he did, are they not written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Israel?

22 And Manahem slept with his fathers: and Phaceia, his son, reigned in his stead.

23 In the fiftieth year of Azarias, king of Juda, reigned Phaceia, the son of Manahem, over Israel, in Samaria, two years.

24 And he did that which was evil before the Lord: he departed not from the sins of Jeroboam, the son of Nabat, who made Israel to sin.

25 And Phacee, the son of Romelia, his captain, conspired against him, and smote him in Samaria, in the tower of the king's house, near Argob, and near Arie, and with him fifty men of the sons of the Galaadites, and he slew him, and reigned in his stead.

26 And the rest of the acts of Phaceia, and all that he did, are they not written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Israel?

27 In the two and fiftieth year of Azarias, king of Juda, reigned Phacee, the son of Romelia, over Israel, in Samaria, twenty years.

28 And he did that which was evil before the Lord: he departed not from the sins of Jeroboam, the son of Nabat, who made Israel to sin.

29 In the days of Phacee, king of Israel, came Theglathphalasar, king of Assyria, and took Aion, and Abel, the house of Maacha, and Janoe, and Cedec, and Asor,

VER. 3. Lord. Many laudable actions are specified, 2 Par. xxvi. 4. But at last, forgetting the instructions of the prophet Zacharias, he opened his heart to pride, the bane of great souls, and would arrogate to himself the rights of priesthood, which brought on his leprosy. C.

VER. 5. A leper. In punishment of his usurping the priestly functions. 2 Par. xxvi. 19. Ch. W.—The priests boldly remonstrated with him, but to no effect; till the king perceived himself stricken with the leprosy.—Free. Par. apart; at a distance from all. H.—The like rules were observed in cities as in the camp. Lev. xiii. 46. M.—Ozias was in a manner dead to all civil transactions; and Isaiah (vi. 1) probably refers to this event. Syr. and Arab. "he remained hidden." H.

VER. 8. Thirtieth. Usher would place an interregnum of eleven years and a half after the death of Jeroboam, to make the 1st year of Zacharias correspond with the 38th of Azarias, during which, he supposes, the troubles mentioned Amos vii. and viii. happened. But this interregnum has no foundation, ver. 5. C.—Capellus says it would have lasted above twenty-two years. He and Houbigant would read 28th; the latter adds ten years to the reign of Zacharias. The transcriber might easily omit the years, as they end in the same manner as months. Arab. has "six years;" whence we may infer that the copies formerly varied. The exploits of Zacharias require a longer space than six months. Chron. Sac. p. 107, 110.

VER. 17. Ten years. Dating from the time that he was enabled to enjoy the throne in peace, after a struggle of eleven months. Usher, A. 3233.—Phul rendered him this service, having received presents, and one of the golden ealves, (Osce x. 6, and 13,) besides 1000 talents, ver. 19.

VER. 18. Days. During which Jeroboam or Manahem swayed the sceptre. C.—The Sept. refer all his days to the following verse, (11.) which seems to intimate that the tribute was required annually, as may be gathered from the Vulg. veniebat. M.—But Phul probably received the talents only once, to indemnify him for his trouble.

VER. 25. Near. Heb. may be "along with Argob," &c., who were in the conspiracy. Chal., Sept., &c. C.

VER. 26. Israel. This book is lost. H.—The Paral. takes no notice of these kings; but relates only the transactions of the kings of Juda after Joas gained the victory; which greatly abridged their power. Chap. xiv. 14.

VER. 29. Assyria, at the invitation of Achaz. Chap. xvi. 7.—Theglathphalasar is probably the same who is called Ninus the younger, or Thilgan, (Ælian. Animal. xii. 21.) by profane writers. He re-established the kingdom of Nineve in part, after the city had been taken, under his father Sardannapalus, by Arbaces, founder of the empire of the Medes, and by Belesus, Nabonassar, or Baladan, who reigned at Babylon. Such was the state of the Eastern empires at this time. C.—Aion, or Ahion, (3 Kings xv. 20,) perhaps the Emu of Ezech. xlviii. 1. H.—Maacha, whither Seba had retreated, 2 Kings xx. 14. and Galaad, and Galilee, and all the land of Nephtali: and carried them captives into Assyria.

30 Now Osee, son of Ela, conspired, and formed a plot against Phacee, the son of Romelia, and struck him, and slew him: and reigned in his stead, in the twentieth year of Joatham, the son of Ozias.

31 But the rest of the acts of Phacee, *and all that he did, are they not written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Israel?

32 In the second year of Phacee, the son of Romelia, king of Israel, reigned Joatham, son of Ozias, king of Juda.

33 *He was five and twenty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem: the name of his mother was Jerusa, the daughter of Sadoc.

34 And he did that which was right before the Lord: according to all that his father Ozias had done, so did he.

35 But the high places he took not away: the people still sacrificed, and burnt incense in the high places: he built the highest gate of the house of the Lord.

36 But the rest of the acts of Joatham, and all that he did, are they not written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Juda?

37 In those days the Lord began to send into^c Juda, Rasin, king of Syria, and Phacee, the son of Romelia.

38 And Joatham slept with his fathers, and was buried with them in the city of David, his father; and Achaz, his son, reigned in his stead.

CHAP. XVI.

The wicked reign of Achaz: the kings of Syria and Israel war against him: he hireth the king of the Assyrians to assist him: he causeth an altar to be made after the pattern of that of Damascus.

IN the seventeenth year of Phacee, the son of Romelia, reigned Achaz, the son of Joatham, king of Juda.

2 ^aAchaz was twenty years old when he began to reign, the north-west. H.—Thus the Galileans and Nephtali were transported into Assyria, to repeople it after the late ravages. The tribes in Galaad were fixed on the river Gozan. 1 Par. v. 26.

VER. 30. In the twentieth year of Joatham. That is, in the 20th year from the beginning of Joatham's reign. The sacred writer chooses rather to follow here this date, than to speak of the years of Achaz, who had not yet been mentioned. CH.—But Joatham reigned only 16 years, (ver. 33,) so that this was the 4th year of Achaz. H.—Usher says that Osee did not ascend the throne till 9 years after the death of Phacee, as he is asserted to have commenced his reign in the 12th year of Achaz. Chap. xvii. 1. But another difficulty arises from the mention of this 20th year, as Phacee would have reigned 22, instead of 20 (ver. 27); for Joatham only commenced in the 2nd of Phacee. To reconcile these passages, we may conclude that Osee conspired against the king of Israel in the 18th year of Joatham, gained possession of part of the kingdom in the 20th of the same prince, and of the whole in the 12th of Achaz. C.

VER. 34. Did he. Yet he did not imitate his presumption. God gave great success to his enterprises, 2 Par. xxvii. 2.

VER. 5. Then. In punishment of such enormous crimes God first delivered Achaz into the hands of Rasin, (2 Par. xxviii. S. Jer. in Isa vii.,) and afterwards Phacee destroyed 120,000 in one battle, and took 200,000 prisoners, whom the and he reigned sixteen years* in Jerusalem: he did not that which was pleasing in the sight of the Lord, his God, as David, his father.

3 But he walked in the way of the kings of Israel: moreover, he consecrated also his son, making him pass through the fire, according to the idols of the nations which the Lord destroyed before the children of Israel.

4 He sacrificed also, and burnt incense in the high places, and on the hills, and under every green tree.

5 *Then Rasin, king of Syria, and Phacee, son of Romelia, king of Israel, came up to Jerusalem to fight: and they besieged Achaz, but were not able to overcome him.

6 At that time Rasin, king of Syria, restored Aila to Syria, and drove the men of Juda out of Aila: *and the Edomites came into Aila, and dwelt there unto this day.

7 *And Achaz sent messengers to Theglathphalasar, king of the Assyrians, saying: I am thy servant, and thy son: come up, and save me out of the hand of the king of Syria, and out of the hand of the king of Israel, who are risen up together against me.

8 And when he had gathered together the silver and gold that could be found in the house of the Lord, and in the king's treasures, he sent it for a present to the king of the Assyrians.

9 And he agreed to his desire: for the king of the Assyrians went up against Damascus, and laid it waste: and he carried away the inhabitants thereof to Cyrene; but Rasin he slew.

prophet Oded persuaded him to release. Ibid. ver. 8, 11. Salien (A. C. 759) observes, that the two kings then joined their forces, and besieged Jerusalem the following year, but to no purpose. H.—Isaias was sent before the siege to encourage Achaz, and to promise the miraculous birth of the Messias, as a sign that he should be delivered: and, to convince him of it the more, he foretold that the two kings should be destroyed before his own son should be able to say father. Isa. vii. 8, &c. Yet as Achaz did not still amend his life, God sent the same kings the following year (A. M. 3263) to lay waste the country. C.

M.—It seems never to have belonged to Syria, as it was too far from Damascus. Instead of Aram, we should therefore probably read Edom, which words in Heb. are extremely similar, and have been often mistaken, (Judg. xi. 17. C.) particularly as we find that the Edomites took possession of the city. This latter word is indeed Syrians in Heb., &c. H.—Josephus and others maintain that the Syrians seized and kept the place. But they were most likely only invited by the Idumeans to come to their assistance. C.

VER. 7. Son, vassal, or under thy protection. C.—Save me. Achaz sinned by thus placing his confidence in man, after the prophet had given him such assurance from the Lord. M.—He has soon reason to repent of having brought this proud ally into his dominions, as he proved a great scourge (2 Par. xxviii. 20); no less than the Saxons did to the ancient Britons.

VER. 9. Cyrene, not in Egypt, where he had no power, but near the river Cyrus, (C.) in higher Media. Josephus.—Heb. "and took it and carried the inhabitants captives to Kir," (H.) whence the Syrians had come originally. Amos ix. 7.

VER. 11. Priest, or pontiff, as no other would have dared to make this innovation. Salien.—He was guilty of a great weakness; as the altar of Solomon had been so solemnly consecrated by God's presence. All change in religion are dangerous. The Machabees behaved with far greater respect, with regard to the altar which had been profaned. 1 Mac. iv. 45. C.

did Urias, the priest, until king Achaz came from Damascus.

12 And when the king was come from Damascus, he saw the altar and worshipped it: and went up and offered holocausts, and his own sacrifice;

13 And offered libations, and poured the blood of the peace-offerings, which he had offered, upon the altar.

14 But the altar of brass that was before the Lord, he removed from the face of the temple, and from the place of the altar, and from the place of the temple of the Lord: and he set it at the side of the altar towards the north.

15 And king Achaz commanded Urias, the priest, saying: Upon the great altar offer the morning holocaust, and the evening sacrifice, and the king's holocaust, and his sacrifice, and the holocaust of the whole people of the land, and their sacrifices, and their libations: and all the blood of the holocaust, and all the blood of the victim, thou shalt pour out upon it: but the altar of brass shall be ready at my pleasure.

16 So Urias, the priest, did according to all that king Achaz had commanded him.

17 And king Achaz took away the graven bases, and the laver that was upon them: and he took down the sea from the brazen oxen that held it up, and put it upon a pavement of stone.

18 The musach also for the sabbath, which he had built in the temple: and the king's entry from without, he turned into the temple of the Lord, because of the king of the Assyrians.

19 Now the rest of the acts of Achaz which he did, are they not written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Juda?

20 And Achaz slept with his fathers; and was buried with them in the city of David, and Ezechias, his son, reigned in his stead.

CHAP. XVII.

The reign of Osee. The Israelites, for their sins, are carried into captivity: other inhabitants are sent to Samaria, who make a mixture of religions.

VER. 12. And worshipped. Heb. simply, "and the king approached to the altar, and offered on it (13) his holocaust and his meat (or flour) offering, and poured his drink-offering, and the blood of his peace-offerings, upon the altar." H.—He dedicated it with all sorts of sacrifices, forbidding any other to be used in the temple. But shortly after he shut up the temple entirely. 2 Par. xxviii. 24, and xxix. 3. He offered sacrifice to idols upon this altar, (Abul.,) while the priests made use of the same altar to sacrifice to the true God, (ver. 15. M.) unlawfully.

VER. 14. And from. Heb. "from between the new altar and the house of," &c. H.—Achaz had placed his altar before that of Solomon: but he afterwards removed the latter from the right hand of the sanctuary to a corner of the court, on the north side. C.—In the midst of his distress he despised God; sacrificed to the gods of the Syrians, as more powerful and victorious than the Lord; pillaged the temple, which he shut up during the remainder of his reign, (H.) and erected altars for himself in all the corners of Jerusalem. 2 Par. xxviii. 24.

VER. 15. Morning, as prescribed in the law. Exod. xxix. 38.—King's, ordained for sin (Lev. iv. 22); or instituted by Solomon, who left a fund. H. 2 Par. viii. 12. M.—Pleasure. Heb. "to inquire about." H.—I shall do what I think proper with it. M.

VER. 17. Stone, all out of avarice, (H.) and contempt of the Lord, who chastised him. M.—He took away the plates of brass, &c., from the doors, (C.) which Ezechias was forced to replace, (H.) and afterwards to take down for the Assyrian. Chap. xviii. 16. C.

VER. 18. Musach. The covert, or pavilion, or tribune for the king. Ch.—Achaz would not have his ally to be in the court, but placed his throne in the temple. D.—Sept "and the foundation of the chair he built in the house of the Lord." H.—Heb. "and the (musac) covert, or tribune of the sabbath, which they had built in the temple, and the king's entry without, he turned (H.) round (M.) from the temple, for the king of Assur." He despoiled these rich ornaments to gratify the Assyrian. H.—Solomon had built a most magnificent tribune. 2

IN the twelfth year of ^bAchaz, king of Juda, Osee, the son of Ela, reigned in Samaria, over Israel, nine years.

2 And he did evil before the Lord: but not as the kings of Israel that had been before him.

3 ^cAgainst him came up Salmanasar, king of the Assyrians; and Osee became his servant, and paid him tribute.

4 And when the king of the Assyrians found that Osee, endeavouring to rebel, had sent messengers to Sua, the king of Egypt, that he might not pay tribute to the king of the Assyrians, as he had done every year, he besieged him, bound him, and cast him into prison.

5 And he went through all the land: and going up to Samaria, he besieged it three years.

6 ^dAnd in the ninth year of Osee, the king of the Assyrians took Samaria, and carried Israel away to Assyria: and he placed them in Hala, and Habor, by the river of Gozan, in the cities of the Medes.

7 For so it was that the children of Israel had sinned against the Lord, their God, who brought them out of the land of Egypt, from under the hand of Pharaoh, king of Egypt; and they worshipped strange gods.

8 And they walked according to the way of the nations which the Lord had destroyed in the sight of the children of Israel, and of the kings of Israel: because they had done in like manner.

9 And the children of Israel offended the Lord, their God, with things that were not right: and built them high places in all their cities, from the tower of the watchmen to the fenced city.

10 And they made them statues and groves on every high hill, and under every shady tree:

11 And they burnt incense there upon altars, after the manner of the nations which the Lord had removed from their face: and they did wicked things, provoking the Lord.

12 And they worshipped abominations, concerning which the Lord had commanded them that they should not do this thing.

VER. 4. Sua; probably Sabachon, king of Ethiopia, who made himself master of Egypt, and burnt king Bocchoris alive. Herodotus (ii. 137) calls him Abacus. Jacquelot thinks that Sethon is meant, and that he was invaded by Sennacherib on account of this league with Osee. C.—Prison, after he had taken the city, (H.) which held out three years. This great city was then reduced to a heap of ruins, and so continued till after the captivity of the Jews, (1 Esd. iv. 17,) when it began to be peopled again.

VER. 6. Medes. See chap. xvi. 9. The great maxim and policy of these nations was to transport the conquered nations to a distant country, in order to prevent any revolts. C.

VER. 9. Offended. Heb. "They concealed (or spoke secretly, H.) word which were not right before the Lord" (C.); being guilty of hypocrisy or of blasphemy. H.—Watchmen: the meanest huts. T.—All was contaminated. C.—Towers were erected to guard the flocks from thieves. 2 Par. xxvi. 10. M.

13 And the Lord testified to them in Israel, and in Juda, by the hand of all the prophets and seers, saying: 'Return from your wicked ways, and keep my precepts, and ceremonies, according to all the law which I commanded your fathers: and as I have sent to you in the hand of my servants the prophets.

14 And they hearkened not, but hardened their necks like to the neck of their fathers, who would not obey the Lord, their God.

15 And they rejected his ordinances, and the covenant that he made with their fathers, and the testimonies which he testified against them: and they followed vanities, and acted vainly: and they followed the nations that were round about them, concerning which the Lord had commanded them that they should not do as they did.

16 And they forsook all the precepts of the Lord, their God: and made to themselves two molten calves, and groves, and adored all the host of heaven: and they served Baal,

17 And consecrated their sons, and their daughters, through fire: and they gave themselves to divinations, and soothsayings: and they delivered themselves up to do evil before the Lord, to provoke him.

18 And the Lord was very angry with Israel, and removed them from his sight, and there remained only the tribe of Juda.

19 But neither did Juda itself keep the commandments of the Lord, their God: but they walked in the errors of Israel, which they had wrought.

20 And the Lord cast off all the seed of Israel, and afflicted them, and delivered them into the hand of spoilers, till he cast them away from his face:

21 'Even from that time, when Israel was rent from the house of David, and made Jeroboam, son of Nabat, their king: for Jeroboam separated Israel from the Lord, and made them commit a great sin.

22 And the children of Israel walked in all the sins of Jeroboam, which he had done: and they departed not from them,

VER. 18. Sight, as objects of horror, cast away from the temple, and from the promised land.—Tribe, or kingdom. See 3 Kings xii. 20. Israel began to be rejected by God when the schism took place. H.—It was entirely lost when Salmanasar took the people into captivity. Some few were left; and these formed a part of the kingdom of Josias, on their returning to the service of the true God, (2 Par. xxxiv. 6,) while others fled into Egypt. Osee viii. 13, and ix. 3. C.

VER. 23. Day. If Esdras was the author of this book, as it is very probable, this observation would tend to show how much more favourably the Jews were treated than the kingdom of Israel, which was still, for the most part, in captivity. C.

VER. 24. King, Assaraddon, who led away the remnants of Israel, and fulfilled the prediction, Isa. vii. 8. D.—Babylon, or the territory. These people had been lately conquered from the Babylonian empire, from Syria, &c.

VER. 25. Lions. The Sam. Chronicle says the fruits, though beautiful to the eye, were of a poisonous quality. C.—These nations had not been accustomed to fear the Lord in their own country: but God was more offended when they exercised their idolatrous worship in that land, which he had chosen in a particular manner for himself. M.—He suffers wickedness and infidelity to prevail to a certain point; but when his patience is exhausted (C.) all nature fights for him against the wicked. H.

23 'Till the Lord removed Israel from his face, as he had spoken in the hand of all his servants, the prophets: and Israel was carried away out of their land to Assyria, unto this day.

24 And the king of the Assyrians brought people from Babylon, and from Cutha, and from Avah, and from Emath, and from Sepharvaim: and placed them in the cities of Samaria instead of the children of Israel: and they possessed Samaria, and dwelt in the cities thereof.

25 And when they began to dwell there, they feared not the Lord: and the Lord sent lions among them, which killed them.

26 And it was told the king of the Assyrians, and it was said: The nations which thou hast removed, and made to dwell in the cities of Samaria, know not the ordinances of the God of the land: and the Lord hath sent lions among them: and behold they kill them, because they know not the manner of the God of the land.

27 And the king of the Assyrians commanded, saying: Carry thither one of the priests whom you brought from thence captive, and let him go, and dwell with them: and let him teach them the ordinances of the God of the land.

28 So one of the priests, who had been carried away captive from Samaria, came and dwelt in Bethel, and taught them how they should worship the Lord.

29 And every nation made gods of their own, and put them in the temples of the high places, which the Samaritans had made, every nation in their cities where they dwelt.

30 For the men of Babylon made Sochothbenoth: and the Cuthites made Nergel: and the men of Emath made Asima.

31 And the Hevites made Nebahaz, and Tharthac. And they that were of Sepharvaim burnt their children in fire, to Adramelech and Anamelech, the gods of Sepharvaim.

32 And nevertheless they worshipped the Lord. And

He might have been priest of the golden calves, as none of the priests of Jerusalem had yet been taken. Hence he taught the Cuthians to join the worship of God with that of idols. H.—The Samaritans have retained the Pentateuch in the Phœnician character, while the Jews have insensibly adopted the Chaldee, during their captivity. On some occasions these people have boasted of their descent from the patriarchs. John iv. 12, and 20. But in times of danger they have confessed their true origin. Joseph. ix. fin. and xii. 5.

VER. 28. Bethel. Garizim was not then honoured with the temple, as the Samaritans would pretend. Chron. They wished to join in building that at Jerusalem, under Esdras. C.

VER. 29. Dwelt. This impure service did not deserve a mitigation of the late chastisement. But God often punishes in this world (H.) to manifest his glory, (John ix. 3,) and spares to display his power (C.) and goodness. H.—He had sufficiently convinced these nations of his dominion over all.

VER. 31. Hevites, who came from Ava.—Nebuhaz. "Nebo the seeing, or living and possessing." Nebo was a famous idol of Babylon.—Tharthac; perhaps Sar (prince) Sak, or Sesac, (Jer. xxv. 26, and li. 41,) the sun, &c.—Adramelech, "the magnificent king," and Anamelech, "the king of clemency," may denote the sun and moon; as these were the divinities commonly adored in the East, under various names. The same victims were offered to these as to Moloc and Saturn; whence we may infer that they were the same idols. S. Jerom translates the work of Eusebius on the Heb., (C.) and places without any disapprobation of his opinion, that Sochoth-benoth, &c., were the names of towns which the people built in Samaria. H.

VER. 32. Worshipped, or appeared to worship; for true religion admits of a they made to themselves, of the lowest of the people, priests of the high places, and they placed them in the temples of the high places.

33 And when they worshipped the Lord, they served also their own gods, according to the custom of the nations out of which they were brought to Samaria:

34 Unto this day they followed the old manner: they fear not the Lord, neither do they keep his ceremonies, and judgments, and law, and the commandment, which the Lord commanded the children of Jacob, whom he surnamed Israel:

35 With whom he made a covenant, and charged them, saying: You shall not fear strange gods, nor shall you adore them, nor worship them, nor sacrifice to them.

36 But the Lord, your God, who brought you out of the land of Egypt, with great power, and a stretched-out arm, him shall you fear, and him shall you adore, and to him shall you sacrifice.

37 And the ceremonies, and judgments, and law, and the commandment, which he wrote for you, you shall observe to do them always: and you shall not fear strange gods.

38 And the covenant that he made with you, you shall not forget: neither shall ye worship strange gods,

39 But fear the Lord, your God, and he shall deliver you out of the hand of all your enemies.

40 But they did not hearken to this, but did according to their old custom.

41 So these nations feared the Lord, but nevertheless served also their idols: their children also, and grandchildren, as their fathers did, so do they unto this day.

CHAP. XVIII.

The reign of Ezechias: he abolisheth idolatry, and prospereth. Sennacherib cometh up against him: Rabshaces soliciteth the people to revolt: and blasphemeth the Lord.

false god. W.—Lowest. This expression sometimes means the most noble. H.—But the priests were chosen from the midst of the people, without examination. They employed the priest whom the king had sent for the worship of the true God, whilst others were appointed to serve the idols. C.

VER. 34. His ceremonies. Heb. "they fear not the Lord, neither do they after their statutes." Prot. H.—This involves a sort of contradiction, unless we explain it of the Israelites; though they had not been mentioned before. There is a confusion in the original text; and ver. 41 seems to require that we should understand it in this manner, as the Cuthcans could hardly be blamed for neglecting a thing of which they had before no knowledge. The Israelites are justly blamed for obstinately continuing in their prevarication, even in the midst of their captivity. The Syr. and Arab. translate, "The Israelites have been forced to leave their country, because they have abandoned the Lord; and they have not obeyed his laws, his precepts, and his ordinances, which he gave to," &c. Many adopt this explanation. Jun., Vatab., &c. C.—Sept. make these people unite the true and the false worship, as ver. 41. "They did according to their judgment. These fear, and do according to their justifications (δικαιώματα) and decision; and according to the law," &c. H.

CHAP. XVIII. VER. 1. Third, far advanced, as he was associated by his father in the last year of his reign, (C.) or three years before its termination. D.

VER. 3. Good; opening the temple, celebrating the Passover with extraordinary magnificence, &c. He had invited people from all Israel, and at their return they broke many statues. Ezechias provided for the subsistence of the Levitical tribe, by ordering the laws to be put in execution in their favour. 2 Par. xxix. and xxx.

VER. 4. Groves. The people were now more obedient, being terrified at the chastisement of Israel, (C.) though Samaria was not taken till the sixth year of this good king; who carried his reform further than most of his predecessors, (H.) in destroying the high places which had been unlawfully (C.) retained as reign: and he reigned nine and twenty years in Jerusalem: the name of his mother was Abi, the daughter of Zacharias.

3 And he did that which was good before the Lord, according to all that David, his father, had done.

4 "He destroyed the high places, and broke the statues in pieces, and cut down the groves, and broke the brazen serpent," which Moses had made: for till that time the children of Israel burnt incense to it: and he called its name Nohestan.

5 He trusted in the Lord, the God of Israel: so that after him there was none like him among all the kings of Juda, nor any of them that were before him:

6 And he stuck to the Lord, and departed not from his steps, but kept his commandments, which the Lord commanded Moses.

7 Wherefore the Lord also was with him, and in all things, to which he went forth, he behaved himself wisely. And he rebelled against the king of the Assyrians, and served him not.

8 He smote the Philistines as far as Gaza, and all their borders, from the tower of the watchmen to the fenced city.

9 In the fourth year of king Ezechias, which was the seventh year of Osee, the son of Ela, king of Israel, Salmanasar, king of the Assyrians, came up to Samaria, and besieged it,

10 And took it. For after three years, in the sixth year of Ezechias, that is, in the ninth year of Osee, king of Israel, Samaria was taken:

11 And the king of the Assyrians carried away Israel into Assyria, and placed them in Hala, and in Habor, by the rivers of Gozan, in the cities of the Medes:

12 Because they hearkened not to the voice of the Lord, their God, but transgressed his covenant: all that Moses, the servant of the Lord, commanded, they would not hear, nor do.

13 In the fourteenth year of king Ezechias, Sennaconsecrated to the true God. See ver. 22. H.—Yet Josias had still some to remove. M.—Nohestan; that is, their brass, or a little brass. So he called it in contempt, because they had made a god of it. Ch.—Before, this image had been treated with due respect. When any relic or image becomes an occasion of abuse in the Catholic Church, it is thus taken away, or the error is otherwise corrected. See S. Aug. de C. x. 8. Ser. 14 de Verb. Ap., &c. W.

VER. 5. Like him. Ezechias was remarkable for many excellent qualities. Yet we must not push these comparisons too far, contrary to the intention of the sacred writers. The same eulogium is given to Josias, (chap. xxiii. 25,) and David seems to be preferred. Chap. xix. 34. These three are particularly commended. Eccli. xlix. 5. C.—Their virtues were certainly different in some respects. T.

VER. 7. Wisely. Heb. "with success." Syr., &c., "he was victorious wherever he went."—Rebelled. The Assyrian assumed an undue authority in consequence of the words of Achaz, (chap. xvi. 7,) and arrogated to himself the authority of doing what he pleased with the people, ver. 32. Ezechias having formed various alliances, judged it necessary to make some resistance. Yet the prophet Isaias (xxx. 1) complains of his applying to the Egyptians. C.

VER. 13. Sennacherib's expeditions in Egypt and Asia are mentioned by Herodotus (ii. 141) and Berosus, (Joseph. x. 1,) but they do not say that he passed further than Pelusium, (C.) the frontier on the Egyptian side of Palestine. H.—While he was before Lachis, Ezechias, dreading the horrors of war, purchased a peace: but the tyrant soon after sent to require him to surrender at discretion; and in the mean time he went to besiege Lebna, where his envoys found him, having received no answer from the king of Juda. The haughty Assyrian being obliged to go to meet the king of Chus, sent insolent letters to Ezechias; but the latter was assured that all his menaces were to be despised, and on the same night that Sennacherib left Lebna, the angel destroyed 185,000 of his men. C.

cherib, king of the Assyrians, came up against the fenced cities of Juda, and took them.

14 Then Ezechias, king of Juda, sent messengers to the king of the Assyrians, to Lachis, saying: I have offended, depart from me: and all that thou shalt put upon me, I will bear. And the king of the Assyrians put a tax upon Ezechias, king of Juda, of three hundred talents of silver, and thirty talents of gold.

15 And Ezechias gave him all the silver that was found in the house of the Lord, and in the king's treasures.

16 At that time Ezechias broke the doors of the temple of the Lord, and the plates of gold which he had fastened on them, and gave them to the king of the Assyrians.

17 And the king of the Assyrians sent Tharthan, and Rabsaris, and Rabsaces, from Lachis, to king Ezechias, with a strong army, to Jerusalem: and they went up and came to Jerusalem, and they stood by the conduit of the upper pool, which is in the way of the fuller's field.

18 And they called for the king: and there went out to them Eliacim, the son of Helcias, who was over the house, and Sobna, the scribe, and Joahc, the son of Asaph, the recorder.

19 And Rabsaces said to them: Speak to Ezechias: Thus saith the great king, the king of the Assyrians: What is this confidence, wherein thou trustest?

20 Perhaps thou hast taken counsel, to prepare thyself for battle. On whom dost thou trust, that thou darest to rebel?

21 Dost thou trust in Egypt, a staff of a broken reed, upon which if a man lean, it will break and go into his hand, and pierce it? so is Pharaos, king of Egypt, to all that trust in him.

22 But if you say to me: We trust in the Lord, our God: is it not he, whose high places and altars Ezechias hath taken away: and hath commanded Juda and Jerusalem: You shall worship before this altar in Jerusalem?

23 Now, therefore, come over to my master, the king of the Assyrians, and I will give you two thousand horses, and see whether you be able to have riders for them.

VER. 17. Tharthan, or Thathanian, (1 Esd. v. 3,) and in the Greek of Isa. xx. 1, means "the president of tributes," or presents. The two other names denote "the chief eunuch," and "the chief butler," and are not proper names. These officers were sent at the head of a strong army to Jerusalem.—Field, by the torrent Cedron, to the east. There they defied the king, or perhaps endeavoured to persuade him to come out, that they might seize his person. C.—They came in a military capacity, rather than as ambassadors.

VER. 18. House. Josephus says "procurator of the palace or kingdom." H.—The house often refers to the temple, when placed without any explanation. Isa. xxii. 15. C.—Eliacim was prefect of the prætorium, (Salien,) or grand master of the palace. He was richly dressed, and possessed a great authority over the people.—Scribe. See Judg. viii. 14. This Sobna, according to S. Jerom, is different from the one who was over the house in the days of Manasses, before Ehacim was restored to his office, (C.) unless he also was a different person. T.

VER. 22. Jerusalem. Many were perhaps displeased at this injunction, and Rabsaces endeavours to excite them to revolt, and insinuates (C.) that the king had made God his enemy, (H.) and must expect punishment from him. Theod. ^a Isa. xxxvi. 5. He perhaps was ignorant that these altars were contrary to his law. M.

VER. 23. Over. Josephus insinuates that it is a challenge to fight, and that Rabsaces was so confident of victory, that he made this contemptuous proposal, (H.) knowing that the subjects of Ezechias were not good horsemen, (C.) or that they were comparatively (H.) so few in number. M.—Heb. "agree, or give pledges to my master."

VER. 25. Destroy. Prosperity renders a man insolent, and the passions blind

24 And how can you stand against one lord of the least of my master's servants? Dost thou trust in Egypt for chariots and for horsemen?

25 Is it without the will of the Lord that I am come up to this place to destroy it? The Lord said to me: Go up to this land, and destroy it.

26 Then Eliacim, the son of Helcias, and Sobna, and Joahc, said to Rabsaces: We pray thee, speak to us, thy servants, in Syriac: for we understand that tongue: and speak not to us in the Jews' language, in the hearing of the people that are upon the wall.

27 And Rabsaces answered them, saying: Hath my master sent me to thy master, and to thee, to speak these words, and not rather to the men that sit upon the wall, that they may eat their own dung, and drink their urine with you?

28 Then Rabsaces stood, and cried out with a loud voice in the Jews' language, and said: Hear the words of the great king, the king of the Assyrians.

29 Thus saith the king: Let not Ezechias deceive you: for he shall not be able to deliver you out of my hand.

30 Neither let him make you trust in the Lord, saying: The Lord will surely deliver us, and this city shall not be given into the hand of the king of the Assyrians.

31 Do not hearken to Ezechias. For thus saith the king of the Assyrians: Do with me that which is for your advantage, and come out to me: and every man of you shall eat of his own vineyard, and of his own fig-tree: and you shall drink water of your own cisterns, 32 Till I come, and take you away, to a land, like to your own land, a fruitful land, and plentiful in wine, a land of bread and vineyards, a land of olives, and oil, and honey, and you shall live, and not die. Hearken not to Ezechias, who deceiveth you, saying: The Lord will deliver us.

33 Have any of the gods of the nations delivered their land from the hand of the king of Assyria?

34 Where is the god of Emath, and of Arphad? where is the god of Sepharvaim, of Ana, and of Ava? have they delivered Samaria out of my hand?

him. C.—God only used Sennacherib as a rod to chastise his people. M.—The most wicked often represent themselves as the executioners of God's will, and attribute their ambition to his decrees. H.—God did not order the Assyrians to destroy the land: he rather threatened to destroy them. Isa. xxxvii. ; 2 Par. xxxii. W.

VER. 26. Syriac, or Chaldee language, which was spoken at the Assyrian court. 1 Esd. iv. 7; Dan. ii. 4. Rabsaces was acquainted with both the languages; as the Jews say he was an apostate, which they infer from this passage, and from the legates' tearing their clothes when they heard him blaspheme; as they pretend this was only done when blasphemy came from the mouth of an Israelite. Grotius.—But these reasons are very weak. C.—The like was practised when any thing terrifying was heard, ver. 37. H.—The reasons why the legates desire Rabsaces not to speak in a language which the common soldiers understood, was to prevent them from showing their indignation by shooting at him, or out of fear lest they should be induced to cause some sedition. M.

VER. 27. With you. Insolent bravado! whence some have inferred the probability of pigeons' dung being really eaten. Chap. vi. 25. C.—Rabsaces threatens them with all the horrors of famine, so that they shall eat such things, if they refuse to give up the city. M.

VER. 32. Till. Sennacherib will remove you to another country, but it will be as good as this. He requires you to surrender at discretion. C.—Deliver us. This will not be in his power, no more than it was in that of the other tutelary gods. M.

VER. 34. Emath, Emesa.—Arphad, or Arad, an island and city on the continent, (C.) near Tyre.—Of Ana, &c., "of" is not expressed in the Vulg., (H.) and it may be explained as if Ana and Ava were idols of Sepharvaim. M.—But they are commonly supposed to be cities. H.—Ana is probably a city, (D.) built on both sides of the Euphrates, four days' journey from Bagdat. Isaias does not 35 Who are they among all the gods of the nations that have delivered their country out of my hand, that the Lord may deliver Jerusalem out of my hand?

36 But the people held their peace, and answered him not a word: for they had received commandment from the king that they should not answer him.

37 And Eliacim, the son of Helcias, who was over the house, and Sobna, the scribe, and Joahe, the son of Asaph, the recorder, came to Ezechias, with their garments rent, and told him the words of Rabsaces.

CHAP. XIX.

Ezechias is assured of God's help by Isaias, the prophet. The king of the Assyrians still threateneth and blasphemeth. Ezechias prayeth, and God promiseth to protect Jerusalem. An angel destroyeth the army of the Assyrians: their king returneth to Ninive, and is slain by his own sons.

AND^a when king Ezechias heard these words, he rent his garments, and covered himself with sackcloth, and went into the house of the Lord.

2^b And he sent Eliacim, who was over the house, and Sobna, the scribe, and the ancients of the priests, covered with sackcloths, to Isaias, the prophet, the son of Amos.

3 And they said to him: Thus saith Ezechias: This day is a day of tribulation, and of rebuke, and of blasphemy: the children are come to the birth, and the woman in travail hath not strength.

4 It may be the Lord, thy God, will hear all the words of Rabsaces, whom the king of the Assyrians, his master, hath sent to reproach the living God, and to reprove with words, which the Lord, thy God, hath heard: and do thou offer prayer for the remnants that are found.

5 So the servants of king Ezechias came to Isaias.

6 And Isaias said to them: Thus shall you say to your master: Thus saith the Lord: Be not afraid for the words which thou hast heard, with which the servants of the king of the Assyrians have blasphemed me.

7 Behold I will send a spirit upon him, and he shall hear a message, and shall return into his own country, and I will make him fall by the sword in his own country.

8 And Rabsaces returned, and found the king of the Assyrians besieging Lobna: for he had heard that he was departed from Lachis.

9 And when he heard say of Tharaca, king of Ethiopia: Behold, he is come out to fight with thee: and was going against him, he sent messengers to Ezechias, saying:

10 Thus shall you say to Ezechias, king of Juda: Let

Isa. xxxvii. 13.—Samaria, or the inhabitants who had come from distant parts, and had perhaps revolted. We do not, however, find that Sennacherib had conquered them, nor does he pretend that all these conquests were made by himself. C.—He gives part of the honour to his ancestors. CHAP. XIX. VER. 3. Blasphemy. The enemy insults over us (C.) and over God. H.

VER. 4. It may. Lit. "if perhaps the Lord hear." H.—Found. After such devastation has been made in the country, particularly by carrying away the ten tribes, (C.) Ezechias recommends the kingdom to the prayers of the prophet; as we are exhorted to have recourse to the intercession of the saints. H.

VER. 7. Upon him, so that he shall be eager enough to return, (C.) being filled with consternation at the approach of Tharaca. (M.) and at the destruction not thy God deceive thee, in whom thou trustest: and do not say: Jerusalem shall not be delivered into the hands of the king of the Assyrians.

11 Behold, thou hast heard what the kings of the Assyrians have done to all countries, how they have laid them waste: and canst thou alone be delivered?

12 Have the gods of the nations delivered any of them, whom my fathers have destroyed, to wit, Gozan, and Haran, and Reseph, and the children of Eden, that were in Thelassar?

13 Where is the king of Emath, and the king of Arphad, and the king of the city of Sepharvaim, and of Ana, and of Ava?

14 And when Ezechias had received the letter of the hand of the messengers, and had read it, he went up to the house of the Lord, and spread it before the Lord,

15 And he prayed in his sight, saying: O Lord God of Israel, who sittest upon the cherubims, thou alone art the God of all the kings of the earth: thou madest heaven and earth:

16 Incline thy ear, and hear: open, O Lord, thy eyes, and see: and hear all the words of Sennacherib, who hath sent to upbraid unto us the living God.

17 Of a truth, O Lord, the kings of the Assyrians have destroyed nations, and the lands of them all.

18 And they have cast their gods into the fire: for they were not gods, but the works of men's hands, of wood and stone, and they destroyed them.

19 Now therefore, O Lord, our God, save us from his hand, that all the kingdoms of the earth may know that thou art the Lord, the only God.

20 And Isaias, the son of Amos, sent to Ezechias, saying: Thus saith the Lord, the God of Israel: I have heard the prayer thou hast made to me concerning Sennacherib, king of the Assyrians.

21 This is the word that the Lord hath spoken of him: The virgin, the daughter of Sion, hath despised thee, and laughed thee to scorn: the daughter of Jerusalem hath wagged her head behind thy back.

22 Whom hast thou reproached, and whom hast thou blasphemed? against whom hast thou exalted thy voice, and lifted up thy eyes on high? against the holy one of Israel.

23 By the hand of thy servants thou hast reproached of his men by an angel, ver. 35. H.—Lachis and Lobna were both in the mountains of Juda, to the south of Jerusalem. Jos. x. 31. C.

VER. 9. When he, Sennacherib, though it would seem to refer to Rabsaces. H.—Tharaca, called Thearchon by Strabo, (i. and xv. p. 653,) extended his conquests as far as the Pillars of Hercules. Megasthenes.—The Egyptians seem to have called him Sethon, and assert that the god (Vulcan) appeared to him on the approach of Sennacherib, assuring him of his protection. He encamped near Pelusium, where the enemy's army on its arrival was infested with rats, which destroyed their armour, and made them an easy prey. Herodot. ii. 141. It is probable that Taphnes, near Pelusium, was the capital city of Tharaca. Isa. xviii. and xxx. 4. He does not appear to have joined battle with Sennacherib, whose army was destroyed on its march, (ib. x. 24,) the very night that the prophet promised Ezechias a deliverance.

the Lord, and hast said: With the multitude of my chariots I have gone up to the height of the mountains, to the top of Libanus, and have cut down its tall cedars, and its choice fir-trees. And I have entered into the furthest parts thereof, and the forest of its Carmel.

24 I have cut down, and I have drunk strange waters, and have dried up with the soles of my feet all the shut-up waters.

25 Hast thou not heard what I have done from the beginning? from the days of old I have formed it, and now I have brought it to effect: that fenced cities of fighting men should be turned to heaps of ruins:

26 And the inhabitants of them were weak of hand, they trembled and were confounded, they became like the grass of the field, and the green herb on the tops of houses, which withered before it came to maturity.

27 Thy dwelling, and thy going out, and thy coming in, and thy way I knew before, and thy rage against me.

28 Thou hast been mad against me, and thy pride hath come up to my ears: therefore I will put a ring in thy nose, and a bit between thy lips, and I will turn thee back by the way by which thou camest.

29 And to thee, O Ezechias, this shall be a sign: *Eat this year what thou shalt find: and in the second year, such things as spring of themselves: but in the third year sow and reap: plant vineyards, and eat the fruit of them.

30 And whatsoever shall be left of the house of Juda, shall take root downward, and bear fruit upward.

31 For out of Jerusalem shall go forth a remnant, and that which shall be saved out of Mount Sion: the zeal of the Lord of hosts shall do this.

32 Wherefore thus saith the Lord concerning the king of the Assyrians: He shall not come into this city, nor shoot an arrow into it, nor come before it with shield, nor cast a trench about it.

VER. 23. Carmel. A pleasant fruitful hill in the forest. These expressions are figurative, signifying, under the names of mountains and forests, the kings and provinces whom the Assyrians had triumphed over. Ch.—He must have passed by Libanus, and might boast of this exploit. Other proud words to the same purpose are mentioned Isa. x. 9, and xxxiii. 9. He had made himself master of Mount Carmel, as well as of Libanus. C.

VER. 24. Strange waters, which did not run in my original dominions, (H.) or which were found by opening springs before unknown.—Shut-up, with mounds of earth, or in the banks of rivers.

VER. 25. I have formed it, &c. All thy exploits, in which thou takest pride, are no more than what I have decreed; and are not to be ascribed to thy wisdom or strength, but to my will and ordinance: who have given to thee to take and destroy so many fenced cities, and to carry terror wherever thou comest.—Ruins. Literally, "ruin of hills." Ch.—Prot. "Now have I brought it to pass, that thou shouldst be to lay waste fenced cities into ruinous heaps." H.

VER. 27. In. All thy actions, M.—I knew, or disposed of, for wise purposes. Nothing shows more forcibly the dominion of God, even over the most impious. They cannot frustrate the Divine decrees.

VER. 28. Ring, or hook, like that with which fishes are taken. C.—Bit. Prot. bridle, (H.) or a sort of muzzle. M.—I will treat thee like a furious beast.—Camest, without having effected what thou hadst designed. H.

VER. 29. O Ezechias is not in Heb. or Sept.; but they show the sense. H.—Second, which was a sabbatical year. Usher. T.—We elsewhere find signs given as a proof of past events, and that they were from God, who enabled his prophet to foretell both. Exod. iii. 12; Isa. viii. 4. Thus three things are proved. 1. That the prophet is truly animated with the Divine Spirit. 2. That God is the author of the miracle. 3. As also of the sign which follows it, particularly if the sign be likewise miraculous. It was of the utmost importance that the people should be convinced that all proceeded from the hand of Providence, in the overthrow of Sennacherib. C.—Such things. Isaias (xxxvii. 30) specifies apples, as they also supplied the people with food. M.

VER. 31. Sion. These shall repeople the land. In a higher sense, the Christian Church was propagated by the few Jews who believed. C.—Zeal, or ardent love. M.

33 By the way that he came he shall return: and into this city he shall not come, saith the Lord.

34 And I will protect this city, and will save it for my own sake, and for David, my servant's sake.

35 ^bAnd it came to pass that night, that an angel of the Lord came, and slew in the camp of the Assyrians a hundred and eighty five thousand. And when he arose early in the morning, he saw all the bodies of the dead.

36 And Sennacherib, king of the Assyrians, departing, went away, and he returned and abode in Ninive.

37 ^cAnd as he was worshipping in the temple of Nes roch, his god, Adramelech, and Sarasar, his sons, slew him with the sword, and they fled into the land of the Armenians, and Asarhaddon, his son, reigned in his stead.

CHAP. XX.

Ezechias being sick, is told by Isaias that he shall die: but, praying to God, he obtaineth longer life, and in confirmation thereof receiveth a sign by the sun's returning back. He sheweth all his treasures to the ambassadors of the king of Babylon. Isaias reproving him for it, foretelleth the Babylonish captivity.

IN ^dthose days Ezechias was sick unto death: and Isaias, the son of Amos, the prophet, came and said to him: Thus saith the Lord God: Give charge concerning thy house, for thou shalt die, and not live.

2 And he turned his face to the wall, and prayed to the Lord, saying:

3 I beseech thee, O Lord, remember how I have walked before thee in truth, and with a perfect heart, and have done that which is pleasing before thee. And Ezechias wept with much weeping.

4 And before Isaias was gone out of the middle of the court, the word of the Lord came to him, saying:

5 Go back, and tell Ezechias, the captain of my people: Thus saith the Lord, the God of David, thy father: I have heard thy prayer, and I have seen thy tears: and

VER. 32. About it, as was then the custom in besieging cities. Josephus and others suppose that Sennacherib's army was destroyed before Jerusalem. But it seems more probable it fell on the road to Egypt, ver. 7. The camp, which is still shown, might be that of Rabsaces. Chap. xviii. 17. C.

VER. 34. Own sake, who have chosen this city for my sanctuary. M.—David. Here again we behold the influence of the saints with God. H.

VER. 35. Night following the prediction of Isaias, (C.) or that memorable night which would be so terrible to the Assyrians after three years, ver. 29. Thus we read, in that day, &c., Isa. xxvii. M.—The exterminating angel, (Exod. xi. 4. C.) an evil spirit, (Psal. lxxvii. 49,) or the guardian of the synagogue. Abulen-sis.—When he, Sennacherib. Heb., &c. "when they," his few attendants who were spared to announce this judgment (Isa. xxxvii. 36. C.); or when the inhabitants of Jerusalem arose. H.

VER. 37. Nesroch. Josephus calls both the idol and the temple Araskes. Sennacherib persecuted the Israelites for 45 (Greek 55) days. Tob. i. 21.—Sons, as the Jews suppose they were destined for victims by their father, and got before-hand with him. S. Jer. in Isa. x. C.—Armenia. So the Prot. translate Ararat, (H.) where Noc's ark rested. This nation has been esteemed very warlike, and has always asserted its liberty.

CHAP. XX. VER. 1. Days, before the destruction of Sennacherib's army (ver. 6. M.); though some suppose that Ezechias was afflicted with sickness, because he had not shown sufficient gratitude for his deliverance. 2 Par. xxxii. 24 Euseb. and S. Jerom in Isa. xxxix. C.—But it might be sent only to purify him the more, &c. M.—He fell ill the same year that the Assyrian invaded his dominions. Ver. 6, and chap. xviii. 13. The nature of his disorder is not fully known. C.—Unto death, of an illness which would naturally have proved mortal: as that of Benadad was the reverse. Chap. xviii. 10.

VER. 3. Before thee. The saints of the old law frequently mention their good works, (Psal. vii. 9, &c.; 2 Esd. xiii. 14,) which is less common in those of the new. When God rewards our good works, he only crowns his own gifts. C.—Ezechias had sincerely desired to please God, though he might have given way to some imperfections, ver. 1. H.

VER. 5. Day, dating from the time when Isaias spoke. Tostat.—This showed that the cure was miraculous, and not effected by natural remedies only. T.

Behold I have healed thee: on the third day thou shalt go up to the temple of the Lord.

6 And I will add to thy days fifteen years: and I will deliver thee and this city out of the hand of the king of the Assyrians, and I will protect this city for my own sake, and for David, my servant's sake.

7 And Isaias said: Bring me a lump of figs. And when they had brought it, and laid it upon his boil, he was healed.

8 And Ezechias had said to Isaias: What shall be the sign that the Lord will heal me, and that I will go up to the temple of the Lord the third day?

9 And Isaias said to him: This shall be the sign from the Lord, that the Lord will do the word which he hath spoken: Wilt thou that the shadow go forward ten lines, or that it go back so many degrees?

10 And Ezechias said: It is an easy matter for the shadow to go forward ten lines: and I do not desire that this be done, but let it return back ten degrees.

11 And Isaias, the prophet, called upon the Lord, and he brought the shadow ten degrees backwards by the lines, by which it had already gone down in the dial of Achaz.

12 At that time Berodach Baladan, the son of Baladan, king of the Babylonians, sent letters and presents to Ezechias: for he had heard that Ezechias had been sick.

13 And Ezechias rejoiced at their coming, and he showed them the house of his aromatical spices, and the gold, and the silver, and divers precious odours, and ointments, and the house of his vessels, and all that he had in his treasures. There was nothing in his house, nor in all his dominions, that Ezechias showed them not.

14 And Isaias, the prophet, came to king Ezechias,

* Isa. xxxix. 1.—b A. M. 3306, A. C. 693.

VER. 6. Assyrians. It is commonly supposed that this alludes to Sennacherib. But it might refer to his son, who was sending an army. Isa. xx. 1. We ought not to alter the scriptural order of the transactions without cogent reasons.

VER. 8. Sign. He is not incredulous, but gives the prophet an occasion of declaring by what authority he spoke thus. 11.

VER. 10. Lines, according to the usual course of the sun. An instantaneous motion of this kind would, in reality, be as difficult as the retrogradation. But it might not strike the people so much. H.—Some take the lines to designate hours. But the sun is never up twenty hours in that country; and it must have been at such a height, as that it might appear visibly to recede, or to go forward, ten lines. We may therefore suppose that they consisted only of half hours, (T.) or less. C.—The silence of profane historians respecting this miracle is of little consequence. Herodotus (ii. 142) seems to hint at it, as well as at that under Josue (x.), being informed “by the Egyptians, that during 10,340 years the sun had risen four times in an extraordinary manner. It had risen twice where it ought naturally to set, and had set as often where it should rise.” He might have said, more simply, that the sun had twice gone back. See Solin, 45. C.—S. Dion. Arcop. ep. 7, ad Polycarp.

VER. 11. Dial. Heb. also, “steps.” S. Jerom confesses that he followed Sym. in Isa. xxxviii. 7. Whether this dial resembled one of ours, (Grotius,) or was made in the form of steps, (S. Cyr. hom. 3, in Isaias, &c.) or rather of a half globe, (C.) after the Babylonian fashion, (Vitruv. ix. 9,) is not clear. Some have asserted that hours were not known to the Hebrews before the captivity. Usher, A. 3291.—But Toby, (xii. 22,) who wrote at Nineve, under the reign of Manasses, clearly speaks of them. The Egyptians pretend that they invented water hour-glasses. But the invention of dials is attributed to the Chaldees, from whom Anaximander introduced them among the Greeks, under the reign of Cyrus. He died A. 3457.—Achaz had much to do with Theglathphalasar (chap. xvii. 8); and probably obtained this curiosity from the same country. In more ancient times people measured time by the length of their shadow, and were invited to a feast at such a foot in the same manner as we should invite for such an hour. Palladius, Rustic. 12. C.—Till the year of Rome 595, when Naisica dedicated the first water hour-glass, the Romans knew not how the time passed on cloudy days. Pliny vii. 60; Vitruvius ix. 9.

VER. 12. Berodach, or Merodac Baladan. Isa. xxxix. 1. C.—The latter was his father, the famous Nabonassar. D.—Letters, or books. Isa.—Sick. They came to congratulate him on his recovery, and also (M.) to inquire of the wonder and said to him: What said these men? or from whence came they to thee? And Ezechias said to him: From a far country, they came to me out of Babylon.

15 And he said: What did they see in thy house? Ezechias said: They saw all the things that are in my house: There is nothing among my treasures that I have not showed them.

16 And Isaias said to Ezechias: Hear the word of the Lord.

17 Behold the days shall come, that all that is in thy house, and that thy fathers have laid up in store unto this day, shall be carried into Babylon: nothing shall be left, saith the Lord.

18 And of thy sons also that shall issue from thee, whom thou shalt beget, they shall take away, and they shall be eunuchs in the palace of the king of Babylon.

19 Ezechias said to Isaias: The word of the Lord, which thou hast spoken, is good: let peace and truth be in my days.

20 And the rest of the acts of Ezechias, and all his might, and how he made a pool, and a conduit, and brought waters into the city, are they not written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Juda?

21 And Ezechias slept with his fathers, and Manasses, his son, reigned in his stead.

The wickedness of Manasses: God's threats by his prophets. His wicked son, Amon, succeedeth him, and is slain by his servants.

MANASSES was twelve years old when he began to reign, and he reigned five and fifty years in Jerusalem: the name of his mother was Haphsiba.

H.); but he submits with resignation to God's decrees, (S. Ambrose,) and begs that God would be pleased to suffer him to die in peace, as the sentence did not seem to affect his person. H.—Josephus insinuates that he was exceedingly grieved at the distress which hung over his posterity, (Ant. x. 3,) and we are assured that Ezechias and the people entered into sentiments of humility and penance, which for a time averted the wrath of God. 2 Par. xxxii. 26.

CHAP. XXI. VER. 1. Twelve. Being born three years after his father's recovery.—Fifty. Including the years of captivity.

3 *And he turned, and built up the high places, which Ezechias, his father, had destroyed: and he set up altars to Baal, and made groves, as Achab, the king of Israel, had done: and he adored all the hosts of heaven, and served them.

4 And he built altars in the house of the Lord, of which the Lord said: "In Jerusalem I will put my name.

5 And he built altars for all the host of heaven, in the two courts of the temple of the Lord.

6 And he made his son pass through fire: and he used divinations, and observed omens, and appointed pythons, and multiplied soothsayers, to do evil before the Lord, and to provoke him.

7 He set also an idol of the grove, which he had made, in the temple of the Lord: concerning which the Lord said to David, and to Solomon his son: In this temple, and in Jerusalem, which I have chosen out of all the tribes of Israel, I will put my name for ever.

8 And I will no more make the feet of Israel to be moved out of the land, which I gave to their fathers: only if they will observe to do all that I have commanded them, according to the law which my servant Moses commanded them.

9 But they hearkened not: but were seduced by Manasses, to do evil more than the nations which the Lord destroyed before the children of Israel.

10 And the Lord spoke in the hand of his servants, the prophets, saying:

11 "Because Manasses, king of Juda, hath done these most wicked abominations, beyond all that the Amorrites did before him, and hath made Juda also to sin with his filthy doings:

12 Therefore thus saith the Lord, the God of Israel: Behold, I will bring on evils upon Jerusalem and Juda: that whosoever shall hear of them, both his ears shall tingle.

13 And I will stretch over Jerusalem the line of Samaria, and the weight of the house of Achab: and I will efface Jerusalem, as writings upon tables are wont to be effaced, and I will erase and turn it, and draw the pencil often over the face thereof.

14 And I will leave the remnants of my inheritance, and will deliver them into the hands of their enemies:

But we are assured that the eyes of Manasses were at last opened by adversity, and that he performed many laudable things after his return from captivity (2 Par. xxxiii. 4); so that the latter part of his reign resembled that of his father; though the beginning had been like that of the impious Achab. Josias repaireth the temple. The book of the law is found; upon which they consult the Lord, and are told that great evils shall fall upon them, but not in the time of Josias.

JOSIAS was eight years old when he began to reign; he reigned one and thirty years in Jerusalem: the H.—In prison Manasses composed a penitential prayer, which is not absolutely rejected by the Church, but left in the rank of Apocryphal writings (C.); the authority of which is not clearly ascertained. H.—The Greek Church admits this prayer into her Euchologium, (C.) or Office-book. H.—Being liberated, Manasses did all things well, only he left the high places, where the people had been accustomed to sacrifice to the Lord. Hozai wrote his history. 2 Par. xxxiii. 19.

CHAP. XXII. VER. 1. Eight years. After he had reigned other eight, being still but a boy, he began more seriously to seek the Lord, and purified his name of his mother was Idida, the daughter of Hadaia, of Besecath.

2 And he did that which was right in the sight of the Lord, and walked in all the ways of David, his father: he turned not aside to the right hand, or to the left.

3 And in the eighteenth year of *king Josias, the king sent Saphan, the son of Assia, the son of Messulam, the scribe of the temple of the Lord, saying to him:

4 Go to Helcias, the high priest, that the money may be put together which is brought into the temple of the Lord, which the door-keepers of the temple have gathered of the people.

5 And let it be given to the workmen by the overseers of the house of the Lord: and let them distribute it to those that work in the temple of the Lord, to repair the temple:

6 That is, to carpenters and masons, and to such as mend breaches: and that timber may be bought, and stones out of the quarries, to repair the temple of the Lord.

7 But let there be no reckoning made with them of the money which they receive, but let them have it in their power, and in their trust.

8 And Helcias, the high priest, said to Saphan, the scribe: ^bI have found the book of the law in the house of the Lord: and Helcias gave the book to Saphan, and he read it.

9 And Saphan, the scribe, came to the king, and brought him word again concerning that which he had commanded, and said: Thy servants have gathered together the money that was found in the house of the Lord: and they have given it to be distributed to the workmen, by the overseers of the works of the temple of the Lord.

10 And Saphan, the scribe, told the king, saying: Helcias, the priest, hath delivered to me a book. And when Saphan had read it before the king, 11 And the king had heard the words of the law of the Lord, he rent his garments.

12 And he commanded Helcias, the priest, and Ahicam, the son of Saphan, and Achobor, the son of Micha, and Saphan, the scribe, and Asaia, the king's servant, saying:

13 Go and consult the Lord for me, and for the people, and for all Juda, concerning the words of this book which is found: for the great wrath of the Lord is kindled against us, because our fathers have not hearkened to the words of this book, to do all that is written for us.

14 So Helcias, the priest, and Ahicam, and Achobor, and Saphan, and Asaia, went to Holda, the prophetess, the wife of Sellum, the son of Thecua, the son of Araas, keeper of the wardrobe, who dwelt in Jerusalem, in the Second: and they spoke to her.

15 And she said to them: Thus saith the Lord, the God of Israel: Tell the man that sent you to me:

16 Thus saith the Lord: Behold, I will bring evils upon this place, and upon the inhabitants thereof, all the words of the law which the king of Juda hath read:

17 Because they have forsaken me, and have sacrificed to strange gods, provoking me by all the works of their hands: therefore my indignation shall be kindled against this place, and shall not be quenched.

18 But to the king of Juda, who sent you to consult the Lord, thus shall you say: Thus saith the Lord, the God of Israel: Forasmuch as thou hast heard the words of the book,

19 And thy heart hath been moved to fear, and thou hast humbled thyself before the Lord, hearing the words against this place, and the inhabitants thereof, to wit, that they should become a wonder and a curse: and thou hast rent thy garments, and wept before me; I also have heard thee; saith the Lord.

20 Therefore I will gather thee to thy fathers, and thou shalt be gathered to thy sepulchre in peace; that thy eyes may not see all the evils which I will bring upon this place.

The very hand-writing of Moses, containing the record of the covenant, (or the 28th, 29th, 30th, and 31st chapters of Deuteronomy,) which was placed in (C.) or beside the ark, was now happily discovered. H.—It seems it had been misplaced, as the ark itself had been removed, 2 Par. xxiv. 14, and xxxv. 3. It is not at all probable that all the books of Scripture had been destroyed, as there were always some religious souls in both kingdoms; and if some kings had already made the impious attempt, (H.) of which, however, they are never accused in Scripture, they would not have been able to carry their malicious designs into effect. Josias had, before his 18th year, made manv ex-all he read all the words of the book of the covenant, which was found in the house of the Lord.

4 And the king commanded Helcias, the high priest, and the priests of the second order, and the door-keepers, "to cast out of the temple of the Lord all the vessels that had been made for Baal, and for the grove, and for all the host of heaven: and he burnt them without Jerusalem, in the valley of Cedron, and he carried the ashes of them to Bethel.

6 And he caused the grove to be carried out from the house of the Lord, without Jerusalem, to the valley of Cedron, and he burnt it there, and reduced it to dust, and cast the dust upon the graves of the common people.

7 He destroyed also the pavilions of the effeminate, which were in the house of the Lord, for which the women wove as it were little dwellings for the grove.

VER. 8. Bersabee; to which the Israelites went in pilgrimage, Amos v. 5. This place was situated at the southern extremity of the dominions of Juda, as Gabaa was at the northern. The priests being unable to offer sacrifice in the temple, and desirous to gain a livelihood, had been so weak as to conform to the illegal practices of the country; though they seem to have intended to worship God. Dent. xii. 11.—Altars. These might also be consecrated to the true God, but they were forbidden. C.

VER. 9. Brethren. Thus people are degraded in the Christian Church, that they may suffer some confusion (C.) in this world, and repent. Lev. xxi. 17, 22; Eze. xlv. 10. C.—They were reduced to the rank of Levites. M.

VER. 10. Defiled, or declared it unlawful. M.—Topheth may signify, "a drum;" which the Jews say the idolaters beat to prevent their children's cries from being heard, when they were burning in the arms of Moloch. S. Jerom interprets it "latitude," as the vale was very wide, and beautifully adorned with gardens and springs. It formed a part of the vale of Josaphat and of Cedron (C.); or the same valley went by these different names, as well as (11.) by that of Geh- ing in of the gate of Josue, governor of the city, which was on the left hand of the gate of the city.

9 However, the priests of the high places came not up to the altar of the Lord, in Jerusalem: but only eat of the unleavened bread among their brethren.

10 And he defiled Topheth, which is in the valley of the son of Ennom: that no man should consecrate there his son, or his daughter, through fire, to Moloch.

11 And he took away the horses which the kings of Juda had given to the sun, at the entering in of the temple of the Lord, near the chamber of Nathanmelech, the eunuch, who was in Pharurim: and he burnt the chariots of the sun with fire.

12 And the altars that were upon the top of the upper chamber of Achaz, which the kings of Juda had made, and the altars which Manasses had made in the two courts of the temple of the Lord, the king broke down: and he ran from thence, and cast the ashes of them into the torrent Cedron.

13 The high places also that were at Jerusalem, on the right side of the mount of offence, which Solomon, king of Israel, had built to Astaroth, the idol of the Sidonians, and to Chamos, the scandal of Moab, and to Melchom, the abomination of the children of Ammon, the king defiled.

14 And he broke in pieces the statues, and cut down the groves: and he filled their places with the bones of dead men.

15 Moreover, the altar also that was at Bethel, and the high place, which Jeroboam, the son of Nabat, who made Israel to sin, had made: both the altar, and the high place, he broke down and burnt, and reduced to powder, and burnt the grove.

VER. 12. Upper chamber, to be nearer the host of heaven, which they adored. H.—We are assured that the Arabs also adored the sun, and offered incense to it on the tops of their houses. The prophets often upbraid the people with this practice. Jer. xix. 13; Soph. i. 5. C.—It is wonderful that Ezechias had not before removed these remnants of his father's infidelity; and still more that Manasses, after his repentance, had not destroyed what he had unlawfully erected in the courts of the priests and of the people. But Amon might have restored them.—Ran. This shows the zeal of the king. Heb. and Sept. "and thence he broke or tore them."

VER. 13. Offence; Olivet. H.—In the original the terms are very much alike; and the Jews take a pleasure in deforming names for which they have a horror. Solomon had erected temples here to various idols, (3 Kings xi. 7,) which had probably been demolished by Ezechias, but had been rebuilt under Amon, &c., and subsisted during the minority of Josias (C.); or they had been neglected by the pious kings of Juda as no longer dangerous. But Josias, in the fervour of his zeal, thought proper to remove every thing that had been the occasion of offence: Heb. "of corruption."—Idol, and scandal, and abomination, are the same in Heb.

VER. 14. Statues is more proper than the Prot. "images," which would rather be torn.—Dead is not expressed in the Heb. or Sept., but must be understood. H.

VER. 15. Bethel had perhaps fallen into the hands of Juda, after the Israelites had been led away. C.—Josias exercised the like authority throughout all Samaria, (ver. 19,) as the country properly belonged to the house of David, and was God's peculiar inheritance. H.—We may, therefore, conclude that He authorized Josias to act in this manner; and the new inhabitants had no interest in maintaining the superstition of those who had lived there before them. The priest sent by Asarhaddon had taken up his residence at Bethel; whence it is inferred that the town, at that time, was in the hands of the Samaritans, (C.) as it might be still, though Josias might exercise dominion in it as lord paramount. 11 pulchres that were in the mount: and he sent and took the bones out of the sepulchres, and burnt them upon the altar, and defiled it according to the word of the Lord, which the man of God spoke, who had foretold these things.

17 ^aAnd he said: What is that monument which I see? And the men of that city answered: It is the sepulchre of the man of God, who came from Juda, and foretold these things which thou hast done upon the altar of Bethel.

18 And he said: Let him alone, let no man move his bones. So his bones were left untouched with the bones of the prophet, that came out of Samaria.

19 Moreover all the temples of the high places which were in the cities of Samaria, which the kings of Israel had made to provoke the Lord, Josias took away: and he did to them according to all the acts that he had done in Bethel.

20 And he slew all the priests of the high places, that were there, upon the altars; and he burnt men's bones upon them: and returned to Jerusalem.

21 ^bAnd he commanded all the people, saying: Keep the Phase to the Lord your God, according as it is written in the book of this covenant.

22 Now there was no such a Phase kept from the days of the judges, who judged Israel, nor in all the days of the kings of Israel, and of the kings of Juda;

23 As was this Phase, that was kept to the Lord in Jerusalem, in the eighteenth year of king Josias.

24 Moreover the diviners by spirits, and soothsayers, and the figures of idols, and the uncleannesses, and the abominations, that had been in the land of Juda and Jerusalem, Josias took away: that he might perform the words of the law, that were written in the book, which Helcias the priest had found in the temple of the Lord.

25 There was no king before him like unto him, that returned to the Lord with all his heart, and with all his soul, and with all his strength, according to all the law of Moses: neither after him did there arise any like unto him.

26 But yet the Lord turned not away from the wrath of his great indignation, wherewith his anger was kindled against Juda: because of the provocations, wherewith Manasses had provoked him.

27 ^cAnd the Lord said: I will remove Juda also from before my face, as I have removed Israel: and I will cast off this city Jerusalem, which I chose, and the house, of which I said: My name shall be there.

28 Now the rest of the acts of Josias, and all that he did, are they not written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Juda?

29 ^dIn his days, Pharaon Nechao, king of Egypt, ^ewent up against the king of Assyria to the river Euphrates: and king Josias went to meet him: and was slain at Mageddo, when he had seen him.

30 And his servants carried him dead from Mageddo: and they brought him to Jerusalem, and buried him in his own sepulchre. And the people of the land took Joachaz, the son of Josias: and they anointed him, and made him king in his father's stead.

31 ^fJoachaz was three and twenty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned three months in Jerusalem: the name of his mother was Amital, the daughter of Jeremias, of Lobna.

32 And he did evil before the Lord, according to all that his fathers had done.

33 And Pharaon Nechao bound him at Rebla, which is in the land of Emath, that he should not reign in Jerusalem: and he set a fine upon the land, of a hundred talents of silver, and a talent of gold.

34 And Pharaon Nechao made Eliacim, the son of Josias, king in the room of Josias his father: and turned his name to Joakim. And he took Joachaz away and carried him into Egypt, and he died there.

35 And Joakim gave the silver and the gold to Pharaon,

VER. 18. Samaria. It seems this word has been inserted instead of Juda, as it is certain the prophet came thence, ver. 17, and 3 Kings xiii. 32. C.—But thus both prophets would be identified. It would rather appear that the seducing prophet, who resided at Bethel, is here said to have come out of Samaria, though that place was not raised to the dignity of a royal city (H.) till fifty years afterwards. VER. 20. Slew. Most of the Israelites who had been left (H.) embraced the true religion, after the captivity of their brethren, (C.) and adhered to the kings of Juda, (ver. 15. God therefore withdrew the good Josias, who was their bulwark, that they might feel the effects of his just indignation. C.

VER. 30. Sepulchre. Par. xxxv., in the monument (or mausoleum) of his fathers. Such was the end of Josias: he fell gloriously in defence of his country, as he had spent his life in promoting religion. God therefore withdrew him from the sight of the miseries which were shortly to fall on his devoted people. Chap. xxii. 20. H.—He was a prince of a most excellent disposition, and receives the highest encomium, ver. 25, and Eccli. xlii. 1. Jeremias composed his funeral canticle, which was sung on his anniversary for many years. 2 Par. xxxv. 24. The mourning for this pious king became proverbial, and resembled that which should be made for the Messias. Zac. xii. 11. The life and death of Josias pre-figured those of Jesus Christ; who should be long expected as the restorer of the true religion, the teacher of a more excellent law, and the most innocent victim for the sins of the people. The glorious Phase under Josias was but a faint representation of the eucharistie sacrifice. C.

VER. 31. Old. Eliacim, his brother, was twenty-five. H.—Perhaps Joachaz was esteemed more by the people, as fitter to defend them against the king of Egypt, who had proceeded on his journey to attack Charchemis on the Euphrates. C.—Having placed a garrison in it, he was met by Joachaz, and gained a victory over him at Rebla, (H.) as Sanctius gathers from Ezec. xix. 4. Hence he treated the captive king with such severity, and sent him into Egypt to die in chains. Jer. xxii. 11. Joachaz is called Sellum (in Jer.) and Jeconias, 3 Esd. i. 34. C.—He was a lion only against his own subjects. T.

VER. 34. Joakim. Thus he asserted his dominion over him, as Nabuchoafter he had taxed the land for every man, to contribute according to the commandment of Pharaoh: and he exacted both the silver and the gold of the people of the land, of every man according to his ability: to give to Pharaoh Nechao.

36 ^aJoachim was five and twenty years old when he began to reign: ^band he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem: the name of his mother was Zebida, the daughter of Phadaja, of Ruma.

37 And he did evil before the Lord according to all that his fathers had done.

CHAP. XXIV.

The reigns of Joakim, Joachin, and Sedecias.

IN his days Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, came up, ^cand Joachim became his servant three years: then again he rebelled against him.

2 And the Lord sent against him the rovers of the Chaldees, and the rovers of Syria, and the rovers of Moab, and the rovers of the children of Ammon: and he sent them against Juda, to destroy it; ^daccording to the word of the Lord, which he had spoken by his servants, the prophets.

3 And this came by the word of the Lord against Juda, to remove them from before him for all the sins of Manasses which he did;

4 And for the innocent blood that he shed, filling Jerusalem with innocent blood: and therefore the Lord would not be appeased.

5 But the rest of the acts of Joachim, and all that he did, are they not written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Juda? and Joachim slept with his fathers:

6 And Joachin, his son, reigned in his stead.

7 And the king of Egypt came not again any more out of his own country: for the king of Babylon had taken all that had belonged to the king of Egypt, from the river of Egypt, unto the river Euphrates.

8 Joachin was eighteen years old when he began to Nabuchodonosor did afterwards over Matthanias. Chap. xxiv. 17; Dan. i. 6. C.—Eliacim means nearly the same as Joakim, "the Lord's strength," or "appointment." M.

VER. 37. Fathers, or ancestors, not his immediate father Josias, ver. 32. H.—Joachim chose to imitate the wicked, and was not deterred by the chastisement of his brother. C.—His character was marked with avarice and cruelty. He slew the prophet Urias. Jer. xxii. 13, and xxvi. 23. H.—S. Matthew, i. 11, calls him Jeconias. (M.) 1 Par. iii. 15.

CHAP. XXIV. VER. 1. Days. At the end of the third year. Dan. i. 1; Jer. xxv. 1.—Nabuchodonosor, in the first year of his reign, (Jer. ib.,) being associated in the empire of his aged father Nabopolassar, came up to attack Carchemis, (Jer. xli. 1,) and the other dominions of Egypt, (ver. 7,) and their ally or vassal Joakim. He took the city of Jerusalem, and carried off many of the sacred vessels and captives, (Dan. i. C.) conducting the king himself to prison, for a short time, when he set him at liberty, on condition that he should pay tribute. 2 Par. xxxvi. 6. T.—Joachim obeyed for three years.—Then again. Heb. "he turned and rebelled." This was the first time, as he had before been subject to Egypt, and was attacked on that account. He probably took advantage of the absence of Nabuchodonosor, who was gone with haste to secure all the dominions of his deceased father. In the seventh year of his reign he sent rovers to punish Joakim. When the latter had reigned near eleven years they reduced the kingdom, and treated the king's corpse with the utmost indignity. Jer. xxii. 19. T.

VER. 2. The rovers. Latrunculos. Bands or parties of men who pillaged and plundered wherever they came. Ch. See chap. v. 2, and Judg. xi. 3.

VER. 7. Egypt, at least from the eastern mouth of the Nile, at Damietta, to the Euphrates. Nechao had conquered all those countries: but now he was driven into his ancient territories. After some time he attempted to relieve Sedecias, but was repulsed by Nabuchodonosor, who soon after took Jerusalem. Jer. xxxvii. 6. C.—Again, during the reign of Joachin. D.

VER. 8. Eighteen. One Heb. MS. reads "thirteen," (H.) or three instead of eight. Kennicott.—The number seems also (H.) to be incorrect in Paral., where 9 And he did evil before the Lord, according to all that his father had done.

10 ^fAt that time the servants of Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, came up against Jerusalem, and the city was surrounded with their forts.

11 And Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, came to the city, with his servants, to assault it.

12 And Joachin, king of Juda, went out to the king of Babylon, he, and his mother, and his servants, and his nobles, and his eunuchs: and the king of Babylon received him in the eighth year of his reign.

13 And he brought out from thence all the treasures of the house of the Lord, and the treasures of the king's house: and he cut in pieces all the vessels of gold which Solomon, king of Israel, had made in the temple of the Lord, according to the word of the Lord.^g

14 And he carried away all Jerusalem, and all the princes, and all the valiant men of the army, to the number of ten thousand, into captivity: and every artificer and smith: and none were left, but the poor sort of the people of the land.

15 ^hAnd he carried away Joachin into Babylon, and the king's mother, and the king's wives, and his eunuchs and the judges of the land he carried into captivity, from Jerusalem, into Babylon.

16 And all the strong men, seven thousand, and the artificers, and the smiths, a thousand, all that were valiant men, and fit for war: and the king of Babylon led them captives into Babylon.

17 ⁱAnd he appointed Matthanias, his uncle, in his stead: and called his name Sedecias.

18 Sedecias was one and twenty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem: the name of his mother was Amital, the daughter of Jeremias, of Lobna.

we find that Joachin was only eight years old, as the Syr. and Arab. have eighteen in both places.

VER. 9. Done. Ezechiel, xiv. 5, and Jeremias, xxii. 24, speak of this king under the name of (H.) Jeconias. C.

VER. 12. Went out. Josephus (Bel. vi. 8) insinuates, to save the vessels of the temple. C.—Jeremias had persuaded him to desist from making resistance. T.—Nabuchodonosor did not comply with his promise, (M.) but took the king and all the artificers (ver. 14) to Babylon, that the former might not attempt to revenge the injuries done to his father, nor the latter contribute to fortify the towns.

VER. 13. All, or a great part; for some were still left. 1 Esd. i.—Which, or like unto those which Solomon had made. The identical vessels had been perhaps (D.) plundered. M.—Nabuchodonosor took away the sacred vessels at three different times: 1. Under Joakim. These he placed in the temple of his god; and they were afterwards profaned by Baltassar, and restored by Cyrus. Dan. i. 2, and v. 2, and 1 Esd. i. 7. 2. Many he now broke in pieces. 3. Under Sedecias he took probably what that prince had made. Chap. xxv. 13; Bar. . . . Lord, by Isaias (xxxix. 6; sup. chap. xx. 17) and Jeremias, xv. 13.

VER. 14. All, the chief men. Chap. xxv. 18. Ezechiel and Mardocheus were in the number.—Engraver. The first term means a workman in wood, stone, &c.; the latter seems to designate a mason, smith, or garrison-soldier (C.) or one expert in making camps (Sa.); an engineer. T.—S. Jerom explains it of one who enchases jewels in gold. M.

VER. 15. Judges. Heb. "the rams." Chd "the grandees." These are not included in the 10,000, (ver. 14,) no more than (C.) the 8000 who were taken from the country (ver. 16. C.); or 3000 were taken from Jerusalem, and 7000 from other places. D.

VER. 17. Uncle, the third son of Josias, who was placed on the throne. H.—The eldest, (M.) called Johanan, seems to have died in his youth. C.—Sedecias means "the justice of God," (T.) as Nabuchodonosor had adjured him, or

CHAP. XXV.

Jerusalem is besieged and taken by Nabuchodonosor: Sedecias is taken: the city and temple are destroyed. Godolias, who is left governor, is slain. Joachin is exalted by Evilmerodoch.

AND^a it came to pass in the ninth year of his reign, in the tenth month, the tenth day of the month, that Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, came, he and all his army, against Jerusalem: and they surrounded it: and raised works round about it.

2 And the city was shut up and besieged till the eleventh year of king Sedecias,

3 The ninth day of the month: and a famine prevailed in the city, and there was no bread for the people of the land.

4 And a breach was made into the city: and all the men of war fled in the night between the two walls by the king's garden, (now the Chaldees besieged the city round about,) and Sedecias fled by the way that leadeth to the plains of the wilderness.

5 And the army of the Chaldees pursued after the king, and overtook him in the plains of Jericho: and all the warriors that were with him were scattered, and left him:

6 So they took the king, and brought him to the king of Babylon, to Rablatha, and he gave judgment upon him.

7 And he slew the sons of Sedecias before his face, and he put out his eyes, and bound him with chains, and brought him to Babylon.

8 In the fifth month, the seventh day of the month, the same is the nineteenth year of the king of Babylon, came Nabuzardan, commander of the army, a servant of the king of Babylon, into Jerusalem.

9^b And he burnt the house of the Lord, and the king's house, and the houses of Jerusalem, and every great house he burnt with fire.

10 And all the army of the Chaldees, which was with the commander of the troops, broke down the walls of Jerusalem round about.

11 And Nabuzardan, the commander of the army, carried away the rest of the people, that remained in the city, and the fugitives, that had gone over to the king of Babylon, and the remnant of the common people.

12 But of the poor of the land he left some dressers of vines and husbandmen.

13 And the pillars of brass that were in the temple of the Lord, and the bases, and the sea of brass, which was in the house of the Lord, the Chaldees broke in pieces, and carried all the brass of them to Babylon.

14 They took away also the pots of brass, and the mazers, and the forks, and the cups, and the mortars, and all the vessels of brass, with which they ministered.

15 Moreover also the censers, and the bowls, such as were of gold in gold: and such as were of silver in silver, the general of the army took away.

16 That is, two pillars, one sea, and the bases which Solomon had made in the temple of the Lord. And the brass of all these vessels was without weight:

17 One pillar was eighteen cubits high: and the chapter of brass, which was upon it, was three cubits high: and the net-work, and the pomegranates that were upon the chapter of the pillar, were all of brass: and the second pillar had the like adorning.

18 And the general of the army took Saraïas, the chief priest, and Sophonias, the second priest, and three door-keepers:

19 And out of the city one eunuch, who was captain over the men of war: and five men of them who had stood before the king, whom he found in the city, and Sopher, the captain of the army, who exercised the young soldiers of the people of the land: and threescore men of the common people, who were found in the city:

20 These Nabuzardan, the general of the army, took made him swear by God (2 Par. xxxvi. 15. H.); and thus insinuated that, if he proved faithless, he should feel the effects of God's justice, as it happened. T.

CHAP. XXV. VER. 1. Day, the 30th of Jan., A. 3414. Usher.—Some time after, Nabuchodonosor left the siege, to attack the Egyptians (Jer. xxxvii. 3); and the people of Jerusalem, (H.) supposing that he would return no more, took back their slaves, whom Jeremias had prevailed on them to liberate, according to the law, during the sabbatical year. Jer. xxxiv. 8. Usher.—The prophet reproached them for it; and announced the destruction of the city so plainly, that he was thrown into prison. Jer. xxi., and xxxiv., and xxxviii.—It. The Babylonians had already taken all the towns of Juda, except Azeca and Lachis. Jer. xxxiv. 7. C.

VER. 3. Of the. Prot. supply, "fourth month," as it is in the parallel passage, Jer. lii. 6, And in the fourth month, the ninth day of the month. In chap. xxxix. 2, we read, in the fourth month, the fifth day of the month, the city was broken up, or a breach was made in the outer wall. In the course of a few days the princes of Babylon seized the middle gate; and the famine became so intolerable that, on the ninth, it was judged expedient to abandon the city. H.

VER. 6. Rablatha, the Antioch of Syria, (S. Jer.) which was styled also Epiphania, (T.) or more probably Apamea, where Nabuchodonosor was when Jerusalem was taken.—Upon him, by the advice of his council. Jer. xxxix. 3, 13. Syr. "they made him answer the charges brought against him," (C.) of ingratitude and rebellion, as he had been appointed by the king of Babylon, and had sworn to be faithful to him. M.

VER. 7. Eyes; after they had been excruciated by the sight of his slaughtered children.—Babylon, where he was honourably buried, by order of Nabuchodonosor. Joseph. x. 11.

VER. 8. Seventh. Jeremias (lii. 12) mentions the tenth; on which day Nabuzardan probably arrived, or begun to put his orders in execution. Yet the Jews keep the ninth as an annual fast. Zac. vii. 3, and viii. 19. The temple was destroyed on Saturday, 27th August, A. 3416, (Usher,) after it had stood 424 years, 3 months, and 8 days. C.

VER. 9. Great. This word is supplied from Jer. lii. 13, and Heb. "great man's house." Prot. But Jer. xxxix. 8, we read, they burnt the houses of the people, (H.) even the meanest, destroyed the walls, and took the people to Babylon, only leaving some countrymen to cultivate the land. Jeremias was set at liberty by Nabuzardan, (ib. 11,) and chose to continue with this remnant of the people, for their comfort and direction. H.—They applied to him to know whether they should retire into Egypt; and after ten days he gave them God's injunction to the contrary; but they despised it. Jer. xlii. 7, and xliii. 1. The prophet and his secretary, Baruch, followed them into Egypt. Thus was the country abandoned, and the monarchy at an end, after it had subsisted 468 years from the commencement of David's reign. C.—Yet some little power remained in the family of David, even at Babylon (ver. 27); and the Jewish affairs were re-established after the captivity, though not in such splendour as formerly, nor always under princes of the same royal family. H.

VER. 18. Saraïas, father of Esdras, and of Josedeck, who succeeded in the Pontificate. 1 Esd. vii. 1, and 1 Par. vi. 14. T.—Kreper. These seem to have concealed themselves in the temple. M.—They were punished, as the counsellors of Sedecias, by being beheaded or crucified. Lam. v. 12. T.

VER. 19. Eunuch. Prot. "officer." H.—Five. Arab. and Jeremias, lii. 28, read seven, as two were probably discovered afterwards, (C.) or had fled. D.—These were chief officers.—Sopher. Sept. "and the secretary of the general." Syr. "the secretary and chiefs of the armies." C.—Prot. "the principal scribe." H.—It is not clear whether the general had this title of sopher, "scribe," himself; or it rather designates his secretary, or scribe. Judg. viii. 14. C.—Many date the seventy years' captivity from the last year of Joachin. D.

away, and carried them to the king of Babylon, to Rablath.

21 And the king of Babylon smote them, and slew them at Rablath, in the land of Emath: so Juda was carried away out of their land.

22 ^aBut over the people that remained in the land of Juda, which Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, had left, he gave the government to Godolias, the son of Ahicam, the son of Saphan.

23 And when all the captains of the soldiers had heard this, they and the men that were with them; to wit, that the king of Babylon had made Godolias governor; they came to Godolias to Maspha, Ismael, the son of Nathanas, and Johanan, the son of Caree, and Saraia, the son of Thanehumeth, the Netophathite, and Jezonias, the son of Maachathi, they and their men.

24 And Godolias swore to them and to their men, saying: Be not afraid to serve the Chaldees: stay in the land, and serve the king of Babylon, and it shall be well with you.

25 But it came to pass in the seventh month, ^bthat

VER. 22. Godolias. The Rabbins say that he had gone over to the Chaldees; Jeremias (xxxviii. 2, 17) had advised all to do so, and Godolias was of an easy, complying disposition. Grotius.—But God did not suffer him to collect the remnants of his unhappy people, (C.) at least for any long time, as he was slain by Ismael, (Jer. xl. 12, and xli. 1. H.) who probably envied his dignity. Joseph. Salien.

VER. 27. Twentieth. Jeremias (lii. 31) says the 25th, when Nabuchodonosor was buried and (D.) the decree was made, though it was not put in execution till two days later. C.—Evilmerodach, whose proper name was Baltaseer, (Dan. v. 1. T.) or the latter was his son. The Jews say that he had been confined in prison with Joachin, because he had not administered the kingdom well, during the seven years' illness of his father, Nabuchodonosor.

Ismael, the son of Nathanas, the son of Elisama, of the seed royal, came, and ten men with him, and smote Godolias; so that he died: and also the Jews and the Chaldees that were with him in Maspha.

26 And all the people, both little and great, and the captains of the soldiers, rising up, went to Egypt, fearing the Chaldees.

27 ^cAnd it came to pass in the ^dseven and thirtieth year of the captivity of Joachin, king of Juda, in the twelfth month, the seven and twentieth day of the month: Evilmerodach, king of Babylon, in the year that he began to reign, lifted up the head of Joachin, king of Juda, out of prison.

28 And he spoke kindly to him: and he set his throne above the throne of the kings that were with him in Babylon.

29 And he changed his garments which he had in prison, and he ate bread always before him, all the days of his life.

30 And he appointed him a continual allowance, which was also given him by the king, day by day, all the days of his life.

^c Jer. lii. 31.—^d A. M. 3442, A. C. 562.

VER. 28. Kings, who had been made captives. Adonibezee had seventy. Judg. i. 7. The prosperity of Joachin does not seem to have been of long continuance, as his benefactor did not reign above two (ver. 27) or three years. Dan. viii. 1.

VER. 30. His life, may be referred to Evilmerodach, unless Joachin was involved in his disgrace, and perished at the same time. C.—He received all that was necessary to support his household, daily. Grotius.—In Jer. lii. 34, until the day of his death, seems to be an useless "tautology," which is omitted here, and in "our oldest MS." says Kennicott; who observes that whoever will compare these passages, "will find many variations, and some corruptions." But most of them may be easily explained, ver. 3, 8, 27, &c. H.

THE FIRST BOOK OF PARALIPOMENON.

These Books are called by the Greek Interpreters PARALIPOMENON (Παραλειπόμενων); that is, of things left out, or omitted; because they are a kind of supplement of such things as were passed over in the Books of Kings. The Hebrews call them, Dibre Hajamin; that is, The words of the days, or The Chronicles. Not that they are the books which are so often quoted in the Kings, under the title of The Words of the days of the kings of Israel, and of the kings of Juda; for the Books of Paralipomenon were written after the Books of Kings; but because, in all probability, they have been abridged from those ancient words of the days, by Esdras, or some other sacred author. Ch.—The author of this compilation refers to the same works, 2 Par. xvi. 11, &c. These journals were principally composed by prophets, though there were other people appointed to write the most important occurrences. 2 Kings viii. 16; 4 Kings xviii. 18. The genealogies of families, particularly of the Levites, and the interests of piety and religion, are kept most in view. C.—The variations which appear between this work and the other parts of Scripture, are owing to the faults of transcribers; and though they could not be satisfactorily explained, it would be rashness to condemn the author of inaccuracy at this distance of time, when we know so little of those transactions. H.—Who calls in question the history of Alexander, though the different authors of it scarcely agree in one calculation of the number of troops, nations conquered, &c.? Yet the work before us is of far higher authority, as it was dictated by the Holy Ghost. C.—"Without it, a person would in vain pretend to understand the Scriptures." It is "an epitome of the Old Testament," and "explains many difficulties of the Gospels." S. Jerom.—The author does not, however, seem to have designed to draw up an exact epitome, or to supply the deficiencies of other works. C.—The first nine chapters contain various genealogical histories. In the tenth we have the election and death of Saul; and in the remainder of the first book the transactions of David, (W.) till the year 2990, where the second book commences with the reign of Solomon, and brings us to the end of the captivity, A. M. 3468. C.

VER. 32. Concubine. She was his lawful wife, but of an inferior degree: and such were called concubines. Ch.—She has the title of wife, Gen. xxv. 1.

VER. 36. And by. This serves to explain the difficulty; as Thamna would otherwise seem to be a daughter of Eliphaz, though we know she was his concubine. Gen. xxxvi. 12. H.—The Heb., Rom. Sept., Syr., and Latin, suppose that Thamna was the brother of Amalec; but the Alex. Sept. has, "Now Thamna, the concubine of Eliphaz, bore Amalec." Arab. "And Thamna, who was the concubine of Eliphaz, the son of Esau, bore him Amalec," which seems to be the true reading. Kennicott.

VER. 38. Seir, not Esau, but the Horrite, (Gen. xxxvi. 20. M.) which is added in order to explain the origin of Thamna. D.

VER. 40. Dison. We must add Oolibama. Gen. xxxvi. 25.

VER. 41. Hamram. In Gen. Hamdan. Two letters have been mistaken

32 And the sons of Cetura, Abraham's concubine, whom she bore: Zamran, Jecsan, Madan, Madian, Jeshoc, and Sue. And the sons of Jecsan, Saba, and Dadan. And the sons of Dadan: Assurim, and Latussim, and Laomim.

33 And the sons of Madian: Ephra, and Ephraim, and Henoah, and Abida, and Eldaa. All these are the sons of Cetura.

34 And Abraham begot Isaac: and his sons were Esau and Israel.

35 The sons of ^eEsau: Eliphaz, Rahuel, Jehus, Ithelom, and Core.

36 The sons of Eliphaz: Theman, Omar, Sephi, Gathan, Cenez, and by Thamna, Amalec.

37 The sons of Rahuel: Nahath, Zara, Samma, Meza.

38 The sons of Seir: Lotan, Sobal, Sebeon, Ana, Dison, Eser, Disan.

39 The sons of Lotan: Hori, Homam. And the sister of Lotan was Thamna.

40 The sons of Sobal: Alian, and Manahath, and Ebal, Sephi, and Onam. The sons of Sebeon: Aia and Ana. The sons of Ana: Dison.

41 The sons of Dison: Hamram, and Eseban, and Jethran, and Charan.

42 The sons of Eser: Balaan, and Zavan, and Jacan. The sons of Disan: Hus and Aran.

43 Now these are the kings that reigned in the land of Edom, before there was a king over the children of Israel: Bale, the son of Beor: and the name of his city was Denaba.

44 And Bale died, and Jobab, the son of Zare, of Bosra, reigned in his stead.

45 And when Jobab also was dead, Husam, of the land of the Themanites, reigned in his stead.

46 And Husam also died, and Adad, the son of Badad, reigned in his stead; and he defeated the Madianites, in the land of Moab: and the name of his city was Avith.

47 And when Adad also was dead, Semla, of Masreca, reigned in his stead.

48 Semla also died, and Saul, of Rohoboth, which is near the river, reigned in his stead.

49 And when Saul was dead, Balanan, the son of Achobor, reigned in his stead.

since the Chaldee characters have been adopted. C.—On this occasion we may briefly remark, 1. The most learned fathers have admitted such mistakes in Scripture: yet these are not to be corrected by each one's private judgment, but we must all abide by the determination of the Church, which is plainly appointed for our guide in the infallible word of God. 2. To obviate the objections of infidels respecting the apparent contradictions of Scripture, particularly in these books, we must observe that many people and places had different names; 3. And those who had the same were really distinct. 4. Frequently also grandchildren, and those who have been adopted, are mentioned as the immediate offspring. 5. Some mysterious numbers are specified, as fourteen in the genealogy of Christ, though the history allows more. 6. Odd numbers are sometimes neglected. 7. Often a part is put for the whole, or on the contrary; as Christ is said to have been dead three days, though he was only one whole day and part of two others: and in the reigns of different kings, in the same year, the different parts are assigned to each as a whole year. 8. Sometimes two reigned together, as Joathan ruled while Ozias was still living, (4 Kings xv.,) and so both reigns are sometimes counted, and at other times their respective years. 9. The interregnums are either omitted in calculations, or added to the years of the next ruler. Some of these rules may be applied to most of the scriptural difficulties, as the Spirit of God could not dictate any falsehood. H.

VER. 48. River. Euphrates is commonly so designated. See Gen. x. 11. C.—Pagnin translates, "from the river Rohoboth." D.

50 He also died, and Adad reigned in his stead : and the name of his city was Phau, and his wife was called Meetabel, the daughter of Matred, the daughter of Mezaab.

51 And after the death of Adad, there began to be dukes in Edom, instead of kings: duke Thamna, duke Alva, duke Jetheth,

52 Duke Oolibama, duke Ela, duke Phinon,

53 Duke Cenez, duke Theman, duke Mabsar,

54 Duke Magdiel, duke Hiram. These are the dukes of Edom.

CHAP. II.

The twelve sons of Israel. The genealogy of Juda, down to David. Other genealogies of the tribe of Juda.

AND *these are the sons of Israel: Ruben, Simeon, Levi, Juda, Issachar, and Zabulon,

2 Dan, Joseph, Benjamin, Nephtali, Gad, and Aser.

3 The sons of ^bJuda: Her, Onan and Sela. These three were born to him of the Chanaanitess, the daughter of Sue. And Her, the first-born of Juda, was wicked in the sight of the Lord, and he slew him.

4 *And Thamar, his daughter-in-law, bore him Phares and Zara. So all the sons of Juda, were five.

5 And the sons of Phares, were Hesron and Hamul.

6 And the sons also of Zara: Zamri, and Ethan, and Eman, and Chalchal, and Dara, five in all.

7 And the sons of ^aCharmi: Achar, who troubled Israel, and sinned by the theft of the anathema.

8 The son of Ethan: Azarias.

9 And the sons of ^aHesron that were born to him: Jerameel, and Ram, and Calubi.

10 And Ram begot Aminadab; and Aminadab begot Nahasson, prince of the children of Juda.

11 And Nahasson begot Salma, the father of Booz.

12 And Booz begot Obed, and Obed begot Isai.

13 And Isai begot ^aEliab, his first-born, the second, Abinadab, the third Simmaa;

14 The fourth, Nathanael, the fifth, Raddai,

15 The sixth, Asom, the seventh, David.

^a Gen. xxix. 32, and xxx. 5, and xxxv. 22.—^b Gen. xxxviii. 3, and xli. 12.

VER. 50. Mezaab. It is unusual for the Scripture to mark so particularly the genealogy of a woman. We might translate the Heb. "a native, or who was a native of Mezaab," which is probably the same with Dizahab, "abundance of gold." Deut. i. 1.

VER. 51. Kings. Heb. "Adad also died, and the dukes of Edom were duke Thamna," &c. H.—This, and the following names, designate the place of their residence. M.

CHAP. II. VER. 2. Aser. They are not placed in the order of their birth. H. VER. 3. Her. The crime for which he was punished is not specified in Scripture. C.

VER. 7. Achar, alias Achan, (Josue vii: Ch.) which was his real name, as the former was given him (C.) in consequence of his having "troubled" Israel. D.—One letter may have been mistaken. W.—It may seem more probable that Achar, which appears invariably in the Vat. Sept. and Syriac, is the proper name. Kennicott.—Anathema, the thing devoted or accursed, viz. the spoils of Jericho. Ch.

VER. 10. Ram. He is commonly called Aram. But it is to be observed here, once for all, that it was a common thing among the Hebrews for the same person to have different names: and that it is not impossible among so many proper names, as here occur in the first nine chapters of this book, that the transcribers of the ancient Hebrew copies may have made some slips in the orthography. Ch.—Juda. Probably the first, appointed by Moses in the desert. Num. i. 7, and vii. 12.

VER. 11. Salma. Sept. have "Salmon," as it is written Ruth iv. 20; Matt. i. 4. VER. 15. Seventh. Syriac and Arab. add, "Eliu, (chap. xxvii. 18,) and the eighth, David." It appears, in effect, that Isai had eight sons, and that David was the youngest. 1 Kings vi. 10, and xvii. 12. D.—The Scripture does not always specify the full number. Abul.

16 And their sisters were Sarvia, and Abigail. The sons of Sarvia: Abisai, Joab, and Asael; three.

17 And Abigail bore Amasa, whose father was Jether the Ismahelite.

18 And Caleb, the son of Hesron, took a wife named Azuba, of whom he had Jerioth: And her sons were, Jaser, and Sobab, and Ardon.

19 And when Azuba was dead, Caleb took to wife Ephrata; who bore him Hur.

20 And Hur begot Uri, and Uri begot Bezeleel.

21 And afterwards Hesron went in to the daughter of Machir, the father of Galaad, and took her to wife, when he was threescore years old: And she bore him Segub.

22 And Segub begot Jair, and he had three and twenty cities in the land of Galaad.

23 And he took Gessur, and Aram, the towns of Jair, and Canath, and the villages thereof, threescore cities. All these are the sons of Machir, father to Galaad.

24 And when Hesron was dead, Caleb went in to Ephrata. Hesron also had to wife Abia, who bore him Ashur, the father of Thecua.

25 And the sons of Jerameel, the first-born of Hesron, were Ram, his first-born, and Buna, and Aram, and Asom, and Achia.

26 And Jerameel married another wife, named Atara, who was the mother of Onam.

27 And the sons of Ram, the first-born of Jerameel, were Moos, Jamin, and Achar.

28 And Onam had sons, Semei, and Jada. And the sons of Semei: Nadab and Abisur.

29 And the name of Abisur's wife was Abihail, who bore him Ahobban, and Molid.

30 And the sons of Nadab were Saled, and Apphaim. And Saled died without children.

31 But the son of Apphaim was Jesi: and Jesi begot Sesan. And Sesan begot Oholai.

32 And the sons of Jada, the brother of Semei, were Jether, and Jonathan. And Jether also died without children.

^a Infra, iv. 1: Matt. i. 3.—^b Jos. vii. 1.—^c Ruth iv. 19.—^d 1 Kings xvi. 6, 8, 9, and xvii. 12.

VER. 17. Ismahelite, or more correctly, "Jethra, of Jezrahel" (2 Kings xvii. 25); though the Heb. and Sept. in that place read "Israelite," which would be a trifling remark; and it is improbable that Isai would give his daughter to a descendant of Ismahel. C.—The person might, however, have resided among them. D.

VER. 18. Caleb, alias Calubi, ver. 9. Ch. W.—He is different from Caleb, the son of Jephonc.—Took, &c. Heb. "begot Azuba, Ischa, and Jerioth;" or rather with the Sept. "took to wife Gazuba and Jerioth." C.—Syr. and Arab. "Caleb had Jerioth by his wife Azuba." We know that the latter was his wife, (ver. 19,) and this seems to be the true reading. As ath signifies "of or from," (Noldius,) the Heb. only requires a small correction. As it stands at present, it means, "Caleb begot Azuba, a woman, (or wife,) and Jerioth." Prot. supply "begat children of Azuba, his wife, and of Jerioth." Kennicott.

VER. 20. Bezeleel, here mentioned, was of the family of Hesron. C. VER. 21. Machir, grandson of Joseph, whose descendants occupied part of Galaad, (H.) of which he is styled the father, or prince. M.—The daughter of Machir was probably an heiress, and Segub dwelt with his mother's tribe. C.

VER. 23. Aram. Prot. add "with the towns of Jair from them," the former possessors (H.); or Gessur assisted Aram (Syria) in attacking Israel, 4 Kings x. 32. C.—All these villages. Prot. supply "belonged to the sons." Sept. "were of the sons." All these were dependencies of Machir, "prince" of Galaad; in which sense father is taken, ver. 24. M.—Sons often denote nephews, &c. W.

VER. 24. Hesron. Perhaps it ought to be Azuba, ver. 19. Heb. "and after Hesron was dead, in Caleb-ephra, then Abia, the wife of Hesron, bore him a (posthumous) son, Ashur, the father of those who dwell at Thecua.

VER. 25. And is not to Heb.—Achia, which may also signify "her sister." Sept. "brother." Others take (C.) Achia to be the first wife of Jerameel. Jan.

33 But Jonathan begot Phaleth, and Ziza. These were the sons of Jerameel.

34 And Sesan had no sons, but daughters: and a servant, an Egyptian, named Jeraa.

35 And he gave him his daughter to wife: and she bore him Ethei.

36 And Ethei begot Nathan, and Nathan begot Zabad,

37 And Zabad begot Ophlal, and Ophlal begot Obed,

38 Obed begot Jehu, and Jehu begot Azarias.

39 Azarias begot Helles, and Helles begot Elasa,

40 Elasa begot Sisamoi, Sisamoi begot Sellum,

41 Sellum begot Icamia, and Icamia begot Elisama.

42 Now the sons of Caleb, the brother of Jerameel, were Mesa, his first-born, who was the father of Ziph: and the sons of Meresa, father of Hebron.

43 And the sons of Hebron, Core, and Thaphua, and Recem, and Samma.

44 And Samma begot Raham, the father of Jercaam, and Recem begot Sammai.

45 The son of Sammai, Maon: and Maon, the father of Bethsur.

46 And Ephra, the concubine of Caleb, bore Haran, and Mosa, and Gezez. And Haran begot Gezez.

47 And the sons of Jahaddai, Rogom, and Joathan and Gesan, and Phalet, and Ephra, and Saaph.

48 And Maacha, the concubine of Caleb, bore Saber, and Tharana.

49 And Saaph, the father of Madmena, begot Sue, the father of Machbena, and the father of Gabaa. And the daughter of Caleb was Achsa.

50 These were the sons of Caleb, the son of Hur, the first-born of Ephrata; Sobal, the father of Cariathiarim, 51 Salma, the father of Bethlehem, Hariph, the father of Bethgader.

52 And Sobal, the father of Cariathiarim, had sons: He that saw half of the places of rest.

53 And of the kindred of Cariathiarim, the Jethrites, and Aphuthites, and Semathites, and Maserites. Of them came the Sarites, and Esthaolites.

2 Kings iii. 2.

VER. 42. Caleb, or Calubi, ver. 9. Ziph, Maresa, and Hebron, are the names of towns, as well as of men. The descendants of Mesa inhabited Ziph, and those of Maresa dwelt at Hebron. The same remark will hold good in other places, where the names of places are put for those who occupied them. C.—And the sons. Heb. "and of the sons of Maresa." Vat.—But it may be as well explained in the sense of the Vulg. Sept. "Marisa, his first-born. He was the father of Ziph, and the sons of Marisa, of the father of Hebron."—Father. Lit. "of the father," patris Hebron. H.

VER. 49. Achsa, different from Axa, the granddaughter of Jephone. Judg. i. 12. H.—Both had daughters of the same name. D.

VER. 50. Caleb, grandson of Calubi. Vatab. &c.—Sobal, his descendant, was prince of those who established themselves at Cariathiarim. C.—The Alex. Sept. seems rather to assert that he was son of Hur, as well as those who follow. "The sons of Hur . . . Sobal . . . Salomon, father of Baithlammon, father of Bethlehem." But the editions vary. H.

VER. 52. He that saw, &c. The Latin interpreter seems to have given us here, instead of the proper names, the meaning of those names in the Hebrew. He has done in like manner, ver. 55, (Ch.) and in many other places. D.

VER. 54. Salma, or Salmon's descendants, peopled Bethlehem, &c.—Crowns. Valiant heroes who assisted Joab to gain crowns. W.—Heb. "Ataroth," the house (Sept. Alex. of the house of Jobab) of Joab. H.—And half. Heb. "half of the Manabethites." Prot. (H.) or "of Menuehat, towards Zarai." The author seems purposely to mention to whom the cities at first belonged, that the right owners might be reinstated in their possessions at their return from Babylon. C. This verse may specify six towns, Bethlehem and Netophat, (H.) Beth-Joab, Chatsi, Manaethi, and Atsothi.

VER. 55. Scribes, learned in the law. M.—Singing, &c. The different professions of the Rechabites are here given, instead of proper names, (C.) which the

CHAP. III.

The genealogy of the house of David.

NOW *these were the sons of David, that were born to him in Hebron: the first-born, Amnon, of Achinoam, the Jezrahelites; the second, Daniel, of Abigail, the Carmelites;

2 The third, Absalom, the son of Maacha, the daughter of Tolmai, king of Gessur; the fourth, Adonias, the son of Aggith;

3 The fifth, Sephatias, of Abital: the sixth, Jethraham, of Egla, his wife.

4 So six sons were born to him in Hebron, where he reigned seven years and six months. And in Jerusalem he reigned three and thirty years.

5 And these sons were born to him in Jerusalem: Simmaa, and Sobab, and Nathan, and Solomon, four of Bethsabee, the daughter of Ammiel,

6 Jebaar also, and Elisama,

7 And Eliphaleth, and Noge, and Nepheg, and Japhia,

8 And Elisama, and Eliada, and Elipheleth, nine.

9 All these were sons of David, beside the sons of the concubines: and they had a sister, Tamar.

10 And Solomon's son was Roboam: whose son, Abia, begot Asa. And his son was Josaphat,

11 The father of Joram: and Joram begot Ochozias, of whom was born Joas:

12 And his son, Amasias, begot Azarias. And Joathan, the son of Azarias, 13 Begot Achaz, the father of Ezechias, of whom was born Manasses.

14 And Manasses begot Amon, the father of Josias.

2 Kings v. 14.

Vat. Sept. retains—Thargathim and Samathim, Soehathim.—Heb. Trathim, "porters;" (Chal.) Smathim, "the obedient;" Suchthim, "the inhabitants of tents;" Calor, "the heat," as the Heb. Chamath (Prot. Hemath) signifies. The Cinites dwelt on the south of Juda, for which reason they are probably here mentioned, though some of them also inhabited Jabes Galaad, while the Rechabites dwelt in tents, (H.) and were perhaps employed as porters in the temple. C. Jer. xxxv. 5, 19.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. Hebron, during the seven years that he reigned there over Juda. M.—Jezrahel, a city of Juda, less noted than the one in Issachar.—Daniel, or Cheliab, 2 Kings iii. 3.

VER. 2. Aggith. The mother of Adonias is styled Haggith elsewhere in the Vulg. H.

VER. 5. Solomon is put last, though the eldest, because his genealogy is to be continued. T.—Bethsabee. Syr. and Arab. "Bersabee." Heb. "Bethsua," all erroneously.—Ammiel, or Eliam, (2 Kings xi. 3,) as the same man had two names, (C.) or, in this instance, we must allow a transposition. H.

VER. 6. Elisama, or Elisua. Chap. xiv. 5. C.—Heb. substitutes Elishama and Eliphelet, and Nogah, the last name being "an evident corruption of Nepheg," and the two former being taken in too soon, and still repeated, "in their proper places."

VER. 7. Noge; called Noga, (chap. xiv. 6,) and omitted entirely in the book of Kings.

VER. 8. Eliada, or Elioda, (2 Kings v. 16,) styled Baaliada, (chap. xiv. 7. C.) as both have the same meaning, "God's, or the Lord's, knowledge." H.—Nine, excluding the children of Bethsabee. In 2 Kings there are only seven, or, with the sons of Bethsabee, eleven. There must be a mistake in one place, unless the book of Kings only specify those who were then alive. Vatab. C.

15 And the sons of Josias were, the first-born, Johanan, the second, Joakim, the third, Sedecias, the fourth, Sellum.

16 *Of Joakim was born Jechonias, and Sedecias.

17 The sons of Jechonias were Asir, Salathiel,

18 Melchiram, Phadai, Senneser, and Jecemia, Sama, and Nadabia.

19 Of Phadaia were born Zorobabel and Semei. Zorobabel begot Mossolam, Hananias, and Salomith, their sister :

20 Hasabas also, and Ohol, and Barachias, and Hasadiah, and Josabhesed, five.

21 And the son of Hananias, was Phaltias, the father of Jeseias, whose son was Raphiaia. And his son was Arnan, of whom was born Obdia, whose son was Sechenias.

22 The son of Sechenias, was Semeia : whose sons were Hattus, and Jegaal, and Baria, and Naaria, and Sephat, six in number.

23 The sons of Naaria : Elioenai, and Ezechias, and Ezricam, three.

24 The sons of Elioenai : Oduia, and Eliasub, and Pheleia, and Accub, and Johanan, and Dalaia, and Anani, seven.

2 And Raia, the son of Sobal, begot Jahath, of whom were born Ahumai, and Laad. These are the families of Sarathii.

3 And this is the posterity of Etom : Jesrahel, and Jesema, and Jedebos : and the name of their sister was Asalephuni.

4 And Phanuel, the father of Gedor, and Ezar, the father of Hosa : these are the sons of Hur, the first-born of Ephratha, the father of Bethlehem.

5 And Assur, the father of Thecua, had two wives, Halaa and Naara.

VER. 15. Johanan, who is not mentioned in 4 Kings xxiii., and xxiv. Some think that he died young, (Tostat.) or in battle with his father, against Pharao. Jer.—Then came Joachim and Sedecias, whose proper name was Matthanias. H.—Joakim is passed over by S. Matt. S. Jer. ib.

VER. 16. Jechonias, who is called also Joakim, (W.) and Cenias in Heb. Jer. xxii. 28. C.—Both the son and the grandson of Josias go under the name of Jechonias. Matt. i. 11 ; Barrad. i. 5, 16. M.

VER. 17. Asir, means a "prisoner," so that we might translate, Heb. "and the sons of Jechonias, the prisoner, (at Babylon, 4 Kings xxiv. 15,) were Salathiel." C.—Prot. "Assir, Salathiel his son." H.—Some think that the following were the adopted children, or successors of Jechonias ; as S. Luke (iii. 27) insinuates that Neri was the father of Salathiel, and Jeremias (xxii. 30) seems to declare that Jechonias should have no children. But he means such as should sit on the throne, as he explains himself, and S. Matthew (i. 12) expressly says, Jechonias begot Salathiel.

VER. 19. Phadaia, called also Salathiel, (Matt. i. 12,) or these two brothers had each a son named Zorobabel. The grandson of Salathiel was called Abiud, and that of Phadaia, Mosollam, (M.) unless these were the same person. Sa.—Phadaia, son of Salathiel, and father of Zorobabel, left his son to the care of his brother Salathiel, who was therefore accounted the father of Zorobabel too. C.

6 And Naara bore him Oozam, and Hephher, and Themani, and Ahasthari : these are the sons of Naara.

7 And the sons of Halaa : Sereth, Isaar, and Ethnan.

8 And Cos begot Anob, and Soboba, and the kindred of Aharehel, the son of Arum.

9 And Jebes was more honourable than any of his brethren, and his mother called his name Jabes, saying : Because I bore him with sorrow.

10 And Jabes called upon the God of Israel, saying If blessing thou wilt bless me, and wilt enlarge my borders, and thy hand be with me, and thou save me from being oppressed by evil. And God granted him the things he prayed for.

11 And Caleb, the brother of Sua, begot Mahir, who was the father of Esthon.

12 And Esthon begot Bethrapha, and Phesse, and Tehinna, father of the city of Naas : These are the men of Recha.

13 And the sons of Cenez, were Othoniel, and Saraia. And the sons of Othoniel, Hathath, and Maonathi.

14 Maonathi begot Ophra, and Saraia begot Joab, the father of the valley of Artificers : for artificers were there.

15 And the sons of Caleb, the son of Jephone, were Hir, and Ela, and Naham. And the son of Ela : Cenez.

16 The sons also of Jalelcel : Ziph, and Zipha, Thiria, and Asrael.

17 And the sons of Esra : Jethier, and Mered, and Ephier, and Jalon, and he begot Mariam, and Sammai, and Jesba, the father of Esthaino.

18 And his wife, Judaia, bore Jared, the father of Gedor, and Heber, the father of Socho, and Icuthiel, the father of Zanoce. And these are the sons of Bethia, the daughter of Pharao, whom Mered took to wife.

19 And the sons of his wife Odaia, the sister of Naham, the father of Ceila, were Garmi, and Esthaino, who was of Machathi.

20 The sons also of Simon : Amnon, and Rinna, the son of Hanan, and Thilon. And the sons of Jesi : Zotheth and Benzotheth.

VER. 12. City. Heb. "Ir-Nahash." H.—The latter term denotes "copper or a serpent." We know not where this city was situated, no more than Recha. C.

VER. 13. Othoniel, first judge. H.—He was brother, or rather cousin, of Caleb. See Jos. xv. 17.

VER. 14. Artificers. Heb. Carashim, which means various sorts of "workmen," (C.) or "father (prince. M.) of Ge-Harasim, for," &c. C.—Under this lord the artificers dwelt who built the temple. W.

VER. 15. Caleb, so memorable (C.) for his fidelity. Num. xn. 30, and xxxii. 12. H.

VER. 19. Odaia, perhaps the same with Judaia, (C.) as the Sept. read.—Who was. Heb. and Sept. "Machatha," (H.) a place to the north of Basan, far from the limits of Juda, whence we should, perhaps, read Menuchat, as chap. ii. 52, 54

21 The sons of *Sela, the son of Juda: Her, the father of Lecha, and Laada, the father of Maresa, and the families of the house of them that wrought fine linen in the house of Oath.

22 And He, that made the sun to stand, and the men of Lying, and Secure, and Burning, who were princes in Moab, and who returned into Lahem. Now these are things of old.

23 These are the potters, and they dwelt in Plantations and Hedges, with the king for his works, and they abode there.

24 The sons of *Simeon: Namuel, and Jamin, Jarib, Zara, and Saul:

25 Sellum his son, Mapsam his son, Masma his son.

26 The sons of Masma: Hamuel his son, Zachur his son, Semei his son.

27 The sons of Semei were sixteen, and six daughters: but his brethren had not many sons, and the whole kindred could not reach to the sum of the children of Juda.

28 And they dwelt in Bersabee, and Molada, and Hasarsuhal,

29 And in Bala, and in Asom, and in Tholad,

30 And in Bathuel, and in Horma, and in Siceleg,

31 And in Bethmarchaboth, and in Hasarsusim, and in Bethberai, and in Saarim. These were their cities unto the reign of David.

32 Their towns also were Etam, and Aen, Remmon, and Thochen, and Asan, five cities.

33 And all their villages round about these cities as far as Baal. This was their habitation and distribution of their dwellings.

34 And Mosabab, and Jemlech, and Josa, the son of Amasias,

35 And Joel, and Jeliu, the son of Josabia, the son of Saraia, the son of Asiel,

36 And Elioenai, and Jacoba, and Isuhaia, and Isaia, and Adiel, and Ismiel, and Banaia;

* Gen. xxxviii. 5.—b Gen. xli. 10.

VER. 21. Her. Hitherto we have seen the possessions of the descendants of Phares. Those of Her inhabited the country rendered famous by the exploit of Samson with the jaw-bone. Judg. xv. 9. C.—That wrought. Sept. take it for a proper name, "Ehdath." Heb. Beth-abdoth ebuts, "the house of the byssus, or fine linen manufacturers in Bith-Assbæ," (H.) which is, perhaps, the same with Bersabee, "the well of swearing." Gen. xxi. 31. C.

VER. 22. He, that made, &c., viz. Joazim, the meaning of whose name in Hebrew is, he that made the sun to stand. In like manner the following names, Lying, (Chozeba,) Secure, (Joas,) and Burning, (Saraph,) are substituted in place of the Hebrew names of the same signification. Ch.—The first etymology is not perfectly accurate, as Jokim means simply, "he made to stand;" Jachin, the pillar which Solomon erected, has the same import. H.—Some injudicious person seems to have placed the sun in the margin, whence it has crept into the text. T.—Lahem, &c. Sept. seem to leave the original terms: "he made them return to Abedderim Athoukiim."—Who returned, is also left as a proper name by the Prot., (H.) &c. "And Jasubi Lehem." Vat. M.—It is not easy to decide, when the Hebrew words should be translated.—Old. Heb. "and ancient words" (H.); records, showing where these families resided, (C.) unless this be also the name (H.) of a place. Sept.

VER. 23. Potters. Heb. jutsrim, may also designate some family, as it seems improbable that the princes, in Moab, should be reduced to so mean a condition. But we have many examples of such a fall (H.); and it is supposed that these descendants of Sela were employed by the king of Babylon, at Nethaim and Gadera. C.—Hedges. These are the proper names of the places where they dwelt. In Hebrew, Atharim and Gadira. Ch.—Sept. "Ataim and Gadera." H.—The correct Roman edition of the Vulg. prints these words, plantationibus et Sepibus, with large letters, to imply as much. M.—King; David. Sa. M.

VER. 27. Juda, probably, not even in the following cities, which they inhabited along with them. This tribe of Simeon was always the weakest, and kept close to Juda. See Num. xxvi. 14

37 Ziza also, the son of Sephei, the son of Allon, the son of Idaia, the son of Semri, the son of Samaia.

38 These were named princes in their kindreds, and in the houses of their families were multiplied exceedingly.

39 And they went forth to enter into Gador, as far as to the east side of the valley, to seek pastures for their flocks.

40 And they found fat pastures, and very good, and a country spacious, and quiet, and fruitful, in which some of the race of Cham had dwelt before.

41 And these, whose names are written above, came in the days of Ezechias, king of Juda: and they beat down their tents, and slew the inhabitants that were found there, and utterly destroyed them unto this day: and they dwelt in their place, because they found there fat pastures.

42 Some also of the children of Simeon, five hundred men, went into Mount Seir, having for their captains, Phaltias, and Naaria, and Raphaia, and Oziel, the sons of Jesi:

43 And they slew the remnant of the Amalecites, who had been able to escape, and they dwelt there in their stead unto this day.

Genealogies of Ruben and Gad: their victories over the Agarites: their captivity.

NOW the sons of Ruben, the first-born of Israel, (for he was his first-born: but forasmuch as he defiled his father's bed, his first birth-right was given to the sons of Joseph, the son of Israel, and he was not accounted for the first-born.

2 But of the race of Juda, who was the strongest among his brethren, came the princes: but the first birth-right was accounted to Joseph.)

3 The sons then^a of Ruben, the first-born of Israel, were Enoch, and Phallu, Esron, and Charmi.

4 The sons of Joel: Samai his son, Gog his son, Semei his son,

5 Micha his son, Reia his son, Baal his son,

VER. 30. Bathuel appears to be the same with Bethulia. Judith vi. 7. C.

VER. 31. David, who had Siceleg given to him. 1 Kings xxvii. 6. H.—After the schism, Juda straitened the tribe of Simeon; so that it was forced to seek for other habitations in Gador, under Ezechias. Ver. 39, &c. C.—It could no longer reside among those of the tribe of Juda, (D.) and acknowledge another king. H.

VER. 33. Baal, or Ballath. Jos. xix. 1.—Distribution. Heb. and Sept. "and their genealogy." M.

VER. 34. Mosabab. This and the following princes joined their forces, to conquer fresh territories from Gador, (H.) or Gadara, near Joppe, (Strabo xvi.,) which had been long in the possession (H.) of the Egyptians, (ver. 40. C.) or Philistines. Malvenda.

VER. 40. Cham. It is not certain that the Philistines, who came from the country of the Casluim, were descendants of Mezraim. Gen. x. 14. But it is very clear that the Egyptians sprung from Cham. Psal. lxxvii. 51.

VER. 41. Inhabitants. Sept. "and the Mineans." Heb. ma'inim, "the inhabitants of Maon," in Arabia. See Judg. x. 11. Syr. and Arab. "the fountains."

VER. 42. Jesi; perhaps Asaia, by the transposition of one letter (ver. 36. C.); or these chiefs were remote descendants of Jesi, ver. 20. H.—The expedition probably took place about the same time as the preceding, to avoid the attack of the Assyrians, or of Juda, by retiring further into Arabia. C.

VER. 43. Escape the arms of Saul, or of David. D.—Day. It seems, therefore, that they escaped captivity, having abandoned their own country; or this was taken from a record which had been made before that event, and is here inserted by Esdras; though, when he wrote, these Simeonites might have experienced the fate of their brethren, who were led captives in the sixth year of Ezechias. H.

CHAP. V. VER. 2. Accounted to Joseph, viz. as to the double portion, which belonged to the first-born; but the princely dignity was given to Juda, and the priesthood to Levi. Ch.—Sept. "the blessing or gift was Joseph's." Heb. also does not specify princes, but "the leader," (H.) the Messias, (Syr., &c.,) and kings, from David till the captivity. C. Gen. xlix. 4. W.

6 Beera his son, whom Thelgathphalnasar, ^bking of the Assyrians, carried away captive, and he was prince in the tribe of Ruben.

7 And his brethren, and all his kindred, when they were numbered by their families, had for princes Jehiel, and Zacharias.

8 And Bala, the son of Azaz, the son of Samma, the son of Joel, dwelt in Aroer, as far as Nebo, and Beelmeon.

9 And eastward he had his habitation as far as the entrance of the desert, and the river Euphrates. For they possessed a great number of cattle in the land of Galaad.

10 And in the days of Saul they fought against the Agarites, and slew them, and dwelt in their tents in their stead, in all the country that looketh to the east of Galaad.

11 And the children of Gad dwelt over against them in the land of Basan, as far as Selcha :

12 Johel, the chief, and Saphan, the second : and Janai, and Saphat, in Basan.

13 And their brethren, according to the houses of their kindreds, were Michael, and Mosollam, and Sebe, and Jorai, and Jacan, and Zie, and Heber, seven.

14 These were the sons of Abihail, the son of Huri, the son of Jara, the son of Galaad, the son of Michael, the son of Jesesi, the son of Jeddo, the son of Buz.

15 And their brethren, the sons of Abdiel, the son of Guni, chief of the house, in their families.

16 And they dwelt in Galaad, and in Basan, and in the towns thereof, and in all the suburbs of Saron, unto the borders.

17 All these were numbered in the days of Joathan, king of Juda, and in the days of Jeroboam, king of Israel.

18 The sons of Ruben, and of Gad, and of the half tribe of Manasses, fighting men, bearing shields, and swords, and bending the bow, and trained up to battles, four and forty thousand, seven hundred and threescore, that went out to war.

19 They fought against the Agarites : but the Itureans, and Naphis, and Nodab

20 Gave them help. And the Agarites were delivered into their hands, and all that were with them, because

VER. 6. Beera. This tribe continued to have princes of their own after the division of the kingdom. Beera was in power when Thelgathphalnasar, or Thelgathphalasar, took five tribes into captivity. 4 Kings xv. 29. Only twelve generations are mentioned to fill up about 750 years, from the leaving of Egypt. C.

VER. 7. Families, when they were led captive into Assyria (M.); or before, when the tribe was in a most flourishing condition.—Princes. Heb. and Sept. "prince."—Jehiel. Sept. "Joel," ver. 4.

VER. 8. And. So Heb., &c., as if he was one of the princes. But the Vulg. seems to begin a new sentence, Porro, "now Bala." Bala, or his descendants, extended their conquests as far as the Euphrates, which had been promised to Israel; and, under Saul, conquered the Agarites, who sprung from Agar. Syr., &c., "the Arabs of Sacca," or the Scenites, "dwelling under tents," and inhabiting the Desert Arabia. The details of this war are probably given, ver. 19, &c. C.

VER. 17. Israel. Jeroboam II. had been dead two years before Joathan was born: unless some of the numbers be incorrect; which seems very probable. 4 Kings xv. 5. C.—It does not appear why the king of Juda is mentioned, as the people were not under his dominion, unless (H.) he was contemporary with Jeroboam II.

they called upon God in the battle: and he heard them because they had put their faith in him.

21 And they took all that they possessed, of camels fifty thousand, and of sheep two hundred and fifty thousand, and of asses two thousand, and of men a hundred thousand souls.

22 And many fell down slain: for it was the battle of the Lord. And they dwelt in their stead till the captivity.

23 And the children of the half tribe of Manasses possessed the land, from the borders of Basan unto Baal Hermon, and Sanir, and Mount Hermon; for their number was great.

24 And these were the heads of the house of their kindred, Ephraim, and Jesi, and Eliel, and Esriel, and Jeremia, and Odoia, and Jediel; most valiant and powerful men, and famous chiefs in their families.

25 But they forsook the God of their fathers, and went astray after the gods of the people of the land, whom God destroyed before them.

26 And the God of Israel stirred up the spirit of Phul, ^bking of the Assyrians, and the spirit of Thelgathphalnasar, king of Assur: and he carried away Ruben, and Gad, and the half tribe of Manasses, and brought them to Lihela, and to Habor, and to Ara, to the river Gozan, unto this day.

CHAP. VI.

The genealogies of Levi, and of Aaron: the cities of the Levites.

THE ^asons of Levi were, Gerson, Caath, and Merari.

2 The sons of Caath: Amram, Isaar, Hebron, and Oziel.

3 The children of Amram: Aaron, Moses, and Maria. The sons of Aaron: Nadab and Abiu, Eleazar and Ithamar.

4 Eleazar begot Phinees, and Phinees begot Abisue,

5 And Abisue begot Bocci, and Bocci begot Ozi;

6 Ozi begot Zaraias, and Zaraias begot Marajoth;

7 And Marajoth begot Amarias, and Amarias begot Achitob;

8 And Achitob begot Sadoc, and Sadoc begot Achimaas;

9 Achimaas begot Azarias, and Azarias begot Johanan, boam II., as some assert. M.—Yet the following expedition seems to have taken place while Israel was still faithful to God. (H.) By faith they overcame kingdoms. Heb. xi. W.

VER. 19. But, &c. Heb. "and Jetur, &c., (20) and they were helped by God against them." H.—Sept. "they prevailed over them, and the Agarites," &c.—And Naphis, sons of Ismael. Gen. xxv. 13. H.

VER. 23. Basan, which belonged to Gad. H.—In Josue (xvii. 5) Basan and Galaad seem to be given to Manasses; but the former there denotes all the level country from the Jabok to the Jordan, as Galaad is put for the mountains on the East. C.—Great. It would take thirty hours to travel from the torrent Jabok to Baal Hermon. Adric. M.

CHAP. VI. VER. 1. Levi. The genealogy of the Levites is given with more exactitude than any of the preceding. Caath formed two branches: 1. the priests, descended from Aaron; 2. all his other children, who were simply Levites. C.—Hence they are placed after the priests. M.

VER. 2. Isaar, or Aminadab, ver. 22.

VER. 3. Abiu. These died without children. The genealogy of Eleazar is given, as his family enjoyed the pontificate a long time, while that of Ithamar is neglected, (C.) as only Heli and a few others were raised to that dignity. H.

VER. 5. Abisue. He is mentioned nowhere else. Josephus (v. ult.) calls him Abiezer. C.—Many of these high priests were very obscure. M.—Ozi, after whom Heli is supposed to have reigned, so that Zaraias and the three following were excluded, (C.) while Heli, and four of the same family of Ithamar, were acknowledged as high priests. T.—Abiathar was then forced to give place to Sadoc, (2 Kings ii. 26. H.) whose family was in power at the captivity, ver. 15. T.

10 Johanan begot Azarias. This is he that executed the priestly office in the house which Solomon built in Jerusalem.

11 And Azarias begot Amarias, and Amarias begot Achitob;

12 And Achitob begot Sadoc, and Sadoc begot Sallum;

13 Sellum begot Helcias, and Helcias begot Azarias;

14 Azarias begot Saraías, and Saraías begot Josedec.

15 Now Josedec went out, when the Lord carried away Juda, and Jerusalem by the hands of Nabuchodonosor.

16 So the sons^a of Levi were, Gerson, Caath, and Merari.

17 And these are the names of the sons of Gerson: Lobni and Semei.

18 The sons of Caath: Amram, and Isaar, and Hebron, and Oziel.

19 The sons of Merari: Moholi and Musi. And these are the kindred of Levi according to their families;

20 Of Gerson; Lobni, his son, Jahath, his son, Zamma, his son,

21 Joah, his son, Addo, his son, Zara, his son, Jethrai, his son.

22 The sons of Caath: Aminadab, his son, Core, his son, Asir, his son,

23 Elcana, his son, Abiasaph, his son, Asir, his son,

24 Thahath, his son, Uriel, his son, Ozias, his son, Saul, his son.

25 The sons of Elcana: Amasia, and Achimoth,

26 And Elcana. The sons of Elcana: Sophai, his son, Nahath, his son,

27 Eliab, his son, Jeroham, his son, Elcana, his son;

28 The sons of Samuel: the first-born, Vasseni, and Abia.

29 And the sons of Merari: Moholi, Lobni, his son, Semei, his son, Oza, his son, 30 Sammaa, his son, Haggia, his son, Asaia, his son.

31 These are they, whom David set over the singing men of the house of the Lord, after that the^b ark was placed:

32 And they ministered before the tabernacle of the testimony with singing, until Solomon built the house of the Lord in Jerusalem; and they stood according to their order in the ministry.

33 And these are they that stood with their sons, of the

VER. 10. This may refer to either. C.—The Holy Ghost gives an encomium to Joiada, for re-establishing the Divine worship, (Junius,) or to Azarias, for withstanding the impious attempt of king Osias. E. T. & c. 2 Par. xxvi. 17. M.

VER. 15. Went out, into captivity, while his father was slain. 4 Kings xxv. 18.

VER. 18. The, &c. This verse is repeated from ver. 2, as the author is now going to continue the genealogy of the Levites, in their natural order, (II.) to Samuel. D.

VER. 20. Jahath. See ver. 42. 43.—Zamma springs from Semei, Jeth, Gerson, and has a son named Ethan, who has Adaia; as Zara begot Athanai, ver. 41. Almost all these names are rather different.

VER. 22. Asir. While Core perished, his children were preserved. Num. xvi. 30, and xxvi. 11. H.

VER. 26. Sophai, Nahath, and Eliab, are called Suph, (H.) Thohu, (ver. 34. C.) and Eliel. H.

VER. 27. Elcana, his son. It seems necessary to supply "Samuel, his son," (II.) as he descended from the third Elcana. D.

VER. 28. Vasseni. Some Latin copies subjoin "Joel," who was the first-born. Ver. 33. La Haye.—Other editions insert "Joel," with the Syr. and Arab.

sons of Caath, Heman, a singer, the son of Joel, the son of Samuel,

34 The son of Elcana, the son of Jeroham, the son of Eliel, the son of Thohu,

35 The son of Suph, the son of Elcana, the son of Mahath, the son of Amasai,

36 The son of Elcana, the son of Johel, the son of Azarias, the son of Sophonias,

37 The son of Thahath, the son of Asir, the son of Abiasaph, the son of Core,

38 The son of Isaar, the son of Caath, the son of Levi, the son of Israel.

39 And his brother Asaph, who stood on his right hand, Asaph, the son of Barachias, the son of Samaa,

40 The son of Michael, the son of Basaia, the son of Melchia,

41 The son of Athanai, the son of Zara, the son of Adaia,

42 The son of Ethan, the son of Zamma, the son of Semei,

43 The son of Jeth, the son of Gerson, the son of Levi.

44 And the sons of Merari, their brethren, stood on the left hand, Ethan, the son of Cusi, the son of Abdi, the son of Maloch,

45 The son of Hasabia, the son of Amasia, the son of Helcias,

46 The son of Amasai, the son of Boni, the son of Somer,

47 The son of Moholi, the son of Musi, the son of Merari, the son of Levi.

48 Their brethren also, the Levites, who were appointed for all the ministry of the tabernacle of the house of the Lord.

49 But Aaron and his sons offered burnt-offerings upon the altar of holocaust, and upon the altar of incense, and were for every work of the holy of holies: and to pray for Israel, according to all that Moses, the servant of God, had commanded.

50 And these are the sons of Aaron: Eleazar, his son Phinees, his son, Abisue, his son,

51 Bocci, his son, Ozi, his son, Zarahia, his son,

52 Meraioth, his son, Amarias, his son, Achitob, his son,

53 Sadoc, his son, Achimaas, his son.

54 And these are their dwelling places by the towns and confines; to wit, of the sons of Aaron, of the families of the Caathites: for they fell to them by lot.

VER. 55. Suburbs, or 2000 cubits round the city. See Jos. xx. and xxi. C.

VER. 57. Of, is not authorized by the Vulg. civitates, but is added, to signify that all these thirteen cities were not thus privileged. MSS. in the Bamberg and Complut. editions, and in those of Jablonski and Michaelis.—Ari, “cities,” ought to be air, “a city,” as only one is meant. We should also add, with the Arab. and Syriac, and the parallel passage in Josue, “and her suburbs,” after Hebron. Kennicott.

72 Out of the tribe of Issachar, Cedes, and its suburbs, and Dabereth, with its suburbs, 73 Ramoth also, and its suburbs, and Anem, with its suburbs.

74 And out of the tribe of Aser, Masal, with its suburbs, and Abdon, in like manner,

75 Hucac also, and its suburbs, and Rohob, with its suburbs.

76 And out of the tribe of Nephtali, Cedes, in Galilee, and its suburbs, Hamon, with its suburbs, and Cariathaim, and its suburbs.

77 And to the sons of Merari that remained, out of the tribe of Zabulon, Remmono, and its suburbs, and Tabor, with its suburbs :

78 Beyond the Jordan also, over against Jericho, on the east side of the Jordan, out of the tribe of Ruben, Bosor, in the wilderness, with its suburbs, and Jassa, with its suburbs.

79 Cademoth also, and its suburbs, and Mephaath, with its suburbs.

80 Moreover also out of the tribe of Gad, Ramoth, in Galaad, and its suburbs, and Manaim, with its suburbs, 81 Hesebon also, with its suburbs, and Jezer, with its suburbs.

CHAP. VII.

Genealogies of Issachar, Benjamin, Nephtali, Manasses, Ephraim, and Aser

NOW ^bthe sons of Issachar were, Thola, and Phua, Jasub, and Simeron, four.

2 The sons of Thola : Ozi, and Raphaia, and Jeriel, and Jamai, and Jebsem, and Samuel, chiefs of the houses of their kindreds. Of the posterity of Thola, were numbered in the days of David, two and twenty thousand six hundred most valiant men.

3 The sons of Ozi : Izrahia, of whom were born Michael, and Obadia, and Joel, and Jesia, five, all great men.

4 And there were with them by their families and peoples, six and thirty thousand most valiant men ready for war : for they had many wives and children.

^b Gen. xlvii. 13.

VER. 67. Of the. Lit. “cities to flee to, (or of refuge,) Sichem,” (H.) which might induce some to suppose that all these cities were of this description ; but, in reality, only Sichem had that privilege. C.—Sept. is liable to the same ambiguity. See ver. 57, (H.) Jos. xx. 27, and xxi. 21.

VER. 70. Aner and Baalam, perhaps the same as Thanach and Gethremmon, which were given to the children of Caath of the inferior degree, (Jos. xxi. 26. C.) or, who were left out of the rank of priests, (M.) or before unprovided for, as the partition was made at different times.—Baalam. Heb. “Balaam.” Sept. “Iblaam” is the Jebelaam, Jos. xvii. 11.

CHAP. VII. VER. 1. Jasub, or Job. See Gen. xlvii. 13 ; Num. xxvi. 23. C.

VER. 2. Chiefs. They were at the head of distinct families. M.—David. We know that David took an account of his fighting men. 2 Kings xxiv. But it is not certain that this register was made at that time ; as we read that Benjamin was not numbered, chap. xxi. 6. These lists were probably made when some expedition was intended by David. The author was not, perhaps, able to recover the accounts of Nephtali, Manasses, and Ephraim, no more than the genealogies of Dan (ver. 12) and Zabulon, which do not appear in this book. C.

VER. 3. Sons, for “the son.” D.—Izrahia. He alone deserved to be mentioned. See ver. 6, where only three sons of Benjamin appear, though there were more, chap. viii. 2. T.—Five, comprising Izrahia, “all chiefs,” (H.) men of note, (D.) or one name may be lost. C.

VER. 4. Children. who had numerous offspring (H.) ; so that in the days of David these descendants of Thola amounted to so many. M.

5 Their brethren also throughout all the house of Issachar, were numbered fourscore and seven thousand most valiant men for war.

6 The sons of Benjamin were, Bela, and Bechor, and Jadhil, three.

7 The sons of Bela: Esbon, and Ozi, and Ozial, and Jerimoth, and Urai, five chiefs of their families, and most valiant warriors, and their number was twenty-two thousand and thirty-four.

8 And the sons of Bechor were, Zamira, and Joas, and Eliezer, and Elioenai, and Amri, and Jerimoth, and Abia, and Anathoth, and Almath: all these were the sons of Bechor.

9 And they were numbered by the families, heads of their kindreds, most valiant men for war, twenty thousand and two hundred.

10 And the sons of Jadhil: Balan. And the sons of Balan: Jehus, and Benjamin, and Aod, and Chanana, and Zethan, and Tharsis, and Ahisalah.

11 All these were sons of Jadhil, heads of their kindreds, most valiant men, seventeen thousand and two hundred, fit to go out to war.

12 Sepham also, and Hapham, the sons of Hir: and Hasim, the sons of Aher.

13 And the sons of Nephtali: were Jasiel, and Guni, and Jezer, and Sellum, sons of Bala.

14 And the son of Manasses, Ezriel: and his concubine, the Syrian, bore Machir, the father of Galaad.

15 And Machir took wives for his sons Happhim, and Saphan: and he had a sister, named Maacha: the name of the second was Salphaad, and Salphaad had daughters.

16 And Maacha, the wife of Machir, bore a son, and she called his name Phares: and the name of his brother was Sares: and his sons were, Ulam and Recen.

17 And the son of Ulam, Badan. These are the sons of Galaad, the son of Machir, the son of Manasses.

18 And his sister, named Queen, bore Goodlyman, and Abiezer, and Mohola.

19 And the sons of Semida were, Ahin, and Sechem, and Leci, and Aniam.

20 And the sons of Ephraim: were Suthala, Bared, his son, Thahath, his son, Elada, his son, Thahath, his son, and his son Zabad, 21 And his son, Suthala, and his son, Ezer, and Elad: and the men of Geth, born in the land, slew them, because they came down to invade their possessions.

22 And Ephraim, their father, mourned many days, and his brethren came to comfort him.

23 And he went in to his wife: and she conceived, and bore a son, and he called his name Beria: because he was born when it went evil with his house:

24 And his daughter was Sara, who built Bethoron, the nether and the upper, and Ozensara.

25 And Rapha was his son, and Reseph, and Thale, of whom was born Thaan,

26 Who begot Laadan: and his son was Ammiud, who begot Elisama,

27 Of whom was born Nun, who had Josue for his son.

28 And their possessions and habitations were Bethel, with her daughters, and eastward Noran, and westward Gazer and her daughters, Sichem also, with her daughters, as far as Asa, with her daughters.

29 And by the borders of the sons of Manasses, Bethsan, and her daughters, Thanach, and her daughters, Maggedo, and her daughters, Dor, and her daughters: in these dwelt the children of Joseph, the son of Israel.

30 The children of Aser were, Jemna, and Jesua, and Jessui, and Baria, and Sara, their sister.

31 And the sons of Baria: Heber, and Melchiel: he is the father of Barsaith.

32 And Heber begot Jephilat, and Somer, and Hotham, and Suua, their sister.

33 The sons of Jephilat: Phosech, and Chamaal, and Asoth: these are the sons of Jephilat.

34 And the sons of Somer: Ahi, and Roaga, and Haba, and Aram.

35 And the sons of Helem, his brother: Suphia, and Jemna, and Selles, and Amal.

36 The sons of Suphia: Sue, Harnapher, and Sual, and Beri, and Janira, 37 Bosor, and Hod, and Samma, and Salusa, and Jethran, and Bera.

38 The sons of Jether: Jephone, and Phaspha, and Ara.

a Gen. xlv. 13.—b Gen. xlv. 21.

c Gen. xlv. 24.

VER. 5. War. In all this tribe could muster 145,600 men at that time. C. VER. 6. Benjamin; a man perhaps of the tribe of Issachar. See ver. 10.—Jadhil, or Asbel in Genesis.

VER. 7. Urai, a grandson, called Hir, ver. 12. C. VER. 12. And Hapham; called Mophim and Ophim, (Gen. xlv.) and Suphim and Hupham, Num. xxvi. 39.—Aher, in Heb. means, "another" son, called Hazin: or more probably Aher ought to be Dan, the father of Husim, (Gen. xlv. 23,) as Dan and Nephtali had both the same mother, Bala. Ver. 13. C.

VER. 14. Son. Heb. "sons . . . Ezriel, whom she bore." This seems imperfect. The Hebrews seldom name the mother. C.—Sept. intimate that the Syrian wife was mother of both. H.—Galaad, whose posterity enjoyed the country of the same name (Num. xxii. 29, and xxxii. 41); only Machir is mentioned as the son of Manasses.

VER. 15. And Saphan. S. Jerom seems to have taken them for women. If they were the sons of Hir, (ver. 12,) Machir probably adopted them.

VER. 17. Badan, perhaps the same with Jair (Judg. x. 3; 1 Kings xii. 11. C.); or rather in this last place, the Syr., &c., read more correctly Barac, and Samson instead of Samuel, who was then speaking. See Heb. xi. 32. There was no such deliverer as Badan, but the word has been corrupted from Barac. Sept. Kennicott.

VER. 18. Queen. Heb. "Moloch bore Aiss-Eub." S. Jerom and the Latin Church translate these names. W.—Prot. "Hammoleketh bore Ishod" H.—The proper names might have been as well retained, (C.) as in the Sept. H.—Abiezer, (19) Leci, are the Jeser and Chelek, Num. xxvi. 30.

VER. 20. Bared, Thahath, probably called Becher and Theken, in Num. Thre alone are there mentioned, though the other thirteen, whose names are given, seem to have been all the immediate sons of Ephraim, (C.) since he mourns for them, (ver. 22. M.) and has other children afterwards. H.

VER. 21. Son, Ezer. Heb. "and Ezer and Elad." His son, after each, seems to be twice omitted, as these were in the same degree as the rest. Sept. agree with the Vulg. H.—Because they the sons of Ephraim. (C. &c.) or the men of Geth. Syr. and Arab. D. M. T.—The text is ambiguous, but the former supposition seems more rational, (H.) and more generally received. C.

VER. 23. Beria. This name signifies, in evil, or in affliction. Ch.—Bräe, "in howling." M.

VER. 24. Daughter, or great-granddaughter, repaired these three cities. C.

VER. 25. Thale. Heb. "and Thale, his son, and Thaan, his son." These seem to have been the sons of Ephraim. The following were their descendants H.—At least Elisama was prince in the wilderness, (C.) under Moses (Num. i. 10. H.); and Josue, the sixth from Ephraim, was fifty-four years old when the Israelites left Egypt. C.

VER. 29. Daughters. Sept. "villages."—Joseph, by Ephraim and Manasses, west of the Jordan. H.

VER. 34. Aram. Add, "and Helem," (C.) unless Helem was the first-born (ver. 35) of Ahi, which signifies "brother." Perhaps Helem was brother of Somer, called Hotham, ver. 32.

VER. 38. Jephone. The father of Caleb was of the tribe of Juda. C.

39 And the sons of Olla: Aree, and Haniel, and Resia.

40 All these were sons of Aser, heads of their families, choice and most valiant captains of captains: and the number of them that were of the age that was fit for war, was six and twenty thousand.

CHAP. VIII.

The posterity of Benjamin is further declared down to Saul. His issue.

NOW Benjamin begot Bale, his first-born, Asbel, the second, Ahara, the third,

2 Nohaa, the fourth, and Rapha, the fifth.

3 And the sons of Bale were: Addar, and Gera, and Abiud,

4 And Abisue, and Naaman, and Ahoe,

5 And Gera, and Scephuphan, and Huram.

6 These are the sons of Ahod, heads of families that dwelt in Gabaa, who were removed into Manahath.

7 And Naaman, and Achia, and Gera, he removed them, and begot Oza, and Ahiud.

8 And Saharim begot in the land of Moab, after he sent away Husim and Bara, his wives.

9 And he begot of Hodes, his wife, Jobab, and Sebia, and Mosa, and Molchom,

10 And Jehus, and Sechia, and Marma. These were his sons, heads of their families.

11 And Mehusim begot Abitob, and Elphaal.

12 And the sons of Elphaal: were Heber, and Misaam, and Samad: who built Ono, and Lod, and its daughters.

13 And Baria, and Sama, were heads of their kindreds that dwelt in Aialon: these drove away the inhabitants of Geth.

14 And Ahio, and Sesac, and Jerimoth,

15 And Zabadia, and Arod, and Heder,

16 And Michael, and Jespha, and Joha, the sons of Baria,

17 And Zabadia, and Mosollam, and Hezeki, and Heber,

18 And Jesamari, and Jezlia, and Jabab, sons of Elphaal,

19 And Jacim, and Zechri, and Zabdi,

20 And Elioenai, and Seletthai, and Elial, a Gen. xlvii. 21; Supra, vii. 6.

VER. 40. Of captains: a Hebrew idiom, to denote the most excellent. H.—Heb. "chief of the princes." All mentioned from ver. 30 were at the head of their tribe, in succession, and led their brethren to battle. C.

CHAP. VIII. VER. 1. Benjamin. Some further particulars of his genealogy are given, for the honour of Saul (C.); and many of those who returned from captivity are mentioned. 1 Esd. x. 11. Sanctius.—Bale, &c., are called Bela, (M. chap. vii. 6,) Jadiel, and Ahiram, or Echi. Num. xxvi. 36; Gen. xlvii.

VER. 6. Ahod, the judge. Judg. iii. 15.—Manahath; the Menuchat in the tribe of Juda, (chap. ii. 54,) after the captivity. C.

VER. 7. Naaman was the first-born of Ahod; and Gera prevailed on his brethren to leave Gabaa, (T.) and was probably the father of Oza. C.

VER. 8. Saharim. His father is not specified: but he was a Benjamite. M.—Begot. Prot. "children in the country of Moab, after he had sent them away: Husim and Baara were his wives." But the Sept. intimate that "Saharim begot . . . after he had sent away Osim, and his wife Baara, and he begot of Ada," &c. H.

VER. 12. Ono was three miles from Lod, or Diospolis, (Lightfoot,) built after the return from Babylon, (1 Esd. ii. 23. C.) in the territory of Benjamin. M.

VER. 13. And Sama. They are supposed to have been sons of Elphaal. C.—Aialon belonged to Dan. Jos. xix. 42. But it was near Benjamin, (M.) and was probably occupied by people chiefly of that tribe. H.

VER. 16. Baria, son of Elphaal. Whether the following were his brothers does not appear certain, as it seems more natural to have placed all his father's children together, ver. 12, and 18.

VER. 20. Families Heb. "These were heads of the fathers by their genera-

21 And Adaia, and Baraia, and Samareth, the sons of Semei.

22 And Jespham, and Heber, and Eliel,

23 And Abdon, and Zechri, and Hanan,

24 And Hanania, and Elam, and Anathothia,

25 And Jephdaia, and Phanuel, the sons of Sesac.

26 And Samsari, and Sohoria, and Otholia,

27 And Jersia, and Alia, and Zechri, the sons of Jero-ham.

28 These were the chief fathers, and heads of their families, who dwelt in Jerusalem.

29 And at Gabaon dwelt Abigabaon, and the name of his wife was Maacha:

30 And his first-born son, Abdon, and Sur, and Cis, and Baal, and Nadab, 31 And Gedor, and Ahio, and Zacher, and Macelloth.

32 And Macelloth begot Samaa: and they dwelt over against their brethren in Jerusalem, with their brethren.

33 And Ner begot Cis, and Cis begot Saul. And Saul begot Jonathan, and Melchisua, and Abinadab, and Esbaal.

34 And the son of Jonathan was Meribbaal: and Meribbaal begot Micha.

35 And the sons of Micha, were Phithon, and Melech, and Tharaa, and Ahaz.

36 And Ahaz begot Joada: and Joada begot Alamath, and Azmoth, and Zamri: and Zamri begot Mosa, 37 And Mosa begot Banaa, whose son was Rapha, of whom was born Elasa, who begot Asel.

38 And Asel had six sons, whose names were Ezricam, Bochrui, Ismahel, Saria, Obdia, and Hanan. All these were the sons of Asel.

39 And the sons of Esec, his brother, were Ulam, the first-born, and Jehus, the second, and Eliphalet, the third.

40 And the sons of Ulam were most valiant men, and archers of great strength: and they had many sons and grandsons, even to a hundred and fifty. All these were children of Benjamin.

We find none of these names from ver. 14, in the days of Josue; and it was not easy for people to establish themselves at Jerusalem till David had expelled the Jebusites. C.—Yet we find that the tribes of Juda and of Benjamin had seized the lower city long before. Jos. xviii. 28. H.

VER. 29. Dwelt. Lit. "they dwelt." But Heb. and Sept. "in Gabaon, dwelt the father of Gabaon," (H.) who was called Jehiel, (chap. ix. 35,) or Abiel. 1 Kings ix. 1. C.

VER. 30. Baal. Add, "and Ner," (ver. 33; chap. ix. 36,) as the Sept. have it here also.

VER. 32. Over against, in the vicinity, while some remained at Gabaon. See Gen. xvi. 12. C.—The family of Cis resided at Gabaa. 1 Kings x. 26. M.

VER. 33. Ner, son of Abiel, or of Jehiel, prince of Gabaon, ver. 29. H.—From Aphiasprung Bechorah, Seror, Abiel, (1 Kings ix.,) who is also called Ner and Jehiel. He had Ner, the father of Abner, and Cis, father of Saul. M.—Abinadab, or Jessui. 1 Kings xiv. 49. C.—Esbaal, alias Isboseth. Ch.—The Hebrews avoid pronouncing the name of the idol, and substitute boseth, "confusion." C.—Hence it is clear that many had two names. D.

VER. 40. Archers, particularly the natives of Gabaa. Judg. xx. 16. Jonathan is praised for his skill. 2 Kings i. 22. M.

CHAP. IX. VER. 1. Israel. These registers were preserved by those who fled from the arms of Salmanasar into the kingdom of Juda. Such records were preserved with the utmost care, and were collected by the author; who could give an account of what happened during and after the captivity, as he was an irre-

AND all Israel was numbered: and the sum of them was written in the Book of the kings of Israel and Juda: and they were carried away to Babylon for their transgression.

2 Now the first that dwelt in their possessions, and in their cities, were the Israelites, and the priests, and the Levites, and the Nathineans.

3 And in Jerusalem dwelt of the children of Juda, and of the children of Benjamin, and of the children of Ephraim, and of Manasses.

4 Othei, the son of Ammiud, the son of Amri, the son of Omrai, the son of Bonni, of the sons of Phares, the son of Juda;

5 And of Siloni: Asaia, the first-born, and his sons:

6 And of the sons of Zara: Jehuel, and their brethren, six hundred and ninety.

7 And of the sons of Benjamin: Salo, the son of Mossollam, the son of Oduia, the son of Asana.

8 And Jobania, the son of Jeroham: and Ela, the son of Ozi, the son of Mochori: and Mossollam, the son of Saphatias, the son of Rahuel, the son of Jebania:

9 And their brethren by their families, nine hundred and fifty-six. All these were heads of their families by the houses of their fathers.

10 And of the priests: Jedaia, Joiarib, and Jachin:

11 And Azarias, the son of Helcias, the son of Mossollam, the son of Sadoc, the son of Maraioth, the son of Achitob, high priest of the house of God.

12 And Adaias, the son of Jeroham, the son of Phassur, the son of Melchias: and Maasai, the son of Adiel, the son of Jezra, the son of Mossollam, the son of Mossollamith, the son of Emmer.

13 And their brethren, heads in their families, a thousand seven hundred and threescore; very strong and able men for the work of the ministry in the house of God.

14 And of the Levites: Semeia, the son of Hassub, the son of Ezricam, the son of Hasebia, of the sons of Merari.

15 And Bacbacar, the carpenter, and Galal, and Ma-thania, the son of Micha, the son of Zachri, the son of Asaph:

16 And Obdia, the son of Semeia, the son of Galal, the son of Idithun: and Barachia, the son of Asa, the son of Elcana, who dwelt in the suburbs of Netophati.

17 And the porters were, Sellum, and Accub, and Telmon, and Ahimam: and their brother, Sellum, was the prince.

18 Until that time, in the king's gate eastward, the sons of Levi waited by their turns.

19 But Sellum, the son of Core, the son of Abiasaph, the son of Core, with his brethren, and his father's house, the Corites, were over the works of the service, keepers of the gates of the tabernacle: and their families in turns were keepers of the entrance of the camp of the Lord.

20 And Phinees, the son of Eleazar, was their prince before the Lord;

21 And Zacharias, the son of Mossollamia, was porter of the gate of the tabernacle of the testimony.

22 All these that were chosen to be porters at the gates, were two hundred and twelve: and they were registered in their proper towns: whom David, and Samuel, the seer, appointed in their trust;

23 As well them as their sons, to keep the gates of the house of the Lord, and the tabernacle, by their turns.

24 In four quarters were the porters: that is to say, towards the east, and west, and north, and south.

25 And their brethren dwelt in villages, and came upon their sabbath-days from time to time.

26 To these four Levites were committed the whole number of the porters, and they were over the chambers, and treasures of the house of the Lord;

27 And they abode in their watches round about the temple of the Lord: that when it was time, they might open the gates in the morning.

28 And some of their stock had the charge of the vessels for the ministry: for the vessels were both brought in and carried out by number.

29 Some of them also had the instruments of the sanc-proachable eye-witness; not to mention the Divine inspiration, which places his testimony out of the reach of criticism. C.—The genealogies of Israel being hitherto recited, now those who came back from captivity appear. W.

VER. 2. First. He only treats of those who returned first, (T.) under Esdras. H.—Nehemias brought back others, and more returned afterwards. Many also retook possession of their lands, which they had enjoyed before the captivity. 1 Esd. iii. 12.—Nathineans. These were the posterity of the Gabaonites, whose office was to bring wood, water, &c., for the service of the temple. Ch. Jos. ix. 27.—The number of those who returned was so small that days were appointed for all the people to help to carry wood for the temple.

VER. 3. Manasses. People from these tribes particularly, (H.) as well as from others, had fled to the kingdom of Juda when the Assyrians took their brethren prisoners; and these returned to Jerusalem. M.—Cyrus gave a general leave for all Israel to return.

VER. 11. Azarias, or Saraias. ib. 11.—Mossollam, or Sellum. Chap. vi. 12. C.—High is not expressed in Pontifex; and this Azarias was only (H.) one of the principal families (M. D.); perhaps the second in dignity (4 Kings xxv. 18); while Jesus was the successor of Aaron. 1 Esd. iii. 8. C.—Heb. and Sept. “the ruler,” (H.) or “captain of the guard of the house.” C.—They were styled pontiffs, or princes of the priests. T.

VER. 12. Phassur, Pheshur, (H.) or Phetur. From him sprung Zacharias, Amsi, Phclelia, Jehoram; so that the last was only the great-grandson of Phassur. 2 Esd. xi. 12.—Maasai. In Esd. (ver. 13) Amassai, the son of Azreel, the son of Ahazi.

VER. 14. Levites, established at Jerusalem.

VER. 15. Carpenter. Heb. Cheresch, (cross,) is taken by some to be a surname. Sept. “And Arcs.”

VER. 16. Suburbs, or “courts,” atriis. H.—Heb. “villages.” M.—Netophat was a town of Juda. The ancient regulations could not be observed exactly. C.—The priests received the Levites into their cities. D.

VER. 17. Sellum had the superintendency over all the porters. H.—He was also at the head of one of the four bands which guarded the doors, east, west, north, and south of the temple, with the various apartments. Ver. 20. C.—Brother. Heb. “brethren,” or bands. H.

VER. 18. Time. Heb. “and hitherto.” This custom has been observed at the king's gate, who entered his tribune by the eastern gate of the temple. 4 Kings xvi. 18. So far the ancient records reach.

VER. 19. Service, to keep watch. C.—Families. Heb. “fathers over the host, (H.) or camp of the Lord; keepers of the entry.” The Corites, though not perhaps alone, performed what their fathers had done before the tabernacle, in the desert, and in the temple of Solomon; which were considered as the camp of the great king.

VER. 20. Before. Heb. “the Lord with him,” an usual form of blessing, (C.) or of wishing well (H.) to the deceased. C.—This Phinees lived after the captivity, (M.) and possessed the same power as Eleazar and Joiada. Chap. xii. 27; Num. iii. 32.

VER. 21. Gate, leading to the holy place, which corresponded with the tabernacle.

VER. 22. Towns, where they resided when they were not on duty. M.—Seer, or prophet. H.—We read not of his making any such regulation. But he probably made it after the misconduct of the sons of Heli, and when the ark was brought back. C.—Trust, while they were at the head of affairs, and acting by God's authority. Lit. “in their faith” (H.); enlightened from above, and regulating matters according to the dispositions which they discovered in the sacred ministers: or rather Heb. “in their established employment,” which was to subsist in future ages.

VER. 26. To these. Heb. “for these Levites, (Sellum, &c., ver. 17.) four chief porters were in their set office,” for life, or as long as they were able to serve, and did not change every week like the rest.—Lord: the apartments of the priests, and the storehouses, (H.) where all precious ornaments, wine, &c., were kept. C.

tuary committed unto them, and the charge of the fine flour, and wine, and oil, and frankincense, and spices.

30 And the sons of the priests made the ointments of the spices.

31 And Mathathias, a Levite, the first-born of Sellum, the Corite, was overseer of such things as were fried in the frying-pan.

32 And some of the sons of Caath, their brethren, were over the loaves of proposition, to prepare always new for every sabbath.

33 These are the chief of the singing men, of the families of the Levites, who dwelt in the chambers, by the temple, that they might serve continually, day and night, in their ministry.

34 The heads of the Levites, princes in their families, abode in Jerusalem.

35 And^a in Gabaon dwelt Jehiel, the father of Gabaon, and the name of his wife was Maacha.

36 His first-born son, Abdon, and Sur, and Cis, and Baal, and Ner, and Nadab, 37 Gedor also, and Ahio, and Zacharias, and Macelloth.

38 And Macelloth begot Samaan: these dwelt over against their brethren in Jerusalem, with their brethren.

39 ^bNow Ner begot Cis, and Cis begot Saul, and Saul begot Jonathan, and Melchisua, and Aminadab, and Esbaal.

40 And the son of Jonathan was Meribbaal: and Meribbaal begot Micha.

41 And the sons of Micha, were Phithon, and Melech, and Tharaa, and Ahaz.

42 And Ahaz begot Jara, and Jara begot Alamath, and Azmoth, and Zamri. And Zamri begot Mosa:

43 And Mosa begot Banaa: whose son Raphaia begot Elasa: of whom was born Asel.

44 And Asel had six sons, whose names are, Ezricam, Bochrû, Ismahel, Saria, Obdia, Hanan: these are the sons of Asel.

VER. 30. Priests. They alone were allowed to make the composition, which no mortal was permitted to use (C.) for his own pleasure. H. Exod. xxx. 34.

VER. 31. Pan, to be offered on the altar of holocausts, (Lev. ii. 4, and vii. 12,) or to be eaten by the priests. Ezec. xli. 20. Mathathias was to take care that all this was done with decency, (C.) and to look after the utensils.

VER. 32. Proposition. Heb. "of arrangement" (Exod. xxxv. 13); "of faces." These loaves were made by the Levites, but arranged upon the golden table every week (C.) before the ark. See chap. xxiii. 29.

VER. 33. These; probably Sellum, &c., (ver. 17,) though it is not certain that the chief porters presided also over the singers. Chap. xv. and xvi. Heb. "And these are the singers, chief of the families (C. or fathers) of the Levites, in the chambers (of the temple), free" from all other avocations, (H.) that they may watch over the porters and musicians. Sept. is clearer (C.): "And these are the masters of music over the bands of Levites, observing their daily courses, because they are day and night over them in the works." H.

VER. 34. Jerusalem, having no substitute (chap. xxvi. H.); or the chiefs of each family resided there. M.

VER. 35. And in. These verses are repeated from the last chapter, in order to bring us to the death of Saul, (M.) and the reign of David. C.—The father of Gabaon. This is the explanation of Abigabaon. Chap. viii. 29. H.—Wife. So the former chapter, and all the ancient versions, with some Heb. MSS. read, instead of the printed Heb. "sister," (Ken.) which seems to be corrupted (C.); and the Prot. venture to correct it. H.

VER. 44. These. All is omitted, though it is found chap. viii. 38, and in 433

2 "And the Philistines drew near, pursuing after Saul and his sons, and they killed Jonathan, and Abinadab, and Melchisua, the sons of Saul.

3 And the battle grew hard against Saul, and the archers reached him, and wounded him with arrows.

4 And Saul said to his armour-bearer: Draw thy sword, and kill me: lest these uncircumcised come, and mock me. But his armour-bearer would not; for he was struck with fear: so Saul took his sword, and fell upon it.

5 And when his armour-bearer saw it, to wit, that Saul was dead, he also fell upon his sword, and died.

6 So Saul died, and his three sons, and all his house fell together.

7 And when the men of Israel, that dwelt in the plains, saw this, they fled: and Saul and his sons being dead, they forsook their cities, and were scattered up and down: and the Philistines came, and dwelt in them.

8 And the next day, the Philistines taking away the spoils of them that were slain, found Saul and his sons lying on Mount Gelboe.

9 And when they had stripped him, and cut off his head, and taken away his armour, they sent it into their land, to be carried about, and showed in the temples of the idols, and to the people.

10 And his armour they dedicated in the temple of their god, and his head they fastened up in the temple of Dagon.

11 And when the men of Jabes Galaad had heard this, to wit, all that the Philistines had done to Saul, 12 All the valiant men of them arose, and took the bodies of Saul and of his sons, and brought them to Jabes, and buried their bones under the oak that was in Jabes, and they fasted seven days.

13 So Saul died for his iniquities, because he transgressed the commandment of the Lord, which he had commanded, and kept it not: and moreover consulted also a witch,

14 And trusted not in the Lord: therefore he slew him, and transferred his kingdom to David, the son of Isai.

MS. 2. Kennicott.—These remarks, which may appear to some minute, show that all Hebrew MSS. are not absolutely alike, as some once pretended; and that the Hebrew Bible is not printed from the best copies. H.—"The sacred volume in Hebrew has, therefore, been published with such carelessness, as no other printed copy with which I am acquainted." Houbigant, Prol. p. 2.—Yet this is the copy which alone Protestants hold up as the standard of perfection, and the rule of faith! H.

CHAP. X. VER. 1. Now. Sept. "and." H.—This has no connexion with what goes before. C.—This history is given more at large, 1 Kings xxxi., and 2 Kings i. M.

VER. 3. Reached: lit. "found." H.—Heb. or "attacked him, and he feared the archers." He was not, at least, mortally wounded, when he took the desperate resolution to destroy himself, through fear and consternation. C.—Yet the original will admit the sense of the Vulg., and Saul might have received some wounds.

VER. 4. Fear and reverence for his master, (C.) as well as concern for his own safety. H.

VER. 6. Fell. Heb. "died." C.—But though the house of Saul was fallen from its former glory, on this fatal day, when so many of his courtiers perished; yet he left Ishobeth to bewail his fate, (H.) and some others who were not of age to go to battle. C.

VER. 10. Head, while his body was hung on the walls of Bethsan. 1 Kings xxxi. 10. C.—The temple of Dagon was contiguous to the wall. D.

VER. 13. For. Sept. "in his iniquities." H.—See 1 Kings xiii. 9, and x 23. Saul offered sacrifice unlawfully, and spared some of the Amalecites. W

THEN "all Israel gathered themselves to David in Hebron, saying: We are thy bone, and thy flesh.

2 Yesterday also, and the day before, when Saul was king, thou wast he that leadedst out and broughtest in Israel: for the Lord thy God said to thee: Thou shalt feed my people Israel, and thou shalt be ruler over them.

3 So all the ancients of Israel came to the king, to Hebron, and David made a covenant with them before the Lord: and they anointed him king over Israel, according to the word of the Lord, which he spoke in the hand of Samuel.

4 And David, and all Israel, went to Jerusalem, which is Jebus, where the Jebusites were the inhabitants of the land.

5 And the inhabitants of Jebus said to David: Thou shalt not come in here. But David took the castle of Sion, which is the city of David.

6 And he said: Whosoever shall first strike the Jebusites, shall be the head and chief captain. And Joab, the son of Sarvia, went up first, and was made the general.

7 And David dwelt in the castle, and therefore it was called the City of David.

8 And he built the city round about, from Mello all round, and Joab built the rest of the city.

9 And David went on growing and increasing, and the Lord of hosts was with him.

10 "These are the chief of the valiant men of David, who helped him: to be made king over all Israel, according to the word of the Lord, which he spoke to Israel.

11 And this is the number of the heroes of David: Jesbaam, the son of Hachamoni, the chief among the thirty: he lifted up his spear, against three hundred, wounded by him at one time.

CHAP. XI. VER. 1. David. This name is written without i, in the books composed before the captivity, (A. C. 588,) but inserted in the latter works, which is an argument against the antiquity of Canticles, where the i is found. Yet the MSS. vary so, that great stress is not laid on this (Kennicott) proof, and is not of sufficient weight to stand against the general opinion, which attributes that work to Solomon. H.—Hebron, after the death of Isboseth. 2 Kings v. C.—Flesh; related, as the children of Jacob.

VER. 3. Which he spoke, is not expressed in Heb. or Sept. Samuel complied with the injunction, by anointing David. 1 Kings xvi. 13.

VER. 8. Round. He made a complete enclosure or fortification, as Mello denotes perfection, or completion, (H.) by building houses from the castle to the town beneath it.

VER. 9. Lor. 2 Kings adds God, more properly, as it seems always to have been inserted, though it is now wanting in two hundred places. Kennicott, Dis. I. p. 62 and 525.

VER. 10. These. Besides the help which David received immediately from God, he derived great assistance from Joab, the captain-general, from the six more renowned valiant men, and from the body of thirty, as well as from fifteen others of less note, who are mentioned here. H.

VER. 11. Number. 2 Kings xxiii. 8, the names. But the two authors do not always use the same terms. Ken.—Thirty, or three, (2 Kings,) more correctly. D.—Three, ib. eight (H.); probably by mistake.—Wounded, or rather soldiers. He encountered singly a whole regiment, though he might not kill them all; much less did he attack them, when already wounded. Ken.—Numbers have often been expressed by letters in Heb., as well as in Greek and other languages. Our numeral figures are not liable to fewer mistakes. H.—Heb. "This is the number of the mighty men whom David had; Jashobeam, (the son of Zabdiel,) the Hachmonite, chief of three. He lifted up his spear against three hundred soldiers at one time." Ken.

VER. 12. His. Heb. "the son of Dodi."

VER. 13. And. "Who could have discovered that thirty-four words are here omitted, if they had not been preserved in 2 Kings xxiii.," though with some inaccuracy? We should read, "And when the men of Israel were fled, he arose and smote the Philistines, until his hand was weary, and his hand clave unto the sword. And the Lord wrought a great deliverance that day; and the people returned after him only to spoil. And after him was Shammah, the son of Agee, the Hararite: And the Philistines were gathered together at Lechi, where was a place of ground full of barley. 14 But he placed himself in the midst of the 12 And after him was Eleazar, his uncle's son, the Ahohite, who was one of the three mighties.

13 He was with David in Phesdomim, when the Philistines were gathered to that place to battle: and the field of that country was full of barley, and the people fled from before the Philistines.

14 But these men stood in the midst of the field, and defended it; and they slew the Philistines; and the Lord gave a great deliverance to his people.

15 "And three of the thirty captains went down to the rock, wherein David was, to the cave of Odollam, when the Philistines encamped in the valley of Raphaim.

16 "And David was then in a hold, and the garrison of the Philistines in Bethlehem.

17 And David longed, and said: O that some man would give me water of the cistern of Bethlehem, which is in the gate.

18 And these three broke through the midst of the camp of the Philistines, and drew water out of the cistern of Bethlehem, which was in the gate, and brought it to David to drink: and he would not drink of it, but rather offered it to the Lord,

19 Saying: God forbid that I should do this in the sight of my God, and should drink the blood of these men: for with the danger of their lives they have brought me the water. And therefore he would not drink. These things did the three most valiant.

20 And Abisai, the brother of Joab, he was chief of three, and he lifted up his spear against three hundred, whom he slew, and he was renowned among the three,

21 And illustrious among the second three, and their captain: but yet he attained not to the first three.

field (of barley), and saved it, and smote the Philistines; and the Lord wrought a great deliverance." Ken.—The name of Semina must have been omitted by the transcriber. C.—Without it, how will the number thirty-seven be made out?

VER. 14. These men. Sept. speak only of one; "And he stood," &c. (H.) and the verbs are singular. 2 Kings xxiii. 12.—Gave. Heb. viass (ibid.) is more correct than vivass, "saved." Ken.—Prot. are forced to add, "saved them by a great deliverance." But there is nothing in the original signifying by. H.

VER. 15. Captains. This is not rightly expressed in any of the ancient versions, no more than in the Prot., which has, "three of the thirty chief;" marg. "three captains over the thirty." The latter signification comes much nearer to the truth. It should be, "And there went down three captains, (Jesbaam, Eleazar, and Semina. H.) who were over the thirty." There were properly seven captains, or "heads of the other thirty."—Rock, (etsur), which seems preferable to kotsir, "in the time of harvest." 2 Kings. Ken. C.

VER. 16. Garrison, or advanced guard.

VER. 17. O that. Heb. "Who will." David wishes to see his native country freed from the troops of the Philistines.—In. Heb. "by the gate."

VER. 18. These. Heb. "The three (or perhaps, three of the mighty men) brake through the host of the Philistines . . . by the gate, and took, and brought it to David. But David would not drink it; and he poured it out unto the Lord," by way of prayer, (Ken.) or of thanksgiving. Josephus.

VER. 19. In the. Heb. "thing! Shall I drink the blood of these men, with their lives? for at the hazard of their lives they have brought it! And he would not drink it. These things did these three mighty men," (Ken.) forming the first ternary. T.

VER. 20. Abisai. His name is written without the middle i, in all this book.—Three. Alex. Sept. alone reads "six."

VER. 21. Second and (H.) first occur not in Heb. and Sept. C.—Heb. "Of the three he was more honourable than two; therefore he was their captain: and yet he attained not unto the first three." Ken.—First is indeed the sense, but it is not expressed in the original. We have here the exact order of these mighty men sufficiently marked out. Abisai is the first captain (H.) of the second ternary. T.

VER. 22. Two ariels. That is, two lions, or lion-like men; for ariel, in Hebrew, signifies "a lion (Ch.) of God," the strongest compound word for "a man of valour." The courage of a lion is so singular, that a man of extraordinary heroism is frequently called a lion, by way of emphasis; and the word God is frequently applied in Scripture to things particularly great." Kennicott.—Heb Cabseel, who had done many acts; he slew the two ariels of Moab; and he went down, and killed a lion in the midst of a pit, in the time of snow.

23 And he slew an Egyptian, whose stature was of five cubits, and who had a spear like a weaver's beam: and he went down to him with a staff, and plucked away the spear, that he held in his hand, and slew him with his own spear.

24 These things did Banaias, the son of Joiada, who was renowned among the three valiant ones,

25 And the first among the thirty, but yet to the first three he attained not: and David made him of his council.

26 Moreover the most valiant men of the army, were Asahel, brother of Joab; and Elchanaan, the son of his uncle, of Bethlehem;

27 Sammoth, an Arorite; Helles, a Phalonite;

28 Ira, the son of Acces, a Thecuite; Abiezer, an Anathothite;

29 Sobbochai, a Husathite; Ilai, an Abohite;

30 Maharai, a Netophathite; Heled, the son of Baana, a Netophathite;

31 Ethai, the son of Ribai, of Gabaath, of the sons of Benjamin; Banaia, a Pharathonite;

"And Benaihu, the son of Jehoiada, the son of a valiant man of Kabzeel, mighty in exploits; he slew two men of Moab, who were stouter than lions. He also went down and slew a lion in a pit, in a snowy day." Ken.—We have observed, that "And" is not found in the printed Heb., nor is it in the Prot. "Benaiah . . . slew two lion-like men, of Moab." Lit. "ariels;" (Sept.) that is, "lions of God," or two of Moab equal to (H.) the strongest lions. W.—S. Jerom translates, two lions of Moab, 2 Kings xxiii. 20. C.—Lion: ari is written arie, 2 Kings. H.

VER. 23. Cubits. 2 Kings, "a man of great aspect."

VER. 24. Ones. Heb. "and he had a name among three mighty men." Ken.

VER. 25. Among, or rather "above," as he was the second captain of this series, and not one of the body of thirty. Ken.—Council. Lit. "placed him at his ear," (H.) fecit eum auricularium a secreto (2 Kings); though the word is the same. C.—It seems, however, to have been read differently. H.—Sept. "he placed him over his family," (C. παρὰν), or native place. H.—Syr. "guard of his spear, and chief of his heroes." Arab. "over all his riches." Some would translate, "captain of his guards." Grot.—Banaias was a man of consummate prudence, as well as a great warrior. C.—David "gives Banaias the command of his life-guard." Joseph. vii. 12.—Heb. "Behold! he was more honourable than the thirty; but he attained not unto the first three, and David set him over his guard," the Cerethites, &c. Chap. xviii. 17. Ken.

VER. 26. Moreover. Nothing particular is here "recorded of Asahel, and therefore he is barely mentioned with the rest. But the Book of Kings had been more particular in determining their rank, and had said "Asahel, brother of Joab, was over the thirty," being the last of the second ternary. The preposition b (Ken.) frequently means "over." Nold. &c.—Arab. "head of thirty, whose names are these." Ken.—Elchanaan; probably the son of Jair. 2 Kings xxi. 18. C.

VER. 27. Arorite, or Harodite, (2 Kings,) to distinguish him from Shammah. Eliza, who follows in 2 Kings, is here universally omitted, as he is supposed to have died soon, and to have been replaced by Zabad, (ver. 41,) who completes the number of thirty. Ken.—Helles was the captain for the seventh month, as the following one was for the sixth, and Abiezer for the ninth. Chap. xxvii. 10. H.

VER. 29. Sobbochai, rather than Mobonnai, (2 Kings,) where s and m have been mistaken for m and n, which are very similar in Heb. The Sept. (Ald.) has there also Saboughai. He was the eighth captain. Chap. xxvii.—Ilai, or Selmon. 2 Kings. Sept. have the same variation in some copies; but others lead us to suppose that Ilai was the true name. Neither occur any where else in Scripture.

VER. 30. Maharai, the tenth captain. (Chap. xxvii.) Heled was the twelfth.

VER. 31. Ethai. Not the famous prince of Geth, (2 Kings xv. 19. Ken.) though the name is written alike, (2 Kings xxiii. 29,) an i being omitted. H.—This captain contributed to make David king. Ver. 10.

VER. 32. Hurai, rather than Heddai, (2 Kings. Ken.) though there is some doubt which is to be preferred. H.—Syr. and Arab. have Hiddai; but the Sept. declare for Hurai here, and the Aldine copy has Ouri also. 2 Kings. Ken.—Torrent. Heb. "of the torrents or valcs of Gaas." C.—Abiel. 2 Kings, Abialbon, which seems to be the right word, as a transcriber may omit letters more easily than he can insert them. Bun at the end seems to have been written separate, and to have been translated "the son of," by Syr. and Arab.

VER. 33. Gezonite. We know not the meaning of this epithet. C.—In 2 Kings we read of the sons of Jassen, Jonathan, and Senna (K.); but both seem to be incorrect; instead of Sept. "the son," or supposing m to be lost at the beginning of the sons of Assem, Gouni, as Sept. read, instead of Gezonite,

32 Hurai, of the torrent Gaas; Abiel, an Arbathite; Azmoth, a Bauramite; Eliaba, a Salabonite;

33 The sons of Assem, a Gezonite; Jonathan, the son of Sage, an Ararite;

34 Ahiam, the son of Sachar, an Ararite;

35 Eliphai, the son of Ur;

36 Hephher, a Mecherathite; Ahia, a Phelonite;

37 Hesro, a Carmelite; Naarai, the son of Azbai;

38 Joel, the brother of Nathan; Mibabar, the son of Agarai;

39 Selec, an Ammonite; Naharai, a Berothite, the armour-bearer of Joab, the son of Sarvia,

40 Ira, a Jethrite; Gareb, a Jethrite,

41 Urias, a Hethite; Zabad, the son of Ohohi;

42 Adina, the son of Siza, a Rubenite, the prince of the Rubenites, and thirty with him;

43 Hanan, the son of Maacha; and Josaphat, a Mathanite;

44 Ozia, an Astarothite; Samma, and Jehiel, the sons of Hotham, an Aarorite;

45 Jedihel, the son of Samri; and Joha, his brother, a Thosaites.

46 Eliel, a Mahumite; and Jeribai, and Josai, the which would leave this hero without any name. See chap. v. 15. E is prefixed to this name, as it is to that of Manasses. Jos. i. 12.—Sage, should be Shamha, (Ken.) or Jonathan, the son of Sanna, the brother of David.

VER. 34. Sachar, mentioned chap. xxvi. 4.

VER. 35. Eliphai should be Eliphelet, the son of Aasbai, the son of Ma-chati, (H.) or of the country of Maacha, 4 Kings xxv. 23. Ken.—Eliphai and Hephher cannot constitute two heroes, as that would derange the number thirty-seven. 2 Kings xxiii. 39. The copies of the Sept. vary much. H.

VER. 36. Ahia, or rather "Eliam, the son of Achitophel, the Gilonite," 2 Kings. The name of the hero is lost here; and the latter part of his father's name (p) has also been mistaken for g, which it resembles.

VER. 37. Hesro ends with u in the Heb. Yet some read more properly with i, "Hetzrai," as all the ancient versions have it, except the Vulg., (Ken.) some copies of which read Asra. Blanchini, Vind. 1740.—Carmelite. Sept. Kapprdi. The Δ might easily be mistaken for Λ , as the Greek Bibles (Ken.) for some ages after Origen were written in capital letters, without accents. Montfaucon, Pref. to Hexap. p. 44.—We may apply to many of the proper names that severe censure which S. Jerom has passed upon the transcribers of the book of Chronicles. Ita in Græcis et Latinis cod: hic nominum liber vitiosus est, ut non tum Hebræa quam Barbara quadam et Sarmatica nomina conjecta arbitrandum sit, &c., Ep. ad Domn. If this epistle be not genuine, the same doctor complains at least of the incorrect state of the Sept. Pref. in Paral.

VER. 38. Joel seems better than Ignal, (2 Kings. H.) as we know there were some of this name lived under David, (chap. xxvi. 22, and xxvii. 20,) and all the versions agree here, but vary much 2 Kings. It is, therefore, more natural for us to stick to that copy which has the greatest authority from the ancient versions. Ken.—Brother, relation, adopted child, (D.) or son, (2 Kings,) which seems more correct, as this is an usual expression. C.—This reason may rather lead us to conclude that the mistake being more natural, has been made by the transcriber of that book; particularly as we nowhere else read of Joel being the son of Nathan, but rather of Pedaiab, &c.—Mibabar, or rather "Nathan of Tzoba."—The son, ought to be the proper name, "Bonni, (of Gadi, 2 Kings,) or the Gadite." Ken.

VER. 42. With him. Heb. "above him," (Sept., Jun., Mont.) which must be applied to the rest of these fifteen less valiant men. Ken.—Prot. agree with the Vulg., (H.) and Delany looks upon these thirty as a fourth order of commanders in chief. But thirty with him would make thirty-one, and why are only fifteen mentioned? We have a regular gradation of officers, descending from Joab, the captain-general. Ken.

VER. 46. Mahumite. Prot. "Mahavite." Kennicott would translate these last verses according to his corrections. 42. . . "Zabad, the son of Ahlai; (43) Adina, the son of Shiza, the Rubenite, and head of the Rubenites: But the thirty were his superiors. 44 Hanan, the son of Maacah; and Josaphat, the Mithnite. 45 Urzia, the Ashtarothite; Shema and Jehiel, the sons of Hotham, the Arocrute. 46 Jediel, the son of Shimri; and Joha, his brother, the Titzite. 47 Jehiel and Mahavite, and Jeribai and Joshaviah, the sons of Elnaam; and Ithmah, the Moabite; (48) Eliel, and Obed, and Jashiel, the Metzobaites." It will be easily perceived that this author frequently recedes from the Prot. version, as well as from the printed Heb., both of which are frequently erroneous. Perhaps the critical examination of these proper names may appear to some unimportant. But the question respecting the perfect integrity of the Hebrew text deserves to be seriously considered; and every part of sacred history requires our attention. If the Prot. rule of faith be incorrect, what security can they have? We are not exposed to the same inconvenience, even though the Vulgate be susceptible of further improvement. H.

NOW these are they that came to David to Siceleg, while he yet fled from Saul, the son of Cis, and they were most valiant and excellent warriors,

2 Bending the bow, and using either hand in hurling stones with slings, and shooting arrows: of the brethren of Saul and Benjamin.

3 The chief was Ahiezer, and Joas, the sons of Samaa, of Gabaath, and Jaziel, and Phallet, the sons of Azmoth, and Beracha, and Jehu, an Anathothite,

4 And Samaias, of Gabaon, the stoutest among the thirty and over the thirty; Jeremias, and Jeheziel, and Johanan, and Jezabad, of Gaderoth;

5 And Eluzai, and Jearimuth, and Baalia, and Samaria, and Saphatia, the Haruphite;

6 Elcana, and Jesia, and Azareel, and Joezer, and Jesbaam, of Carehim:

7 And Joela, and Zabadia, the sons of Jeroham, of Gedor.

8 From Gaddi also there went over to David, when he lay hid in the wilderness, most valiant men, and excellent warriors, holding shield and spear; whose faces were like the faces of a lion, and they were swift like the roebucks on the mountains.

9 Ezer the chief, Obdias the second, Eliab the third,

10 Masmana the fourth, Jeremias the fifth,

11 Ethî the sixth, Eliel the seventh,

12 Johanan the eighth, Elzebad the ninth,

13 Jerenias the tenth, Machbani the eleventh.

14 These were of the sons of Gad, captains of the army: the least of them was captain over a hundred soldiers, and the greatest over a thousand.

15 These are they who passed over the Jordan in the first month, when it is used to flow over its banks: and they put to flight all that dwelt in the valleys, both toward the east and toward the west.

16 And there came also of the men of Benjamin, and of Juda, to the hold in which David abode.

17 And David went out to meet them, and said: If you are come peaceably to me to help me, let my heart be joined to you: but if you plot against me for my enemies, whereas I have no iniquity in my hands, let the God of our fathers see, and judge.

18 But the spirit came upon Amasai, the chief among thirty, and he said: We are thine, O David, and for thee, O son of Isai: peace, peace be to thee, and peace to thy helpers. For thy God helpeth thee. So David received them, and made them captains of the band.

19 And there were some of Manasses, that went over to David, when he came with the Philistines against Saul to fight: but he did not fight with them: because the lords of the Philistines taking counsel, sent him back, saying: With the danger of our heads he will return to his master, Saul.

20 So when he went back to Siceleg, there fled to him of Manasses, Ednas, and Jozabab, and Jedihel, and Michael, and Ednas, and Jozabad, and Eliu, and Salathi, captains of thousands in Manasses.

21 These helped David against the rovers: for they were all most valiant men, and were made commanders in the army.

22 Moreover, day by day there came some to David to help him, till they became a great number, like the army of God.

23 And this is the number of the chiefs of the army who came to David, when he was in Hebron, to transfer to him the kingdom of Saul, according to the word of the Lord.

24 The sons of Juda, bearing shield and spear, six thousand eight hundred, well appointed to war.

25 Of the sons of Simeon, valiant men for war, seven thousand one hundred:

26 Of the sons of Levi, four thousand six hundred.

27 And Joiada, prince of the race of Aaron, and with him three thousand seven hundred.

28 Sadoc also, a young man of excellent disposition, and the house of his father, twenty-two principal men.

29 And of the sons of Benjamin, the brethren of Saul, three thousand: for hitherto a great part of them followed the house of Saul.

30 And of the sons of Ephraim, twenty thousand eight hundred, men of great valour, renowned in their kindreds.

31 And of the half tribe of Manasses, eighteen thousand, every one by their names, came to make David king.

32 Also of the sons of Issachar, men of understanding, that knew all times to order what Israel should do, two hundred principal men: and all the rest of the tribe followed their counsel.

33 And of Zabulon, such as went forth to battle, and stood in array well appointed with armour for war, there came fifty thousand to his aid, with no double heart.

35 Of Dan also, twenty-eight thousand six hundred prepared for battle.

36 And of Aser, forty thousand, going forth to fight, and challenging in battle.

37 And on the other side of the Jordan, of the sons of Ruben, and of Gad, and of the half of the tribe of Manasses, a hundred and twenty thousand, furnished with arms for war.

38 All these men of war, well appointed to fight, came with a perfect heart to Hebron, to make David king over all Israel: and all the rest also of Israel, were of one heart, to make David king.

39 And they were there with David three days, eating and drinking: for their brethren had prepared for them.

40 Moreover they that were near them, even as far as Issachar, and Zabulon, and Nephtali, brought loaves on asses, and on camels, and on mules, and on oxen, to eat: and meal, figs, raisins, wine, oil, and oxen, and sheep, in abundance; for there was joy in Israel.

CHAP. XIII.

The ark is brought from Cariathiarim. Oza, for touching it, is struck dead.

AND David consulted with the captains of thousands, and of hundreds, and with all the commanders,

2 And he said to all the assembly of Israel: If it please you: and if the words which I speak come from the Lord our God, let us send to the rest of our brethren, into all the countries of Israel, and to the priests, and the Levites, that dwell in the suburbs of the cities, to gather themselves to us:

3 And let us bring again the ark of our God to us: for we sought it not in the days of Saul.

4 And all the multitude answered that it should be so: for the word pleased all the people.

5 So David assembled all Israel, from Sihor of Egypt, even to the entering into Emath,* to bring the ark of God from Cariathiarim.

6 And David went up with all the men of Israel to the hill of Cariathiarim, which is in Juda, to bring thence the ark of the Lord God sitting upon the Cherubims, where his name is called upon.

7 And they carried the ark of God upon a new cart, out of the house of Aminadab, and Oza and his brother drove the cart.

8 And David and all Israel played before God with all their might, with hymns, and with harps, and with psalteries, and timbrels, and cymbals, and trumpets.

VER. 40. Nephtali. All, both far and near, contributed to regale the deputies. C.

CHAP. XIII. VER. 1. Consulted. David wished to give religion due splendour and authority in his dominions; and he prudently contrives to obtain the general consent. H.—“Where there is no liberty, there is no religion;” and no change in religious matters should be attempted without the consent of the Church. C.

VER. 3. Sought. Prot. “inquired not at it.” Yet it is certain that many resorted to the ark at that time. But it was not treated with such honour as David now wished. H.

9 And when they came to the floor of Chidon, Oza put forth his hand, to hold up the ark; for the ox being wanton, had made it lean a little on one side.

10 And the Lord was angry with Oza, and struck him, because he had touched the ark: and he died there before the Lord.

11 And David was troubled, because the Lord had divided Oza: and he called that place the breach of Oza to this day.

12 And he feared God at that time, saying: How can I bring in the ark of God to me?

13 And therefore he brought it not home to himself, that is, into the city of David, but carried it aside into the house of Obedom, the Gethite.

14 And the ark of God remained in the house of Obedom three months: and the Lord blessed his house, and all that he had.

CHAP. XIV.

David's house, and children; his victories over the Philistines.

AND Hiram, king of Tyre, sent messengers to David; and cedar-trees, and masons, and carpenters, to build him a house.

2 And David perceived that the Lord had confirmed him king over Israel, and that his kingdom was exalted over his people, Israel.

3 And David took other wives in Jerusalem: and he begot sons and daughters.

4 Now these are the names of them that were born to him in Jerusalem: Samua. and Sobad, Nathan, and Solomon,

5 Jebahar, and Elisua, and Eliphalet,

6 And Noga, and Napheg, and Japhia,

7 Elisama, and Baaliada, and Eliphalet.

8 And the Philistines hearing that David was anointed king over all Israel, went all up to seek him: and David heard of it, and went out against them.

9 And the Philistines came and spread themselves in the vale of Raphaim.

10 And David consulted the Lord, saying: Shall I go up against the Philistines, and wilt thou deliver them into my hand? And the Lord said to him: Go up, and I will deliver them into thy hand.

11 And when they were come to Baalpharasim, David defeated them there, and he said: God hath divided my enemies by my hand, as waters are divided: and therefore the name of that place was called Baalpharasim.

12 And they left there their gods, and David commanded that they should be burnt.

CHAP. XIV. VER. 1. Hiram. This embassy, and the war with the Philistines, took place before the ark was removed. C.

VER. 7. Baaliada, probably the same with Eliada. C.

VER. 8. Seek him, with a design to oppress him, before his throne was established. H.

VER. 11. Baalpharasim, “the god or master of divisions.” C.—The place was so called afterwards. D.

VER. 12. Burnt, conformably to Deut. vii. 25. These idols were commonly made of wood, and covered with plates of gold, &c. The Philistines took them along with them to battle, as the Hebrews carried the ark on many occasions.

13 Another time also the Philistines made an irruption, and spread themselves abroad in the valley.

14 And David consulted God again, and God said to him: Go not up after them, turn away from them, and come upon them over against the pear-trees.

15 And when thou shalt hear the sound of one going in the tops of the pear-trees, then shalt thou go out to battle. For God is gone out before thee, to strike the army of the Philistines.

16 And David did as God had commanded him, and defeated the army of the Philistines, slaying them from Gabaon to Gazera.

17 And the name of David became famous in all countries, and the Lord made all nations fear him.

CHAP. XV.

The ark is brought into the city of David, with great solemnity. Michol derideth David's devotion.

HE made also houses for himself in the city of David: and built a place for the ark of God, and pitched a tabernacle for it.

2 Then David said: No one ought to carry the ark of God, but the Levites; whom the Lord hath chosen to carry it, and to minister unto himself for ever.

3 And he gathered all Israel together into Jerusalem, that the ark of God might be brought into its place, which he had prepared for it.

4 And the sons of Aaron also, and the Levites.

5 Of the children of Caath, Uriel was the chief: and his brethren a hundred and twenty.

6 Of the sons of Merari, Asaia, the chief: and his brethren two hundred and twenty.

7 Of the sons of Gersom, Joel, the chief: and his brethren a hundred and thirty.

8 Of the sons of Elisaphan, Semeias, the chief: and his brethren two hundred.

9 Of the sons of Hebron, Eliel, the chief: and his brethren eighty.

10 Of the sons of Oziel, Aminadab, the chief: and his brethren a hundred and twelve.

11 And David called Sadoc, and Abiathar, the priests, and the Levites, Uriel, Asaia, Joel, Semeia, Eliel, and Aminadab.

12 And he said to them: You that are the heads of the Levitical families, be sanctified with your brethren, and bring the ark of the Lord, the God of Israel, to the place which is prepared for it.

* Supra, xiii. 10.

13 *Lest as the Lord at first struck us, because you were not present, the same should now also come to pass, by our doing some thing against the law.

14 So the priests and the Levites were sanctified, to carry the ark of the Lord, the God of Israel.

15 ^bAnd the sons of Levi took the ark of God, as Moses had commanded, according to the word of the Lord, upon their shoulders, with the staves.

16 And David spoke to the chiefs of the Levites, to appoint some of their brethren to be singers with musical instruments; to wit, on psalteries, and harps, and cymbals, that the joyful noise might resound on high.

17 And they appointed Levites, Heman, the son of Joel, and of his brethren Asaph, the son of Barachias: and of the sons of Merari, their brethren, Ethan, the son of Casaia.

18 And with them their brethren: in the second rank, Zacharias, and Ben, and Jaziel, and Semiramoth, and Jahiel, and Ani, and Eliab, and Banaias, and Maasias, and Mathathias, and Eliphalu, and Macenias, and Obededom, and Jehiel, the porters.

19 Now the singers, Heman, Asaph, and Ethan, sounded with cymbals of brass.

20 And Zacharias, and Oziel, and Semiramoth, and Jehiel, and Ani, and Eliab, and Maasias, and Banaias, sung mysteries upon psalteries.

21 And Mathathias, and Eliphalu, and Macenias, and Obededom, and Jehiel, and Ozaziu, sung a song of victory for the octave upon harps.

22 And Chonenias, chief of the Levites, presided over the prophecy, to give out the tunes: for he was very skilful.

23 And Barachias, and Elcana, were door-keepers of the ark.

24 And Sebenias, and Josaphat, and Nathanael, and Amasai, and Zacharias, and Banaias, and Eliezer, the priests, sounded with trumpets, before the ark of God: and Obededom and Jehias, were porters of the ark.

25 ^cSo David, and all the ancients of Israel, and the captains over thousands, went to bring the ark of the covenant of the Lord, out of the house of Obededom, with joy.

26 And when God had helped the Levites who carried the ark of the covenant of the Lord, they offered in sacrifice seven oxen, and seven rams.

27 And David was clothed with a robe of fine linen,

VER. 17. Heman, Asaph, and Ethan, were masters of the first band of musicians, in the reign of David. They played on cymbals of brass, ver. 19.

VER. 18. Ben. His name is omitted, ver. 20, and in the Sept. The Syriac, &c. have "the son of Jaziel;" but we find the 9th Psalm addressed "to Ben, chief of the band of young women," who sung and played on nables, ver. 20. C.—And Jaziel, called Oziel, ver. 20, as the Sept. have here. H.

VER. 20. Zacharias, &c. presided over the second band, with nables, and Mathathias over the third, which had instruments of eight strings. The priests sounded the trumpets, (ver. 24,) while Chonenias directed all the music, in this solemn procession. C.—Psalteries. Lit. "nables." H.—The Vulg. sometimes renders it psalterion, at other times lyra, (M.) or symphonia. S. Jer. ad Dard. T.

VER. 21. Ozaziu does not occur before. Sept. have Ozias both here and ver. 18, after Jehiel. H.—Of victory, such as was customary on the like occasions.—For the octave. Heb. esminoth, according to the Jews, means an instrument of eight strings; so when ten is mentioned, the Sept. frequently supply "strings." Psal. xxxii. 2. M.—Heb. "they had guitars, and presided over the eighth band to intone." All the bands formed four choirs, distinguished by their instruments, the cymbal, nable, cinnor, (or guitar,) and trumpets. C.

VER. 22. The prophecy. Singing praises to God is here called prophecy the more, because these singers were often inspired men. Ch.—Heb. Mossa signifies a song, (H.) elevation, (C.) burden. Syr. So the Vulg. has onus Moab, &c., the burden or dreadful prediction against Moab. C.

and all the Levites that carried the ark, and the singing men, and Chonenias, the ruler of the prophecy among the singers: and David also had on him an ephod of linen.

28 And all Israel brought the ark of the covenant of the Lord, with joyful shouting, and sounding with the sound of the cornet, and with trumpets, and cymbals, and psalteries, and harps.

29 And when the ark of the covenant of the Lord was come to the city of David, Michol, the daughter of Saul, looking out at a window, saw king David dancing and playing, and she despised him in her heart.

CHAP. XVI.

The ark is placed in the tabernacle. Sacrifice is offered. David blesseth the people, disposeth the offices of Levites, and maketh a psalm of praise to God.

SO^a they brought the ark of God, and set it in the midst of the tent, which David had pitched for it: and they offered holocausts, and peace-offerings before God.

2 And when David had made an end of offering holocausts, and peace-offerings, he blessed the people in the name of the Lord.

3 And he divided to all and every one, both men and women, a loaf of bread, and a piece of roasted beef, and flour fried with oil.

4 And he appointed Levites to minister before the ark of the Lord, and to remember his works, and to glorify and praise the Lord God of Israel.

5 Asaph, the chief, and next after him Zacharias: Moreover Jahiel, and Semiramoth, and Jehiel, and Mathathias, and Eliab, and Banaias, and Obededom: and Jehiel, over the instruments of psaltery, and harps: and Asaph to sound with cymbals:

6 But Banaias, and Jaziel, the priests, to sound the trumpet continually before the ark of the covenant of the Lord.

7 In that day David made Asaph, the chief, to give praise to the Lord with his brethren.

8 ^bPraise ye the Lord, and call upon his name: make known his doings among the nations.

9 Sing to him, yea, sing praises to him: and relate all his wondrous works.

10 Praise ye his holy name: let the heart of them rejoice, that seek the Lord.

11 Seek ye the Lord, and his power: seek ye his face evermore.

12 Remember his wonderful works, which he hath done: his signs, and the judgments of his mouth.

36 Blessed be the Lord, the God of Israel from eternity to eternity: and let all the people say: Amen, and sing a hymn to God.

37 So he left there before the ark of the covenant of the Lord, Asaph and his brethren, to minister in the presence of the ark continually, day by day, and in their courses.

38 And Obedom, with his brethren, sixty-eight: and Obedom, the son of Idithun, and Hosa, he appointed to be porters.

39 And Sadoc, the priest, and his brethren, priests, before the tabernacle of the Lord in the high place, which was in Gabaon;

40 That they should offer holocausts to the Lord upon the altar of holocaust, continually, morning and evening, according to all that is written in the law of the Lord, which he commanded Israel.

41 And after him Heman, and Idithun, and the rest that were chosen, every one by his name to give praise to the Lord: because his mercy endureth for ever.

42 And Heman and Idithun sounded the trumpet, and played on the cymbals, and all kinds of musical instruments, to sing praises to God: and the sons of Idithun he made porters.

43 And all the people returned to their houses: and David to bless also his own house.

CHAP. XVII.

David's purpose to build a temple is rewarded by most ample promises: David's thanksgiving.

NOW^a when David was dwelling in his house, he said to Nathan, the prophet: Behold, I dwell in a house of cedar: and the ark of the covenant of the Lord is under skins.

2 And Nathan said to David: Do all that is in thy heart: for God is with thee.

3 Now that night the word of God came to Nathan, saying:

4 Go, and speak to David, my servant: Thus saith the Lord: Thou shalt not build me a house to dwell in.

5 For I have not remained in a house from the time that I brought up Israel to this day: but I have been always changing places in a tabernacle, and in a tent

6 Abiding with all Israel. Did I ever speak to any one, of all the judges of Israel, whom I charged to feed my people, saying: Why have you not built me a house of cedar?

^a 2 Kings vi. 17. A. M. 2960, A. C. 1044.

7 Now, therefore, t' is shalt thou say to my servant, David: Thus saith the Lord of hosts: I took thee from the pastures, from following the flock, that thou shouldst be ruler of my people Israel;

8 And I have been with thee whithersoever thou hast gone: and I have slain all thy enemies before thee, and have made thee a name, like that of one of the great ones that are renowned in the earth.

9 And I have given a place to my people Israel: they shall be planted, and shall dwell therein, and shall be moved no more; neither shall the children of iniquity waste them, as at the beginning,

10 Since the days that I gave judges to my people Israel, and I have humbled all thy enemies. And I declare to thee, that the Lord will build thee a house.

11 And when thou shalt have ended thy days to go to thy fathers, I will raise up thy seed after thee, which shall be of thy sons: and I will establish his kingdom.

12 He shall build me a house, and I will establish his throne for ever.

13 I will be to him a father, and he shall be to me a son: and I will not take my mercy away from him, as I took it from him that was before thee.

14 But I will settle him in my house, and in my kingdom for ever: and his throne shall be most firm for ever.

15 According to all these words, and according to all this vision, so did Nathan speak to David.

16 And king David came, and sat before the Lord, and said: Who am I, O Lord God, and what is my house, that thou shouldst give such things to me?

17 But even this hath seemed little in thy sight, and therefore thou hast also spoken concerning the house of thy servant, for the time to come: and thou hast made me remarkable above all men, O Lord God.

18 What can David add more, seeing thou hast thus glorified thy servant, and known him?

19 O Lord, for thy servant's sake, according to thy own heart, thou hast showed all this magnificence, and wouldst have all these great things to be known.

20 O Lord, there is none like unto thee: and there is no other God beside thee, of all whom we have heard of with our ears.

21 For what other nation is there upon earth like unto thy people Israel, whom God went to deliver, and make a people for himself, and by his greatness and terrors to cast out nations before their face, whom he had delivered out of Egypt?

22 And thou hast made thy people Israel to be thy own people for ever; and thou, O Lord, art become their God.

23 Now therefore, O Lord, let the word which thou

25 For thou, O Lord, my God, hast revealed to the ear of thy servant, that thou wilt build him a house: and therefore thy servant hath found confidence to pray before thee.

26 And now, O Lord, thou art God: and thou hast promised to thy servant such great benefits.

David's victories. His chief officers.

AND ^ait came to pass after this, that David defeated the Philistines, and humbled them, and took away Geth, and her daughters, out of the hands of the Philistines:

2 And he defeated Moab, and the Moabites were made David's servants, and brought him gifts.

3 At that time David defeated also Adarezer, king of Soba, of the land of Hemath, when he went to extend his dominions as far as the river Euphrates.

4 And David took from him a thousand chariots, and seven thousand horsemen, and twenty thousand footmen, and he houghed all the chariot-horses, only a hundred chariots, which he reserved for himself.

5 And the Syrians of Damascus came also to help Adarezer, king of Soba: and David slew of them likewise two and twenty thousand men.

6 And he put a garrison in Damascus, that Syria also should serve him, and bring gifts. And the Lord assisted him in all things to which he went.

7 And David took the golden quivers, which the servants of Adarezer had, and he brought them to Jerusalem.

8 Likewise out of Thebath and Chun, cities of Adarezer, he brought very much brass, of which Solomon made the brazen sea, and the pillars, and the vessels of brass.

9 Now when Thou, king of Hemath, heard that David had defeated all the army of Adarezer, king of Soba,

12 And Abisai, the son of Sarvia, slew of the Edomites, in the vale of the Salt-pits, eighteen thousand:

13 And he put a garrison in Edom, that Edom should serve David: and the Lord preserved David in all things to which he went.

14 So David reigned over all Israel, and executed judgment and justice among all his people.

15 And Joab, the son of Sarvia, was over the army: and Josaphat, the son of Ahilud, recorder:

16 And Sadoc, the son of Achitob, and Achimelech, the son of Abiathar, were the priests; and Susa, scribe.

The Ammonites abuse David's ambassadors: both they and their confederates are overthrown.

NOW ^bit came to pass that Naas, the king of the children of Ammon, died, and his son reigned in his stead.

2 And David said: I will show kindness to Hanon, the son of Naas: for his father did a favour to me. And David sent messengers to comfort him upon the death of his father. But when they were come into the land of the children of Ammon, to comfort Hanon;

3 The princes of the children of Ammon, said to Hanon: Thou thinkest, perhaps, that David, to do honour to thy father, hath sent comforters to thee: and thou dost not take notice, that his servants are come to consider, and search, and spy out thy land.

4 Wherefore Hanon shaved the heads and beards of the servants of David, and cut away their garments from the buttocks to the feet, and sent them away.

5 And when they were gone, they sent word to David, who sent to meet them, (for they had suffered a great affront,) and ordered them to stay at Jericho till their beards grew, and then to return.

6 And when the children of Ammon saw that they had done an injury to David, Hanon, and the rest of the

VER. 16. Abiathar and Achimelech had both names indifferently. Heb. reads Abimelech, which is a manifest mistake. The name of Abiathar perhaps ought to be in the place of Achimelech; as we know that he was the son of the latter, and the high priest under David. Some would translate, "and Abiathar, son of Achimelech."—Susa, or Saraias, secretary.

VER. 17. About. Lit. "at the hand of the king," to execute his orders, and to assist him. Sept. "vicegerents." Syr. "princes." They are styled priests, 2 Kings viii. 18.

CHAP. XIX. VER. 6. Mesopotamia is not mentioned 2 Kings, as the troops perhaps did not arrive soon enough for the first battle. ver. 16.

VER. 7. Chariots. This number seems excessive, and it may have been put people, sent a thousand talents of silver, to hire them chariots and horsemen out of Mesopotamia, and out of Syria Maacha, and out of Soba.

7 And they hired two and thirty thousand chariots, and the king of Maacha, with his people. And they came and camped over against Medaba. And the children of Ammon gathered themselves together out of their cities, and came to battle.

8 And when David heard of it, he sent Joab, and all the army of valiant men :

9 And the children of Ammon came out, and put their army in array before the gate of the city : and the kings that came to their aid, stood apart in the field.

10 Wherefore Joab, understanding that the battle was set against him before and behind, chose out the bravest men of all Israel, and marched against the Syrians.

11 And the rest of the people he delivered into the hand of Abisai, his brother, and they went against the children of Ammon.

12 And he said : If the Syrians be too strong for me, then thou shalt help me : but if the children of Ammon be too strong for thee, I will help thee.

13 Be of good courage, and let us behave ourselves manfully for our people, and for the cities of our God : and the Lord will do that which is good in his sight.

14 So Joab, and the people that were with him, went against the Syrians to the battle : and he put them to flight.

15 And the children of Ammon, seeing that the Syrians were fled, they likewise fled from Abisai, his brother, and went into the city : and Joab also returned into Jerusalem.

16 But the Syrians, seeing that they had fallen before Israel, sent messengers, and brought to them the Syrians that were beyond the river : and Sophach, general of the army of Adarezer, was their leader.

17 And it was told David ; and he gathered together all Israel, and passed the Jordan, and came upon them, and put his army in array against them, and they fought with him.

18 But the Syrians fled before Israel : and David slew of the Syrians seven thousand chariots, and forty thousand footmen, and Sophach, the general of the army.

19 *And when the servants of Adarezer saw themselves overcome by Israel, they went over to David, and served him : and Syria would not help the children of Ammon any more.

AND^b it came to pass, after the course of a year, at the time that kings go out to battle, Joab gathered together an army, and the strength of the troops, and wasted the land of the children of Ammon : and went and besieged Rabba. But David staid at Jerusalem, when Joab smote Rabba, and destroyed it.

2 And David took the crown of Melchom from his head, and found in it a talent weight of gold, and most precious stones ; and he made himself a diadem of it : he took also the spoils of the city, which were very great.

3 And the people that were therein he brought out : and made harrows, and sleds, and chariots of iron, to go over them, so that they were cut and bruised to pieces. In this manner David dealt with all the cities of the children of Ammon : and he returned with all his people to Jerusalem.

4 *After this there arose a war at Gazei, against the Philistines : in which Sabachai, the Husathite, slew Saphai, of the race of Raphaim, and humbled them.

5 Another battle also was fought against the Philistines, in which Adeodatus, the son of Saltus, a Bethlehemite, slew the brother of Goliath, the Gethite, the staff of whose spear was like a weaver's beam.

6 There was another battle also in Geth, in which there was a man of great stature, whose fingers and toes were four and twenty, six on each hand and foot : who also was born of the stock of Rapha.

7 He reviled Israel : but Jonathan, the son of Samaa, the brother of David, slew him. These were the sons of Rapha, in Geth, who fell by the hand of David and his servants.

David's sin, in numbering the people, is punished by a pestilence : which ceaseth upon his offering sacrifice in the threshing-floor of Ornan.

AND^a Satan rose up against Israel : and moved David to number Israel.

2 And David said to Joab, and to the rulers of the people : Go, and number Israel from Bersabee even unto Dan, and bring me the number of them, that I may know it.

3 And Joab answered : The Lord make his people a hundred times more than they are : but, my lord the king, are they not all thy servants ? why doth my lord seek this thing, which may be imputed as a sin to Israel ?

4 But the king's word rather prevailed : and Joab departed, and went through all Israel : and returned to Jerusalem.

5 And he gave David the number of them, whom he had surveyed : and all the number of Israel, was found

CHAP. XXI. VER. 1. Satan. This shows that the Lord only (H.) permitted David's sin, (2 Kings xxiv. W.) and in this sense only he is said to have instigated him (D.) ; though we read this was done by the fury of the Lord, or by an evil spirit. H.

VER. 5. The number, &c. The difference of the numbers here and 2 Kings, (xxiv. 9,) is to be accounted for by supposing the greater number to be that to be eleven hundred thousand men that drew the sword : and of Juda, four hundred and seventy thousand fighting men.

6 But Levi and Benjamin he did not number : for Joab unwillingly executed the king's orders.

7 And God was displeased with this thing that was commanded : and he struck Israel.

8 And David said to God : I have sinned exceedingly in doing this : I beseech thee, take away the iniquity of thy servant, for I have done foolishly.

9 And the Lord spoke to Gad, the seer of David, saying :

10 Go, and speak to David, and tell him : Thus saith the Lord : I give thee the choice of three things : choose one which thou wilt, and I will do it to thee.

11 And when Gad was come to David, he said to him : Thus saith the Lord : Choose which thou wilt :

12 Either three years famine : or three months to flee from thy enemies, and not to be able to escape their sword : or three days to have the sword of the Lord, and pestilence in the land, and the angel of the Lord destroying in all the coasts of Israel : now, therefore, see what I shall answer him who sent me.

13 And David said to Gad : I am on every side in a great strait : but it is better for me to fall into the hands of the Lord, for his mercies are many, than into the hands of men.

14 So the Lord sent a pestilence upon Israel. And there fell of Israel seventy thousand men.

15 And he sent an angel to Jerusalem, to strike it : and as he was striking it, the Lord beheld, and took pity for the greatness of the evil : and said to the angel that destroyed : It is enough ; now stop thy hand. And the angel of the Lord stood by the threshing-floor of Ornan, the Jebusite.

16 And David, lifting up his eyes, saw the angel of the Lord standing between heaven and earth, with a drawn sword in his hand, turned against Jerusalem : and both he, and the ancients, clothed in hair-cloth, fell down flat on the ground.

17 And David said to God : Am not I he that commanded the people to be numbered ? It is I that have sinned : it is I that have done the evil : but as for this flock, what hath it deserved ? O Lord, my God, let thy hand be turned, I beseech thee, upon me, and upon my father's house : and let not thy people be destroyed.

18 And the angel of the Lord commanded Gad to tell David, to go up, and build an altar to the Lord God, in the threshing-floor of Ornan, the Jebusite.

19 And David went up, according to the word of Gad, which he spoke to him in the name of the Lord.

20 Now when Ornan looked up, and saw the angel, he and his four sons hid themselves : for at that time he was threshing wheat in the floor.

21 And as David was coming to Ornan, Ornan saw him, and went out of the threshing-floor to meet him, and bowed down to him, with his face to the ground.

22 And David said to him : Give me this place of thy threshing-floor, that I may build therein an altar to the Lord : but thou shalt take of me as much money as it is worth, that the plague may cease from the people.

23 And Ornan said to David : Take it, and let my lord the king do all that pleaseth him : and moreover, the oxen also I give for a holocaust, and the days for wood, and the wheat for the sacrifice : I will give it all willingly.

24 And king David said to him : It shall not be so : but I will give thee money as much as it is worth : for I must not take it from thee, and so offer to the Lord holocausts free-cost.

25 So David gave to Ornan for the place, six hundred sicles of gold of just weight.

26 And he built there an altar to the Lord : and he offered holocausts, and peace-offerings, and he called upon the Lord, and he heard him, by sending fire from heaven upon the altar of the holocaust.

27 And the Lord commanded the angel : and he put up the sword again into the sheath.

28 And David seeing that the Lord had heard him, in the threshing-floor of Ornan, the Jebusite, forthwith offered victims there.

29 But the tabernacle of the Lord, which Moses made in the desert, and the altar of holocausts, were at that time in the high place of Gabaon.

30 And David could not go to the altar, there to pray to God : for he was seized with an exceedingly great fear, seeing the sword of the angel of the Lord.

7 And David said to Solomon: My son, it was my desire to have built a house to the name of the Lord, my God.*

8 But the word of the Lord came to me, saying: Thou hast shed much blood, and fought many battles, so thou canst not build a house to my name, after shedding so much blood before me:

God. He left more than was sufficient for Solomon to perfect the work, with still greater magnificence than he had planned out, ver. 5; chap. xxviii. 2, and xxix. 2, &c. C.—Million. Josephus (vii. 14) reduces these sums to one tenth part, “of gold 10,000 talents, of silver 100,000;” so that it is “extremely probable that a cipher” was added to these numbers, in some very ancient Heb. copy. Brerewood computes that the sum mentioned here and chap. xxix. 4, would amount to £841,125,000, and maintains that the whole temple pavement, and all the vessels, might have been made of solid gold, without consuming it all. De Pond, in Walton’s Polyglot.—“If we take the preceding talents according to Bishop Cumberland’s computation, the sum total will be somewhat less: but were we to reduce it to less than one half, would not the sum of four hundred millions of money be immense and incredible?” Kennicott.—But the relation given by historians of the riches of Sardanapalus, Cyrus, Alexander, Atabalipa, and some kings, who were not more likely to amass such treasures than David, make the account less improbable. Josephus (vii. 12) asserts that “no prince ever left so great riches.” He had extended his dominions on all sides, and imposed tribute on the conquered. He was very frugal, and had possession of the mines of Phnnon, (Num. xxi. 10, and xxxiii. 43,) and of Phœnicia. Deut. xxxiii. 25. Though the talent seems to have varied in other nations, it always consisted of 3000 sicles among the Hebrews, at least till the captivity. Exod. xxxviii. 25, 26. We find, from 2 Par. xxv. 6; 4 Kings xv. 19, &c., that it formed a very considerable sum.—For all. Heb., Chal., Sept., “And to these add.” T.—He encouraged the princes to contribute (chap. xxix.); and here he exhorts his son to show his liberality, if any thing should be found deficient. CHAP. XXIII. VER. 1. Full, satisfied, in the last year of his reign, and the 70th of his age. D.

VER. 3. Numbered at the same time, when David caused his son to be crowned, and made these fresh regulations, ver. 27, and chap. xxvi. 31.—Upwards, according to the plan given by Moses. David afterwards ordered people of twenty years of age to begin to serve in the tabernacle, as it was now fixed, tributed unto the ministry of the house of the Lord : and six thousand were the overseers and judges.

5 Moreover, four thousand were porters : and as many singers, singing to the Lord with the instruments which David had made to sing with.

6 ^aAnd David distributed them into courses, by the families of the sons of Levi ; to wit, of Gerson, and of Caath, and of Merari.

7 The sons of Gerson were, Leedan, and Semei.

8 The sons of Leedan : the chief, Jahiel, and Zethan, and Joel, three.

9 The sons of Semei : Salomith, and Hosiel, and Aran, three : these were the heads of the families of Leedan.

10 And the sons of Semei were, Leheth, and Ziza, and Jaus, and Baria : these were the sons of Semei, four.

11 And Leheth was the first, Ziza the second : but Jaus and Baria had not many children, and therefore they were counted in one family, and in one house.

12 The sons of Caath were, Amram, and Isaar, Hebron, and Oziel, four.

13 ^bThe sons of Amram : Aaron, and Moses. ^cAnd Aaron was separated to minister in the holy of holies, he and his sons, for ever, and to burn incense before the Lord, according to his ceremonies, and to bless his name for ever.

14 The sons also of Moses, the man of God, were numbered in the tribe of Levi.

15 The sons^d of Moses were, Gersom, and Eliezer :

16 The sons of Gersom : Subuel, the first.

17 And the sons of Eliezer were, Rohobia, the first : and Eliezer had no more sons. But the sons of Rohobia were multiplied exceedingly.

18 The sons of Isaar : Salomith, the first.

19 The sons of Hebron : Jeriau, the first, Amarias, the second, Jahaziel, the third, Jecmaam, the fourth.

20 The sons of Oziel : Micha, the first, Jesia, the second.

21 The sons of Merari : Moholi, and Musi. The sons of Moholi : Eleazar, and Cis.

22 And Eleazar died, and had no sons, but daughters : and the sons of Cis, their brethren, took them.

and consequently the labours were diminished. This tended to augment the splendour of the religious worship, and to edify the people, who could not attend so constantly in person.

VER. 4. Overseers. Heb. sotrim. Sept. "scribes." Others suppose "lictors and executioners," who attended the judges. Grotius.—These were functions from which the priests were exempted (C.) ; so that the Levites alone are meant. M.—Judges. They had to decide the causes of the people. 2 Par. xxix. D.

VER. 6. Into twenty-four courses, like the priests, that each class might serve twice a year for a whole week. Chap. xxiv. 31. T.—God had already made choice of the posterity of Levi ; and David, with the princes, Sadoc, &c., disposed of them by lots, (chap. xxiv. 6,) to serve in the tabernacle, and in the future temple. W.

VER. 7. Leedan, or Lebni. Num. iii. 18. M.

VER. 11. Children. All together were not more than the children of each of the preceding, so that they only formed one class. T.—It would have been too burdensome for them to have performed the same service with those who were far more numerous (H.) : therefore the sons of Semei were joined with the family of Leedan (C.) ; or rather Jaus and Baria went together as one family.—Counted. Heb. "in one class, according to their father's house." H.

VER. 13. Minister. Heb. "to sanctify the holy of holies."—His. Heb. "in his name," with solemnity. Num. vi. 23. The Levites might bless the name of the Lord.

VER. 14. Levi, but not among the priests, (C.) though their father was an extraordinary priest, appointed by God to anoint Aaron. Psal. xcvi. D.

23 The sons of Musi : Moholi, and Eder, and Jerimoth, three.

24 These are the sons of Levi, in their kindreds and families, princes by their courses, and the number of every head that did the works of the ministry of the house of the Lord, from twenty years old and upwards.

25 For David said : The Lord, the God of Israel, hath given rest to his people, and an habitation in Jerusalem, for ever.

26 And it shall not be the office of the Levites to carry any more the tabernacle, and all the vessels for the service thereof.

27 So according to the last precepts of David, the sons of Levi are to be numbered, from twenty years old and upwards.

28 And they are to be under the hand of the sons of Aaron, for the service of the house of the Lord, in the porches, and in the chambers, and in the place of purification, and in the sanctuary, and in all the works of the ministry of the temple of the Lord.

29 And the priests have the charge of the loaves of proposition, and of the sacrifice of fine flour, and of the unleavened cakes, and of the frying-pan, and of the roasting, and of every weight and measure.

30 And the Levites are to stand in the morning, to give thanks, and to sing praises to the Lord : and in like manner in the evening.

31 As well in the oblation of the holocausts of the Lord, as in the sabbaths and in the new moons, and the rest of the solemnities, according to the number, and ceremonies prescribed for every thing, continually, before the Lord.

32 And let them keep the observances of the tabernacle of the covenant, and the ceremonies of the sanctuary, and the charge of the sons of Aaron, their brethren, that they may minister in the house of the Lord.

NOW these were the divisions of the sons of Aaron. The sons of Aaron : Nadab, and Abiu, and Eleazar, and Ithamar.

VER. 28. Place. Heb. "purifying all that is holy" (H.) ; keeping clean all that is used about the sacred ministry. C.

VER. 29. And the priests, &c. This is not found in Heb. or Sept. The Levites might prepare these things ; though the priests alone were to offer them in sacrifice. T. Chap. ix. 32 ; Lev. xxiv. 8.—Others think that (C.) the priests received flour from the people, and baked it. M.—But S. Jerom follows the tradition of the Jews, intimating that the priests sowed the corn, and did every thing about the loaves of proposition. In Mal. i. 6.—Flour. Lev. ii. 1.—Cakes. Exod. xxix. 2.—Roasting the first-fruits. Lev. ii. 14. M.—Measure. A standard was kept in the temple, (Exod. xxx. 13. C.) to prevent any fraud.

VER. 30. And the Levites. This also is omitted in Heb. "and to stand," &c., as all the preceding offices pertained to the Levites, (H.) and priests were bound equally with them to praise the Lord.

VER. 31. Lord. Music accompanied this service twice a day, as it did the sacrifices which were offered for the prince, or for the nation. Num. x. 10. C.—Rest. Heb. "the set festivals, by number, according to the order prescribed unto them continually," &c. H.

had no children: so Eleazar and Ithamar did the office of the priesthood.

3 And David distributed them, that is, Sadoc, of the sons of Eleazar, and Ahimelech, of the sons of Ithamar, according to their courses and ministry.

4 And there were found many more of the sons of Eleazar among the principal men, than of the sons of Ithamar. And he divided them so, that there were of the sons of Eleazar, sixteen chief men, by their families: and of the sons of Ithamar, eight, by their families and houses.

5 And he divided both the families, one with the other, by lot: for there were princes of the sanctuary, and princes of God, both of the sons of Eleazar, and of the sons of Ithamar.

6 And Semeias, the son of Nathanael, the scribe, a Levite, wrote them down before the king and the princes, and Sadoc, the priest, and Ahimelech, the son of Abiathar, and the princes also, of the priestly and Levitical families: one house, which was over the rest, of Eleazar: and another house, which had the rest under it, of Ithamar.

7 Now the first lot came forth to Joiarib, the second to Jedei.

8 The third to Harim, the fourth to Seorim,

9 The fifth to Melchia, the sixth to Maiman,

10 The seventh to Accos, the eighth to Abia,

11 The ninth to Jesua, the tenth to Sechenia,

12 The eleventh to Eliasib, the twelfth to Jacim,

13 The thirteenth to Hoppa, the fourteenth to Isbaab,

14 The fifteenth to Belga, the sixteenth to Emmer,

15 The seventeenth to Hezir, the eighteenth to Aphses,

16 The nineteenth to Pheteia, the twentieth to Hezechiel,

17 The one and twentieth to Jachin, the two and twentieth to Gamul,

18 The three and twentieth to Dalaiau, the four and twentieth to Maaziaiu.

19 These are their courses, according to their ministries, to come into the house of the Lord, and according to their manner, under the hand of Aaron, their father: as the Lord, the God of Israel, had commanded.

20 Now, of the rest of the sons of Levi, there was of the sons of Amram, Subael: and of the sons of Subael, Jehedeia.

21 Also of the sons of Rohobia, the chief, Jesias.

22 And the son of Isaar, Salemoth; and the son of Salemoth, Jahath:

23 And his son, Jeriau, the first, Amarias, the second, Jahaziel, the third, Jecmaan, the fourth.

24 The son of Oziel, Micha: the son of Micha, Samir.

25 The brother of Micha, Jesia: and the son of Jesia, Zacharias.

26 The sons of Merari: Moholi and Musi: the son of Oziau: Benno.

27 The son also of Merari: Oziau, and Soam, and Zacchur, and Hebri.

28 And the son of Moholi: Eleazar, who had no sons.

29 And the son of Cis, Jeramael.

30 The sons of Musi: Moholi, Eder, and Jerimoth. These are the sons of Levi, according to the houses of their families.

31 And they also cast lots over against their brethren, the sons of Aaron, before David, the king, and Sadoc, and Ahimelech, and the princes of the priestly and Levitical families, both the elder and the younger. The lot divided all equally.

CHAP. XXV.

The number and divisions of the musicians.

MOREOVER David, and the chief officers of the army, separated for the ministry the sons of Asaph, and of Heman, and of Idithun: to prophesy with harps, and with psalteries, and with cymbals, according to their number, serving in their appointed office.

2 Of the sons of Asaph: Zachur, and Joseph, and Nathania, and Asarela, sons of Asaph: under the hand of Asaph, prophesying near the king.

3 And of Idithun: the sons of Idithun, Godolias, Sori, Jeseias, and Hasabias, and Mathathias, six, under the hand of their father, Idithun, who prophesied with a harp to give thanks, and to praise the Lord.

4 Of Heman also: the sons of Heman, Bocciau, Mathaniau, Oziel, Subuel, and Jerimoth, Hananias, Hanani, Eliatha, Geddelthi, and Romemthiezer, and Jesbacassa, Mollothi, Othir, Mahazioth:

M.—It would have been otherwise difficult for all to be satisfied. See Jos. vii. 14. C.

Thus the number six will be complete: otherwise we must acknowledge that Idithun, the father, is counted with his children; or that a name is lost, perhaps that of Semeias, (ver. 17. C.) as Sept. Alex. has Semei before Hasabias. H.—Harp (kinnor). This was the distinctive instrument of this band, as the horn was of Heman's. C.

5 All these were the sons of Heman, the seer of the king, in the words of God, to lift up the horn: and God gave to Heman fourteen sons and three daughters.

6 All these, under their father's hand, were distributed to sing in the temple of the Lord, with cymbals, and psalteries, and harps, for the service of the house of the Lord, near the king: to wit, Asaph, and Idithun, and Heman.

7 And the number of them, with their brethren, that taught the song of the Lord, all the teachers, were two hundred and eighty-eight.

8 And they cast lots by their courses, the elder equally with the younger, the learned and the unlearned together.

9 And the first lot came forth to Joseph, who was of Asaph. The second to Godolias, to him and his sons, and his brethren, twelve.

10 The third to Zachur, to his sons, and his brethren, twelve.

11 The fourth to Isari, to his sons, and his brethren, twelve.

24 The seventeenth to Jesbacassa, to his sons, and his brethren, twelve.

25 The eighteenth to Hanani, to his sons, and his brethren, twelve.

VER. 5. Seer: a title usually given to the real prophets, who foresee future things. M.—Gad has this title. 2 Par. xxiv. 11. CHAP. XXVI.

The divisions of the porters. Offices of other Levites.

AND the divisions of the porters: of the Coreites, Meselemia, the son of Core, of the sons of Asaph.

2 The sons of Meselemia: Zacharias, the first-born, Jadhel, the second, Zabadias, the third, Jathanael, the fourth.

3 Elam, the fifth, Johanan, the sixth, Elioenai, the seventh.

4 And the sons of Obedom, Semeias, the first-born, Jozabad, the second, Joaha, the third, Sachar, the fourth, Nathanael, the fifth.

5 Ammiel, the sixth, Issachar, the seventh, Phollathi, the eighth: for the Lord had blessed him.

6 And to Semei, his son, were born sons, heads of their families: for they were men of great valour.

7 The sons then of Semeias were, Othni, and Raphael, and Obed, Elizabad, and his brethren, most valiant men: and Eliu, and Samachias.

8 All these of the sons of Obedom: they, and their sons, and their brethren, most able men for service, sixty-two of Obedom.

9 And the sons of Meselemia, and their brethren, strong men, were eighteen.

10 And of Hosa, that is, of the sons of Merari: Semri, the chief, (for he had not a first-born, and therefore his father made him chief,)

11 Helcias, the second, Tabelias, the third, Zacharias, the fourth: all these the sons, and the brethren, of Hosa, were thirteen.

12 Among these were the divisions of the porters, so that the chiefs of the wards, as well as their brethren, always ministered in the house of the Lord.

13 And they cast lots equally, both little and great, by their families, for every one of the gates.

16 To Sephim, and Hosa, towards the west, by the gate which leadeth to the way of the ascent: ward against ward.

17 Now towards the east were six Levites: and towards the north four a day: and towards the south, likewise, four a day: and where the council was, two and two.

18 In the cells also of the porters, toward the west, four in the way: and two at every cell.

19 These are the divisions of the porters, of the sons of Core, and of Merari.

20 Now Achias was over the treasures of the house of God, and the holy vessels.

21 The sons of Ledan, the sons of Gersonni: of Ledan were heads of the families, of Ledan, and Gersonni, Jehieli.

22 The sons of Jehieli: Zathan, and Joel, his brethren, over the treasures of the house of the Lord.

But it cannot have this meaning here: and these terms are probably borrowed from the Greek, φρουρα, a military "post;" so that we might translate, "There were at the western post, four guards for the ascent, two at each post:" one perhaps was near the temple, (C.) the other at the palace gates. 4 Kings xi. 6. 29 But Chonenias, and his sons, were over the Isaarites, for the business abroad over Israel, to teach them and judge them.

30 And of the Hebronites, Hasabias, and his brethren, most able men, a thousand seven hundred had the charge over Israel beyond the Jordan, westward, in all the works of the Lord, and for the service of the king.

31 And the chief of the Hebronites was Jeria, according to their families and kindreds. In the fortieth year of the reign of David, they were numbered, and they were found most valiant men in Jazer Galaad, 32 And his brethren of stronger age, two thousand seven hundred, chiefs of families. And king David made them rulers over the Rubenites, and the Gadites, and the half tribe of Manasses, for all the service of God, and the king.

CHAP. XXVII. VER. 1. Now. This list is entirely of a political nature. It seems to have been made before David had obtained the throne of Israel, (ver. 7,) though perhaps the monthly division did not comprise 24,000 before that time. This regulation was very excellent, and enabled the king to have an army of 300,000 men at a short notice. It was not attended with any material inconvenience to the people, as none were on service above a month.—Heads. Commanders in chief.—Captains. Twenty-four in number, with 240 centurions under them.—Officers. Heb. ssotrim. Sept. "scribes," whose employment is not well ascertained.

VER. 2. Jesboam. Heb. "Jashobeam," as chap. xi. 11. He was the first after Joab, (H.) and a descendant of Pharez, like David, and waiting upon the king in the month of Nisan, which almost agrees with our March (M.) and April. H.—Zabdiel, the Hachmonite, may therefore denote his country (Kennicott); or Zabdiel might be his ancestor, though the same man has frequently different names. We find several companions of this general in the sequel.

who commanded a part of the army of four and twenty thousand.

5 And the captain of the third company, for the third month, was Banaïas, the son of Joiada, the priest : and in his division were four and twenty thousand.

6 This is that Banaïas, the most valiant among the thirty, and above the thirty. And Amizabad, his son, commanded his company.

7 The fourth, for the fourth month, was Asahel, the brother of Joab, and Zabadias, his son, after him : and in his company were four and twenty thousand.

8 The fifth captain, for the fifth month, was Samaoth, a Jezerite : and his company were four and twenty thousand.

9 The sixth, for the sixth month, was Hira, the son of Acces, a Thecuite : and in his company were four and twenty thousand.

10 The seventh, for the seventh month, was Helles, a Phallonite, of the sons of Ephraim : and in his company were four and twenty thousand.

11 The eighth, for the eighth month, was Sobochai, a Husathite, of the race of Zarahi : and in his company were four and twenty thousand.

12 The ninth, for the ninth month, was Abiezer, an Anathothite, of the sons of Jemini, and in his company were four and twenty thousand.

13 The tenth, for the tenth month, was Marai, who was a Netophathite, of the race of Zarai : and in his company were four and twenty thousand.

14 The eleventh, for the eleventh month, was Banaïas, a Pharathonite, of the sons of Ephraim : and in his company were four and twenty thousand.

15 The twelfth, for the twelfth month, was Holdai, a Netophathite, of the race of Gothoniël : and in his company were four and twenty thousand.

16 Now the chiefs over the tribes of Israel were these : over the Rubenites, Eliezer, the son of Zechri, was ruler : over the Simeonites, Saphatias, the son of Maacha :

17 Over the Levites, Hasabias, the son of Camuel : over the Aaronites, Sadoc :

18 Over Juda, Eliu, the brother of David : over Issachar, Amri, the son of Michael :

19 Over the Zabulonites, Jesmaïas, the son of Adias : over the Nephtalites, Jerimoth, the son of Ozriel :

20 Over the sons of Ephraim : Osee, the son of Ozaïu : over the half tribe of Manasses, Joel, the son of Phadaïa :

21 And over the half tribe of Manasses in Galaad, Jaddo, the son of Zacharias : and over Benjamin, Jasiel, the son of Abner.

22 And over Dan, Ezrihel, the son of Jeroham : these were the princes of the children of Israel.

23 But David would not number them from twenty years old and under : because the Lord had said that he would multiply Israel like the stars of heaven.

24 *Joab, the son of Sarvia, began to number, but he finished not : because upon this there fell wrath upon Israel : and therefore the number of them that were numbered, was not registered in the chronicles of king David.

25 And over the king's treasures was Azmoth, the son of Adiel : and over those stores, which were in the cities, and in the villages, and in the castles, was Jonathan, the son of Ozias.

26 And over the tillage, and the husbandmen, who tilled the ground, was Ezri, the son of Chelub :

27 And over the dressers of the vineyards, was Semeias, a Romathite : and over the wine-cellars, Zabdiâs, an Aphonite.

28 And over the olive-yards, and the fig-groves, which were in the plains, was Balanam, a Gederite : and over the oil-cellars, Joas :

29 And over the herds that fed in Saron, was Setrai, a Saronite : and over the oxen in the valleys, Saphat, the son of Adli :

30 And over the camels, Ubil, an Ismahelite : and over the asses, Jadias, a Meronathite :

31 And over the sheep, Jaziz, an Agarene. All these were the rulers of the substance of king David.

32 And Jonathan, David's uncle, a counsellor, a wise and learned man : he and Jahiel, the son of Hachamoni, were with the king's sons.

33 And Achitophel was the king's counsellor, and Chusai, the Arachite, the king's friend.

34 And after Achitophel was Joiada, the son of Banaïas, and Abiathar. And the general of the king's army was Joab.

CHAP. XXVIII.

David's speech, in a solemn assembly: his exhortation to Solomon. He giveth him a pattern of the temple.

AND^a David assembled all the chief men of Israel, the princes of the tribes, and the captains of the companies, who waited on the king: and the captains over thousands, and over hundreds, and them who had the charge over the substance and possessions of the king, and his sons, with the officers of the court, and the men of power, and all the bravest of the army at Jerusalem.

2 And the king rising up, and standing, said: Hear me, my brethren, and my people: I had a thought to have built a house, in which the ark of the Lord, and the footstool of our God, might rest: and I prepared all things for the building.

3 And God said to me: ^bThou shalt not build a house to my name: because thou art a man of war, and hast shed blood.

4 But the Lord God of Israel chose me of all the house of my father, to be king over Israel, for ever: for of Juda he chose the princes: and of the house of Juda, my father's house: and among the sons of my father, it pleased him to choose me king over all Israel.

5 ^cAnd among my sons (for the Lord hath given me many sons) he hath chosen Solomon, my son, to sit upon the throne of the kingdom of the Lord, over Israel.

6 And he said to me: Solomon, thy son, shall build my house, and my courts: for I have chosen him to be my son, and I will be a father to him.

7 And I will establish his kingdom for ever, if he continue to keep my commandments, and my judgments, as at this day.

8 Now then, before all the assembly of Israel, in the hearing of our God, keep ye, and seek all the commandments of the Lord, our God: that you may possess the good land, and may leave it to your children after you, for ever.

9 And thou, my son, Solomon, know the God of thy father, and serve him with a perfect heart, and a willing mind: ^dfor the Lord searcheth all hearts, and understandeth all the thoughts of minds. If thou seek him, thou shalt find him: but if thou forsake him, he will cast thee off for ever.

VER. 11. Description, impressed by God on David's imagination (Cajet.);

10 Now, therefore, seeing the Lord hath chosen thee to build the house of the sanctuary, take courage, and do it.

11 And David gave to Solomon, his son, a description of the porch, and of the temple, and of the treasures, and of the upper floor, and of the inner chambers, and of the house, for the mercy-seat,

12 As also of all the courts, which he had in his thought, and of the chambers round about, for the treasures of the house of the Lord, and for the treasures of the consecrated things,

13 And of the divisions of the priests, and of the Levites, for all the works of the house of the Lord, and for all the vessels of the service of the temple of the Lord.

14 Gold by weight for every vessel for the ministry. And silver by weight according to the diversity of the vessels and uses.

15 He gave also gold for the golden candlesticks, and their lamps, according to the dimensions of every candlestick, and the lamps thereof. In like manner also, he gave silver by weight for the silver candlesticks, and for their lamps, according to the diversity of the dimensions of them.

16 He gave also gold for the tables of proposition, according to the diversity of the tables: in like manner also silver for other tables of silver.

17 For flesh-hooks also, and bowls, and censers of fine gold, and for little lions of gold, according to the measure he gave by weight, for every lion. In like manner also, for lions of silver he set aside a different weight of silver.

18 And for the altar of incense, he gave the purest gold: and to make the likeness of the chariot of the Cherubim, spreading their wings, and covering the ark of the covenant of the Lord.

19 All these things, said he, came to me written by the hand of the Lord: that I might understand all the works of the pattern.

20 And David said to Solomon, his son: Act like a man, and take courage, and do: fear not, and be not dismayed: for the Lord, my God, will be with thee, and will not leave thee, nor forsake thee, till thou hast finished all the work for the service of the house of the Lord.

CHAP. XXIX.

David, by word and example, encourageth the princes to contribute liberally to the building of the temple. His thanksgiving, prayer, and sacrifices: his death.

AND^a king David said to all the assembly: Solomon, my son, whom alone God hath chosen, is as yet young and tender: and the work is great, for a house is prepared not for man, but for God.

2 And I, with all my ability, have prepared the expenses for the house of my God. Gold for vessels of gold, and silver for vessels of silver, brass for things of brass, iron for things of iron, wood for things of wood; and onyx-stones, and stones like alabaster, and of divers colours, and all manner of precious stones, and marble of Paros in great abundance:

3 Now over and above the things which I have offered into the house of my God, I give of my own proper goods, gold and silver for the temple of my God, beside what things I have prepared for the holy house.

4 Three thousand talents of gold of the gold of Ophir: and seven thousand talents of refined silver, to overlay the walls of the temple.

5 And gold for wheresoever there is need of gold; and silver for wheresoever there is need of silver, for the works to be made by the hands of the artificers: now if any man is willing to offer, let him fill his hand to-day, and offer what he pleaseth to the Lord.

6 Then the heads of the families, and the princes of the tribes of Israel, and the captains of thousands, and of hundreds, and the overseers of the king's possessions, promised.

7 And they gave for the works of the house of the Lord, of gold, five thousand talents, and ten thousand solids; of silver, ten thousand talents; and of brass, eighteen thousand talents; and of iron, a hundred thousand talents.

8 And all they that had stones, gave them to the treasures of the house of the Lord, by the hand of Jahiel, the Gersonite.

CHAP. XXIX. VER. 2. Onyx, or "emeralds." C.—Sept. "soom," from the Heb. ssēm.—Alabaster. Heb. puē. H.—The dark paint used for the eyes has the same name. 4 Kings ix. 30; Jer. iv. 30. The stone here specified was probably alabaster, as it was used for the pavement. There is a very fine species at Damascus, and in Arabia, which was much sought after to decorate buildings. C.—Chal. has "emeralds." Sept. "stones of perfection, rich and various, and every precious stone, and much Paros." H.—But Isa. liv. 11, they translate the same term "carbuncle." C.—Paros: this is taken from the Sept. Heb. has simply, "and stones of sciss." H.—But Paros, one of the Cyclades, was most renowned for its white marble. Ib. xxxvi. 5.—Josephus (Bel. vi. 6) informs us that the temple was huilt of large white marble stones; so that it appeared, at a distance, to be covered with snow. C.

VER. 3. Own. What he had already vowed he esteemed no longer his. W.—Temple. Heb. "houses," including the various apartments belonging to the temple. David was so convinced that the sum which he had been able to collect was too small, that he exhorted the princes to contribute, with all their power, and set them this noble example, which they endeavoured to imitate. H.—He had collected some of the gold of Ophir, which was esteemed the best. C. See 3 Kings ix. 28. M.—We have before remarked that Solomon went beyond the expectations of his father, and used no silver.

VER. 5. Fill his hand, is an expression applied to priests, by which David 9 And the people rejoiced, when they promised their offerings willingly: because they offered them to the Lord with all their heart: and David, the king, rejoiced also with a great joy.

10 And he blessed the Lord before all the multitude, and he said: Blessed art thou, O Lord, the God of Israel, our Father, from eternity to eternity.

11 Thine, O Lord, is magnificence, and power, and glory, and victory: and to thee is praise: for all that is in heaven, and in earth is thine: thine is the kingdom, O Lord, and thou art above all princes.

12 Thine are riches, and thine is glory: thou hast dominion over all, in thy hand is power and might; in thy hand greatness, and the empire of all things.

13 Now, therefore, our God, we give thanks to thee, and we praise thy glorious name.

14 Who am I, and what is my people, that we should be able to promise thee all these things? all these things are thine: and we have given thee what we received of thy hand.

15 For we are sojourners before thee, and strangers, as were all our fathers.^b Our days upon earth are as a shadow, and there is no stay.

16 O Lord, our God, all this store that we have prepared to build thee a house for thy holy name, is from thy hand, and all things are thine.

17 I know, my God, that thou provest hearts, and lovest simplicity; wherefore I also, in the simplicity of my heart, have joyfully offered all these things: and I have seen, with great joy, thy people which are here present, offer thee their offerings.

18 O Lord, God of Abraham, and of Isaac, and of Israel, our fathers, keep for ever this will of their heart, and let this mind remain always for the worship of thee.

19 And give to Solomon, my son, a perfect heart, that he may keep thy commandments, thy testimonies, and thy ceremonies, and do all things: and build the house, for which I have provided the charges.

This at least only took place after the death

25 And the Lord magnified Solomon over all Israel: and gave him the glory of a reign, such as no king of Israel had before him.

26 So David, the son of Isai, reigned over all Israel.

27 ^bAnd the days that he reigned over Israel, were forty years: in Hebron he reigned seven years, and in Jerusalem three and thirty years.

28 ^cAnd he died in a good old age, full of days, and riches and glory. And Solomon, his son, reigned in his stead.

29 Now the acts of king David, first and last, are written in the book of Samuel, the seer, and in the book of Nathan, the prophet, and in the book of Gad, the seer;

THE SECOND BOOK OF PARALIPOMENON.

As the former Book shows how David was chosen to rule over God's peculiar people, so this explains briefly the reign of Solomon, in the nine first chapters; and in the rest, that of nineteen of his successors, who governed two tribes till the captivity, while Israel was divided. W.

CHAPTER I.

Solomon offereth sacrifices at Gabaon. His choice of wisdom, which God giveth him.

AND ^aSolomon, the son of David, was strengthened in his kingdom, and the Lord, his God, was with him, and magnified him to a high degree.

2 And Solomon gave orders to all Israel, to the captains of thousands, and of hundreds, and to the rulers, and to the judges of all Israel, and the heads of the families:

3 And he went with all the multitude to the high place of Gabaon, where was the tabernacle of the covenant of the Lord, which Moses, the servant of God, made in the wilderness.

4 ^bFor David had brought the ark of God from Cariathiarim to the place which he had prepared for it, and where he had pitched a tabernacle for it; that is, in Jerusalem.

5 And the altar of brass, ^cwhich Beseleel, the son of Uri, the son of Hur, had made, was there before the tabernacle of the Lord: and Solomon and all the assembly sought it.

6 And Solomon went up thither to the brazen altar, before the tabernacle of the covenant of the Lord, and offered upon it a thousand victims.

7 And behold that night God appeared to him, saying. Ask what thou wilt, that I should give thee.

8 And Solomon said to God: Thou hast shown great kindness to my father, David: and hast made me king in his stead.

9 Now, therefore, O Lord God, let thy word be fulfilled, which thou hast promised to David, my father:

^b 2 Kings vi. 17; 1 Par. xvi. 1.—^c Exod. xxxviii. 8.

VER. 7. Night, after the victims had been offered. On this occasion Solomon made his prayer, and was heard. 3 Kings iii. 5. C.

for thou hast made me king over thy great people, which is as innumerable as the dust of the earth.

10 *Give me wisdom and knowledge, that I may come in and go out before thy people: for who can worthily judge this thy people, which is so great?

11 And God said to Solomon: Because this choice hath pleased thy heart, and thou hast not asked riches, and wealth, and glory, nor the lives of them that hate thee, nor many days of life: but hast asked wisdom and knowledge, to be able to judge my people, over which I have made thee king.

12 Wisdom and knowledge are granted to thee: and I will give thee riches, and wealth, and glory, so that none of the kings before thee, nor after thee, shall be like thee.

13 Then Solomon came from the high place of Gabaon to Jerusalem, before the tabernacle of the covenant, and reigned over Israel.

14 *And he gathered to himself chariots and horsemen, and he had a thousand four hundred chariots, and twelve thousand horsemen: and he placed them in the cities of the chariots, and with the king, in Jerusalem.

15 And the king made silver and gold to be in Jerusalem as stones, and cedar-trees as sycamores, which grow in the plains in great multitude.

16 And there were horses brought him from Egypt, and from Coa, by the king's merchants, who went, and bought at a price, 17 A chariot of four horses for six hundred pieces of silver, and a horse for a hundred and fifty: in like manner market was made in all the kingdoms of the Hethites, and of the kings of Syria.

CHAP. II.

Solomon's embassy to Hiram, who sends him a skilful workman and timber.

AND Solomon determined to build a house to the name of the Lord, and a palace for himself.

2 And he numbered out seventy thousand men to bear burdens, and eighty thousand to hew stones in the mountains, and three thousand six hundred to oversee them.

3 *He sent also to Hiram, king of Tyre, saying: As thou didst with David, my father, and didst send him cedars, to build him a house, in which he dwelt:

4 So do with me, that I may build a house to the name of the Lord, my God, to dedicate it to burn incense before him, and to perfume with aromatical spices, and for the continual setting forth of bread, and for the holocausts, morning and evening, and on the sabbaths, and on the new moons, and the solemnities of the Lord, our God, for ever, which are commanded for Israel.

5 For the house which I desire to build, is great: for our God is great above all gods.

6 Who then can be able to build him a worthy house? if heaven, and the heavens of heavens cannot contain him: who am I, that I should be able to build him a house? but to this end only, that incense may be burnt before him.

7 Send me, therefore, a skilful man, that knoweth how to work in gold, and in silver, in brass, and in iron, in purple, in scarlet, and in blue, and that hath skill in engraving, with the artificers, which I have with me in Judea and Jerusalem, whom David, my father, provided.

8 Send me also cedars, and fir-trees, and pine-trees, from Libanus: for I know that thy servants are skilful in cutting timber in Libanus, and my servants shall be with thy servants,

9 To provide me timber in abundance. For the house which I desire to build, is to be exceedingly great, and glorious.

10 And I will give thy servants, the workmen that are to cut down the trees, for their food twenty thousand cores of wheat, and as many cores of barley, and twenty thousand measures of wine, and twenty thousand measures of oil.

11 And Hiram, king of Tyre, sent a letter to Solomon, saying: Because the Lord hath loved his people, therefore he hath made thee king over them.

12 And he added, saying: Blessed be the Lord, the God of Israel, who made heaven and earth, who hath given to king David a wise and knowing son, endowed with understanding and prudence, to build a house to the Lord, and a palace for himself.

13 I therefore have sent thee my father, Hiram, a wise and most skilful man,

14 The son of a woman of the daughters of Dan, whose father was a Tyrian, who knoweth how to work in gold, and in silver, in brass, and in iron, and in marble, and in timber, in purple also, and violet, and silk, and scarlet: and who knoweth to grave all sort of graving, and to devise ingeniously all that there may be need of in the work with thy artificers, and with the artificers of my lord, David, thy father.

15 The wheat, therefore, and the barley, and the oil, and the wine, which thou, my lord, hast promised, send to thy servants.

16 And we will cut down as many trees out of Liba-

17 And Solomon numbered all the proselytes in the land of Israel, after the numbering which David, his father, had made; and they were found a hundred fifty-three thousand and six hundred.

18 And he set seventy thousand of them to carry burdens on their shoulders, and eighty thousand to hew stones in the mountains: and three thousand and six hundred to be overseers of the work of the people.

CHAP. III.

The plan and ornaments of the temple: the cherubims, the veil, and the pillars.

AND ^aSolomon began to build the house of the Lord in Jerusalem, in Mount Moria, which had been shown to David, his father, in the place which David had prepared in the ^bthreshing-floor of Ornan, the Jebusite.

2 And he began to build in the second month, in the fourth year of his reign.^c

3 Now these are the foundations, which Solomon laid, to build the house of God, the length by the first measure sixty cubits, the breadth twenty cubits.

4 And the porch in the front, which was extended in length according to the measure of the breadth of the house, twenty cubits: and the height was a hundred and twenty cubits: and he overlaid it within with pure gold.

5 And the greater house he ceiled with deal boards, and overlaid them with plates of fine gold throughout: and he graved in them palm trees, and like little chains interlaced with one another.

6 He paved also the floor of the temple with most precious marble, of great beauty.

7 And the gold of the plates with which he overlaid the house, and the beams thereof, and the posts, and the walls, and the doors, was of the finest: and he graved cherubims on the walls.

8 He made also the house of the holy of holies: the length of it, according to the breadth of the temple, twenty cubits, and the breadth of it in like manner twenty cubits; and he overlaid it with plates of gold, amounting to about six hundred talents.

9 He made also nails of gold, and the weight of every

VER. 18. Sir. We read three, 3 Kings v. 16: people who were strangers, as the Israelites were not forced to work. Chap. viii. 9. C.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. Moria, which signifies vision (C.); the place pointed out to Abraham, (Gen. xxii. 2. S. Aug. de C. xvi. 32,) and to David. 1 Par. xxi. 15, and xxii. 1.

VER. 3. By the first, or ancient measure, used before the captivity. The Babylonian cubit was a hand smaller, as Ezechiel (xl. 3) intimates. C.—Solomon used the same cubit as Moses, but doubled the proportions. M.

VER. 4. A hundred. The Arab, and some copies of the Sept. read only twenty. Capellus and Toinard would substitute ten cubits. A small change in the Heb. might occasion these variations. C.—In 3 Kings vi. 2 we find the height was thirty cubits: but that might be only to the first floor. Many think that the temple was one hundred and twenty cubits high: but Salien (A. 3024) explains it of the four-square tower, (M.) in the front. C.

VER. 5. House, between the most holy place and the porch. (T.) or it may comprise all but the porch. Heb. "he covered (or boarded) all this great house." C.—Deal boards, interspersed with those of cedar. 3 Kings vi. 9. T.

nail was fifty sicles: the upper chambers also he overlaid with gold.

10 He made also in the house of the holy of holies two cherubims of image-work: and he overlaid them with gold.

11 The wings of the cherubims were extended twenty cubits, so that one wing was five cubits long, and reached to the wall of the house: and the other was also five cubits long, and reached to the wing of the other cherub.

12 In like manner the wing of the other cherub was five cubits long, and reached to the wall: and his other wing was five cubits long, and touched the wing of the other cherub.

13 So the wings of the two cherubims were spread forth, and were extended twenty cubits: and they stood upright on their feet, and their faces were turned toward the house without.

14 ^dHe made also a veil of violet, purple, scarlet, and silk: and wrought in it cherubims.

15 ^eHe made also before the doors of the temple two pillars, which were five and thirty cubits high: and their chapiters were five cubits.

16 He made also as it were little chains in the oracle, and he put them on the heads of the pillars: and an hundred pomegranates, which he put between the chains.

17 These pillars he put at the entrance of the temple, one on the right hand, and the other on the left: that which was on the right hand, he called Jachan: and that on the left hand, Booz.

CHAP. IV.

The altar of brass: the molten sea upon twelve oxen: the ten loaves: the candlestick, and other vessels and ornaments of the temple.

HE made also an altar of brass, twenty cubits long, and twenty cubits broad, and ten cubits high.

2 ^fAlso a molten sea, of ten cubits from brim to brim, round in compass: it was five cubits high, and a line of thirty cubits compassed it round about.

3 And under it there was the likeness of oxen, and certain engravings on the outside of ten cubits, compassed the belly of the sea, as it were with two rows.

4 And the oxen were cast, and the sea itself was set upon the twelve oxen, three of which looked towards the north, and other three towards the west, and other three

VER. 11. Cubits, comprising the breadth of their body. Each occupied ten cubits.

VER. 14. A veil. Abulensis places it between the court and the holy: but Jansenius would have it before the holy of holies. It seems rather that there was a veil in both places, (Barrad. t. ii. b. iii. 23. M.) as Josephus (viii. 2, and xii. 10) clearly intimates; and S. Paul speaks of the second veil. Heb. ix. 3. It is not certain which of them was torn at the death of Jesus Christ. Matt. xxvii. 51. C.

VER. 15. Five. 3 Kings vii. 15, we read, each was eighteen cubits. It is probable that each was seventeen and a half, and the other half was for the crown, (C.) or cornice. H.

VER. 17. Booz. "Stability and strength" are derived from God alone.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1. Altar of holocausts, much larger than that of Moses. The one which was built after the captivity was a square of fifteen cubits. This of Solomon was only ten in height. A sloping ascent was made up to it, according to Josephus (Bel. vi. 5, or v. 14); or the steps were closed in, if we believe others. See Exod. xxvii. 1, and xx. 26.

VER. 3. Oxen. In 3 Kings vii. 24, we read Heb. "knops," (H.) or "apples." —Of ten. Heb. "ten in a cubit." Hence there must have been six hundred heads of oxen, as the sea was thirty cubits in circumference, and there were two rows. C.—Others suppose that there were only five in each row, or only one in each cubit. See Vat. and 3 Kings. The Sept. and Syr. omit this verse. C.—Yet it is found in the best editions of the Sept. H.

towards the south, and the other three that remained towards the east, and the sea stood upon them: and the hinder parts of the oxen were inward under the sea.

5 Now the thickness of it was a hand-breadth, and the brim of it was like the brim of a cup, or of a crisped lily: and it held three thousand measures.

6 He made also ten lavers, and he set five on the right hand, and five on the left, to wash in them all such things as they were to offer for holocaust: but the sea was for the priests to wash in.

7 And he made ten golden candlesticks, according to the form which they were commanded to be made by: and he set them in the temple, five on the right hand, and five on the left.

8 Moreover also ten tables: and he set them in the temple, five on the right side, and five on the left. Also a hundred bowls of gold.

9 He made also the court of the priests, and a great hall, and doors in the hall, which he covered with brass.

10 And he set the sea on the right side, over against the east, towards the south.

11 And Hiram made cauldrons, and flesh-hooks, and bowls, and finished all the king's work in the house of God;

12 That is to say, the two pillars, and the pommels, and the chapters, and the net-work to cover the chapters over the pommels.

13 And four hundred pomegranates, and two wreaths of net-work, so that two rows of pomegranates were joined to each wreath, to cover the pommels and the chapters of the pillars.

14 He made also bases and lavers, which he set upon the bases:

15 One sea, and twelve oxen under the sea;

16 And the cauldrons, and flesh-hooks, and bowls. All the vessels did Hiram, his father, make for Solomon, in the house of the Lord, of the finest brass.

17 In the country near the Jordan, did the king cast them in a clay ground, between Sohot and Saredatha.

18 And the multitude of vessels was innumerable, so that the weight of the brass was not known.

19 And Solomon made all the vessels for the house of God, and the golden altar, and the tables, upon which were the loaves of proposition.

20 The candlesticks also of most pure gold, with their lamps, to give light before the oracle, according to the manner.

• 3 Kings vii. 51.

VER. 4. Cast. Heb. adds, "when it (the sea) was cast." H.

VER. 5. Three. 3 Kings, two, may specify the usual quantity that was contained, though the vessel would absolutely hold a thousand measures, or baths, more. H.

VER. 6. Holocaust, as well as all the necessary utensils.—Priests. They did not bathe in the sea, but drew water into other vessels. The Chal. supposes that the work of Beseleel was for the high priest alone. C.

VER. 9. Hall (basilicam). Sept. use the same term (αὐλή) as just before is rendered court; and the Prot. make no distinction, though the Heb. terms be different. Sept. render ēazre, "the court" of the people. There, we know, that Solomon had his tribune. Chap. vi. 13. Ezechiel (xliii. 14) distinguishes two; the great, lower or outward, (C. ēāzre), or court, and that of the priests, (H.) which he styles the less, &c. The principal door lay to the east.

VER. 12. Pommels (epistylia). Heb. "cordons," or rows of pomegranates, (3 Kings vii. 18,) each consisting of one hundred; so that as the two pillars were 21 And certain flowers, and lamps, and golden tongs: all were made of the finest gold.

22 The vessels also for the perfumes, and the censers, and the bowls, and the mortars, of pure gold. And he graved the doors of the inner temple, that is, for the holy of holies: and the doors of the temple without were of gold. And thus all the work was finished, which Solomon made, in the house of the Lord.

CHAP. V.

The ark is brought with great solemnity into the temple: the temple is filled with the glory of God.

THEN *Solomon brought in all the things that David, his father, had vowed, the silver, and the gold, and all the vessels he put among the treasures of the house of God.

2 *And after this he gathered together the ancients of Israel, and all the princes of the tribes, and the heads of the families of the children of Israel, to Jerusalem, to bring the ark of the covenant of the Lord out of the city of David, which is Sion.

3 And all the men of Israel came to the king in the solemn day of the seventh month.

4 And when all the ancients of Israel were come, the Levites took up the ark,

5 And brought it in, together with all the furniture of the tabernacle. And the priests and the Levites carried the vessels of the sanctuary, which were in the tabernacle.

6 And king Solomon, and all the assembly of Israel, and all that were gathered together before the ark, sacrificed rams, and oxen without number: so great was the multitude of the victims.

7 And the priests brought in the ark of the covenant of the Lord into its place, that is, to the oracle of the temple, into the holy of holies under the wings of the cherubims:

8 So that the cherubims spread their wings over the place, in which the ark was set, and covered the ark itself and its staves.

9 Now the ends of the staves wherewith the ark was carried, because they were something longer, were seen before the oracle: but if a man were a little outward, he could not see them. So the ark has been there unto this day.

10 And there was nothing else in the ark but the two tables which Moses put there at Horeb when the Lord gave the law to the children of Israel, at their coming out of Egypt.

12 Both the Levites and the singing men, that is, both they that were under Asaph, and they that were under Heman, and they that were under Idithun, with their sons, and their brethren, clothed with fine linen, sounded with cymbals, and psalteries, and harps, standing on the east side of the altar, and with them a hundred and twenty priests, sounding with trumpets.

13 So when they all sounded together, both with trumpets, and voice, and cymbals, and organs, and with divers kind of musical instruments, and lifted up their voice on high : the sound was heard afar off, so that when they began to praise the Lord, and to say : Give glory to the Lord, for he is good, for his mercy endureth for ever : the house of God was filled with a cloud.

14 Nor could the priests stand and minister by reason of the cloud. For the glory of the Lord had filled the house of God.

CHAP. VI.

Solomon's blessing and prayer.

THEN "Solomon said : The Lord promised that he would dwell in a cloud.

2 But I have built a house to his name, that he might dwell there for ever.

3 And the king turned his face, and blessed all the multitude of Israel, (for all the multitude stood attentive,) and he said :

4 Blessed be the Lord, the God of Israel, who hath accomplished in deed that which he spoke to David, my father, saying :

5 From the day that I brought my people out of the land of Egypt, I chose no city among all the tribes of Israel, for a house to be built in it to my name : neither chose I any other man, to be the ruler of my people, Israel.

6 But I chose Jerusalem, that my name might be there : and I chose David, to set him over my people, Israel.

7 And whereas David, my father, had a mind to build a house to the name of the Lord, the God of Israel,

8 The Lord said to him : Forasmuch as it was thy will to build a house to my name, thou hast done well indeed in having such a will :

9 But thou shalt not build the house, but thy son, who shall come out of thy loins, he shall build a house to my name.

10 The Lord, therefore, hath accomplished his word which he spoke : and I am risen up in the place of David, my father, and sit upon the throne of Israel, as the Lord promised : and have built a house to the name of the Lord God of Israel.

11 And I have put in it the ark, wherein is the covenant of the Lord, which he made with the children of Israel.

12 And he stood before the altar of the Lord, in presence of all the multitude of Israel, and stretched forth his hands.

13 For Solomon had made a brazen scaffold, and had set it in the midst of the temple, which was five cubits long, and five cubits broad, and three cubits high : and he stood upon it : then kneeling down in the presence of all the multitude of Israel, and lifting up his hands towards heaven,

14 ^bHe said : O Lord God of Israel, there is no God like thee in heaven nor in earth : who keepest covenant and mercy with thy servants, that walk before thee with all their hearts :

15 Who hast performed to thy servant David, my father, all that thou hast promised him : and hast accomplished in fact, what thou hast spoken with the mouth, as also the present time proveth.

16 Now then, O Lord God of Israel, fulfil to thy servant, David, my father, whatsoever thou hast promised him, saying : There shall not fail thee a man in my sight, to sit upon the throne of Israel : yet so that thy children take heed to their ways, and walk in my law, as thou hast walked before me.

17 And now, Lord God of Israel, let thy word be established which thou hast spoken to thy servant, David.

18 Is it credible then that God should dwell with men on the earth ? If heaven and the heavens of heavens do not contain thee, how much less this house, which I have built ?

19 But to this end only it is made, that thou mayst regard the prayer of thy servant, and his supplication, O Lord, my God : and mayst hear the prayers which thy servant poureth out before thee.

20 That thou mayst open thy eyes upon this house day and night, upon the place wherein thou hast promised that thy name should be called upon,

21 And that thou wouldst hear the prayer which thy servant prayeth in it : hearken then to the prayers of thy servant, and of thy people, Israel. Whosoever shall pray in this place, hear thou from thy dwelling-place, that is, from heaven, and show mercy.

22 If any man sin against his neighbour, and come to swear against him, and bind himself with a curse before the altar in this house :

23 Then hear thou from heaven, and do justice to thy servants, so as to requite the wicked by making his

26 If the heavens be shut up, and there fall no rain by reason of the sins of the people, and they shall pray to thee in this place, and confess to thy name, and be converted from their sins, when thou dost afflict them,

Fire from heaven consumeth the sacrifices. The solemnity of the dedication of the temple. God signifieth his having heard Solomon's prayer: yet so if he continue to serve him.

AND^a when Solomon had made an end of his prayer, a fire came down from heaven, and consumed the holocausts and the victims: and the majesty of the Lord filled the house.

2 *Neither could the priests enter into the temple of the Lord, because the majesty of the Lord had filled the temple of the Lord.

3 Moreover, all the children of Israel saw the fire coming down, and the glory of the Lord upon the house: and falling down with their faces to the ground, upon the stone pavement, they adored and praised the Lord: because he is good, because his mercy endureth for ever.

4 And the king and all the people sacrificed victims before the Lord.

5 *And king Solomon offered a sacrifice of twenty-two thousand oxen, and one hundred and twenty thousand rams: and the king and all the people dedicated the house of God.

6 And the priests stood in their offices : and the Levites with the instruments of music of the Lord, which king David made to praise the Lord : because his mercy endureth for ever, singing the hymns of David by their ministry : and the priests sounded with trumpets before them, and all Israel stood.

7 Solomon also sanctified the middle of the court before the temple of the Lord : for he offered there the holocausts, and the fat of the peace-offerings : because the brazen altar, which he had made, could not hold the holocausts, and the sacrifices and the fat :

8 And Solomon kept the solemnity at that time seven days, and all Israel with him, a very great congregation, from the entrance of Emath to the torrent of Egypt.

9 And he made on the eighth day a solemn assembly, because he had kept the dedication of the altar seven days, and had celebrated the solemnity seven days.

10 So on the three and twentieth day of the seventh month he sent away the people to their dwellings, joyful and glad for the good that the Lord had done to David, and to Solomon, and to all Israel, his people.

11 *And Solomon finished the house of the Lord, and the king's house, and all that he had designed in his heart to do, in the house of the Lord, and in his own house, and he prospered.

12 And the Lord appeared to him by night, and said : I have heard thy prayer, and I have chosen this place to myself for a house of sacrifice.

13 If I shut up heaven, and there fall no rain, or if I give orders, and command the locust to devour the land, or if I send pestilence among my people :

14 And my people, upon whom my name is called, being converted, shall make supplication to me, and seek out my face, and do penance for their most wicked ways : then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sins, and will heal their land.

15 My eyes also shall be open, and my ears attentive to the prayer of him that shall pray in this place.

16 For I have chosen, and have sanctified this place, that my name may be there for ever, and my eyes and my heart may remain there perpetually.

17 And as for thee, if thou walk before me, as David, thy father, walked, and do according to all that I have commanded thee, and keep my justice and my judgments :

18 I will raise up the throne of thy kingdom, as I promised to David, thy father, saying : There shall not fail thee a man of thy stock to be ruler in Israel.

19 But if you turn away, and forsake my justices, and my commandments, which I have set before you, and shall go and serve strange gods, and adore them,

22 And they shall answer : Because they forsook the Lord, the God of their fathers, who brought them out of the land of Egypt, and laid hold on strange gods, and adored them, and worshipped them : therefore all these evils are come upon them.

Solomon's buildings and other acts.

AND^b at the end of twenty years after Solomon had built the house of the Lord, and his own house :

2 He built the cities which Hiram had given to Solomon, and caused the children of Israel to dwell there.

3 He went also into Emath Suba, and possessed it.

4 And he built Palmira, in the desert, and he built other strong cities in Emath.

5 And he built Bethhoron the upper, and Bethhoron the nether, walled cities, with gates, and bars, and locks.

6 Balaath also, and all the strong cities that were Solomon's, and all the cities of the chariots, and the cities of the horsemen. All that Solomon had a mind, and designed, he built in Jerusalem, and in Libanus, and in all the land of his dominion.

7 All the people that were left of the Hethites, and the Amorrhites, and the Pherezites, and the Ilevites, and the Jebusites, that were not of the stock of Israel :

8 Of their children, and of the posterity, whom the children of Israel had not slain, Solomon made to be the tributaries, unto this day.

9 But of the children of Israel he set none to serve in the king's works : for they were men of war, and chief captains, and rulers of his chariots and horsemen.

10 And all the chief captains of king Solomon's army were two hundred and fifty, who taught the people.

11 And he removed the daughter of Pharaoh from the city of^c David, to the house which he had built for her. For the king said : My wife shall not dwell in the house of David, king of Israel : for it is sanctified : because the ark of the Lord came into it.

12 Then Solomon offered holocausts to the Lord upon the altar of the Lord, which he had built before the porch, 13 That every day an offering might be made on it, according to the ordinance of Moses, in the sabbaths, and on the new moons, and on the festival days three times a year, that is to say, in the feast of unleavened bread, and in the feast of weeks, and in the feast of tabernacles.

15 And the priests and Levites departed not from the king's commandments, as to any thing that he had commanded, and as to the keeping of the treasures.

16 Solomon had all charges prepared, from the day that he founded the house of the Lord, until the day wherein he finished it.

17 Then Solomon went to Asiongaber, and to Ailath, on the coast of the Red Sea, which is in the land of Edom.

18 And Hiram sent him ships by the hands of his servants, and skilful mariners; and they went with Solomon's servants to Ophir, and they took thence four hundred and fifty talents of gold, and brought it to king Solomon.

CHAP. IX.

The queen of Saba admireth the wisdom of Solomon. His riches and glory. His death.

AND *when the queen of Saba heard of the fame of Solomon, she came to try him with hard questions, at Jerusalem, with great riches and camels, which carried spices, and abundance of gold and precious stones. And when she was come to Solomon, she proposed to him all that was in her heart.

2 And Solomon explained to her all that she proposed: and there was not any thing that he did not make clear unto her.

3 And when she had seen these things, to wit, the wisdom of Solomon, and the house which he had built,

4 And the meats of his table, and the dwelling-places of his servants, and the attendance of his officers, and their apparel, his cup-bearers also, and their garments, and the victims which he offered in the house of the Lord, there was no more spirit in her, she was so astonished.

5 And she said to the king: The word is true which I heard in my country, of thy virtues and wisdom.

6 I did not believe them that told it, until I came, and my eyes had seen it, and I had proved that scarce one half of thy wisdom had been told me: thou hast exceeded the same with thy virtues.

7 Happy are thy men, and happy are thy servants, who stand always before thee, and hear thy wisdom.

9 And she gave to the king a hundred and twenty talents of gold, and spices in great abundance, and most precious stones: there were no such spices as these which the queen of Saba gave to king Solomon.

10 And the servants also of Hiram, with the servants of Solomon, brought gold from Ophir, and thyine-trees, and most precious stones:

11 And the king made of the thyine-trees stairs in the house of the Lord, and in the king's house, and harps and psalteries for the singing men: never were there seen such trees in the land of Juda.

12 And king Solomon gave to the queen of Saba all that she desired, and that she asked, and many more things than she brought to him: so she returned, and went to her own country, with her servants.

13 And the weight of the gold that was brought to Solomon every year, was six hundred and sixty-six talents of gold:

14 Beside the sum which the deputies of divers nations, and the merchants, were accustomed to bring, and all the kings of Arabia, and the lords of the lands, who brought gold and silver to Solomon.

15 And king Solomon made two hundred golden spears, of the sum of six hundred pieces of gold, which went to every spear:

16 And three hundred golden shields, of three hundred pieces of gold, which went to the covering of every shield: and the king put them in the armoury, which was compassed with a wood.

17 The king also made a great throne of ivory, and overlaid it with pure gold.

18 And six steps to go up to the throne, and a footstool of gold, and two arms, one on either side, and two lions standing by the arms:

19 Moreover, twelve other little lions standing upon the steps on both sides: there was not such a throne in any kingdom.

20 And all the vessels of the king's table were of gold, and the vessels of the house of the forest of Libanus, were of the purest gold. For no account was made of silver in those days.

21 For the king's ships went to Tharsis, with the servants of Hiram, once in three years: and they brought thence gold and silver, and ivory, and apes, and peacocks.

22 And Solomon was magnified above all the kings of the earth for riches and glory.

23 And all the kings of the earth desired to see the face of Solomon, that they might hear the wisdom which God had given in his heart.

24 And every year they brought him presents, vessels of silver and of gold, and garments, and armour, and spices, and horses, and mules.

25 And Solomon had forty thousand horses in the stables, and twelve thousand chariots, and horsemen, and he placed them in the cities of the chariots, and where the king was in Jerusalem.

26 And he exercised authority over all the kings, from the river Euphrates to the land of the Philistines, and to the borders of Egypt.

27 And he made silver as plentiful in Jerusalem as stones: and cedars as common as the sycamores, which grow in the plains.

28 And horses were brought to him out of Egypt, and out of all countries.

29 Now the rest of the acts of Solomon, first and last, are written in the words of Nathan, the prophet, and in the books of Ahias, the Silonite, and in the vision of Addo, the seer, against Jeroboam, the son of Nabat.

30 And Solomon reigned in Jerusalem, over all Israel, forty years.

31 And he slept with his fathers: and they buried him in the city of David: and Roboam, his son, reigned in his stead.

CHAP. X.

Roboam answereth his people roughly: upon which ten tribes revolt.

AND ^bRoboam went to Sichem: for thither all Israel were assembled, to make him king.

2 And when Jeroboam, the son of Nabat, who was in Egypt, (for he was fled thither from Solomon,) heard it, forthwith he returned.

3 And they sent for him, and he came with all Israel, and they spoke to Roboam, saying:

4 Thy father oppressed us with a most grievous yoke; do thou govern us with a lighter hand than thy father, who laid upon us a heavy servitude, and ease something of the burden, that we may serve thee.

5 And he said to them: Come to me again after three days. And when the people were gone,

6 He took counsel with the ancients, who had stood before his father, Solomon, while he yet lived, saying: What counsel give you to me, that I may answer the people?

7 And they said to him: If thou please this people, and soothe them with kind words, they will be thy servants for ever.

8 But he forsook the counsel of the ancients, and began to treat with the young men, that had been brought up with him, and were in his train.

9 And he said to them: What seemeth good to you? or what shall I answer this people, who have said to me: Ease the yoke which thy father laid upon us?

10 But they answered as young men, and brought up with him in pleasures, and said: Thus shalt thou speak to the people that said to thee: Thy father made our yoke heavy; do thou ease it: thus shalt thou answer them: My little finger is thicker than the loins of my father.

11 My father laid upon you a heavy yoke, and I will add more weight to it: my father beat you with scourges, but I will beat you with scorpions.

12 So Jeroboam, and all the people, came to Roboam the third day, as he commanded them.

13 And the king answered roughly, leaving the counsel of the ancients.

14 And he spoke according to the advice of the young men: My father laid upon you a heavy yoke, which I will make heavier: my father beat you with scourges, but I will beat you with scorpions.

15 And he condescended not to the people's requests for it was the will of God, that his word might be fulfilled, "which he had spoken by the hand of Ahias, the Silonite, to Jeroboam, the son of Nabat.

16 And all the people, upon the king's speaking roughly, said thus unto him: We have no part in David, nor inheritance in the son of Isai. Return to thy dwellings, O Israel, and do thou, O David, feed thy own house. And Israel went away to their dwellings.

17 But Roboam reigned over the children of Israel, that dwelt in the cities of Juda.

18 And king Roboam sent Aduram, who was over the tributes, and the children of Israel stoned him, and he died: and king Roboam made haste to get up into his chariot, and fled into Jerusalem.

19 And Israel revolted from the house of David, unto this day.

CHAP. XI.

Roboam's reign. His kingdom is strengthened.

AND ^dRoboam came to Jerusalem, and called to gether all the house of Juda, and of Benjamin, a hundred and fourscore thousand chosen men and warriors, to fight against Israel, and to bring back his kingdom to him.

2 And the word of the Lord came to Semeias, the man of God, saying:

against your brethren: let every man return to his own house, for by my will this thing has been done. And when they heard the word of the Lord, they returned, and did not go against Jeroboam.

5 And Roboam dwelt in Jerusalem, and built walled cities in Juda.

6 And he built Bethlehem, and Etam, and Thecue,

7 And Bethsur, and Socho, and Odollam,

8 And Geth, and Maresa, and Ziph,

9 And Aduram, and Lachis, and Azecha,

10 Saraa also, and Aialon, and Hebron, which are in Juda and Benjamin, well fenced cities.

11 And when he had enclosed them with walls, he put in them governors and storehouses of provisions, that is, of oil and of wine.

12 Moreover, in every city he made an armoury of shields and spears, and he fortified them with great diligence, and he reigned over Juda and Benjamin.

13 And the priests and Levites, that were in all Israel, came to him out of all their seats, 14 Leaving their suburbs and their possessions, and passing over to Juda and Jerusalem, because Jeroboam and his sons had cast them off, from executing the priestly office to the Lord.

15 And he made to himself priests for the high places, and for the devils, and for the calves which he had made.

16 Moreover, out of all the tribes of Israel, whosoever gave their heart to seek the Lord, the God of Israel, came into Jerusalem to sacrifice their victims before the Lord, the God of their fathers.

17 And they strengthened the kingdom of Juda, and established Roboam, the son of Solomon, three years: for they walked in the ways of David and of Solomon, only three years.

18 And Roboam took to wife Mahalath, the daughter of Jerimoth, the son of David: and Abihail, the daughter of Eliab, the son of Isai.

19 And they bore him sons, Jehus, and Somorias, and Zoom.

20 And after her he married Maacha, the daughter of Absalom, who bore him Abia, and Ethai, and Ziza, and Salomith.

21 And Roboam loved Maacha, the daughter of Absalom, above all his wives and concubines: for he had married eighteen wives, and threescore concubines: and he begot eight and twenty sons, and threescore daughters.

VER. 6. Etam, famous for fine waters and gardens, (Joseph. viii. 2,) about ten miles from Jerusalem, on the road to Hebron. It was fortified against the inroads of Simcon and Dan. C.

VER. 14. Off. This was done at different times; so that almost all the Levites took refuge in the dominions of Juda. Yet some prevaricated. Ezechiel (xliv. 12) only exempts the family of Sadoc. C.—The rest set before us a noble example to endure temporal loss, rather than to neglect the practice of religion, or to conform to a false one. W.

VER. 15. Devils. Heb. "goats." C.—Sept. express this by two names, "for the idols, and for the fools." H.

VER. 17. They, the pious refugees. T. Chap. xv. 9.—Solomon, while virtuous. —Only is not expressed in Heb. or Sept., but it is sufficiently implied.

VER. 18. Daughter. Heb. bon, "the son." But both, "daughter," (H.) occurs properly in some MSS. as in the ancient versions.

VER. 20. Daughter, or grand-daughter, by Thamar. 3 Kings xv. 2. C.

VER. 22. Head. Sept. "prince." H.—Grotius maintains that Abia was the eldest. But all others are of a contrary opinion, and believe that Roboam derogated from the law, (Deut. xxi. 16. C.) as David had done, unless it was left to

Maacha, to be the chief ruler over all his brethren: for he meant to make him king, 23 Because he was wiser and mightier than all his sons, and in all the countries of Juda, and of Benjamin, and in all the walled cities: and he gave them provisions in abundance, and he sought many wives.

CHAP. XII.

Roboam, for his sins, is delivered up into the hands of the king of Egypt: who carrieth away all the treasures of the temple.

AND "when the kingdom of Roboam was strengthened and fortified, he forsook the law of the Lord, and all Israel with him.

2 And in the fifth year ^b of the reign of Roboam, Sesac, king of Egypt, came up against Jerusalem (because they had sinned against the Lord)

3 With twelve hundred chariots, and threescore thousand horsemen: and the people were without number that came with him out of Egypt; to wit, Lybians, and Troglodites, and Ethiopians.

4 And he took the strongest cities in Juda, and came to Jerusalem.

5 And Semeias, the prophet, came to Roboam, and to the princes of Juda, that were gathered together in Jerusalem, fleeing from Sesac, and he said to them: Thus saith the Lord: You have left me, and I have left you in the hand of Sesac.

6 And the princes of Israel, and the king, being in a consternation, said: The Lord is just.

7 And when the Lord saw that they were humbled, the word of the Lord came to Semeias, saying: Because they are humbled, I will not destroy them, and I will give them a little help, and my wrath shall not fall upon Jerusalem by the hand of Sesac.

8 But yet they shall serve him, that they may know the difference between my service, and the service of a kingdom of the earth.

9 So Sesac, king of Egypt, departed from Jerusalem, taking away the treasures of the house of the Lord, and of the king's house, and he took all with him, and the golden shields that Solomon had made,

10 Instead of which the king made brazen ones, and delivered them to the captains of the shield-bearers, who guarded the entrance of the palace.

11 And when the king entered into the house of the Lord, the shield-bearers came and took them, and brought them back again to their armoury.

VER. 23. Because. Sept. "And he was magnified above . . . and he gave them (cities, ἀυραῖς) abundance," &c. This may be all understood of Abia. But Heb. rather speaks of his father: "And he acted wisely, and dispersed all his other children, throughout the countries of Juda," T.

CHAP. XII. VER. 1. Israel, in his dominions. The kingdom of Jeroboam had long before apostatized, though there were still many true servants of God who would not bend the knee before Baal, ver. 12. H.

VER. 3. Troglodites, who dwell in caverns, near the Red Sea. Pliny (v. 8, and vi. 29) speaks of the city Suca, which in Heb. means a tent, as here we read sociim, (H.) "dwelling in tents;" which some explain of the Arabs, who are called Scenites, on the same account. T.

VER. 7. A little help. I will not suffer them to be quite destroyed. Heb. also signifies, "shortly." C.—Fall, (stillabit,) like drops of water, even to the just. H.

VER. 10. Bearers. Heb. "runners," as the guards attended the king on foot

12 But yet, because they were humbled, the wrath of the Lord turned away from them, and they were not utterly destroyed: for even in Juda there were found good works.

13 *King Roboam, therefore, was strengthened in Jerusalem, and reigned: he was one and forty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned seventeen years in Jerusalem, the city which the Lord chose out of all the tribes of Israel, to establish his name there: and the name of his mother was Naama, an Ammonitess.

14 But he did evil, and did not prepare his heart to seek the Lord.

15 Now the acts of Roboam, first and last, are written in the books of Semeias, the prophet, and of Addo, the seer, and diligently recorded: and there was war between Roboam and Jeroboam, all their days.

16 And Roboam slept with his fathers, and was buried in the city of David. And Abia, his son, reigned in his stead.

CHAP. XIII.

Abia's reign: his victory over Jeroboam.

IN the eighteenth year of king Jeroboam, Abia reigned over Juda.

2 Three years he reigned in Jerusalem, and his mother's name was Michaiia, the daughter of Uriel, of Gabaa: and there was war between Abia and Jeroboam.

3 *And when Abia had begun battle, and had with him four hundred thousand most valiant and chosen men: Jeroboam put his army in array against him, eight hundred thousand men, who were also chosen, and most valiant for war.

4 And Abia stood upon Mount Semeron, which was in Ephraim, and said: Hear me, O Jeroboam, and all Israel:

5 Do you not know that the Lord God of Israel gave to David the kingdom over Israel for ever, to him and to his sons, by a covenant of salt?

6 And Jeroboam, the son of Nabat, the servant of Solomon, the son of David, rose up: *and rebelled against his lord.

7 And there were gathered to him vain men, and children of Belial: and they prevailed against Roboam, the son of Solomon: for Roboam was unexperienced, and of a fearful heart, and could not resist them.

8 And now you say that you are able to withstand the kingdom of the Lord, which he possesseth by the sons of David, and you have a great multitude of people, and golden calves, which Jeroboam hath made you for gods.

9 *And you have cast out the priests of the Lord, the sons of Aaron, and the Levites: and you have made you priests, like all the nations of the earth: whosoever cometh and consecrateth his hand with a bullock of the herd, and with seven rams, is made a priest of those who are no gods.

10 But the Lord is our God, whom we forsake not; and the priests, who minister to the Lord, are the sons of Aaron, and the Levites are in their order.

11 And they offer holocausts to the Lord every day, morning and evening, and incense, made according to the ordinance of the law, and the loaves are set forth on a most clean table, and there is with us the golden candlestick, and the lamps thereof, to be lighted always in the evening: for we keep the precepts of the Lord, our God, whom you have forsaken.

12 Therefore, God is the leader in our army, and his priests, who sound with trumpets, and resound against you: O children of Israel, fight not against the Lord, the God of your fathers, for it is not good for you.

13 While he spoke these things, Jeroboam caused an ambushment to come about behind him. And while he stood facing the enemies, he encompassed Juda, who perceived it not, with his army.

14 And when Juda looked back, they saw the battle coming upon them, both before and behind, and they cried to the Lord: and the priests began to sound with the trumpets.

15 And all the men of Juda shouted: and behold when

VER. 12. For even. Prot. "and also in Judah things went well" (H.); or, "he spoke good words even to Juda." C.—Sept. "for even in Juda there were good words, and in all pleasing." Words are often put for works. H.—The Lord regarded the fidelity of some, and the humility of the princes. C.—This advantage was derived from tribulation, that the king entered into himself, at least for a time (H.); but he was not constant. Ver. 14. After the scourge was withdrawn he presently relapsed.

CHAP. XIII. VER. 2. Michaiia, alias Maacha. Her father had also two names; viz. Absalom or Abessalom, and Uriel. Ch.—Many had two names. T.—Of Gabaa, may refer to the women.

VER. 3. War. The author of the new edition of S. Jerom mentions two MSS., and there are several printed editions, which reduce these numbers to one half. Castalio adopts this correction, asserting that the Greek and Josephus are on his side, which is not true. C.—We must however observe, that there is some doubt with respect to Josephus, (H.) as some of the oldest Latin editions acknowledge the smaller numbers; and Vignoles (i. 29) conjectures that the Greek copies did the same formerly, since Aborbanel "accuses Josephus of having made Jeroboam's loss no more than 50,000, contrary to the Hebrew text." Ver. 17. This learned author is of opinion that the Jews sometimes expressed their numbers by figures, (Kennic.) analogous to those which the later Arabs borrowed from the Indians; though, in more ancient times, the letters of the alphabet had been used. Both customs seem to have prevailed (Erpenius); and this may account for many variations, as the omission of a single cipher, resembling our period (.), might easily occasion much confusion. Kennicott (Diss. 1, and 2) seems to suspect that the ancient versions have been made to agree with the corrupted Heb. no less than Josephus; and that many of the large numbers, recorded in Scripture, (which might countenance what we here read,) are incorrect. See chap. xii. 13, 19, and xiv. 8, comp. with xvi. 1; and xxv. 6, comp. with 4 Kings xii. 7. It is certain (H.) many Latin MSS. confirm the edition of Sixtus V., which has the smaller numbers; and this is the case with most of the older MSS. and editions. How S. Jerom expressed it we cannot easily determine. The editor of his works has been guided chiefly by the Memmian canon. See 2 Kings xv. 7. Lyran quotes S. Jerom as reading 50,000 (ver. 7); and it is so expressed in the Paris editions of 1534 and (H.) 1546, of the Heb. questions on Paral. But Erasmus doubts whether this be the genuine work of S. Jerom, (Ken.) or in the state in which he left it. If we consult the more ancient MSS. and editions prior to that of Clement VIII., we shall allow that they are more favourable to the smaller numbers on this occasion; and are more likely to exhibit the pure version of the holy doctos, (H.) as the later editions have had "the Heb. fountains" also in view. Kennicott.

VER. 4. Semeron, on which Samaria was afterwards built. Heb. reads, "Mount Zamaraim."

VER. 5. A covenant of salt. That is, a firm and perpetual covenant. See Num. xviii. 19. Ch. W.—It seemed this covenant was to be inviolable; and it had its effect, notwithstanding the crimes of many of the kings. The Arabs still regard the partaking of bread and salt as the most sacred covenant. C.—Abia speaks with much prudence, and with an air of piety, though his heart was corrupt. 3 Kings xv. 3.

VER. 7. Vain. The same term is used as in Matt. v. 22. C.—Reckim, "stupid men." H.—Sept. "pestiferous." Syr. "impious." Sept. "he was a youth, and timid." H.—Abia speaks of his father with little respect, and seems to have forgotten that he had laid down his arms in obedience to God's order. C.

VER. 8. And golden. These idols will enervate and render your great numbers useless. H.—We have a just cause and religion on our side. C.

VER. 9. Rams. These were sacrificed by the false priests, who acted in a very different manner from those of the Lord. Lev. viii. and ix. C.

VER. 15. Terrified. Sept. "struck." God caused the victory to declare in favour of those who were only half the number. H.

they shouted, God terrified Jeroboam, and all Israel, that stood against Abia and Juda.

16 And the children of Israel fled before Juda, and the Lord delivered them into their hand.

17 And Abia, and his people, slew them with a great slaughter, and there fell wounded of Israel five hundred thousand valiant men.

18 And the children of Israel were brought down, at that time, and the children of Juda were exceedingly strengthened, because they had trusted in the Lord, the God of their fathers.

19 And Abia pursued after Jeroboam, and took cities from him; Bethel, and her daughters, and Jesana, with her daughters, Ephron also, and her daughters.

20 And Jeroboam was not able to resist any more, in the days of Abia: and the Lord struck him, and he died.

21 But Abia, being strengthened in his kingdom, took fourteen wives: and begot two and twenty sons, and sixteen daughters.

22 And the rest of the acts of Abia, and of his ways and works, are written diligently in the book of Addo, the prophet.

CHAP. XIV.

The reign of Asa: his victory over the Ethiopians.

AND ^aAbia slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the city of David: and Asa, his son, reigned in his stead; in his days, the land was quiet ten years.

2 And Asa did that which was good and pleasing in the sight of his God, and he destroyed the altars of foreign worship, and the high places;

3 And broke the statues, and cut down the groves.

4 And he commanded Juda to seek the Lord, the God of their fathers, and to do the law, and all the commandments.

5 And he took away out of all the cities of Juda the altars, and temples, and reigned in peace.

6 He built also strong cities in Juda, for he was quiet, and there had no wars risen in his time, the Lord giving peace.

VER. 17. Five. Some Latin editions have 50,000, (C.) which number is found in some MSS. of Epiphanius. Hudson's Josephus.—Hentenius has the same, and only remarks five MSS. which had the greater number. See ver. 3. II.—We do not read of such a slaughter in any one battle. But Israel made no resistance, and God assisted the four hundred thousand. M.—Valiant. Prot. "chosen." See chap. xiv. 13. H.—So many were either slain or wounded. D.—Prot. intimate all were "slain." H.

VER. 19. Bethel, the head of the calf worship; though Abulensis thinks it was another city, otherwise it would not have been spared. The calf continued there till the reign of Jchu. 4 Kings x. 29. M.—Jesana; perhaps Senna, (Num. xxxiv. 4. C.) seven miles north of Jericho. Eus.—The versions read differently.

VER. 20. Him. Some think Abia, as Jeroboam survived him two years: but others, (C.) with greater probability, (D.) suppose that the latter is here specified, and that he fell a victim to the Divine wrath, as the prophet Ahias had foretold. C.—Salien, A. 3081.

CHAP. XIV. VER. 1. Years, dating from the fifth; as in the fifteenth year of his reign Asa offered many victims, which had been taken from the enemy. Chap. xv. 10. C.

VER. 2. God, with respect to the external worship of the true God, (H.) though he had some faults. 3 Kings xv. 14.—Places, while he tolerated those which were intended for the service of the Lord, (C.) though illegally; and he even left the buildings erected by Solomon standing, (4 Kings xxiii. 13. T.) thinking they might be no longer dangerous. Salien.

VER. 5. Altars. Heb. "high places, and the Chamanim," or temples of the sun. Lev. xxvi. 30. C.—Prot. "images." H.—Asa was encouraged to perfect the work which he had begun by the exhortation of Azarias. Chap. xv. 8. C.

VER. 9. Ethiopian. Some think Zara was a successor of Sesac; and the 7 And he said to Juda: Let us build these cities, and compass them with walls, and fortify them with towers, and gates, and bars, while all is quiet from wars, because we have sought the Lord, the God of our fathers, and he hath given us peace round about. So they built, and there was no hinderance in building.

8 And Asa had in his army men that bore shields and spears; of Juda, three hundred thousand; and of Benjamin, that bore shields and drew bows, two hundred and eighty thousand, all these were most valiant men.

9 ^bAnd Zara, the Ethiopian, came out against them, with his army of ten hundred thousand men, and with three hundred chariots: and he came as far as Maresa.

10 And Asa went out to meet him, and set his army in array for battle in the vale of Sephata, which is near Maresa:

11 And he called upon the Lord God, and said: "Lord, there is no difference with thee, whether thou help with few or with many: help us, O Lord, our God: for with confidence in thee, and in thy name, we are come against this multitude. O Lord, thou art our God, let not man prevail against thee."

12 And the Lord terrified the Ethiopians before Asa and Juda: and the Ethiopians fled.

13 And Asa, and the people that were with him, pursued them to Gerara: and the Ethiopians fell even to utter destruction; for the Lord slew them, and his army fought against them, and they were destroyed. And they took abundance of spoils,

14 And they took all the cities round about Gerara: for a great fear was come upon all men: and they pillaged the cities, and carried off much booty.

15 And they destroyed the sheep-cotes, and took an infinite multitude of cattle, and of camels: and returned to Jerusalem.

CHAP. XV.

The prophecy of Azarias. Asa's covenant with God. He deposeth his mother.

AND ^cthe Spirit of God came upon Azarias, the son of Oded, c 1 Kings xiv. 6.—d A. M. 3063.

Rabbins say that he "restored the spoils which the latter had taken." Seder. 16.—Three. Some would read thirteen, as Anani takes notice of the great number of chariots. Chap. xvi. 8. Jun. Malvenda. C.—But surely the number here specified is sufficient. H.

VER. 10. Meet him, fearing lest he should lay waste his dominions, as Sesac had done. M.—Sephata, or Sephala, a great valley to the west of Maresa, (C.) which is a city of Juda. M.—Sept. have, "in the vale north of Maresa." H.

VER. 11. Help. Heb. "to help; whether with many, or with those who have no power." The same sentiment was expressed by Jonathas. 1 Kings xiv. 6. Those who have God with them are secure of victory. C.—If God be with us, who is against us?

VER. 13. Gerara was on the southern borders, twenty-three miles from Maresa. Eus. C.—The Ethiopians were pursued perhaps for many days. T.—De struction. Prot. "that they could not recover themselves." Heb. "there was no quarter given;" or, "so that none were left alive." C.—If this were the case, the number of the slain far exceeded that of Jeroboam's army. Chap. xiii. H.

VER. 15. Destroyed. Heb. "smote also the tents of cattle." Sept. "they cut in pieces the tents of cattle, the Amazons;" or, according to the Vat. copy, (H.) "the Alimazonians," as they seem to have read aeli manim, which may be well rendered, "the tents of the Mineans," a people of Arabia. Chap. xx. 1, and xxvi. 7, and Judg. x. 11. C.—If these nations came to punish Asa for banishing their foreign worship, (ver. 12,) as the Sieur de Folard thinks the sacred penman insinuates, (ver. 5,) we need not wonder that they met with such ill success, and that not one of them was spared, as God avenged his own cause. Ver. 12, 13. H.—We read of no cavalry here, though it is mentioned, chap. xvi. 8.

CHAP. XV. VER. 1. Azarias is called Oded in Heb. ver. 8. C.—But he was his son. H.—There was a high priest of the name of Azarias about the same time. M.

2 And he went out to meet Asa, and said to him: Hear ye me, Asa, and all Juda and Benjamin: The Lord is with you, because you have been with him. If you seek him, you shall find: but if you forsake him, he will forsake you.

3 And many days shall pass in Israel, without the true God, and without a priest a teacher, and without the law.

4 And when in their distress, they shall return to the Lord, the God of Israel, and shall seek him, they shall find him.

5 At that time, there shall be no peace to him that goeth out and cometh in, but terrors on every side, among all the inhabitants of the earth.

6 For nation shall fight against nation, and city against city; for the Lord will trouble them with all distress.

7 Do you, therefore, take courage, and let not your hands be weakened: for there shall be a reward for your work.

8 And when Asa had heard the words, and the prophecy of Azarias, the son of Oded, the prophet, he took courage, and took away the idols out of all the land of Juda, and out of Benjamin, and out of the cities of Mount Ephraim, which he had taken, and he dedicated the altar of the Lord, which was before the porch of the Lord.

9 And he gathered together all Juda and Benjamin, and the strangers with them, of Ephraim, and Manasses, and Simeon: for many were come over to him out of Israel, seeing that the Lord, his God, was with him.

10 And when they were come to Jerusalem, in the third month, in the fifteenth year of the reign of Asa,

11 They sacrificed to the Lord in that day of the spoils, and of the prey, that they had brought, seven hundred oxen, and seven thousand rams.

12 And he went in to confirm as usual the covenant, that they should seek the Lord, the God of their fathers, with all their heart, and with all their soul.

13 And if any one, said he, seek not the Lord, the God of Israel, let him die, whether little or great, man or woman.

VER. 2. With him. He will continue thus to protect you, if you prove faithful. The Pelagians hence inferred, that man was to prepare his own heart for the reception of grace. But the text only speaks of external aid; and though it were understood of internal grace, (C.) we may merit an increase of grace, by a faithful co-operation (W.) with that with which God has presented us. E. C.

VER. 3. Shall pass, is not found in Heb., &c., and many supply "had been." D.—The Jews, and some interpreters, would explain all this of what had passed already (C.); and this is the idea of the Prot. "Now, for a long season, Israel hath been without," &c. H.—But the conclusion convinces us that this is a prediction; (ver. 7.) take courage. You shall not be involved in these miseries. But its full completion includes the latter ages, particularly after the murder of the Messias, (T.) and seems of the same nature as the prophecy of Osee, (iii. 4,) as our Saviour himself insinuates. Matt. xxiv. 6, 9, 13. C.

VER. 4. And when. Sept. "and he shall convert them to the Lord, . . and shall be found by them." H.—This will be verified in the last days. Rom. xi. 26. M.

VER. 5. Cometh in, in public or private transactions. See Lev. xxvi. 36.

M.—Distress. Our Saviour says, Then shall they deliver you up to be afflicted, &c. But he that shall persevere to the end, he shall be saved.

VER. 8. Azarias, the son, is omitted in Heb. and the Vat. Sept., which reads Adad, (H.) but it is supplied in the other editions, and in the Syriac, (C.) as ver. 1. H.—Taken: we do not read on what occasion. Chap. xvii. 2. His father had seized upon Bethel, &c. Chap. xiii. 19. C.—Yet Asa waged war himself with the king of Israel.—Dedicated. Sept. "renewed," as the altar had been neglected, or injured by the continual fire (M.); or this was the extraordinary (H.) altar, which Solomon had used at the dedication of the temple. The multitude of Asa's victims required more than one. Ver. 11. C.

VER. 10. Month, Sivar or May, when the feast of Pentecost occurs. M

14 And they swore to the Lord, with a loud voice, with joyful shouting, and with sound of trumpet, and sound of cornets,

15 All that were in Juda with a curse: for with all their heart they swore, and with all their will they sought him, and they found him, and the Lord gave them rest round about.

16 Moreover, Maacha, the mother of king Asa, he deposed from the royal authority, because she had made in a grove an idol of Priapus: and he entirely destroyed it, and breaking it into pieces, burnt it at the torrent Cedron.

17 But high places were left in Israel: nevertheless, the heart of Asa was perfect all his days.

18 And the things which his father had vowed, and he himself had vowed, he brought into the house of the Lord, gold and silver, and vessels, of divers uses.

19 And there was no war unto the five and thirtieth year of the kingdom of Asa.

CHAP. XVI.

Asa is reproved for seeking help from the Syrians: his last acts and death.

AND in the six and thirtieth year of his kingdom, Baasa, the king of Israel, came up against Juda, and built a wall about Rama, that no one might safely go out or come in, of the kingdom of Asa.

2 Then Asa brought out silver and gold, out of the treasures of the house of the Lord, and of the king's treasures, and sent to Benadad, king of Syria, who dwelt in Damascus, saying:

3 There is a league between me and thee, as there was between my father and thy father, wherefore I have sent thee silver and gold, that thou mayst break thy league with Baasa, king of Israel, and make him depart from me.

4 And when Benadad heard this, he sent the captains of his armies against the cities of Israel: and they took Ahion, and Dan, and Abelmaim, and all the walled cities of Nephtali.

5 And when Baasa heard of it, he left off the building of Rama, and interrupted his work.

7 At that time Hanani, the prophet, came to Asa, king of Juda, and said to him: Because thou hast had confidence in the king of Syria, and not in the Lord, thy God, therefore hath the army of the king of Syria escaped out of thy hand.

8 ^a Were not the Ethiopians, and the Lybians, much more numerous in chariots, and horsemen, and an exceedingly great multitude: yet because thou trustedst in the Lord, he delivered them into thy hand?

9 For the eyes of the Lord behold all the earth, and give strength to those who with a perfect heart trust in him. Wherefore, thou hast done foolishly; and for this cause, from this time wars shall arise against thee.

10 And Asa was angry with the seer, and commanded him to be put in prison: for he was greatly enraged because of this thing: and he put to death many of the people at that time.

11 But the works of Asa, the first and last, are written in the Book of the kings of Juda and Israel.

12 And Asa fell sick in the nine and thirtieth ^b year of his reign, of a most violent pain in his feet, and yet in his illness he did not seek the Lord, but rather trusted in the skill of physicians.

13 And he slept with his fathers: and he died in the one and fortieth year ^c of his reign.

14 And they buried him in his own sepulchre, which he had made for himself in the city of David: and they laid him on his bed, full of spices and odoriferous ointments, which were made by the art of the perfumers, and they burnt them over him with very great pomp.

Josaphat's reign. His care for the instruction of his people: his numerous forces.

AND "Josaphat, his son, reigned in his stead, and grew strong against Israel.

^a Supra, xiv. 9.—^b A. M. 3087, A. C. 917.—^c A. M. 3090.

VER. 7. Syria. It seems more natural to read Israel. C.—But we must remember that Benadad was an ally of Israel; and if he had not been bribed, he would have come to the assistance of Baasa, (H.) and thus both might have fallen a prey to Asa, as the much greater forces of Zara had done, T.

VER. 9. Behold. Prot. "run to and fro throughout the whole earth, to show himself strong in the behalf of them whose heart is perfect towards him." Sept. "to show power in every heart full, or perfect, in his regard." H.—Asa fell on this occasion through human frailty, but rose again by repentance.—These, as they were till the death of Baasa. 3 Kings xv. 32.

VER. 10. Prison. Lit. "in bonds," (neruum,) made of leather thongs or nerves, (H.) or of iron, to confine either the neck or the feet. Isidor. Orig. v. ult.—Heb. "the house of disturbance." Sept., &c. "prison." Some explain it (C.) of the stocks to enclose the neck. Vatable.—Time, either because they expressed the same sentiments as the prophet, (C.) or because they disapproved of his imprisonment. T.—Sept. "Asa made havoc among the people," &c. H.

H.—Yet it was not the having recourse to them, with some degree of confidence, that is here reprehended, but the placing too much trust in men, (C.) and too little in God, the sovereign arbiter of life and death. H.

VER. 14. Sepulchre. Heb. "sepulchres," as there were many separate apartments in the same cavern. C.—Asa had prepared one cell, as David and Solomon had done. M. CHAP. XVII. VER. 1. Israel. In consequence of the civil broils which ensued after the death of Baasa. The two kingdoms had been nearly equal.

VER. 2. Numbers, who were kept on foot; probably as in the days of David.

2 And he placed numbers of soldiers in all the fortified cities of Juda. And he put garrisons in the land of Juda, and in the cities of Ephraim, which Asa, his father, had taken.

3 And the Lord was with Josaphat, because he walked in the first ways of David, his father: and trusted not in Baalim,

4 But in the God of his father, and walked in his commandments, and not according to the sins of Israel.

5 And the Lord established the kingdom in his hand, and all Juda brought presents to Josaphat: and he acquired immense riches, and much glory.

6 And when his heart had taken courage for the ways of the Lord, he took away also the high places, and the groves, out of Juda.

7 And in the third year ^c of his reign, he sent of his princes Benbail, and Abdias, and Zacharias, and Nathanael, and Micheas, to teach in the cities of Juda:

8 And with them the Levites, Semeias, and Nathanas, and Zabadias, and Asael, and Semiramoth, and Jonathan, and Adonias, and Tobias, and Thobadonias, Levites, and with them Elisama, and Joram, priests.

9 And they taught the people in Juda, having with them the book of the law of the Lord: and they went about all the cities of Juda, and instructed the people.

10 And the fear of the Lord came upon all the kingdoms of the lands that were round about Juda, and they durst not make war against Josaphat.

11 The Philistines also brought presents to Josaphat, and tribute in silver; and the Arabians brought him cattle, seven thousand seven hundred rams, and as many he-goats.

12 And Josaphat grew, and became exceedingly great: and he built in Juda houses like towers, and walled cities.

13 And he prepared many works in the cities of Juda: and he had warriors, and valiant men, in Jerusalem.

14 Of whom this is the number of the houses, and families, of every one: in Juda captains of the army;

VER. 6. When. Heb. "And his heart was elevated in the ways of the Lord." He was endued with courage to undertake the great work of banishing all abuses out of his dominions, seeing that the people were well affected, and the Lord urged him forward. H.—He trusted not so much to his great army or riches, as to a good conscience, (T.) which made him fear no difficulties (1 John iii. 21); doubting not but God would grant him success, as he endeavoured to keep his laws. C.—Groves of idols, (M.) though he tolerated the high places, which had been consecrated to God. Chap. xx. 33, and 3 Kings xxii. 43. H.

VER. 7. Princes. Political, (T.) to see that all paid attention to the proper teachers (Mal. ii. 7. C.); and thus to partake in that good work. M.

VER. 9. Book. The Pentateuch, or its abridgment, the book of Deuteronomy, (M.) which they read and explained. C.—People. It was not sufficient to destroy idolatry, (M.) unless the people were taught how to serve the true God. H.

VER. 11. Philistines. Though they had been reduced by David, they had sometimes proved remiss in the payment of tribute.—Arabians, who lived near the Ethiopians, and the Dead Sea. Chap. xxi. 19. They had been subdued by Solomon, (3 Kings x. 15,) and were rich in cattle. Ezech. xxvii. 21. The name is not so comprehensive as we generally make it. C.

VER. 12. Houses. Prot. "castles." Heb. birniuth. Birah is properly a Chal. word, and is added after susan, to imply that it was a royal castle, (C.) or palace. H. 2 Esd. i. 1.—Sept. often use baris in the same sense. C.—It became a provincial word in Palestine for a place shut up on all sides and built like a tower. S. Jer. ad Princeps. C.

VER. 14. Ednos was the chief of the five generals, who had under their command 1,160,000, (C.) besides the garrison soldiers. Ver. 19. H.—So great power and riches had not been seen in Juda since the days of Solomon. C.—They were Ednas, the chief, and with him three hundred thousand most valiant men.

15 After him Johanan, the captain, and with him two hundred and eighty thousand.

16 And after him was Amasias, the son of Zechri, consecrated to the Lord, and with him were two hundred thousand valiant men.

17 After him was Eliada, valiant in battle, and with him two hundred thousand armed with bow and shield.

18 After him also was Jozabad, and with him a hundred and eighty thousand ready for war.

19 All these were at the hand of the king, beside others, whom he had put in the walled cities, in all Juda.

CHAP. XVIII.

Josaphat accompanied Achab in his expedition against Ramoth: where Achab is slain, as Micheas had foretold.

NOW Josaphat was rich and very glorious, and was joined by affinity to Achab.

2 And he went down to him after some years, *to Samaria: and Achab, at his coming, killed sheep and oxen in abundance, for him and the people that came with him: and he persuaded him to go up to Ramoth-Galaad.

3 And Achab, king of Israel, said to Josaphat, king of Juda: Come with me to Ramoth-Galaad. And he answered him: Thou art as I am, and my people as thy people, and we will be with thee in the war.

4 And Josaphat said to the king of Israel: Inquire, I beseech thee, at present the word of the Lord.

5 So the king of Israel gathered together of the prophets four hundred men, and he said to them. Shall we go to Ramoth-Galaad to fight, or shall we forbear? But they said: Go up, and God will deliver it into the king's hand.

6 And Josaphat said: Is there not here a prophet of the Lord, that we may inquire also of him?

7 And the king of Israel said to Josaphat: There is one man, of whom we may ask the will of the Lord: but I hate him, for he never prophesieth good to me, but always evil: and it is Micheas, the son of Jemla. And Josaphat said: Speak not thus, O king.

8 And the king of Israel called one of the eunuchs, and said to him: Call quickly Micheas, the son of Jemla.

9 Now the king of Israel, and Josaphat, king of Juda, both sat on their thrones, clothed in royal robes, and they sat in the open court by the gate of Samaria, and all the prophets prophesied before them.

10 And Sedecias, the son of Chanaana, made him horns of iron, and said: Thus saith the Lord: With these shalt thou push Syria, and thou shalt destroy it.

11 And all the prophets prophesied in like manner, and said: Go up to Ramoth-Galaad, and thou shalt prosper, and the Lord will deliver them into the king's hand.

not all on duty at the same time, but were able to bear arms (M.) when called out.

VER. 16. Consecrated. Heb. "a volunteer of the Lord," (H.) serving at his own expense, (T.) or with remarkable zeal. C.

VER. 19. King, at different times. Sept. "waiting upon" him, (H.) like the companies which David had appointed, (C.) but far more numerous. H.—The dominions of Juda were now pretty extensive, and well cultivated. The population must have amounted to near six millions, for whose support recourse must have been had to commerce. C.

12 And the messenger that went to call Micheas, said to him: Behold the words of all the prophets with one mouth declare good to the king: I beseech thee, therefore, let not thy word disagree with them, and speak thou also good success.

13 And Micheas answered him: As the Lord liveth, whatsoever my God shall say to me, that will I speak.

14 So he came to the king: and the king said to him: Micheas, shall we go to Ramoth-Galaad to fight, or forbear? And he answered him: Go up, for all shall succeed prosperously, and the enemies shall be delivered into your hands.

15 And the king said: I adjure thee again and again to say nothing but the truth to me, in the name of the Lord.

16 Then he said: I saw all Israel scattered in the mountains, like sheep without a shepherd: and the Lord said: These have no masters: let every man return to his own house in peace.

17 And the king of Israel said to Josaphat: Did I not tell thee that this man would not prophesy me any good, but evil?

18 Then he said: Hear ye therefore the word of the Lord: I saw the Lord sitting on his throne, and all the army of heaven standing by him on the right hand and on the left.

19 And the Lord said: Who shalt deceive Achab, king of Israel, that he may go up and fall in Ramoth-Galaad? And when one spoke in this manner, and another otherwise:

20 There came forth a spirit, and stood before the Lord, and said: I will deceive him. And the Lord said to him: By what means wilt thou deceive him?

21 And he answered: I will go out, and be a lying spirit in the mouth of all his prophets. And the Lord said: Thou shalt deceive, and shalt prevail: go out, and do so.

22 Now, therefore, behold the Lord hath put a spirit of lying in the mouth of all thy prophets, and the Lord hath spoken evil against thee.

23 And Sedecias, the son of Chanaana, came, and struck Micheas on the cheek, and said: Which way went the spirit of the Lord from me, to speak to thee?

24 And Micheas said: Thou thyself shalt see in that day, when thou shalt go in from chamber to chamber, to hide thyself.

25 And the king of Israel commanded, saying: Take Micheas, and carry him to Amon, the governor of the city, and to Joas, the son of Amelech.

26 And say: Thus saith the king: Put this man in prison, and give him bread, and water in a small quantity, till I return in peace.

27 And Micheas said: If thou return in peace, the LORD hath not spoken by me. And he said: Hear, all ye people.

28 So the king of Israel, and Josaphat, king of Juda, went up to Ramoth-Galaad.

29 And the king of Israel said to Josaphat: I will change my dress, and so I will go to the battle, but put thou on thy own garments. And the king of Israel having changed his dress, went to the battle.

30 Now the king of Syria had commanded the captains of his cavalry, saying: Fight ye not with small, or great, but with the king of Israel only.

31 So when the captains of the cavalry saw Josaphat, they said: This is the king of Israel. And they surrounded him, to attack him: but he cried to the Lord, and he helped him, and turned them away from him.

32 For when the captains of the cavalry saw, that he was not the king of Israel, they left him.

33 And it happened that one of the people shot an arrow at a venture, and struck the king of Israel between the neck and the shoulders, and he said to his chariot-man: Turn thy hand, and carry me out of the battle, for I am wounded.

34 And the fight was ended that day: but the king of Israel stood in his chariot against the Syrians until the evening, and died at the sunset.

Josaphat's charge to the judges and to the Levites.

AND^a Josaphat, king of Juda, returned to his house in peace to Jerusalem.

2 And Jehu, the son of Hanani, the seer, met him, and said to him: Thou helpst the ungodly, and thou art joined in friendship with them that hate the Lord, and therefore thou didst deserve indeed the wrath of the Lord:

3 But good works are found in thee, because thou hast taken away the groves out of the land of Juda, and hast prepared thy heart to seek the Lord, the God of thy fathers.

4 And Josaphat dwelt at Jerusalem: and he went out again to the people from Bersabee to Mount Ephraim, and brought them back to the Lord, the God of their fathers.

5 And he set judges of the land in all the fenced cities of Juda, in every place.

6 And charging the judges, he said: Take heed what you do: for you exercise not the judgment of man, but of the Lord: and whatsoever you judge, it shall redound to you.

7 Let the fear of the Lord be with you, and do all things with diligence: for there is no iniquity with the Lord our God,^b nor respect of persons, nor desire of gifts.

8 In Jerusalem also Josaphat appointed Levites, and priests, and chiefs of the families of Israel, to judge the judgment and the cause of the Lord for the inhabitants thereof.

9 And he charged them, saying: Thus shall you do in the fear of the Lord faithfully, and with a perfect heart.

10 Every cause that shall come to you of your brethren, that dwell in their cities, between kindred and kindred, wheresoever there is question concerning the law, the commandment, the ceremonies, the justifications: show it them, that they may not sin against the Lord, and that wrath may not come upon you and your brethren: and so doing, you shall not sin.

11 And Amarias, the priest, your high priest, shall be chief in the things which regard God: and Zabadias, the son of Ismahel, who is ruler in the house of Juda, shall be over those matters which belong to the king's office: and you have before you the Levites for masters; take courage and do diligently, and the Lord will be with you in good things.

CHAP. XX.

The Ammonites, Moabites, and Syrians combine against Josaphat: he seeketh God's help by public prayer and fasting. A prophet foretelleth that God will fight for his people: the enemies destroy one another. Josaphat, with his men, gather the spoils. He reigneth in peace: but his navy perisheth, for his society with wicked Ochozias.

AFTER^c this the children of Moab, and the children of Ammon, and with them of the Ammonites, were gathered together to fight against Josaphat.

2 And there came messengers, and told Josaphat, saying: There cometh a great multitude against thee from beyond the sea, and out of Syria, and behold they are in Asasonthamar, which is Engaddi.

3 And Josaphat being seized with fear, betook himself wholly to pray to the Lord, and he proclaimed a fast for all Juda.

4 And Juda gathered themselves together to pray to the Lord: and all came out of their cities to make supplication to him.

5 And Josaphat stood in the midst of the assembly of Juda, and Jerusalem, in the house of the Lord before the new court.

6 And said: O Lord God of our fathers, thou art God, in heaven, and rulest over all the kingdoms and nations; in thy hand is strength and power, and no one can resist thee.

7 Didst not thou, our God, kill all the inhabitants of this land before thy people Israel, and gavest it to the seed of Abraham, thy friend, for ever?

8 And they dwelt in it, and built in it a sanctuary to thy name, saying:

9 If evils fall upon us, the sword of judgment, or pestilence, or famine, we will stand in thy presence before this house, in which thy name is called upon: and we will cry to thee, in our afflictions, and thou wilt hear, and save us.

10 Now, therefore, behold the children of Ammon, and of Moab, and Mount Seir, through whose lands thou didst not allow Israel to pass, when they came out of Egypt, but they turned aside from them, and slew them not:

11 They do the contrary, and endeavour to cast us out of the possession which thou hast delivered to us.

12 O our God, wilt not thou then judge them? as for us we have not strength enough to be able to resist this multitude, which cometh violently upon us. But as we know not what to do, we can only turn our eyes to thee.

13 And all Juda stood before the Lord, with their little ones, and their wives, and their children.

14 And Jahaziel, the son of Zacharias, the son of Banaïas, the son of Jehiel, the son of Mathanias, a Levite, of the sons of Asaph, was there, upon whom the Spirit of the Lord came in the midst of the multitude.

15 And he said: Attend ye, all Juda, and you that dwell in Jerusalem, and thou king Josaphat: Thus saith the Lord to you: Fear ye not, and be not dismayed at this multitude: for the battle is not yours, but God's.

16 To-morrow you shall go down against them: for they will come up by the ascent named Sis, and you shall find them at the head of the torrent, which is over against the wilderness of Jeruel.

17 It shall not be you that shall fight, but only stand with confidence, and you shall see the help of the Lord over you, O Juda, and Jerusalem: fear ye not, nor be you dismayed: to-morrow you shall go out against them, and the Lord will be with you.

18 Then Josaphat and Juda, and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, fell flat on the ground before the Lord, and adored him.

19 And the Levites of the sons of Caath, and of the sons of Core, praised the Lord, the God of Israel, with a loud voice on high.

20 And they rose early in the morning, and went out through the desert of Thecua: and as they were marching, Josaphat standing in the midst of them, said: Hear me, ye men of Juda, and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem: believe in the Lord your God, and you shall be secure: believe his prophets, and all things shall succeed well.

21 And he gave counsel to the people, and appointed the singing men of the Lord, to praise him by their companies, and to go before the army. and with one voice to say: Give glory to the Lord, for his mercy endureth for ever.

22 And when they began to sing praises, the Lord turned their ambushments upon themselves, that is to say, of the children of Ammon, and of Moab, and of Mount Seir, who were come out to fight against Juda, and they were slain.

23 For the children of Ammon, and of Moab, rose up against the inhabitants of Mount Seir, to kill and destroy them: and when they had made an end of them, they turned also against one another, and destroyed one another.

24 And when Juda came to the watch-tower, that looketh toward the desert, they saw afar off all the country, for a great space, full of dead bodies, and that no one was left that could escape death.

25 Then Josaphat came, and all the people with him, to take away the spoils of the dead, and they found among the dead bodies, stuff of various kinds, and garments, and most precious vessels: and they took them for themselves, insomuch that they could not carry all, nor in three days take away the spoils, the booty was so great.

26 And on the fourth day they were assembled in the valley of Blessing: for there they blessed the Lord, and therefore they called that place the valley of Blessing until this day.

27 And every man of Juda, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, returned, and Josaphat, at their head, into Jerusalem, with great joy; because the Lord had made them rejoice over their enemies.

28 And they came into Jerusalem with psalteries, and harps, and trumpets, into the house of the Lord.

29 And the fear of the Lord fell upon all the kingdoms of the lands, when they heard that the Lord had fought against the enemies of Israel.

30 And the kingdom of Josaphat was quiet, and God gave him peace round about.

31 And Josaphat reigned over Juda,* and he was five and thirty years old when he began to reign: and he reigned five and twenty years in Jerusalem: and the name of his mother was Azuba, the daughter of Selahi.

32 And he walked in the way of his father, Asa, and departed not from it, doing the things that were pleasing before the Lord.

33 But yet he took not away the high places, and the people had not yet turned their heart to the Lord, the God of their fathers.

34 But the rest of the acts of Josaphat, first and last, are written in the words of Jehu, the son of Hanani, which he digested into the Books of the kings of Israel.

35 After these things Josaphat, "king of Juda, made friendship with Ochozias, king of Israel, whose works were very wicked.

36 And he wasartner with him in making ships, to go to Tharsis: and they made the ships in Asiongaber.

37 And Eliezer, the son of Dodau, of Maresa, prophesied to Josaphat, saying: Because thou hast made a league with Ochozias, the Lord hath destroyed thy works, and the ships are broken, and they could not go to Tharsis.

CHAP. XXI.

Joram's wicked reign: his punishment and death.

AND Josaphat slept with his fathers, and was buried with them in the city of David: and Joram, his son, reigned in his stead.

2 And he had brethren, the sons of Josaphat, Azarias, and Jahiel, and Zacharias, and Azaria, and Michael, and Saphatias; all these were the sons of Josaphat, king of Juda.

3 And their father gave them great gifts of silver, and of gold, and pensions, with strong cities in Juda: but the kingdom he gave to Joram, because he was the eldest.

4 So Joram rose up over the kingdom of his father:

8 In those days Edom revolted, "from being subject to Juda, and made themselves a king.

9 And Joram went over with his princes, and all his cavalry with him, and rose in the night, and defeated the Edomites who had surrounded him, and all the captains of his cavalry.

10 However, Edom revolted from being under the dominion of Juda unto this day: at that time Lobna also revolted from being under his hand. For he had forsaken the Lord, the God of his fathers:

11 Moreover he built also high places in the cities of Juda, and he made the inhabitants of Jerusalem to commit fornication, and Juda to transgress.

12 And there was a letter brought him from Elias, the prophet, in which it was written: Thus saith the Lord, the God of David, thy father: Because thou hast not walked in the ways of Josaphat, thy father, nor in the ways of Asa, king of Juda,

19 And as day came after day, and time rolled on, two whole years passed: then, after being wasted with a long consumption, so as to void his very bowels, his disease ended with his life. *And he died of a most wretched illness, and the people did not make a funeral for him according to the manner of burning, as they had done for his ancestors.

CHAP. XXII.

The reign and death of Ochozias. The tyranny of Athalia.

AND ^athe inhabitants of Jerusalem made Ochozias, his youngest son, king in his place: for the rovers of the Arabians, who had broke in upon the camp, had killed all that were his elder brothers. So Ochozias, the son of Joram, king of Juda, reigned.

2 Ochozias was forty-two years old when he began to reign, and he reigned one year in Jerusalem, and the name of his mother was Athalia, the daughter of Amri.

3 He also walked in the ways of the house of Achab: for his mother pushed him on to do wickedly.

4 So he did evil in the sight of the Lord, as the house of Achab did: for they were his counsellors after the death of his father, to his destruction.

5 And he walked after their counsels. And he went with Joram, the son of Achab, king of Israel, to fight against Hazael, king of Syria, at Ramoth-Galaad: and the Syrians wounded Joram.

6 And he returned to be healed in Jezrahel: for he received many wounds in the foresaid battle. *And Ochozias, the son of Joram, king of Juda, went down to visit Joram, the son of Achab, in Jezrahel, where he lay sick.

7 For it was the will of God against Ochozias, that he should come to Joram: and when he was come, should go out also against Jehu, the son of Namsi, whom the Lord had anointed to destroy the house of Achab.

8 So when Jehu was rooting out the house of Achab, he found the princes of Juda, and the sons of the brethren of Ochozias, who served him, and he slew them.

9 And he sought for Ochozias himself, and took him lying hid in Samaria: and when he was brought to him, he killed him, and they buried him: because he was the son of Josaphat, who had sought the Lord with all his heart. And there was no more hope that any one should reign of the race of Ochozias.

10 ^dFor Athalia, his mother, seeing that her son was dead, rose up, and killed all the royal family of the house of Joram.

11 But Josabeth, the king's daughter, took Joas, the son of Ochozias, and stole him from among the king's sons, that were slain. And she hid him with his nurse in a bed-chamber: now Josabeth that hid him, was daughter of king Joram, wife of Joiada, the high priest, and sister of Ochozias, and therefore Athalia did not kill him.

12 And he was with them hid in the house of God six years, during which Athalia reigned over the land.

CHAP. XXIII.

Joiada, the high priest, causeth Joas to be made king; Athalia to be slain, and idolatry to be destroyed.

AND ^ain the seventh year, Joiada being encouraged, took the captains of hundreds, to wit, Azarias, the son of Jeroham, and Ismahel, the son of Johanan, and Azarias, the son of Obed, and Maasias, the son of Adaias, and Elisaphat, the son of Zechri: and made a covenant with them.

2 And they went about Juda, and gathered together the Levites out of all the cities of Juda, and the chiefs of the families of Israel, and they came to Jerusalem.

3 And all the multitude made a covenant with the king, in the house of God: and Joiada said to them: Behold the king's son shall reign, as the Lord hath said of the son of David.

4 And this is the thing that you shall do:

5 A third part of you that come to the sabbath, of the priests, and of the Levites, and of the porters, shall be at

VER. 17. Joachaz, alias Ochozias, (Ch.) or Azarias in Heb. Chap. xxii. 1, and 6. C.—The variation of names seems to originate in the mistake of transcribers very frequently. Sept. has here Oxoziag; as the other versions have also Ochozias, (chap. xxii. 6,) instead of Azrieu, (H.) a name given to Ozias, king of Juda, when it belonged to the priests, as it here belongs to one of the captains. VER. 2. Forty-two, &c. Divers Greek Bibles read twenty-two, agreeably to 4 Kings viii. 18, (Ch.) with the Syr. and Arab. The Rom. (C.) and Alex. Sept. have "twenty." H.—Ochozias was the youngest son, and his father died at forty years of age. Chap. xxi. 20. C.—Others would date from the birth of Amri, (Broughton,) or of Athalia. But it is most probable that we should read twenty-two, as 4 Kings. C.—The contradiction has so much perplexed the commentators, that Walton (prol. 36) puts it among the quædam ærope; and De Dieu says, "I would rather plainly confess that this difficulty is to us inexplicable." The error here, ^a is plainly owing to a mistake of one of the Heb. numeral letters, ^c being put instead of ^m, which was formerly more similar than it is now. "In Origen's Hexapla, one of the Greek copies (probably that found in Caracalla's time) reads here eb, by rendering the number twenty-two ἑκοσι καὶ δύο, all which proofs make the mistake indubitable, and strongly recommend this method of correcting it." Kennicott.

the gates : and a third part at the king's house : and a third at the gate that is called the Foundation : but let all the rest of the people be in the courts of the house of the Lord.

6 And let no one come into the house of the Lord, but the priests, and they that minister of the Levites : let them only come in, because they are sanctified : and let all the rest of the people keep the watches of the Lord.

7 And let the Levites be round about the king, every man with his arms (and if any other come into the temple, let him be slain) : and let them be with the king, both joining in and going out.

8 So the Levites, and all Juda, did according to all that Joiada, the high priest, had commanded : and they took every one his men that were under him, and that came in by the course of the sabbath, with those who had fulfilled the sabbath, and were to go out. For Joiada, the high priest, permitted not the companies to depart, which were accustomed to succeed one another every week.

9 And Joiada, the priest, gave to the captains the spears, and the shields, and targets of king David, which he had dedicated in the house of the Lord.

10 And he set all the people with swords in their hands, from the right side of the temple to the left side of the temple, before the altar, and the temple, round about the king.

11 And they brought out the king's son, and put the crown upon him, and the testimony, and gave him the law to hold in his hand, and they made him king : and Joiada, the high priest, and his sons, anointed him : and they prayed for him, and said : God save the king.

12 Now when Athalia heard the noise of the people running and praising the king, she came in to the people into the temple of the Lord.

13 And when she saw the king standing upon the step in the entrance, and the princes, and the companies about him, and all the people of the land rejoicing, and sounding with trumpets, and playing on instruments of divers kinds, and the voice of those that praised, she rent her garments, and said : Treason, treason.

14 And Joiada, the high priest, going out to the captains, and the chiefs of the army, said to them : Take her forth without the precinct of the temple, and when she is without, let her be killed with the sword. For the priest commanded that she should not be killed in the house of the Lord.

15 And they laid hold on her by the neck : and when she was come within the horse-gate of the palace, they killed her there.

16 And Joiada made a covenant between himself and all the people, and the king, that they should be the people of the Lord.

17 And all the people went into the house of Baal, and destroyed it : and they broke down his altars and his idols : and they slew Mathan, the priest of Baal, before the altars.

18 And Joiada appointed overseers in the house of the Lord, under the hands of the priests, and the Levites, whom David had distributed in the house of the Lord, to offer holocausts to the Lord, as it is written in the law of Moses, with joy and singing, according to the disposition of David.

19 He appointed also porters in the gates of the house of the Lord, that none who was unclean in any thing should enter in.

20 And he took the captains of hundreds, and the most valiant men, and the chiefs of the people, and all the people of the land, and they brought down the king from the house of the Lord, and brought him through the upper gate into the king's house, and set him on the royal throne.

21 And all the people of the land rejoiced, and the city was quiet : but Athalia was slain with the sword.

3 And Joiada took for him two wives, by whom he had sons and daughters.

4 After this Joas had a mind to repair the house of the Lord.

5 ^b And he assembled the priests, and the Levites, and said to them : Go out to the cities of Juda, and gather of all Israel money to repair the temple of your God, from year to year, and do this with speed : but the Levites were negligent.

6 And the king called Joiada, the chief, and said to him : Why hast thou not taken care to oblige the Levites to bring in out of Juda and Jerusalem, the money that was appointed by Moses, the servant of the Lord, for all the multitude of Israel to bring into the tabernacle of the testimony ?

8 And the king commanded, and they made a chest : and set it by the gate of the house of the Lord, on the outside.

9 And they made a proclamation in Juda and Jerusalem, that every man should bring to the Lord,^a the money which Moses, the servant of God, appointed for all Israel, in the desert.

10 And all the princes and all the people rejoiced : and going in, they contributed, and cast so much into the chest of the Lord, that it was filled.

11 And when it was time to bring the chest before the king by the hands of the Levites, (for they saw there was much money,) the king's scribe, and he whom the high priest had appointed, went in : and they poured out the money that was in the chest : and they carried back the chest to its place : and thus they did from day to day, and there was gathered an immense sum of money.

12 And the king and Joiada gave it to those who were over the works of the house of the Lord : but they hired with it stone-cutters, and artificers of every kind of work, to repair the house of the Lord : and such as wrought in iron and brass, to uphold what began to be falling.

13 And the workmen were diligent, and the breach of the walls was closed up by their hands, and they set up the house of the Lord in its former state, and made it stand firm.

14 And when they had finished all the works, they brought the rest of the money before the king and Joiada : and with it were made vessels for the temple for the ministry, and for holocausts and bowls, and other vessels of gold and silver : and holocausts were offered in the house of the Lord continually all the days of Joiada.

15 But Joiada grew old and was full of days, and died when he was a hundred and thirty years old.

16 And they buried him in the city of David, among the kings, because he had done good to Israel, and to his house.

17 And after the death of Joiada, the princes of Juda went in, and worshipped the king : and he was soothed by their services, and hearkened to them.

18 And they forsook the temple of the Lord, the God of their fathers, and served groves and idols ; and wrath came upon Juda and Jerusalem for this sin.

20 The Spirit of God then came upon Zacharias, the son of Joiada, the priest,^b and he stood in the sight of the people, and said to them : Thus saith the Lord God : Why transgress you the commandment of the Lord which will not be for your good, and have forsaken the Lord, to make him forsake you ?

21 And they gathered themselves together against him, and stoned him at the king's commandment in the court of the house of the Lord.

22 And king Joas did not remember the kindness that Joiada, his father, had done to him, ^cbut killed his son. And when he died, he said : The Lord see, and require it.

24 And whereas there came a very small number of the Syrians, the Lord delivered into their hands an infinite multitude, because they had forsaken the Lord, the God of their fathers : and on Joas they executed shameful judgments.

25 And departing, they left him in great diseases : and his servants rose up against him, for revenge of the blood of the son of Joiada, the priest, and they slew him in his bed, and he died : and they buried him in the city of David, but not in the sepulchres of the kings.

dom, he put to death the servants that had slain the king, his father.

4 But he slew not their children, as it is written in the book of the law of Moses, where the Lord commanded, saying: "The fathers shall not be slain for the children, nor the children for their fathers; but every man shall die for his own sin."

5 Amasias, therefore, gathered Juda together, and appointed them by families, and captains of thousands, and of hundreds in all Juda, and Benjamin: and he numbered them from twenty years old and upwards, and found three hundred thousand young men that could go out to battle, and could hold the spear and the shield.

6 He hired also of Israel a hundred thousand valiant men, for a hundred talents of silver.

7 But a man of God came to him, and said: O king, let not the army of Israel go out with thee, for the Lord is not with Israel, and all the children of Ephraim:

8 And if thou think that battles consist in the strength of the army, God will make thee to be overcome by the enemies: for it belongeth to God both to help, and to put to flight.

9 And Amasias said to the man of God: What will then become of the hundred talents which I have given to the soldiers of Israel? and the man of God answered him: The Lord is rich enough to be able to give thee much more than this.

10 And Amasias separated the army, that came to him out of Ephraim, to go home again: but they being much enraged against Juda, returned to their own country.

11 And Amasias, taking courage, led forth his people, and went to the vale of salt pits, and slew of the children of Seir, ten thousand.

12 And other ten thousand men the sons of Juda took, and brought to the steep of a certain rock, and cast them down headlong from the top, and they all were broken to pieces.

13 But that army which Amasias had sent back, that they should not go with him to battle, spread themselves among the cities of Juda, and Samaria, to Bethhoron, and having killed three thousand, took away much spoil.

14 And Amasias, after he had slain the Edomites, set up the gods of the children of Seir, which he had brought thence, to be his gods, and adored them, and burnt incense to them.

15 Wherefore the Lord being angry against Amasias, sent a prophet to him, to say to him: Why hast thou adored gods that have not delivered their own people out of thy hand?

16 And when he spoke these things, he answered him: Art thou the king's counsellor? be quiet, lest I kill thee. And the prophet departing, said: I know that God is minded to kill thee, because thou hast done this evil, and moreover hast not hearkened to my counsel.

17 Then Amasias, king of Juda, taking very bad counsel, sent to Joas, the son of Joachaz, the son of Jehu, king of Israel: saying: Come, let us see one another.

18 But he sent back the messengers, saying: The thistle that is in Libanus sent to the cedar in Libanus, saying: Give thy daughter to my son to wife: and behold the beasts that were in the wood of Libanus, passed by, and trod down the thistle.

19 Thou hast said: I have overthrown Edom, and therefore thy heart is lifted up with pride: stay at home; why dost thou provoke evil against thee, that both thou shouldst fall and Juda with thee.

20 Amasias would not hearken to him, because it was the Lord's will that he should be delivered into the hands of enemies, because of the gods of Edom.

21 So Joas, king of Israel, went up, and they presented themselves to be seen by one another: and Amasias, king of Juda, was in Bethsaines of Juda:

22 And Juda fell before Israel, and they fled to their dwellings.

23 And Joas, king of Israel, took Amasias, king of Juda, the son of Joas, the son of Joachaz, in Bethsaines, and brought him to Jerusalem: and broke down the walls thereof from the gate of Ephraim, to the gate of the corner, four hundred cubits.

24 And he took all the gold, and silver, and all the vessels, that he found in the house of God, and with Obededom, and in the treasures of the king's house: moreover also the sons of the hostages, he brought back to Samaria.

25 And Amasias, the son of Joas, king of Juda, lived, after the death of Joas, the son of Joachaz, king of Israel, fifteen years.

26 Now the rest of the acts of Amasias, the first and last are written in the book of the kings of Juda and Israel.

27 And after he revolted from the Lord, they made a conspiracy against him in Jerusalem. And he fled into Lachis, and they sent, and killed him there.

Ozias reigneth vrosperously, till he invadeth the priest's office, upon which he is struck with a leprosy.

AND all the people of Juda took his son, Ozias, who was sixteen years old, and made him king in the room of Amasias, his father.

2 He built Ailath, and restored it to the dominion of Juda, after that the king slept with his fathers.

3 Ozias was sixteen years old when he began to reign, and he reigned two and fifty years in Jerusalem: the name of his mother was Jechelia, of Jerusalem.

4 And he did that which was right in the eyes of the Lord, according to all that Amasias, his father, had done.

5 And he sought the Lord in the days of Zacharias, that understood and saw God: and as long as he sought the Lord, he directed him in all things.

6 Moreover, he went forth, and fought against the Philistines, and broke down the wall of Geth, and the wall of Jabina, and the wall of Azotus: and he built towns in Azotus, and among the Philistines.

7 And God helped him against the Philistines, and against the Arabians, that dwelt in Gurbaal, and against the Ammonites.

8 And the Ammonites gave gifts to Ozias: and his name was spread abroad, even to the entrance of Egypt, for his frequent victories.

9 And Ozias built towers in Jerusalem over the gate of the corner, and over the gate of the valley, and the rest, in the same side of the wall, and fortified them.

10 And he built towers in the wilderness, and dug many cisterns, for he had much cattle, both in the plains and in the waste of the desert: he had also vineyards and dressers of vines in the mountains, and in Carmel: for he was a man that loved husbandry.

11 And the army of his fighting men, that we it out to war, was under the hand of Jehiel, the scribe, and Maasias, the doctor, and under the hand of Hananias, who was one of the king's captains.

12 And the whole number of the chiefs, by the families of valiant men, were two thousand six hundred.

13 And the whole army under them, three hundred and seven thousand five hundred: who were fit for war, and fought for the king against the enemy.

15 And he made in Jerusalem engines of diverse kinds, which he placed in the towers, and in the corners of the walls, to shoot arrows, and great stones: and his name went forth far abroad, for the Lord helped him, and had strengthened him.

16 But when he was made strong, his heart was lifted up to his destruction, and he neglected the Lord, his God. and going into the temple of the Lord, he had a mind to burn incense upon the altar of incense.

17 And immediately Azarias, the priest, going in after him, and with him fourscore priests of the Lord, most valiant men,

18 Withstood the king, and said: It doth not belong to thee, Ozias, to burn incense to the Lord, but to the priests, that is, to the sons of Aaron, who are consecrated for this ministry: go out of the sanctuary, do not despise: for this thing shall not be accounted to thy glory by the Lord God.

19 And Ozias was angry; and holding in his hand the censer to burn incense, threatened the priests. And presently there arose a leprosy in his forehead before the priests, in the house of the Lord, at the altar of incense.

20 And Azarias, the high priest, and all the rest of the priests, looked upon him, and saw the leprosy in his forehead, and they made haste to thrust him out. Yea, himself also being frightened, hasted to go out, because he had quickly felt the stroke of the Lord.

21 And Ozias, the king, was a leper unto the day of his death; and he dwelt in a house apart, being full of the leprosy, for which he had been cast out of the house of the Lord. And Joatham, his son, governed the king's house, and judged the people of the land.

22 But the rest of the acts of Ozias, first and last, were written by Isaias, the son of Amos, the prophet.

23 And Ozias slept with his fathers; and they buried him in the field of the royal sepulchres, because he was a leper: and Joatham, his son, reigned in his stead.

3 He built the high gate of the house of the Lord, and on the wall of Ophel he built much.

4 Moreover, he built cities in the mountains of Juda, and castles and towers in the forests.

5 He fought against the king of the children of Ammon, and overcame them, and the children of Ammon gave him at that time a hundred talents of silver, and ten thousand measures of wheat, and as many measures of barley: so much did the children of Ammon give him in the second and third year.

6 And Joatham was strengthened, because he had his way directed before the Lord, his God.

7 Now the rest of the acts of Joatham, and all his wars, and his works, are written in the Book of the kings of Israel and Juda.

8 He was five and twenty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem.

9 And Joatham slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the city of David: and Achaz, his son, reigned in his stead.

CHAP. XXVIII.

The wicked and unhappy reign of Achaz.

ACHAZ^a was twenty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem: he did not that which was right in the sight of the Lord, as David, his father, had done.

2 But walked in the ways of the kings of Israel; moreover, also, he cast statues for Baalim.

3 It was he that burnt incense in the valley of Benen-nom, and consecrated his sons in the fire, according to the manner of the nations, which the Lord slew at the coming of the children of Israel.

4 He sacrificed also, and burnt incense in the high places, and on the hills, and under every green tree.

5 ^bAnd the Lord, his God, delivered him into the hands of the king of Syria, who defeated him, and took a great booty out of his kingdom, and carried it to Damascus: he was also delivered into the hands of the king of Israel, who overthrew him with a great slaughter.

6 For Phacee, the son of Romelia, slew of Juda a hundred and twenty thousand in one day, all valiant men: because they had forsaken the Lord, the God of their fathers.

slew Maasias, the king's son, and Ezricam, the governor of his house, and Elcana, who was next to the king.

8 And the children of Israel carried away of their brethren, two hundred thousand women, boys, and girls, and an immense booty: and they brought it to Samaria.

9 At that time there was a prophet of the Lord there, whose name was Oded: and he went out to meet the army that came to Samaria, and said to them: Behold the Lord, the God of your fathers, being angry with Juda, hath delivered them into your hands, and you have butchered them cruelly, so that your cruelty hath reached up to heaven.

10 Moreover, you have a mind to keep under the children of Juda and Jerusalem for your bond-men and bond-women, which ought not to be done: for you have sinned in this against the Lord, your God.

11 But hear ye my counsel, and release the captives that you have brought of your brethren, because a great indignation of the Lord hangeth over you.

12 Then some of the chief men of the sons of Ephraim, Azarias, the son of Johanan, Barachias, the son of Mosolamoth, Ezechias, the son of Sellum, and Aniasa, the son of Adali, stood up against them that came from the war.

13 And they said unto them: You shall not bring in the captives hither, lest we sin against the Lord. Why will you add to our sins, and heap up upon our former offences? for the sin is great, and the fierce anger of the Lord hangeth over Israel.

14 So the soldiers left the spoils, and all that they had taken, before the princes and all the multitude.

15 And the men, whom we mentioned above, rose up and took the captives, and with the spoils, clothed all them that were naked: and when they had clothed and shod them, and refreshed them with meat and drink, and anointed them because of their labour, and had taken care of them: they set such of them as could not walk, and were feeble, upon beasts, and brought them to Jericho, the city of palm-trees, to their brethren, and they returned to Samaria.

16 At that time king Achaz sent to the king of the Assyrians, asking help.

17 And the Edomites came and slew many of Juda, and took a great booty.

18 The Philistines also spread themselves among the cities of the plains, and to the south of Juda: and they took Bethsames, and Aialon, and Gaderoth, and Socho, and Thamnan, and Gamzo, with their villages, and they dwelt in them.

19 For the Lord had humbled Juda, because of Achaz, the king of Juda, for he had stript it of all help, and had contemned the Lord.

20 And he brought against him Thelgathphalnasar, king of the Assyrians, who also afflicted him, and plundered him without any resistance.

21 And Achaz stripped the house of the Lord, and the house of the kings, and of the princes, and gave gifts to the king of the Assyrians; and yet it availed him nothing.

22 Moreover, also, in the time of his distress, he increased contempt against the Lord; king Achaz himself, by himself,

23 Sacrificed victims to the gods of Damascus that struck him, and he said: The gods of the kings of Syria help them, and I will appease them with victims, and they will help me; whereas, on the contrary, they were the ruin of him, and of all Israel.

24 Then Achaz having taken away all the vessels of the house of God, and broken them, shut up the doors of the temple of God, and made himself altars in all the corners of Jerusalem.

25 And in all the cities of Juda he built altars to burn frankincense, and he provoked the Lord, the God of his fathers, to wrath.

26 But the rest of his acts, and all his works, first and last, are written in the Book of the kings of Juda and of Israel.

27 And Achaz slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the city of Jerusalem: for they received him not into the sepulchres of the kings of Israel. And Ezechias, his son, reigned in his stead.

CHAP. XXIX.

Ezechias purifieth the temple, and restoreth religion.

NOW Ezechias began to reign, when he was five and twenty years old, and he reigned nine and twenty years in Jerusalem: the name of his mother was Abia, the daughter of Zacharias.

2 And he did that which was pleasing in the sight of the Lord, according to all that David, his father, had done.

3 In the first year and month of his reign he opened the doors of the house of the Lord, and repaired them.

5 And he said to them: Hear me, ye Levites, and be sanctified, purify the house of the Lord, the God of your fathers, and take away all filth out of the sanctuary.

6 Our fathers have sinned, and done evil in the sight of the Lord God, forsaking him: they have turned away their faces from the tabernacle of the Lord, and turned their backs.

7 They have shut up the doors that were in the porch, and put out the lamps, and have not burnt incense, nor offered holocausts in the sanctuary of the God of Israel.

8 Therefore, the wrath of the Lord hath been stirred up against Juda and Jerusalem, and he hath delivered them to trouble, and to destruction, and to be hissed at, as you see with your eyes.

9 Behold, our fathers are fallen by the sword, our sons, and our daughters, and wives, are led away captives for this wickedness.

10 Now, therefore, I have a mind, that we make a covenant with the Lord, the God of Israel, and he will turn away the wrath of his indignation from us.

11 My sons, be not negligent: the Lord hath chosen you to stand before him, and to minister to him, and to worship him, and to burn incense to him.

12 Then the Levites arose: Mahath, the son of Amasai, and Joel, the son of Azarias, of the sons of Caath: and of the sons of Merari, Cis, the son of Abdi, and Azarias, the son of Jalaleel. And of the sons of Gerson, Joah, the son of Zemmar, and Eden, the son of Joah.

14 And of the sons of Heman, Jahiel, and Semei: and of the sons of Idithun, Semeias, and Oziel.

15 And they gathered together their brethren, and sanctified themselves, and went in according to the commandment of the king, and the precept of the Lord, to purify the house of God.

16 And the priests went into the temple of the Lord to sanctify it, and brought out all the uncleanness, that they found within, to the entrance of the house of the Lord, and the Levites took it away, and carried it out abroad, to the torrent Cedron.

17 And they began to cleanse on the first day of the first month, and, on the eighth day of the same month, they came into the porch of the temple of the Lord, and they purified the temple in eight days, and on the sixteenth day of the same month, they finished what they had begun.

18 And they went in to king Ezechias, and said to him: We have sanctified all the house of the Lord, and the altar of holocaust, and the vessels thereof, and the table of proposition, with all its vessels.

19 And all the furniture of the temple, which king Achaz, in his reign, had defiled, after his transgression; and behold they are all set forth before the altar of the Lord.

20 And king Ezechias, rising early, assembled all the rulers of the city, and went up into the house of the Lord:

21 And they offered together seven bullocks, and seven rams, and seven lambs, and seven he-goats, for sin, for the kingdom, for the sanctuary, for Juda: and he spoke to the priests, the sons of Aaron, to offer them upon the altar of the Lord.

22 Therefore they killed the bullocks, and the priests took the blood, and poured it upon the altar, they killed also the rams, and their blood they poured also upon the altar, and they killed the lambs, and poured the blood upon the altar.

23 And they brought the he-goats, for sin, before the king, and the whole multitude, and they laid their hands upon them:

24 And the priests immolated them, and sprinkled their blood before the altar, for an expiation of all Israel: for the king had commanded that the holocaust and the sin-offering should be made for all Israel.

25 And he set the Levites, in the house of the Lord, with cymbals, and psalteries, and harps, according to the regulation of David, the king, and of Gad, the seer, and of Nathan, the prophet: for it was the commandment of the Lord, by the hand of his prophets.

26 And the Levites stood with the instruments of David, and the priests with trumpets.

27 And Ezechias commanded that they should offer holocausts upon the altar: and when the holocausts were offered, they began to sing praises to the Lord, and to sound with trumpets, and divers instruments, which David, the king of Israel, had prepared.

28 And all the multitude adored, and the singers, and the trumpeters, were in their office, till the holocaust was finished.

29 And when the oblation was ended, the king, and all that were with him, bowed down, and adored.

30 And Ezechias, and the princes, commanded the Levites to praise the Lord with the words of David, and Asaph, the seer: and they praised him with great joy, and bowing the knee, adored.

31 And Ezechias added, and said: You have filled your hands to the Lord, come and offer victims, and praises in the house of the Lord. And all the multitude offered victims, and praises, and holocausts, with a devout mind.

32 And the number of the holocausts which the multitude offered, was seventy bullocks, a hundred rams, and two hundred lambs.

33 And they consecrated to the Lord six hundred oxen, and three thousand sheep.

34 But the priests were few, and were not enough to slay the holocausts: wherefore the Levites, their brethren, helped them till the work was ended, and priests were sanctified, for the Levites are sanctified with an easier rite than the priests.

35 So there were many holocausts, and the fat of peace-offerings, and the libations of holocausts: and the service of the house of the Lord was completed.

36 And Ezechias, and all the people rejoiced because the ministry of the Lord was accomplished. For the resolution of doing this thing was taken suddenly.

CHAP. XXX.

Ezechias inviteth all Israel to celebrate the Pasch: the solemnity is kept fourteen days.

AND Ezechias sent to all Israel and Juda: and he wrote letters to Ephraim and Manasses, that they should come to the house of the Lord, in Jerusalem, and keep the Phase to the Lord, the God of Israel.

2 For the king taking counsel, and the princes, and all the assembly of Jerusalem, decreed to keep the Phase the second month.

3 For they could not keep it in its time: because there were not priests enough sanctified; and the people was not as yet gathered together to Jerusalem.

4 And the thing pleased the king, and all the people.

5 And they decreed to send messengers to all Israel, from Bersabee even to Dan, that they should come, and keep the Phase to the Lord, the God of Israel, in Jerusalem: for many had not kept it as it is prescribed by the law.

VER. 19. Defiled. Heb. "cast out (C.) in his."—Forth. Heb. and Sept. "We have prepared and purified, behold they are," &c. H.

VER. 21. Seven. Only one was prescribed for sins of ignorance. Lev. iv. 13—22. S. Jer. Trad.—But the late transgressions were of a different nature; and the king consults his zeal, rather than what he was absolutely obliged to do.

VER. 23. They laid. The king and princes of the people confessed their sins. Lev. iv. 15.

VER. 25. Prophet. Moses had not required music, except on some occasions. Num. x. 10. But David acted by God's authority.

VER. 30. Princes of the priests. H.—Words; psalms. T.—Asaph, so famous for music. He had composed some psalms, (C.) and twelve bear his name. T.—But he might only have set them to music, (H.) or his band sung them. D.—Knee. Prot. "head." Sept. "they prostrated themselves."

VER. 31. Added. Heb. and Sept. "answered," a term used in Scripture, though no question had been proposed. H.—Filled. You are, in some sense, priests. Prot. "you have consecrated yourselves." The people brought victims, but the priests poured the blood round the altar, ver. 34. H.

VER. 34. Holocausts, as the law required. Lev. i. 6. See chap. xxxv. 11. The skin might be taken off other victims by laies.—Priests. Syr. "The Levites were more timid, or reserved, than the priests, to purify themselves." C.—Both are indirectly accused of negligence. Chap. xxx. 15. The Heb. seems to give the preference to the latter, "for the Levites were more upright of heart, (Sept. willing,) to purify themselves than the priests." But the Alex. Sept. may well agree with the Vulg.

VER. 36. Because. Heb. and Sept. "that the Lord had disposed the people, for the thing was done suddenly," (H.) to place no obstacle to this sudden change from one extreme to the other, at a time when the king was scarcely established on the throne. C.

CHAP. XXX. VER. 1. Manasses. The pious king thought he might give a general invitation without umbrage. King Osee was not so impious as his predecessors. 4 Kings xvii. 2. Afflictions had made his people more docile.

VER. 2. Month. Those who had a lawful impediment, were authorized to put off the feast till the second month. Num. ix. 10. The nation was under this predicament, as they had not priests at hand, (T.) nor were they assembled. D.

VER. 5. Many. None had kept the Phase this year. H.—But those of Israel had not done it for a long time. Grotius.—Hcb. "for they had not long before done according to the Scripture." Sept. "the multitude had not done."

6 And the posts went with letters by commandment of the king, and his princes, to all Israel and Juda, proclaiming according to the king's orders: Ye children of Israel, turn again to the Lord, the God of Abraham, and of Isaac, and of Israel: and he will return to the remnant of you that have escaped the hand of the king of the Assyrians.

7 Be not like your fathers, and brethren, who departed from the Lord, the God of their fathers, and he hath given them up to destruction, as you see.

8 Harden not your necks, as your fathers did: yield yourselves to the Lord, and come to his sanctuary, which he hath sanctified for ever: serve the Lord, the God of your fathers, and the wrath of his indignation shall be turned away from you.

9 For if you turn again to the Lord: your brethren, and children, shall find mercy before their masters, that have led them away captive, and they shall return into this land: for the Lord, your God, is merciful, and will not turn away his face from you, if you return to him.

10 So the posts went speedily from city to city, through the land of Ephraim, and of Manasses, even to Zabulon, whilst they laughed at them, and mocked them.

11 Nevertheless, some men of Aser, and of Manasses, and of Zabulon, yielding to the counsel, came to Jerusalem.

12 But the hand of God was in Juda, to give them one heart to do the word of the Lord, according to the commandment of the king, and of the princes.

13 And much people were assembled to Jerusalem, to celebrate the solemnity of the unleavened bread in the second month.

14 And they arose, and destroyed the altars that were in Jerusalem, and took away all things in which incense was burnt to idols, and cast them into the torrent Cedron.

15 And they immolated the Phase on the fourteenth day of the second month. And the priests and the Levites being at length sanctified, offered holocausts in the house of the Lord.

16 And they stood in their order, according to the disposition, and law of Moses, the man of God: but the priests received the blood which was to be poured out, from the hands of the Levites,

17 Because a great number was not sanctified: and, therefore, the Levites immolated the Phase for them that came not in time to be sanctified to the Lord.

18 For a great part of the people from Ephraim, and Manasses, and Issachar, and Zabulon, that had not been sanctified, eat the Phase, otherwise than it is written: and Ezechias prayed for them, saying: The Lord, who is good, will show mercy,

19 To all them, who with their whole heart seek the Lord, the God of their fathers: and will not impute it to them, that they are not sanctified.

20 And the Lord heard him, and was merciful to the people.

21 And the children of Israel, that were found at Jerusalem, kept the feast of unleavened bread seven day with great joy, praising the Lord every day: The Levites also, and the priests, with instruments, that agreed to their office.

22 And Ezechias spoke to the heart of all the Levites, that had good understanding, concerning the Lord: and they eat during the seven days of the solemnity, immolating victims of peace-offerings, and praising the Lord, the God of their fathers.

23 And it pleased the whole multitude to keep other seven days: which they did with great joy.

24 For Ezechias, the king of Juda, had given to the multitude a thousand bullocks, and seven thousand sheep: and the princes had given the people a thousand bullocks, and ten thousand sheep: and a great number of priests was sanctified.

25 And all the multitude of Juda, with the priests and Levites, and all the assembly, that came out of Israel: and the proselytes of the land of Israel, and that dwelt in Juda, were full of joy.

26 And there was a great solemnity in Jerusalem, such as had not been in that city since the time of Solomon, the son of David, king of Israel.

27 And the priests and the Levites rose up, and blessed

CHAP. XXXI.

Idolatry is abolished; and provisions made for the ministers.

AND ^awhen these things had been duly celebrated, all Israel, that were found in the cities of Juda, went out, and they broke the idols, and cut down the groves, demolished the high places, and destroyed the altars, not only out of all Juda and Benjamin, but out of Ephraim also, and Manasses, till they had utterly destroyed them: then all the children of Israel returned to their possessions and cities.

2 And Ezechias appointed companies of the priests, and the Levites, by their courses, every man in his own office; to wit, both of the priests, and of the Levites, for holocausts, and for peace-offerings, to minister, and to praise, and to sing in the gates of the camp of the Lord.

3 And the king's part was, that of his proper substance the holocaust should be offered always, morning and evening, and on the sabbaths, and the new moons, and the other solemnities, as it is written in the law of Moses.

4 He commanded also the people that dwelt in Jerusalem, to give to the priests, and the Levites, their portion, that they might attend to the law of the Lord.

5 Which when it was noised abroad in the ears of the people, the children of Israel offered in abundance the first-fruits of corn, wine, and oil, and honey: and brought the tithes of all things which the ground bringeth forth.

6 Moreover, the children of Israel and Juda, that dwelt in the cities of Juda, brought in the tithes of oxen, and sheep, and the tithes of holy things, which they had vowed to the Lord, their God: and carrying them all, made many heaps.

7 In the third month, they began to lay the foundations of the heaps; and in the seventh month, they finished them.

8 And when Ezechias, and his princes, came in, they saw the heaps, and blessed the Lord, and the people of Israel.

9 And Ezechias asked the priests, and the Levites, why the heaps lay so.

10 Azarias, the chief priest of the race of Sadoc, answered him, saying: Since the first-fruits began to be offered in the house of the Lord, we have eaten, and have been filled, and abundance is left, because the Lord hath blessed his people: and of that which is left, is this great store which thou seest.

11 Then Ezechias commanded to prepare storehouses in the house of the Lord. And when they had done so,

12 They brought in faithfully both the first-fruits, and the tithes, and all they had vowed. And the overseer of them was Chonenias, the Levite, and Semei, his brother, was the second,

13 And after him, Jehiel, and Azarias, and Nahath, and Asael, and Jerimoth, and Jozabad, and Eliel, and Jesmachias, and Mahath, and Banaias, overseers under the hand of Chonenias, and Semei, his brother, by the commandment of Ezechias, the king, and Azarias, the high priest of the house of God, to whom all things appertained.

14 But Core, the son of Jemna, the Levite, the porter of the east-gate, was overseer of the things which were freely offered to the Lord, and of the first-fruits, and the things dedicated for the holies of holies.

15 And under his charge were Eden, and Benjamin, Jesue, and Semeias, and Amarias, and Sechenias, in the cities of the priests, to distribute faithfully portions to their brethren, both little and great:

16 Besides the males, from three years old and upward, to all that went into the temple of the Lord, and whatsoever there was need of in the ministry, and their offices according to their courses day by day.

17 To the priests, by their families, and to the Levites, from the twentieth year and upward, by their classes and companies.

18 And to all the multitude, both to their wives, and to their children of both sexes, victuals were given faithfully out of the things that had been sanctified.

19 Also of the sons of Aaron who were in the fields, and in the suburbs of each city, there were men appointed, to distribute portions to all the males, among the priests and the Levites.

20 So Ezechias did all things which we have said in all Juda: and wrought that which was good, and right, and truth, before the Lord, his God,

21 In all the service of the ministry of the house of the Lord, according to the law and the ceremonies, desiring to seek his God with all his heart; and he did it, and prospered.

CHAP. XXXII.

Sennacherib invadeth Juda. his army is destroyed by an angel. Ezechias recovereth from his sickness: his other acts.

AFTER ^athese things, and this truth, Sennacherib, king of the Assyrians, came and entered into Juda, and besieged the fenced cities, desiring to take them.

2 And when Ezechias saw that Sennacherib was come, and that the whole force of the war was turning against Jerusalem,

3 He took counsel with the princes, and the most valiant men, to stop up the heads of the springs, that were without the city: and as they were all of this mind,

4 He gathered together a very great multitude, and they stopped up all the springs, and the brook, that ran through the midst of the land, saying: Lest the kings of the Assyrians should come, and find abundance of water.

5 He built up, also, with great diligence, all the wall that had been broken down, and built towers upon it, and another wall without: and he repaired Mello, in the city of David, and made all sorts of arms and shields:

6 And he appointed captains of the soldiers of the army: and he called them all together in the street of the gate of the city, and spoke to their heart, saying:

7 Behave like men, and take courage: be not afraid, nor dismayed for the king of the Assyrians, nor for all the multitude that is with him: for there are many more with us than with him.

8 For with him is an arm of flesh: with us the Lord, our God, who is our helper, and fighteth for us. And the people were encouraged with these words of Ezechias, king of Juda.

9 After this, Sennacherib, king of the Assyrians, sent his servants to Jerusalem, (for he, with all his army, was besieging Lachis,) to Ezechias, king of Juda, and to all the people that were in the city, saying:

10 Thus saith Sennacherib, king of the Assyrians: In whom do you trust, that you sit still besieged in Jerusalem?

11 Doth not Ezechias deceive you, to give you up to die, by hunger and thirst, affirming, that the Lord, your God, shall deliver you from the hand of the king of the Assyrians?

12 Is it not this same Ezechias, that hath destroyed his high places, and his altars, and commanded Juda and Jerusalem, saying: You shall worship before one altar, and upon it you shall burn incense?

13 Know you not what I and my fathers have done to all the people of the lands? have the gods of any nations and lands been able to deliver their country out of my hand?

CHAP. XXXII. VER. 1. Truth, and sincere piety of the king, God was pleased to put him to trial (T. M. D.); or, "after these things were established." Jun.—Sennacherib attacked Juda when Ezechias had been ~~seven~~ years on the throne, and till that time had paid the stipulated tribute. 4 Kings xviii. 13. C.

VER. 3. City. The torrent Cedron afforded the only good supply of water. It was often dry, and was only three steps across, when full of melted snow or rain. The waters of Siloe and Gihon were collected in it. Yet it was no very difficult enterprise for the king to turn the stream, and introduce the waters through the rock, into a large reservoir in the city, by the canal, which is mentioned 2 Esd. ii. 14; Eccli. xlviii. 19. 14 Who is there among all the gods of the nations, which my fathers have destroyed, that could deliver his people out of my hand, that your God should be able to deliver you out of this hand?

15 Therefore let not Ezechias deceive you, nor delude you with a vain persuasion, and do not believe him. For if no god of all the nations and kingdoms, could deliver his people out of my hand, and out of the hand of my fathers, consequently neither shall your God be able to deliver you out of my hand.

16 And many other things did his servants speak against the Lord God, and against Ezechias, his servant.

17 He wrote also letters full of blasphemy against the Lord, the God of Israel, and he spoke against him: As the gods of other nations could not deliver their people out of my hand, so neither can the God of Ezechias deliver his people out of this hand.

18 Moreover, he cried out with a loud voice, in the Jews' tongue, to the people that sat on the walls of Jerusalem, that he might frighten them, and take the city.

19 And he spoke against the God of Jerusalem, as against the gods of the people of the earth, the works of the hands of men.

20 And Ezechias, the king, and Isaías, the prophet, the son of Amos, prayed against this blasphemy, and cried out to heaven.

21 ^bAnd the Lord sent an angel, who cut off all the stout men, and the warriors, and the captains of the army of the king of the Assyrians: and he returned with disgrace into his own country. And when he was come into the house of his god, his sons that came out of his bowels, slew him with the sword.

22 And the Lord saved Ezechias, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, out of the hand of Sennacherib, king of the Assyrians, and out of the hand of all, and gave them treasures on every side.

23 Many, also, brought victims, and sacrifices to the Lord, to Jerusalem, and presents to Ezechias, king of Juda: and he was magnified thenceforth in the sight of all nations.

24 ^cIn those days Ezechias was sick, even to death, and he prayed to the Lord: and he heard him, and gave him a sign.

25 But he did not render again according to the benefits which he had received, for his heart was lifted up: and wrath was enkindled against him, and against Juda, and Jerusalem.

heart had been lifted up, both he and the inhabitants of Jerusalem: and, therefore, the wrath of the Lord came not upon them in the days of Ezechias.

27 And Ezechias was rich, and very glorious, and he gathered himself great treasures of silver, and of gold, and of precious stones, of spices, and of arms of all kinds, and of vessels of great price.

28 Storehouses also, of corn, of wine, and of oil, and stalls for all beasts, and folds for cattle.

29 And he built himself cities: for he had flocks of sheep, and herds without number; for the Lord had given him very much substance.

30 This same Ezechias was he that stopped the upper source of the waters of Gihon, and turned them away underneath toward the west of the city of David: in all his works he did prosperously what he would.

31 But yet in the embassy of the princes of Babylon, that were sent to him, to inquire of the wonder that had happened upon the earth, God left him that he might be tempted, and all things might be made known that were in his heart.

32 Now the rest of the acts of Ezechias, and of his mercies, are written in the Book of the kings of Juda and Israel.

33 And Ezechias slept with his fathers, and they buried him above the sepulchres of the sons of David: and all Juda, and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, celebrated his funeral: and Manasses, his son, reigned in his stead.

whereof the Lord had said: "In Jerusalem shall my name be for ever.

5 And he built them for all the host of heaven, in the two courts of the house of the Lord.

6 And he made his sons to pass through the fire, in the valley of Benennom: he observed dreams, followed divinations, gave himself up to magic arts, had with him magicians, and enchanters: and he wrought many evils before the Lord, to provoke him to anger.

7 "He set also a graven, and a molten statue in the house of God, of which God had said to David, and to Solomon, his son: In this house, and in Jerusalem, which I have chosen out of all the tribes of Israel, will I put my name for ever.

8 And I will not make the foot of Israel to be removed out of the land which I have delivered to their fathers: yet so if they will take heed to do what I have commanded them, and all the law, and the ceremonies, and judgments, by the hand of Moses.

9 So Manasses seduced Juda, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, to do evil beyond all the nations, which the Lord had destroyed before the face of the children of Israel.

10 And the Lord spoke to him, and to his people, and they would not hearken.

11 Therefore, he brought upon them the captains of the army of the king of the Assyrians: and they took Manasses, and carried him, bound with chains and fetters, to Babylon.

12 And after that he was in distress, he prayed to the Lord, his God: and did penance exceedingly before the God of his fathers.

13 And he entreated him, and besought him earnestly: and he heard his prayer, and brought him again to Jerusalem, into his kingdom; and Manasses knew that the Lord was God.

14 After this he built a wall without the city of David, on the west side of Gihon, in the valley, from the entering-in of the fish-gate round about to Ophel, and raised it up to a great height: and he appointed captains of the army in all the fenced cities of Juda:

15 And he took away the strange gods, and the idol, out of the house of the Lord: the altars also, which he

16 And he repaired the altar of the Lord, and sacrificed upon it victims, and peace-offerings, and praise: and he commanded Juda to serve the Lord, the God of Israel.

17 Nevertheless, the people still sacrificed in the high places to the Lord, their God.

18 But the rest of the acts of Manasses, and his prayer to his God: and the words of the seers, that spoke to him in the name of the Lord, the God of Israel, are contained in the words of the kings of Israel.

19 His prayer also, and his being heard, and all his sins, and contempt, and places wherein he built high places, and set up groves, and statues, before he did penance, are written in the words of Hozai.

20 And Manasses slept ^a with his fathers, and they buried him in his house: and his son, Amon, reigned in his stead.

21 Amon was two and twenty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned two years in Jerusalem.

22 And he did evil in the sight of the Lord, as Manasses, his father, had done: and he sacrificed to all the idols which Manasses, his father, had made, and served them.

23 And he did not humble himself before the Lord, as Manasses, his father, had humbled himself, but committed far greater sins.

24 And his servants conspired against him, and slew him in his own house.

25 But the rest of the multitude of the people slew them that had killed Amon, and made Josias, his son, king in his stead.

Juda and Jerusalem from the high places, and the groves, and the idols, and the graven things.

4 And they broke down before him the altars of Baalim, and demolished the idols that had been set upon them, and he cut down the groves and the graven things, and broke them in pieces: and strewed the fragments upon the graves of them that had sacrificed to them.

5 And he burnt the bones of the priests on the altars of the idols, and he cleansed Juda and Jerusalem.

6 And in the cities of Manasses, and of Ephraim, and of Simeon, even to Nephtali, he demolished all.

7 And when he had destroyed the altars, and the groves, and had broken the idols in pieces, and had demolished all profane temples throughout all the land of Israel, he returned to Jerusalem.

8 Now, in the eighteenth year^c of his reign, when he had cleansed the land, and the temple of the Lord, he sent Saphan, the son of Eselias, and Maasias, the governor of the city, Joha, the son of Joachaz, the recorder, to repair the house of the Lord, his God.

9 And they came to Helcias, the high priest: and received of him the money which had been brought into the house of the Lord, and which the Levites and porters had gathered together from Manasses, and Ephraim, and all the remnant of Israel, and from all Juda, and Benjamin, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem.

10 Which they delivered into the hands of them that were over the workmen in the house of the Lord, to repair the temple, and mend all that was weak.

11 But they gave it to the artificers, and to the masons, to buy stones out of the quarries, and timber for the couplings of the building, and to rafter the houses, which the kings of Juda had destroyed.

12 And they did all faithfully. Now the overseers of the workmen were Jahath and Abdias, of the sons of Merari, Zacharias and Mosollam, of the sons of Caath, who hastened the work: all Levites, skilful to play on instruments.

13 But over them that carried burdens for divers uses, were scribes, and masters of the number of the Levites, and porters.

14 Now when they carried out the money that had been brought into the temple of the Lord, Helcias, the priest, found the book of the law of the Lord, by the hand of Moses.

But the few Israelites who were left had placed themselves under his protection; and as he made no ravages, and the Cuthites did not adopt the former superstitious practices of the country, they were not concerned to see the altars destroyed; nor were the kings of Assyria informed of, or interested to stop, these proceedings. 15 And he said to Saphan, the scribe: I have found the book of the law in the house of the Lord: and he delivered it to him.

16 But he carried the book to the king, and told him, saying: Lo, all that thou hast committed to thy servant, is accomplished.

17 They have gathered together the silver that was found in the house of the Lord: and it is given to the overseers of the artificers, and of the workmen, for divers works.

18 Moreover, Helcias, the priest, gave me this book. And he read it before the king.

19 And when he had heard the words of the law, he rent his garments:

20 And he commanded Helcias, and Ahicam, the son of Saphan, and Abdon, the son of Michas, and Saphan, the scribe, and Asaa, the king's servant, saying:

21 Go, and pray to the Lord for me, and for the remnant of Israel, and Juda, concerning all the words of this book, which is found: for the great wrath of the Lord hath fallen upon us, because our fathers have not kept the words of the Lord, to do all things that are written in this book.

22 And Helcias, and they that were sent with him by the king, went to Oлда, the prophetess, the wife of Sellum, the son of Thecuth, the son of Hasra, keeper of the wardrobe: who dwelt in Jerusalem, in the second part: and they spoke to her the words above-mentioned.

23 And she answered them: Thus saith the Lord, the God of Israel: Tell the man that sent you to me:

24 Thus saith the Lord: Behold I will bring evils upon this place, and upon the inhabitants thereof, and all the curses that are written in this book, which they read before the king of Juda.

25 Because they have forsaken me, and have sacrificed to strange gods, to provoke me to wrath with all the works of their hands; therefore my wrath shall fall upon this place, and shall not be quenched.

26 But as to the king of Juda that sent you to beseech the Lord, thus shall you say to him: Thus saith the Lord, the God of Israel: Because thou hast heard the words of this book,

27 And thy heart was softened, and thou hast humbled thyself in the sight of God for the things that are spoken against this place, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and reverencing my face, hast rent thy garments, and wept before me: I also have heard thee, saith the Lord.

28 For now I will gather thee to thy fathers, and thou shalt be brought to thy tomb in peace: and thy eyes shall not see all the evil that I will bring upon this place, and the inhabitants thereof. *They, therefore, reported to the king all that she had said.

29 And he called together all the ancients of Juda and Jerusalem,

30 And went up to the house of the Lord, and all the men of Juda, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, the priests, and the Levites, and all the people, from the least to the greatest. And the king read in their hearing in the house of the Lord, all the words of the book.

31 And standing up in his tribunal, he made a covenant before the Lord to walk after him, and keep his commandments, and testimonies, and justifications, with all his heart, and with all his soul, and to do the things that were written in that book which he had read.

32 And he adjured all that were found in Jerusalem, and Benjamin, to do the same: and the inhabitants of Jerusalem did according to the covenant of the Lord, the God of their fathers.

33 And Josias took away all the abominations out of all the countries of the children of Israel: and made all that were left in Israel, to serve the Lord, their God. As long as he lived, they departed not from the Lord, the God of their fathers.

CHAP. XXXV.

Josias celebrateth a most solemn Pasch. He is slain by the king of Egypt.

AND ^bJosias kept a Phase to the Lord in Jerusalem, and it was sacrificed on the fourteenth day of the first month.

2 And he set the priests in their offices, and exhorted them to minister in the house of the Lord.

3 And he spoke to the Levites, by whose instruction all Israel was sanctified to the Lord, saying: Put the ark in the sanctuary of the temple, which Solomon, the son of David, king of Israel, built: for you shall carry it no more: but minister now to the Lord, your God, and to his people, Israel.

4 And prepare yourselves by your houses, and families, according to your courses, as David, king of Israel, commanded, and Solomon, his son, hath written.

5 And serve ye in the sanctuary by the families and companies of Levi,

6 And being sanctified, kill the Phase, and prepare your brethren, that they may do according to the words which the Lord spoke by the hand of Moses.

7 And Josias gave to all the people that were found there in the solemnity of the Phase, of lambs, and of kids, of the flocks, and of other small cattle, thirty thousand, and of oxen, three thousand: all these were of the king's substance.

8 And his princes willingly offered what they had vowed, both to the people, and to the priests and the Levites. Moreover, Helcias, and Zacharias, and Jahiel, rulers of the house of the Lord, gave to the priests to keep the Phase, two thousand six hundred small cattle, and three hundred oxen.

9 And Chonenias, and Semeias, and Nathanael, his brethren, and Hasabias, and Jehiel, and Jozabad, princes of the Levites, gave to the rest of the Levites to celebrate the Phase, five thousand small cattle, and five hundred oxen.

10 And the ministry was prepared, and the priests stood in their office: the Levites, also, in their companies, according to the king's commandment.

11 And the Phase was immolated: and the priests sprinkled the blood with their hand, and the Levites flayed the holocausts:

12 And they separated them to give them by the houses and families of every one, and to be offered to the Lord, as it is written in the book of Moses; and with the oxen they did in like manner.

13 And they roasted the Phase with fire, according to that which is written in the law: but the victims of peace-offerings they boiled in cauldrons, and kettles, and pots, and they distributed them speedily among all the people.

14 And afterwards they made ready for themselves, and for the priests: for the priests were busied in offering of holocausts and the fat until night: wherefore the Levites prepared for themselves, and for the priests, the sons of Aaron, last.

15 And the singers, the sons of Asaph, stood in their order, according to the commandment of David, and Asaph, and Heman, and Idithun, the prophets of the king: and the porters kept guard at every gate, so as not to depart one moment from their service: and, therefore, their brethren, the Levites, prepared meats for them.

16 So all the service of the Lord was duly accomplished that day, both in keeping the Phase, and offering holocausts upon the altar of the Lord, according to the commandment of king Josias.

17 And the children of Israel that were found there, kept the Phase at that time, and the feast of unleavened bread seven days.

18 There was no Phase like to this in Israel, from the days of Samuel the prophet: neither did any of all the kings of Israel keep such a Phase as Josias kept, with the priests, and the Levites, and all Juda, and Israel that were found, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem.

19 In the eighteenth year of the reign of Josias was this Phase celebrated.

20 * Now after Josias had repaired the temple, Nechao, king of Egypt, came up to fight in Charcamis, by the Euphrates: and Josias went out to meet him.

21 But he sent messengers to him, saying: What have I to do with thee, O king of Juda? I come not against thee this day, but I fight against another house, to which God hath commanded me to go in haste: forbear to do against God, who is with me, lest he kill thee.

22 Josias would not return, but prepared to fight against him, and hearkened not to the words of Nechao, from the mouth of God, ^b but went to fight in the field of Mageddo.

23 And there he was wounded by the archers, and he said to his servants: Carry me out of the battle, for I am grievously wounded.

24 And they removed him from the chariot into another, that followed him after the manner of kings, and they carried him away to Jerusalem, and he died, and was buried in the monument of his fathers, and all Juda and Jerusalem mourned for him.

25 Particularly Jeremias: whose lamentations for Josias all the singing men and singing women repeat unto this day, and it became like a law in Israel: Behold it is found written in the Lamentations.

26 Now the rest of the acts of Josias, and of his mercies, according to what was commanded by the law of the Lord;

27 And his works, first and last, are written in the Book of the kings of Juda and Israel.

The reigns of Joachaz, Joakim, Joachin, and Sedecias: the captivity of Babylon released at length by Cyrus.

THEN *the people of the land took Joachaz, the son of Josias, and made him king instead of his father in Jerusalem.

2 Joachaz was three and twenty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned three months in Jerusalem.

3 And the king of Egypt came to Jerusalem, and deposed him, and condemned the land, in a hundred talents of silver, and a talent of gold.

4 And he made ^dEliakim, his brother, king in his stead, over Juda and Jerusalem: and he turned his name to Joakim: but he took Joachaz with him, and carried him away into Egypt.

9 Joachin was eight years old when he began to reign, and he reigned three months and ten days in Jerusalem, and he did evil in the sight of the Lord.

THE

FIRST BOOK OF ESDRAS.

This Book taketh its name from the writer, who was a holy priest and doctour of the law. He is called by the Hebrews Ezra, (Ch.) and was son, (T.) or rather, uncle, he lived above 150 years, a descendant of Saraias, 4 Kings xxv. 18. It is thought that he returned first with Zorobabel; and again, at the head of other captives, in the seventh year of Artaxerxes Longimanus, with ample authority. Esdras spent the latter part of his life in exhorting the people, and in explaining to them the law of God. He appeared with great dignity at the dedication of the walls of Jerusalem. 2 Esd. xii. 26—35. We have four books which bear his name. *—This and the following book of Nehemias originally made but one in Heb., (S. Jerom, &c.,) as the transactions of both those great men are recorded. The third and fourth are not in Heb., nor received into the canon of the Holy Scriptures, though the Greek Church hold the third as canonical, and place it first (W.); and Genebrard would assert that both ought to be received, as they were by several Fathers. But they contain many things which appear to be erroneous, and have been rejected by others of great authority, and particularly by S. Jerom. The third book seems to have been written very early, by some Hellenist Jew, who was desirous of embellishing the history of Zorobabel; and the fourth was probably composed by some person of the same nation, who had been converted to Christianity, before the end of the second century; and who injudiciously attempted to convert his brethren, by assuming the name of a man who was so much respected. Many things have been falsely attributed to Esdras on the same account. It is said that he invented the Masora; restored the Scriptures which had been lost; fixed the canon of twenty-two books; substituted the Chaldaic characters instead of the ancient Hebrew, Samaritan, or Phœnician. But though Esdras might sanction the latter, now become common, the characters might vary insensibly, (Bianconi. Kennicott. Dis. 2,) as those of other languages have done, (11.) and the sacred books never perished wholly; nor could the canon be determined in the time of Esdras. C.—As for the Masoretic observations and points, they are of too modern an invention. Elias Levita, Capel. Houbigant, &c.—What we know more positively of Esdras is, (W.) that he was empowered by Artaxerxes to bring back the Jews, and that he acted with great zeal. H.—This book contains the transactions of eighty-two years, till A. 3550. The letter of Reuin, and the king's answer, (chap. iv. 7, till chap. vi. 19, as well as chap. vii. 12, 27,) are in Chaldee; the rest of the work is in Hebrew. C.—We may discover various mysteries concealed under the literal sense of this and the following book. S. Jer. ep. ad Paulin. W.—Esdras is supposed by this holy doctor, as well as by some of the Rabbins, &c., to have been the same person with the prophet Malachy (Buttun); and several reasons seem to support this conjecture, though it must still remain very uncertain. C.—Some think that (11.) Esdras wrote only the last four chapters, and the author of Paral. the six preceding ones. D.—But it is most probable that he compiled both from authentic documents. H.—Some few additions may have been inserted since by Divine authority. 2 Esd. xii. 11, 22. T.

CHAPTER I.

Cyrus, king of Persia, releaseth God's people from their captivity, with licence to return and build the temple in Jerusalem: and restoreth the holy vessels which Nabuchodonosor had taken from thence

IN the first year of Cyrus, king of the Persians, that the word of the Lord, by the mouth of Jeremiah, might be fulfilled, the Lord stirred up the spirit of Cyrus, king of the Persians: and he made a proclamation throughout all his kingdom, and in writing also, saying:

2 Thus saith Cyrus, king of the Persians: The Lord, the God of heaven, hath given to me all the kingdoms of the earth, and he hath charged me to build him a house in Jerusalem, which is in Judea.

3 Who is there among you of all his people? His God be with him. Let him go up to Jerusalem, which is in Judea, and build the house of the Lord, the God of Israel; he is the God that is in Jerusalem.

4 And let all the rest, in all places, wheresoever they dwell, help him every man from his place, with silver and gold, and goods, and cattle, besides that which they offer freely to the temple of God, which is in Jerusalem.

5 Then rose up the chief of the fathers of Juda and Benjamin, and the priests, and Levites, and every one whose spirit God had raised up, to go up to build the temple of the Lord, which was in Jerusalem.

• A. M. 3463, A. C. 536. 2 Par. xxxvi. 22; Jer. xxv. 12, and xxix. 10; Isa. xlv. 28, and xlv. 1.

CHAP. I. VER. 1. In. Heb. "And, (C.) or But in," as 2 Par. xxxvi. 22. H.—Thus the historical works are connected.—First. The design was put in execution only in the following year. A. 3468.—Cyrus (Heb. coross, (H.) or Koresch) means "the sun," according to Ctesias and Plutarch. Josephus (xi. 1) informs us that this prince became a friend to the Jews, in consequence of having seen the prediction of Isaias (xlv. 28, and xlv. 1) fulfilled in his own person. He took Babylon, A. 3466, and established the Persian empire, which was subverted by Alexander. C.—He had before ruled over Persia twenty-seven years, and only reigned three as sole monarch at Babylon. T.—The Lord; every good motion, even in infidels, proceeds from him. D.—Cyrus was one of the best and greatest conquerors of antiquity. He was the son of Cambyzes, by Mandane, princess of Media. Xenophon informs us that he died in his bed (H.); and had been lately conquered. T.

VER. 2. Earth, which had belonged to the king of Babylon. H.—This may be an hyperbole, or an allusion to Isa. xlv. 1. M.—The dominions of Cyrus were very extensive, (Xenophon, Cyrop. i. and viii.,) reaching from Ethiopia to the Euxine Sea, &c. He acknowledges that he received all from the hand of God.—House, or temple. Isa. xlv. 28.—Judea. So the Sept. read, but the Heb. has "Juda," all along. The whole country now began to be known by the former name. H.

VER. 4. Rest, who do not please to return. The Jews went at different times, and under the different leaders, Zorobabel, Esdras, and Nehemias. Many did not return at all. Cyrus allows them full liberty. He permits money to be exported, particularly the half shele, required Exod. xxx. 13, and all voluntary contributions for the temple. Grotius. C.—He also enjoins the prefects of the provinces, (ver. 6, and chap. iii. 7,) whom Josephus styles "the king's friends," to forward the work; and he even designed to perfect it at his own expense. Chap. vi. 4.

VER. 8. Gazabaz means, "the treasurer." Heb. Syr. C. Prot. 3 Esd. ii. 10. H.—Son is not in Heb., &c., (M.) and must be omitted. T.—Sassabasar. This was another name for Zorobabel, (Ch.) given by the Chaldees, as they changed the name of Daniel into Baltassar. Euseb. Præp. Evan. xi. 3. T.—But

6 And all they that were round about, helped their hands with vessels of silver, and gold, with goods, and with beasts, and with furniture, besides what they had offered on their own accord.

7 And king Cyrus brought forth the vessels of the temple of the Lord, which Nabuchodonosor had taken from Jerusalem, and had put them in the temple of his god.

8 Now Cyrus, king of Persia, brought them forth by the hand of Mithridates, the son of Gazabar, and numbered them to Sassabasar, the prince of Juda.

9 And this is the number of them: thirty bowls of gold, a thousand bowls of silver, nine and twenty knives, thirty cups of gold,

10 Silver cups of a second sort, four hundred and ten: other vessels, a thousand.

11 All the vessels of gold and silver, five thousand four hundred. All these, Sassabasar brought with them that came up from the captivity of Babylon to Jerusalem.

CHAP. II.

The number of them that returned to Judea: their oblations.

NOW these are the children of the province, that went out of the captivity, which Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, had carried away to Babylon, and who returned to Jerusalem and Juda, every man to his city:

• 2 Esd. vii. 6.

others think that this was the Persian "governor (Junius) of Judea," (3 Esd.) as one resided at Jerusalem till the days of Nehemias. 2 Esd. v. 14.

VER. 9. Knives. Sept., &c., "changes" of garments. C.

VER. 10. Sort. Sept. and Syr. "double;" yet of less value. C.—As no first sort had been mentioned, and some Latin MSS. read 2410, agreeably to 3 Esd. ii. 12, and the truth, (Hallet,) it may be inferred that "thousands" were expressed anciently by single letters, with a dot . . over them." Afterwards, when numbers were expressed by words at length, the b being thus reduced to signify "two," was, of course, written ssnim; but this word making nonsense with the following, has been since changed into mosnim, a word not very agreeable to the sense here, and which leaves the sum total, now specified in the Heb. text, very deficient for want of the 2000, thus omitted. Kennicott, Dis. 2.—Josephus has, "30 golden cups, 2400 of silver." H.

VER. 11. Hundred. Only 2499 are specified. 3 Esd. reads 5469. Josephus (xi. 1) differs from all, reading 5210; which shows that the copies have varied, and that the Heb. is incorrect. C.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. Now, this catalogue is given again, 2 Esd. vii. 6, and 3 Esd. v. 7. These three catalogues vary considerably, not only in the proper names, but also in the numbers, (H.) though they must have been the same originally, and still give the same total, 42,360. We cannot find that number at present by above 8400. In many cases the disagreement consists of a single unit, hundred, &c., which may lead us to suspect that the Palmyrene, or the more ancient Sidonian notation, may have been adopted in some Heb. MSS., being used about the time of Christ. See Swinton's Tables, (Phil. Trans. xlviii. and l.,) where the Sidonian coins express the units by small perpendicular strokes; and the Palmyrene inscriptions only admit four of these together, having an arbitrary mark for 5: "the hundreds and units after the tens, are expressed in both, in the same manner as the single units." Kennicott, 2 Diss.—Cordell (MS. note on this author) disapproves of this mode of correcting, and says that the females are included in the total sum, being 12,542, not recorded in the separate sums. But this number seems too small, as there are generally as many of that sex as of the other. H.—Some find the total 31,583, which leaves 10,777 wanting to complete 42,360, as these could not make out their genealogies, or were of the ten tribes. In this chapter only 29,818 are specified, whereas 2 Esd. vii. has 31,089; the latter reckons 1765 unnoticed by Esdras, who has 494 not specified in Nehemias. The difference, that seems to make a reconciliation impossible, is what makes these authors agree; for if you add the surplus of each to the other, the same total, 31,583, will arise. Altng. Ep. 59. This solution, though ingenious, is not solid or satisfactory. Rondet, t. v. p. 176.—De Vence rather thinks that the difference is to be laid to the charge of transcribers, or that some people enrolled themselves after the registers had been made up; so that they are only included in the general sum. H. The list given 1 Par. ix. 4, comprises only those who came first from Babylon. C.—After this remark, it will hardly be requisite to specify all the variations of names and numbers. H.—“For what can be hence inferred, but that there are some arithmetical mistakes in Scripture, which no one denies?” Huet.—“Almost all who are conversant with ancient copies, agree in the decision of S. Jerom, as they cannot but perceive that some variations have crept in, particularly with respect to numbers and proper names.” Walton.—Juda now is used to denote Judea. H.

VER. 2. Zorobabel was the prince, Josue the high priest. C.—There are twelve mentioned in 2 and 3 Esd. But here the sixth, Nahamani, or Enenion, is omitted. H.—They represented the twelve tribes, (Kennicott,) and were chiefs. M.—It is wonderful that Esdras is not here mentioned, as well as Nehemias, who led a company after him, many of whom are here recorded. C.

VER. 29. Nebo. 2 Esd. (vii. 33) adds, “of the other Nebo,” as in some Latin copies a first had been mentioned, (ver. 30,) where we have Geba, (C.) here written Gabaa, ver. 26. H.—Nebo belonged to some of the other tribes, as well as Phahath-Moab; which shows that some of the people returned, (C.) and are particularized, as well as the men of the three tribes of Juda, Benjamin, and Levi. 68 And some of the chief of the fathers, when they came to the temple of the Lord, which is in Jerusalem, offered freely to the house of the Lord to build it in its place.

69 According to their ability, they gave towards the expenses of the work, sixty-one thousand solids of gold, five thousand pounds of silver, and a hundred garments for the priests.

An altar is built for sacrifice, the feast of tabernacles is solemnly celebrated, and the foundations of the temple are laid.

AND now the seventh month was come, and the children of Israel were in their cities: and the people gathered themselves together as one man to Jerusalem.

2 And Josue, the son of Josedec, rose up, and his brethren, the priests, and Zorobabel, the son of Salathiel, and his brethren, and they built the altar of the God of Israel, that they might offer holocausts upon it: as it is written in the law of Moses, the man of God.

3 And they set the altar of God upon its bases, while the people of the lands, round about, put them in fear, and they offered upon it a holocaust to the Lord, morning and evening:

4 And they kept the feast of the tabernacles, as it is written, and offered the holocaust every day orderly, according to the commandment, the duty of the day in its day.

5 And afterwards the continual holocaust, both on the new moons, and on all the solemnities of the Lord, that were consecrated, and on all in which a free-will offering was made to the Lord.

6 From the first day of the seventh month they began to offer holocausts to the Lord: but the temple of God was not yet founded.

7 And they gave money to hewers of stones and to masons: and meat and drink, and oil to the Sidonians and Tyrians, to bring cedar-trees from Libanus to the sea of Joppe, according to the orders which Cyrus, king of the Persians, had given them.

8 And in the second year of their coming to the temple of God in Jerusalem, the second month, Zorobabel, the son of Salathiel, and Josue, the son of Josedec, and the rest of their brethren, the priests and Levites, and all that were come from the captivity to Jerusalem began, and they appointed Levites, from twenty years old and upward, to hasten forward the work of the Lord.

10 And when the masons laid the foundations of the temple of the Lord, the priests stood in their ornaments with trumpets: and the Levites, the sons of Asaph, with cymbals, to praise God by the hands of David, king of Israel.

11 And they sung together hymns, and praise to the Lord: because he is good, for his mercy endureth for ever towards Israel. And all the people shouted with a great shout, praising the Lord, because the foundations of the temple of the Lord were laid.

12 But many of the priests and the Levites, and the chief of the fathers and the ancients, that had seen the former temple; when they had the foundation of this temple before their eyes, wept with a loud voice: and many shouting for joy, lifted up their voice.

13 So that one could not distinguish the voice of the shout of joy, from the noise of the weeping of the people: for one with another the people shouted with a loud shout, and the voice was heard afar off.

CHAP. IV.

The Samaritans, by their letter to the king, hinder the building.

NOW *the enemies of Juda and Benjamiñ heard that the children of the captivity were building a temple to the Lord, the God of Israel.

2 And they came to Zorobabel, and the chief of the fathers, and said to them: Let us build with you, for we seek your God as ye do: behold we have sacrificed to him, since the days of Asor Haddan, king of Assyria, who brought us hither.

3 But Zorobabel and Josue, and the rest of the chief of the fathers of Israel, said to them: You have nothing to do with us to build a house to our God, but we ourselves, alone, will build to the Lord, our God, as Cyrus, king of the Persians, hath commanded us.

13 And now be it known to the king, that if this city be built up, and the walls thereof repaired, they will not pay tribute nor toll, nor yearly revenues, and this loss will fall upon the kings.

16 We certify the king, that if this city be built, and the walls thereof repaired, thou shalt have no possession on this side of the river.

17 The king sent word to Reum Beelteem, and Samsai, the scribe, and to the rest that were in their council, inhabitants of Samaria, and to the rest beyond the river, sending greeting and peace.

18 The accusation, which you have sent to us, hath been plainly read before me;

19 And I commanded: and search hath been made, and it is found, that this city of old times hath rebelled against kings, and seditions and wars have been raised therein.

20 For there have been powerful kings in Jerusalem, who have had dominion over all the country that is beyond the river: and have received tribute, and toll, and revenues.

21 Now, therefore, hear the sentence: Hinder those men, that this city be not built, till further orders be given by me.

22 See that you be not negligent in executing this, lest by little and little the evil grow to the hurt of the kings.

23 Now the copy of the edict of king Artaxerxes was read before Reum Beelteem, and Samsai, the scribe, and their counsellors: and they went up in haste to Jerusalem to the Jews, and hindered them with arm and power.

24 Then the work of the house of the Lord in Jerusalem was interrupted, and ceased till the second year of the reign of Darius, king of the Persians.

CHAP. V.

By the exhortation of Aggeus, and Zacharias, the people proceed in building the temple: which their enemies strive in vain to hinder

NOW Aggeus, the prophet, and Zacharias, the son of Addo, prophesied to the Jews that were in Judea and Jerusalem, in the name of the God of Israel.

2 Then rose up Zorobabel, the son of Salathiel, and Josue, the son of Josedec, and began to build the temple of God in Jerusalem, and with them were the prophets of God helping them.

3 And at the same time came to them, Thathanai, who was governor beyond the river, and Stharbuzanai, and their counsellors: and said thus to them: Who hath given you counsel to build this house, and to repair the walls thereof?

4 In answer to which we gave them the names of the men who were the promoters of that building.

5 But the eye of their God was upon the ancients of the Jews, and they could not hinder them. And it was agreed, that the matter should be referred to Darius, and then they should give satisfaction concerning that accusation.

6 The copy of the letter that Thathanai, governor of the country beyond the river, and Stharbuzanai, and his counsellors, the Arpharsachites, who dwelt beyond the river, sent to Darius, the king.

7 The letter which they sent him, was written thus. To Darius, the king, all peace.

8 Be it known to the king, that we went to the province of Judea, to the house of the great God, which they are building with unpolished stones; and timber is laid in the walls: and this work is carried on diligently, and advanceth in their hands.

9 And we asked those ancients, and said to them thus: Who hath given you authority to build this house, and to repair these walls?

10 We asked also of them their names, that we might give thee notice: and we have written the names of the men that are the chief among them.

11 And they answered us in these words, saying: We are the servants of the God of heaven and earth, and we are building a temple that was built these many years ago, and which a great king of Israel built and set up.

12 But after that our fathers had provoked the God of heaven to wrath, he delivered them into the hands of Nabuchodonosor, the king of Babylon, the Chaldean: and he destroyed this house, and carried away the people to Babylon.

13 But in the first year of Cyrus, the king of Babylon, king Cyrus set forth a decree, that this house of God should be built.

14 And the vessels also of gold and silver of the temple of God, which Nabuchodonosor had taken out of the temple, that was in Jerusalem, and had brought them to the temple of Babylon, king Cyrus brought out of the temple of Babylon, and they were delivered to one Sassabasar, whom also he appointed governor,

15 And said to him: Take these vessels, and go, and put them in the temple that is in Jerusalem, and let the house of God be built in its place.

The work was hereupon resumed without any fresh order from the king; as the edicts of the usurper, Oropastes, were considered as null, and the Jews only answer the governor, that they had ations of the temple of God in Jerusalem, and from that time, until now, it is in building, and is not yet finished.

17 Now, therefore, if it seem good to the king, let him search in the king's library, which is in Babylon, whether it hath been decreed by Cyrus, the king, that the house of God, in Jerusalem, should be built, and let the king send his pleasure to us concerning this matter.

CHAP. VI.

King Darius favoureth the building, and contributeth to it.

THEN ^aking Darius gave orders, and they searched in the library of the books that were laid up in Babylon.

2 And there was found in Ecbatana, which is a castle in the province of Media, a book in which this record was written.

3 In the first year of Cyrus, the king: Cyrus, the king, decreed, that the house of God should be built, which is in Jerusalem, in the place where they may offer sacrifices, and that they lay the foundations that may support the height of threescore cubits, and the breadth of threescore cubits,

4 Three rows of unpolished stones, and so rows of new timber: and the charges shall be given out of the king's house.

5 And, also, let the golden and silver vessels of the temple of God, which Nabuchodonosor took out of the temple of Jerusalem, and brought to Babylon, be restored, and carried back to the temple of Jerusalem, to their place, which also were placed in the temple of God.

6 Now, therefore, Thathanai, governor of the country beyond the river, Stharbazanai, and your counsellors, the Arpharsachites, who are beyond the river, depart far from them,

7 And let that temple of God be built by the governor of the Jews, and by their ancients, that they may build that house of God in its place.

8 I also have commanded what must be done by those ancients of the Jews, that the house of God may be built, to wit, that of the king's chest, that is, of the tribute that is paid out of the country beyond the river, the charges be diligently given to those men, lest the work be hindered.

9 And if it shall be necessary, let calves, also, and lambs, and kids, for holocausts to the God of heaven, wheat, salt, wine, and oil, according to the custom of the priests that are in Jerusalem, be given them day by day, that there be no complaint in any thing.

CHAP. VII.

Esdras goeth up to Jerusalem, to teach and assist the people, with a gracious decree of Artaxerxes.

NOW ^aafter these things, in the reign of Artaxerxes, king of the Persians, Esdras, the son of Saraias, the son of Azarias, the son of Helcias,

2 The son of Sellum, the son of Sadoc, the son of Achitob,

3 The son of Amarias, the son of Azarias, the son of Maraioth,

4 The son of Zarahias, the son of Ozi, the son of Bocci,

5 The son of Abisue, the son of Phinees, the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron, the priest, from the beginning.

6 This Esdras went up from Babylon, and he was a ready scribe in the law of Moses, which the Lord God had given to Israel: and the king granted him all his request, according to the hand of the Lord, his God, upon him.

7 And there went up some of the children of Israel, and of the children of the priests, and of the singing men, and of the porters, and of the Nathinites, to Jerusalem, in the seventh year ^b of Artaxerxes, the king.

8 And they came to Jerusalem in the fifth month, in the seventh year of the king.

9 For upon the first day of the first month he began to go up from Babylon, and on the first day of the fifth month he came to Jerusalem, according to the good hand of his God upon him.

10 For Esdras had prepared his heart to seek the law of the Lord, and to do and to teach, in Israel, the commandments and judgment.

11 And this is the copy of the letter of the edict, which king Artaxerxes gave to Esdras, the priest, the scribe, instructed in the words and commandments of the Lord, and his ceremonies, in Israel.

12 Artaxerxes, king of kings, to Esdras, the priest, the most learned scribe of the law of the God of heaven, greeting.

13 It is decreed by me, that all they of the people of Israel, and of the priests, and of the Levites, in my realm, that are minded to go into Jerusalem, should go with thee.

14 For thou art sent from before the king, and his seven counsellors, to visit Judea and Jerusalem, according to the law of thy God, which is in thy hand.

15 And to carry the silver and gold, which the king and his counsellors have freely offered to the God of Israel, whose tabernacle is in Jerusalem.

16 And all the silver and gold that thou shalt find in all the province of Babylon, and that the people is willing to offer, and that the priests shall offer of their own accord to the house of their God, which is in Jerusalem,

17 Take freely, and buy diligently with this money, calves, rams, lambs, with the sacrifices and libations of them, and offer them upon the altar of the temple of your God, that is in Jerusalem.

18 And if it seem good to thee, and to thy brethren, to do any thing with the rest of the silver and gold, do it according to the will of your God.

19 The vessels, also, that are given thee for the sacrifice of the house of thy God, deliver thou in the sight of God in Jerusalem.

20 And whatsoever more there shall be need of for the house of thy God, how much soever thou shalt have occasion to spend, it shall be given out of the treasury, and the king's exchequer, and by me.

21 I, Artaxerxes, the king, have ordered and decreed to all the keepers of the public chest, that are beyond the river, that whatsoever Esdras, the priest, the scribe of the law of the God of heaven, shall require of you, you give it without delay,

22 Unto a hundred talents of silver, and unto a hundred cores of wheat, and unto a hundred bates of wine, and unto a hundred bates of oil, and salt, without measure.

23 All that belongeth to the rights of the God of heaven, let it be given diligently in the house of the God of heaven: lest his wrath should be enkindled against the realm of the king, and of his sons.

24 We give you also to understand, concerning all the priests, and the Levites, and the singers, and the porters, and the Nathinites, and ministers of the house of this God, that you have no authority to impose toll, or tribute, or custom, upon them.

15 And I gathered them together to the river, which runneth down to Ahava, and we stayed there three days: and I sought among the people, and among the priests for the sons of Levi, and found none there.

16 So I sent Eliezer, and Ariel, and Semeias, and Elnathan, and Jarib, and another Elnathan, and Nathan, and Zacharias, and Mosollam, chief men: and Joiarib, and Elnathan, wise men.

17 And I sent them to Eddo, who is chief in the place of Chasphia, and I put in their mouth the words that they should speak to Eddo, and his brethren, the Nathinites, in the place of Chasphia, that they should bring us ministers of the house of our God.

18 And by the good hand of our God upon us, they brought us a most learned man of the sons of Moheli, the son of Levi, the son of Israel, and Sarabias, and his sons, and his brethren, eighteen.

19 And Hasabias, and with him Isaias, of the sons of Merari, and his brethren, and his sons, twenty.

21 And I proclaimed there a fast by the river Ahava, that we might afflict ourselves before the Lord, our God, and might ask of him a right way for us, and for our children, and for all our substance.

22 For I was ashamed to ask the king for aid, and for horsemen, to defend us from the enemy in the way: because we had said to the king: The hand of our God is upon all them that seek him in goodness: and his power and strength, and wrath, upon all them that forsake him.

23 And we fasted, and besought our God for this: and it fell out prosperously unto us.

24 And I separated twelve of the chief of the priests, Sarabias, and Hasabias, and with them ten of their brethren.

25 And I weighed unto them the silver and gold, and the vessels consecrated for the house of our God, which the king and his counsellors, and his princes, and all Israel, that were found, had offered.

26 And I weighed to their hands six hundred and fifty talents of silver, and a hundred vessels of silver, and hundred talents of gold,

27 And twenty cups of gold, of a thousand solids, and two vessels of the best shining brass, beautiful as gold.

29 Watch ye, and keep them, till you deliver them by weight before the chief of the priests, and of the Levites, and the heads of the families of Israel, in Jerusalem, into the treasure of the house of the Lord.

30 And the priests, and the Levites, received the weight of the silver and gold, and the vessels, to carry them to Jerusalem, to the house of our God.

31 Then we set forward from the river Ahava, on the twelfth day of the first month, to go to Jerusalem: and the hand of our God was upon us, and delivered us from the hand of the enemy, and of such as lay in wait by the way.

32 And we came to Jerusalem, and we stayed there three days.

33 And on the fourth day the silver, and the gold, and the vessels, were weighed in the house of our God, by the hand of Mereimoth, the son of Urias, the priest; and with him was Eleazar, the son of Phinees, and with them Jozabad, the son of Josue, and Noadaia, the son of Bennoi, Levites.

34 According to the number and weight of every thing: and all the weight was written at that time.

35 Moreover, the children of them that had been carried away, that were come out of the captivity, offered holocausts to the God of Israel, twelve calves for all the people of Israel, ninety-six rams, seventy-seven lambs, and twelve he-goats, for sin: all for a holocaust to the Lord.

36 And they gave the king's edicts to the lords that were from the king's court, and the governors beyond the river, and they furthered the people and the house of God.

CHAP. IX.

Esdra mourneth for the transgression of the people: his confession and prayer.

AND^a after these things were accomplished, the princes came to me, saying: The people of Israel, and the priests, and Levites, have not separated themselves from the people of the lands, and from their abominations, namely, of the Chanaanites, and the Hethites, and the Pherezites, and the Jebusites, and the Ammonites, and the Moabites, and the Egyptians, and the Amorrites.

2 For they have taken of their daughters for themselves, and for their sons, and they have mingled the holy seed with the people of the lands. And the hand of the princes and magistrates hath been first in this transgression.

3 And when I had heard this word, I rent my mantle and my coat, and plucked off the hairs of my head and my beard, and I sat down mourning.

4 And there were assembled to me all that feared the God of Israel, because of the transgression of those, that were come from the captivity, and I sat sorrowful, until the evening sacrifice.

5 And at the evening sacrifice I rose up from my affliction, and having rent my mantle and my garment, I fell upon my knees, and spread out my hands to the Lord, my God,

6 And said: My God, I am confounded and ashamed to lift up my face to thee: for our iniquities are multiplied over our heads, and our sins are grown up even unto heaven,

7 From the days of our fathers: and we ourselves, also, have sinned grievously unto this day, and for our iniquities we, and our kings, and our priests, have been delivered into the hands of the kings of the lands, and to the sword, and to captivity, and to spoil, and to confusion of face, as it is at this day.

8 And now as a little, and, for a moment, has our prayer been made before the Lord, our God, to leave us a remnant, and give us a pin in his holy place, and that our God would enlighten our eyes, and would give us a little life in our bondage.

9 For we are bondmen, and in our bondage our God hath not forsaken us, but hath extended mercy upon us before the king of the Persians, to give us life, and to set up the house of our God, and to rebuild the desolations thereof, and to give us a fence in Juda and Jerusalem.

10 And now, O our God, what shall we say after this? for we have forsaken thy commandments,

11 Which thou hast commanded by the hand of thy servants, the prophets, saying: The land which you go to possess, is an unclean land, according to the uncleanness of the people, and of other lands, with their abominations, who have filled it from mouth to mouth with their filth.

12 ^bNow, therefore, give not your daughters to their sons, and take not their daughters for your sons, and seek not their peace, nor their prosperity for ever; that you may be strengthened, and may eat the good things of the land, and may have your children your heirs for ever.

15 O Lord God of Israel, thou art just: for we remain yet to be saved, as at this day. Behold we are before thee in our sin, for there can be no standing before thee in this manner.

CHAP. X.

Order is taken for discharging strange women: the names of the guilty.

NOW^a when Esdras was thus praying, and beseeching, and weeping, and lying before the temple of God, there was gathered to him of Israel an exceedingly great assembly of men and women, and children, and the people wept with much lamentation.

2 And Sechenias, the son of Jehiel, of the sons of Elam, answered, and said to Esdras: We have sinned against our God, and have taken strange wives of the people of the land: and now, if there be repentance in Israel concerning this,

3 Let us make a covenant with the Lord, our God, to put away all the wives, and such as are born of them, according to the will of the Lord, and of them that fear the commandment of the Lord, our God: let it be done according to the law.

4 Arise, it is thy part to give orders, and we will be with thee: take courage, and do it.

5 So Esdras arose, and made the chiefs of the priests and of the Levites, and all Israel, to swear that they would do according to this word; and they swore.

6 And Esdras rose up from before the house of God, and went to the chamber of Johanan, the son of Eliasib, and entered in thither, he eat no bread, and drank no water: for he mourned for the transgression of them that were come out of the captivity.

7 And proclamation was made in Juda, and Jerusalem, to all the children of the captivity, that they should assemble together into Jerusalem.

8 And that whosoever would not come within three days, according to the counsel of the princes, and the ancients, all his substance should be taken away, and he should be cast out of the company of them that were returned from captivity.

9 Then all the men of Juda, and Benjamin, gathered themselves together to Jerusalem within three days, in the ninth month, the twentieth day of the month: and all the people sat in the street of the house of God, trembling, because of the sin, and the rain.

10 And Esdras, the priest, stood up, and said to them: You have transgressed, and taken strange wives, to add to the sins of Israel.

11 And now make confession to the Lord, the God of your fathers, and do his pleasure, and separate yourselves from the people of the land, and from your strange wives.

12 And all the multitude answered, and said with a loud voice: According to thy word unto us, so be it done.

13 But as the people are many, and it is time of rain, and we are not able to stand without, and it is not a work of one day or two, (for we have exceedingly sinned in this matter,)

14 Let rulers be appointed in all the multitude: and in all our cities, let them that have taken strange wives come at the times appointed, and with them the ancients, and the judges of every city, until the wrath of our God be turned away from us for this sin.

15 Then Jonathan, the son of Azahel, and Jaasia, the son of Thecua, were appointed over this, and Mosollam and Sebethai, Levites, helped them.

16 And the children of the captivity did so. And Esdras, the priest, and the men, heads of the families in the houses of their fathers, and all by their names, went and sat down, in the first day of the month, to examine the matter.

17 And they made an end with all the men that had taken strange wives, by the first day of the first month.

18 And there was found among the sons of the priests, that had taken strange wives: Of the sons of Josue, the son of Josedec, and his brethren, Maasia, and Eliezer, and Jarib, and Godolia.

19 And they gave their hands to put away their wives, and to offer for their offence a ram of the flock.

THE

BOOK OF NEHEMIAS;

COMMONLY CALLED,

THE SECOND OF ESDRAS.

This book takes its name from the writer, who was cup-bearer to Artaxerxes, (surnamed Longimanus.) king of Persia, and was sent by him with a commission to rebuild the walls of Jerusalem. It is also called the Second Book of Esdras, because it is a continuation of the history begun by Esdras, of the state of the people of God after their return from captivity. Ch.—Genebrard believes that the latter wrote the work. But how long must he thus have lived? and how come the lists to vary so much? C.—We may allow that these variations are owing to the mistakes of transcribers, (1 Esd. ii. 1.) for the writer of both works was certainly inspired. Esdras lived a long time along with Nehemias (chap. xii. 35); and he may have left memorials, as well as the latter, from which the present work seems to be compiled. H.—Some additions have been made since the days of Nehemias, particularly chap. xii. to ver. 26, or at least (C.) the five last of these verses. Capel. Chron.—The passage cited from the commentaries of Nehemias, (2 Mac. ii. 13,) is not to be found here; which shows that we have not his entire work, but only an abridgment, in which the author has adopted his words, with some few alterations. The fifth chapter seems to be out of its place, and also the dedication of the walls, chap. xii. 27. Nehemias was a person in great favour at the court of Persia; and of high birth, probably of the royal family, (Euseb., Isid., Genebrard in Chron.,) as most of the ancients believe that all who governed, till the time of the Asmoneans, were of the tribe of Juda. Hence he styles Hanani his brother, (chap. i. 2) and declines entering into the temple, chap. vi. 11. His name never occurs among the priests; and though we read, 2 Mac. i. 18, 21, jussit sacerdos Nehemias, (T.) the Greek has, "Nehemias ordered the priests;" ἑπέτιν. C. Huet. D. Nehemias, by order of Artaxerxes, and notwithstanding the obstructions of the enemies of Juda, rebuilt the walls of Jerusalem, and returned after twelve years to court, making a second visit to his own country a little before the death of the king, whom he probably survived only one year, dying A. 3580, about thirty years after he had been appointed governor. C.—In the first two chapters we behold his solicitude for the welfare of his country, in the ten following, his success, and in the last, what abuses he corrected. W.—He renewed the covenant with God, (chap. ix. and x.,) sent for the sacred fire, and established a library at Jerusalem. 2 Mac. i. 19, 34, and ii. 13. H.

Nehemias, hearing of the miserable state of his countrymen in Judea, lamenteth, fasteth, and prayeth to God for their relief.

Jerusalem is broken down, and the gates thereof are burnt with fire

4 And when I had heard these words, I sat down, and wept, and mourned for many days: and I fasted, and prayed before the face of the God of heaven.

5 And I said: *I beseech thee, O Lord God of heaven, strong, great, and terrible, who keepest covenant and mercy with those that love thee, and keep thy commandments:

6 Let thy ears be attentive, and thy eyes open, to hear the prayer of thy servant, which I pray before thee now, night and day, for the children of Israel, thy servants: and I confess the sins of the children of Israel, by which they have sinned against thee: I and my father's house have sinned.

7 We have been seduced by vanity, and have not kept thy commandments, and ceremonies, and judgments, which thou hast commanded thy servant, Moses.

8 Remember the word that thou commandest to Moses, thy servant, saying: If you shall transgress, I will scatter you abroad among the nations:

9 But if you return to me, and keep my commandments, and do them, though you should be led away to the uttermost parts of the world, I will gather you from thence, and bring you back to the place which I have chosen for my name to dwell there.

10 And these are thy servants, and thy people: whom thou hast redeemed by thy great strength, and by thy mighty hand.

11 I beseech thee, O Lord, let thy ear be attentive to the prayer of thy servant, and to the prayer of thy servants, who desire to fear thy name: and direct thy servant this day, and give him mercy before this man. For I was the king's cup-bearer.

sad, seeing thou dost not appear to be sick? this is not without cause, but some evil, I know not what, is in thy heart. And I was seized with an exceedingly great fear:

3 And I said to the king: O king, live for ever: why should not my countenance be sorrowful, seeing the city of the place of the sepulchres of my fathers is desolate, and the gates thereof are burnt with fire?

4 Then the king said to me: For what doest thou make request? And I prayed to the God of heaven.

5 And I said to the king: If it seem good to the king, and if thy servant hath found favour in thy sight, that thou wouldst send me into Judea, to the city of the sepulchre of my father, and I will build it.

6 And the king said to me, and the queen that sat by him: For how long shall thy journey be, and when wilt thou return? And it pleased the king, and he sent me and I fixed him a time.

7 And I said to the king: If it seem good to the king, let him give me letters to the governors of the country beyond the river, that they convey me over, till I come into Judea:

8 And a letter to Asaph, the keeper of the king's forest, to give me timber, that I may cover the gates of the tower of the house, and the walls of the city, and the house that I shall enter into. And the king gave me according to the good hand of my God with me.

9 And I came to the governors of the country beyond the river, and gave them the king's letters. And the king had sent with me captains of soldiers, and horsemen.

10 And Sanaballat, the Horonite, and Tobias, the servant, the Ammonite, heard it, and it grieved them exceedingly, that a man was come, who sought the prosperity of the children of Israel.

11 And I came to Jerusalem, and was there three days.

12 And I arose in the night, I and some few men with me, and I told not any man what God had put in my heart to do in Jerusalem, and there was no beast with me, but the beast that I rode upon.

13 And I went out by night, by the gate of the valley, and before the dragon-fountain, and to the dung-gate, and I viewed the wall of Jerusalem, which was broken down, and the gates thereof, which were consumed with fire.

It may designate the porch of the temple, which was 120 cubits high (2 Par. iii. 4. C.); though that had been lately repaired by Esdras. 14 And I passed to the gate of the fountain, and to the king's aqueduct, and there was no place for the beast on which I rode to pass.

15 And I went up in the night by the torrent, and viewed the wall, and going back, I came to the gate of the valley, and returned.

16 But the magistrates knew not whither I went, or what I did: neither had I as yet told any thing to the Jews, or to the priests, or to the nobles, or to the magistrates, or to the rest that did the work.

17 Then I said to them: You know the affliction wherein we are, because Jerusalem is desolate, and the gates thereof are consumed with fire: come, and let us build up the walls of Jerusalem, and let us be no longer a reproach.

18 And I showed them how the hand of my God was good with me, and the king's words, which he had spoken to me, and I said: Let us rise up, and build. And their hands were strengthened in good.

19 But Sanaballat, the Horonite, and Tobias, the servant, the Ammonite, and Gossem, the Arabian, heard of it, and they scoffed at us and despised us, and said: What is this thing that you do? are you going to rebel against the king?

20 And I answered them, and said to them: The God of heaven he helpeth us, and we are his servants: let us rise up and build: but you have no part, nor justice, nor remembrance in Jerusalem.

7 And next to them built Meltias, the Gabaonite, and Jadon, the Meronathite, the men of Gabaon and Maspha, for the governor that was in the country beyond the river.

AND* it came to pass, that when Sanaballat heard that we were building the wall, he was angry: and being moved exceedingly, he scoffed at the Jews.

2 And said before his brethren, and the multitude of the Samaritans: What are the silly Jews doing? Will the Gentiles let them alone? will they sacrifice and make an end in a day? are they able to raise stones out of the heaps of the rubbish, which are burnt?

3 Tobias also, the Ammonite, who was by him, said: Let them build: if a fox go up, he will leap over their stone wall.

4 Hear thou, our God, for we are despised: turn their reproach upon their own head, and give them to be despised in a land of captivity.

5 Cover not their iniquity, and let not their sin be blotted out from before thy face, because they have mocked thy builders.

6 So we built the wall, and joined it all together unto the half thereof: and the heart of the people was excited to work.

7 And it came to pass, when Sanaballat, and Tobias, and the Arabians, and the Ammonites, and the Azotians, heard that the walls of Jerusalem were made up, and the breaches began to be closed, that they were exceedingly angry.

8 And they all assembled themselves together, to come, and to fight against Jerusalem, and to prepare ambushes.

9 And we prayed to our God, and set watchmen upon the wall day and night against them.

10 And Juda said: The strength of the bearer of burdens is decayed, and the rubbish is very much, and we shall not be able to build the wall.

11 And our enemies said: Let them not know, nor understand, till we come in the midst of them, and kill them, and cause the work to cease.

12 And it came to pass, that when the Jews that dwelt by them, came and told us ten times, out of all the places from whence they came to us, 13 I set the people in the place behind the wall round about in order, with their swords, and spears, and bows.

14 And I looked and rose up: and I said to the chief men and the magistrates, and to the rest of the common people: Be not afraid of them. Remember the Lord, who is great and terrible, and fight for your brethren, your sons, and your daughters, and your wives, and your houses.

15 And it came to pass, when our enemies heard that the thing had been told us, that God defeated their counsel. And we returned all of us to the walls, every man to his work.

16 And it came to pass from that day forward, that half of their young men did the work, and half were ready for to fight, with spears, and shields, and bows, and coats of mail, and the rulers were behind them in all the house of Juda.

17 Of them that built on the wall, and that carried burdens, and that laded: with one of his hands he did the work, and with the other he held a sword.

18 For every one of the builders was girded with a sword about his reins. And they built, and sounded with a trumpet by me.

19 And I said to the nobles, and to the magistrates, and to the rest of the common people: The work is great and wide, and we are separated on the wall, one far from another:

20 In what place soever you shall hear the sound of the trumpet, run all thither unto us: our God will fight for us.

21 And let us do the work: and let one half of us hold our spears from the rising of the morning, till the stars appear.

22 At that time, also, I said to the people: Let every one with his servant stay in the midst of Jerusalem, and let us take our turns, in the night, and by day, to work.

23 Now I and my brethren, and my servants, and the watchmen, that followed me, did not put off our clothes: only every man stript himself when he was to be washed.

5 And now our flesh is as the flesh of our brethren: and our children as their children. Behold we bring into bondage our sons, and our daughters; and some of our daughters are bond-women already, neither have we wherewith to redeem them, and our fields and our vineyards other men possess.

6 And I was exceedingly angry, when I heard their cry according to these words.

7 And my heart thought with myself: and I rebuked the nobles and magistrates, and said to them: Do you every one exact usury of your brethren? And I gathered together a great assembly against them,

8 And I said to them: We, as you know, have redeemed, according to our ability, our brethren, the Jews, that were sold to the Gentiles: and will you then sell your brethren, for us to redeem them? And they held their peace, and found not what to answer.

9 And I said to them: The thing you do is not good: why walk you not in the fear of our God, that we be not exposed to the reproaches of the Gentiles, our enemies?

10 Both I and my brethren, and my servants, have lent money and corn to many: let us all agree not to call for it again; let us forgive the debt that is owing to us.

11 Restore ye to them this day their fields, and their vineyards, and their oliveyards, and their houses: and the hundredth part of the money, and of the corn, the wine, and the oil, which you were wont to exact of them, give it rather for them.

12 And they said: We will restore, and we will require nothing of them: and we will do so as thou sayest. And I called the priests, and took an oath of them, to do according to what I had said.

13 Moreover, I shook my lap, and said: So may God shake every man that shall not accomplish this word, out of his house, and out of his labours: thus may he be shaken out, and become empty. And all the multitude said: Amen. And they praised God. And the people did according to what was said.

14 And from the day, in which the king commanded me to be governor in the land of Juda, from the twentieth year, even to the two and thirtieth year of Artaxerxes, the king, for twelve years, I and my brethren, did not eat the yearly allowance that was due to the governors.

17 The Jews also, and the magistrates, to the number of one hundred fifty men, were at my table, besides them that came to us from among the nations that were round about us.

18 And there was prepared for me, day by day, one ox, and six choice rams, besides fowls, and once in ten days I gave store of divers wines, and many other things: yet I did not require my yearly allowance as governor: for the people were very much impoverished.

The enemies seek to terrify Nehemias. He proceedeth and finisheth the wall.

AND it came to pass, when Sanaballat, and Tobias, and Gossem, the Arabian, and the rest of our enemies, heard that I had built the wall, and that there was no breach left in it, (though at that time I had not set up the doors in the gates,)

2 Sanaballat and Gossem sent to me, saying: Come, and let us make a league together in the villages, in the plain of Ono. But they thought to do me mischief.

4 And they sent to me according to this word, four times: and I answered them after the same manner.

5 And Sanaballat sent his servant to me the fifth time, according to the former word, and he had a letter in his hand, written in this manner:

6 It is reported amongst the Gentiles, and Gossem hath said it, that thou and the Jews think to rebel, and therefore thou buildest the wall, and hast a mind to set thyself king over them: for which end

VER. 7. Prophets. This was false; though, no doubt, the true prophets who lived at that time, would promote the laudable undertakings of Nehemias. H.—To counteract their influence, the enemies hired Semaia and Nodias. Ver. 10 and 14.—Together, that thou mayest clear thyself (Vatab.); or that we may repress these rumours, lest the king should suspect us of any connivance. The first sense appears to be preferable. Nehemias did not take the information as a piece of civility. C.—The enemies left it ambiguous, whether they would not join their forces with his, in case he meant to revolt. M.

will hear of these things: therefore come now, that we may take counsel together.

8 And I sent to them, saying: There is no such thing done as thou sayest: but thou feignest these things out of thy own heart.

9 For all these men thought to frighten us, thinking that our hands would cease from the work, and that we would leave off. Wherefore I strengthened my hands the more:

10 And I went into the house of Semaia, the son of Dalaia, the son of Metabeel, privately. And he said: Let us consult together in the house of God in the midst of the temple: and let us shut the doors of the temple, for they will come to kill thee, and in the night they will come to slay thee.

11 And I said: Should such a man as I flee? and who is there that, being as I am, would go into the temple, to save his life? I will not go in.

12 And I understood that God had not sent him, but that he had spoken to me as if he had been prophesying, and Tobias, and Sanaballat, had hired him.

13 For he had taken money, that I, being afraid, should do this thing, and sin, and they might have some evil to upbraid me withal.

14 Remember me, O Lord, for Tobias and Sanaballat, according to their works of this kind: and Nodias, the prophet, and the rest of the prophets, that would have put me in fear.

15 But the wall was finished the five and twentieth day of the month of Elul, in two and fifty days.

16 And it came to pass, when all our enemies heard of it, that all nations which were round about us, were afraid, and were cast down within themselves, for they perceived that this work was the work of God.

17 Moreover, in those days, many letters were sent by the principal men of the Jews to Tobias; and from Tobias there came letters to them.

18 For there were many in Judea sworn to him, because he was the son-in-law of Sechenias, the son of Area, and Johanan, his son, had taken to wife the daughter of Mosollam, the son of Barachias.

VER. 10. Went, being invited, T.—Semaia, of the twenty-third course of priests. 1 Par. xxiv. 18. M.—Privately. Heb. “who was shut up,” like a recluse, (H.) to deceive the people, by the appearance of superior sanctity, and by an imitation of the true prophets. C.

VER. 11. Should. Lit. “Does one like me retire from his post? And who like me shall enter the temple and live?” H.—It is unlawful for a layman to flee into the part of the temple assigned to the priests. Yet into this he had been invited, as the court of Israel was not perhaps yet secured. Those who suppose that Nehemias was a priest, say (C.) that he refused to flee, lest he should intimidate the people by his cowardly departure. T. M.

VER. 12. Understood, by the nature of the suggestion, and the manner in which he heard the refusal. Aggeus, or some of the true prophets, might also inform him, (C.) or a supernatural light irradiated his mind, unless human sagacity sufficed. T. M.

VER. 15. Elul, the last of the civil year, corresponding with our August and September, when the walls were dedicated. Chap. xii. 27.—Days. Josephus (xi. 5) says, “two years and three (Greek, four) months” (H.) had been spent in perfecting the work. Cajet.—Others date from the reception of the letter. Ver. 5. Vatab.—But the work only lasted the time here specified, as the materials were at hand, and some of the walls were standing, while the rocks defended other parts; and the city was not then so large as it was afterwards. C.—The whole people wrought almost day and night, and Nehemias encouraged them with all his power. T.

VER. 18. Mosollam, one of the builders. Chap. iii. 4. M.—These two powerful men had consequently acted contrary to the laws of God, and the covenant of Esdras, with respect to marriages. They might fear the resentment of the zealous governor.

19 And they praised him also before me, and they related my words to him: and Tobias sent letters to put me in fear.

CHAP. VII.

Nehemias appointeth watchmen in Jerusalem. The list of those who came first from Babylon.

NOW after the wall was built, and I had set up the doors, and numbered the porters and singing-men, and Levites:

2 I commanded Hanani, my brother, and Hananias, ruler of the house of Jerusalem, (for he seemed as a sincere man, and one that feared God above the rest,)

3 And I said to them: Let not the gates of Jerusalem be opened till the sun be hot. And while they were yet standing by, the gates were shut, and barred: and I set watchmen of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, every one by their courses, and every man over against his house.

4 And the city was very wide and great, and the people few in the midst thereof, and the houses were not built.

5 But God had put in my heart, and I assembled the princes and magistrates, and common people, to number them: and I found a book of the number of them who came up at the first, and therein it was found written:

6 These are the children of the province, who came up from the captivity of them that had been carried away, whom Nabuchodonosor, the king of Babylon, had carried away, and who returned into Judea, every one into his own city.

7 Who came with Zorobabel, Josue, Nehemias, Azarias, Raamias, Nahamani, Mardochai, Belsam, Mespharath, Begoai, Nahum, Baana. The number of the men of the people of Israel.

8 The children of Pharos, two thousand one hundred seventy-two.

9 The children of Saphatia, three hundred seventy-two.

10 The children of Area, six hundred fifty-two.

11 The children of Phahath Moab, of the children of Josue and Joab, two thousand eight hundred eighteen.

12 The children of Elam, one thousand two hundred fifty-four.

13 The children of Zethua, eight hundred forty-five.

14 The children of Zachai, seven hundred sixty.

15 The children of Bannui, six hundred forty-eight.

16 The children of Bebai, six hundred twenty-eight.

17 The children of Azgad, two thousand three hundred twenty-two.

18 The children of Adonicam, six hundred sixty-seven.

19 The children of Buguai, two thousand sixty-seven.

CHAP. VII. VER. 2. House: "the citadel" (Tigurin); "palace." Vatab. —The Sept. retain the original, Beira, (H.) which signifies a palace, (Pagin,) concerning which Nehemias had spoken. Chap. ii. 8. M.—But as it was not yet built, the house, being placed alone, more properly signifies the temple. II.

VER. 3. Sun. Lit. "the heat of the sun," or perfect daylight. H.—They. Syr. and Arab. "while it was still day," (C.) or the sun shone. Before dusk the gates were shut, to prevent any improper person from entering. H.—House, on the walls. C.—These things protect a city; as grace, a guard over the senses, and watchfulness do the soul. W.

VER. 5. Heart, inspired me to provide inhabitants for the city, as was afterwards done by lot. Chap. xi. T.—Written. Hence it seems evident that Nehemias here only transcribes this ancient record, of those who came under Zoro-babel, and consequently this chapter ought to agree with 1 Esd. ii., as well as with 3 Esd. v. 9, (H.) which is now strangely corrupted; so that it can throw no light upon the matter. C.—Some think that various catalogues were taken, at Babylon, at the first coming to Jerusalem, (M.) and at the dedication of the temple (T.); and that Nehemias refers to a different one from that of Esdras. Sa. Lucas. T.—Others suppose that changes were introduced, as the families were increased or diminished, in the time of Nehemias (T.); who, therefore, judged it unnecessary to write a fresh catalogue, but only adjusted the old one to the present circumstances, including probably the names of those who had returned with Esdras, or with himself. C.

VER. 33. Other Nebo. We find no first mentioned; but in the ancient Latin edition. Nebo occurred instead of Geba. Ver. 30. See 1 Esd. ii. 29. Sept and Arab. omit "the other."

50 The children of Raaia, the children of Rasin, the children of Necoda, 59 The children of Saphatia, the children of Hatil, the children of Phochereth, who was born of Sabaim, the son of Amon.

 60 All the Nathinites, and the children of the servants of Solomon, three hundred ninety-two.
 61 And these are they that came up from Telmela, Thelharsa, Cherub, Addon, and Emmer: and could not show the house of their fathers, nor their seed, whether they were of Israel.
 62 The children of Dalana, the children of Tobia, the children of Necoda, six hundred forty-two.
 63 And of the priests, the children of Habia, the children of Accos, the children of Berzellai, who took a wife of the daughters of Berzellai, the Galaadite, and he was called by their name.
 64 These sought their writing in the record, and found it not: and they were cast out of the priesthood.
 65 And Athersatha said to them: That they should not eat of the Holies of Holies, until there stood up a priest, learned and skilful.
 66 All the multitude, as it were one man, forty-two thousand three hundred sixty,
 67 Beside their men-servants and women-servants, who were seven thousand three hundred thirty-seven: and among them, singing-men and singing-women, two hundred forty-five.
 68 Their horses, seven hundred thirty-six: their mules, two hundred forty-five:
 69 Their camels, four hundred thirty-five: their asses, six thousand seven hundred and twenty. [Hitherto is related what was written in the record. From this place forward goeth on the history of Nehemias.]

VER. 65. Athersatha; Nehemias, (C.) as he is called in Chaldee. 1 Esd. ii. 63. M.
 VER. 69. Hitherto. This is not in the original, or in the other versions. It is inserted in the margin of some Lat. MSS. and entirely omitted in others of great authority. H.—S. Jerom informs us from what sources the work was compiled, which is all declared canonical by the Church, (W.) whether written by Esdras or by Nehemias. H.

VER. 70. Athersatha; that is, Nehemias, as appears from chap. viii. 9. Either that he was so called at the court of the king of Persia, where he was cup-bearer, or that, as some think, this name signifies governor; and he was at that time governor of Judea. Ch.—Rom. Sept. insinuates that the princes gave these things "to Nehemias." C.—Alex. Sept. "They gave for the work, unto Athersatha." Prot. "The Tirshatha gave," &c. H.—Thersa means, "he fed," and satha, "he caused to drink." T

70 And some of the heads of the families gave unto the work. Athersatha gave into the treasure a thousand drams of gold, fifty bowls, and five hundred and thirty garments for priests.

71 And some of the heads of families gave to the treasure of the work, twenty thousand drams of gold, and two thousand two hundred pounds of silver.

72 And that which the rest of the people gave, was twenty thousand drams of gold, and two thousand pounds of silver, and sixty-seven garments for priests.

73 And the priests, and the Levites, and the porters, and the singing-men, and the rest of the common people, and the Nathinites, and all Israel, dwelt in their cities.

CHAP. VIII.

Esdras readeth the law before the people. Nehemias comforteth them. They celebrate the feast of tabernacles.

AND^a the seventh month came: and the children of Israel were in their cities. And all the people were gathered together as one man, to the street which is before the water-gate, and they spoke to Esdras, the scribe, to bring the book of the law of Moses, which the Lord had commanded to Israel.

2 Then Esdras, the priest, brought the law before the multitude of men and women, and all those that could understand, in the first day of the seventh month.

3 And he read it plainly in the street that was before the water-gate, from the morning until mid-day, before the men, and the women, and all those that could understand: and the ears of all the people were attentive to the book.

4 And Esdras, the scribe, stood upon a step of wood, which he had made to speak upon: and there stood by him, Mathathias, and Semeia, and Ania, and Uria, and Helcia, and Maasia, on his right hand: and on the left, Phadaia, Misael, and Melchia, and Hasum, and Hasbadana, Zacharia, and Mosollam.

5 And Esdras opened the book before all the people: for he was above all the people: and when he had opened it, all the people stood.

6 And Esdras blessed the Lord, the great God: and all the people answered: Amen, amen: lifting up their hands: and they bowed down, and adored God with their faces to the ground.

7 Now Josue, and Bani, and Serebia, Jamin, Accub, Septhai, Odia, Maasia, Celita, Azarias, Jozabed, Hanan, Phalaia, the Levites, made silence among the people to hear the law: and the people stood in their place.

8 And they read in the book of the law of God distinctly and plainly to be understood: and they understood when it was read.

VER. 1. Were in, or had been at home, (H.) after the dedication of the walls, (C.) till they assembled (H.) at the beginning of the civil year, on the feast of trumpets, which was a day of rejoicing, (ver. 9; Num. xxix. 1,) the festival of the new moon. VER. 4. Step. Heb. "wooden tower." C.—Prot. "pulpit," (H.) made in the form of "a cup," (C.) like the ciur, or tribune of Solomon. 2 Par. vi. 13.

VER. 8. Understood, by those who were near enough, and were skilled in Heb. (H.) though many began to forget that language (chap. xiii. 24); and for their benefit, an explanation was given in Chaldee, (ver. 9. C.) or Syriac, the vulgar tongue after the captivity. Pure Hebrew was still retained in the public liturgy. T.—Thus the Catholic Church retains the use of the language first used

9 And Nehemias (he is Athersatha) and Esdras, the priest and scribe, and the Levites, who interpreted to all the people, said: This is a holy day to the Lord, our God; do not mourn, nor weep: for all the people wept, when they heard the words of the law.

10 And he said to them: Go, eat fat meats, and drink sweet wine, and send portions to them that have not prepared for themselves: because it is the holy day of the Lord, and be not sad: for the joy of the Lord is our strength.

11 And the Levites stilled all the people, saying: Hold your peace, for the day is holy, and be not sorrowful.

12 So all the people went to eat and drink, and to send portions, and to make great mirth: because they understood the words that he had taught them.

13 And on the second day the chiefs of the families of all the people, the priests, and the Levites, were gathered together to Esdras, the scribe, that he should interpret to them the words of the law.

14 And they found written in the law, that the Lord had commanded by the hand of Moses, that the children of Israel should dwell in tabernacles, on the feast, in the seventh month:

15 And that they should proclaim and publish the word in all their cities, and in Jerusalem, saying: Go forth to the mount, and fetch branches of olive, and branches of beautiful wood, branches of myrtle, and branches of palm, and branches of thick trees, to make tabernacles, as it is written.

16 And the people went forth, and brought. And they made themselves tabernacles every man on the top of his house, and in their courts, and in the courts of the house of God, and in the street of the water-gate, and in the street of the gate of Ephraim.

17 And all the assembly of them that were returned from the captivity, made tabernacles, and dwelt in tabernacles: for since the days of Josue, the son of Nun, the children of Israel had not done so, until that day: and there was exceedingly great joy.

18 And he read in the book of the law of God, day by day, from the first day till the last, and they kept the solemnity seven days, and in the eighth day a solemn assembly according to the manner.

CHAP. IX.

The people repent with fasting and sack-cloth. The Levites confess God's benefits, and the people's ingratitude: they pray for them, and make a covenant with God.

AND^b in the four and twentieth day of the month, the children of Israel came together with fasting, and with sack-cloth, and earth upon them.

2 And the seed of the children of Israel separated themselves from every stranger: and they stood, and confessed their sins, and the iniquities of their fathers.

3 And they rose up to stand: and they read in the book of the law of the Lord, their God, four times in the day, and four times they confessed, and adored the Lord, their God.

4 And there stood upon the step of the Levites, Josue, and Bani, and Cedmihel, Sabania, Bonni, Sarebias, Bani, and Chanani: and they cried with a loud voice to the Lord, their God.

5 And the Levites, Josue and Cedmihel, Bonni, Hasebnia, Serebia, Odaia, Sebnia, and Phathahia, said: Arise, bless the Lord, your God, from eternity to eternity: and blessed be the name of thy glory, with all blessing and praise.

6 Thou, thyself, O Lord, alone, thou hast made heaven, and the heaven of heavens, and all the host thereof: the earth, and all things that are in it: the seas, and all that are therein: and thou givest life to all these things, and the host of heaven adoreth thee.

7 Thou, O Lord God, art he who chocest Abram, and broughtest him forth out of the fire of the Chaldeans, and gavest him the name of Abraham.

in the conversion of the respective people, whether Greek, Latin, &c., while she takes care to explain to the people what is necessary, in their own language. Any change might be attended with more serious inconveniences than benefit. Our Saviour never blamed this practice, which subsisted among the Jews in his time, no more than that which obliged the people to keep without, while the priest offered incense, &c. Luke i. 10, 21.

VER. 9. Interpret. S. Jerom renders the same term, made silence, (ver. 7.) as it was the office of the Levites to keep the people in awe. Ver. 11. C.—Prot. “taught.” They had also (H.) to instruct. 1 Esd. viii. 16. M.—Werp. The Jews had only one feast for mourning, the day of expiation. On all the rest, a holy joy was commended. For the same reason, the Church does not fast on such days. C.

VER. 10. Wine. Heb. and Sept. “things.” Syr. and Arab. have simply, “drink.”—Portions. The Greeks styled them, μέριδες; and the Latins, sportulæ. The custom prevailed not only among the Jews, (Esth. ix. 19,) but also among Christians and pagans. Moses frequently exhorts the people to invite the poor (Deut. xvi. 14); and S. Paul blames the rich Corinthians, for giving no part of their feast to them. 1 Cor. xi. 21.

VER. 15. And that. This is not expressed in the law, though it was probably practised. C.—Some translate, “And they proclaimed,” &c. Vatable.—Beautiful. Lit. “very or most beautiful.” H.—Héb. “of oily wood.” Sept. “express.” Syr. “nut-tree.” Others understand the pine, (Pagnin,) balm, (Mariana,) citron, (H.) or any other species of branches, which might then be used. C. T.

VER. 18. Assembly. Lit. “the collect.” H.—Héb. “the day of retention;” the people being kept at the temple. C.—Sept. “the dismissal;” as they were afterwards permitted to depart. H. See Lev. xxiii. 26.

CHAP. IX. VER. 1. Mouth; Tizri, the day after they had sent away those women, (C.) whose company now covered them with confusion. H.—They were moved to compunction, by the hearing of the law read by Esdras. M.

VER. 2. Stranger; idolatrous woman. H.—True repentance requires the works of mortification, and particularly the removal of all occasions of sin and disorderly pleasures. W.—The reformation had been commenced under Esdras, but some had relapsed. 1 Esd. x. 3. C.—The true-born Israelites would have no society with the sons of infidels. T.—Fathers, that they might not be punished for them. Exod. xx. 5. C.

VER. 3. Stand, to hear the law, out of reverence (M.); or the Levites ascended the pulpit to read, four times in the day. T.—After each lecture, psalms were sung, (C.) to praise God, and to declare the sins of the people, and their sincere repentance. H.—On days of mourning, the Jews assembled four times to pray, and thrice on other days, by the institution of Esdras. Maimonides. See Acts iii. 1.—On their fasts, they refrained from all meat, as well as from work, spending their time in prayer. They began at the first hour, and continued their exercises of devotion till the third, when they recommenced for other three hours. They did the like at the sixth and ninth hours; hearing the law, then prostrating themselves to confess their sins. Afterwards they rose to join with the Levites in praising the Lord. C.

VER. 4. Step, erected by Esdras. Chap. viii. 4.—Josue, &c. These Levites are mentioned again, (ver. 5,) with some variation. Bani is called Bonni; Sebnia, is Hasebnia. C.—Perhaps some of them might be different, as there seems to be no reason for thus changing their names so soon. There are eight persons in both places. H.

VER. 5. To eternity. Existing. Sa.—Bless him continually M.—Let one generation after another praise his holy name. H.

VER. 6. Of heavens. The highest (C.) and most glorious (H.) residence of the Eternal.—Host. Stars (C.) and angels, (M.) which are like his guards.—Life, or being.

VER. 7. The fire of the Chaldeans. The city of Ur, in Chaldea, the name of which signifies fire. Or out of the fire of the tribulations and temptations, to which he was there exposed. The ancient Rabbins understood this literally affirming that Abraham was cast into the fire by the idolaters, and brought out by a miracle without any hurt. Ch.—S. Jerom translates Ur of the Chaldees, in other places. Amama.—Sept. “the country of,” &c. C.

8 And thou didst find his heart faithful before thee: and thou madest a covenant with him, to give him the land of the Chanaanite, of the Hethite, and of the Amorhite, and of the Pherezite, and of the Jebusite, and of the Gergesite, to give it to his seed: and thou hast fulfilled thy words, because thou art just.

9 And thou sawest the affliction of our fathers in Egypt: and thou didst hear their cry by the Red Sea.

10 And thou showedst signs and wonders upon Pharaoh, and upon all his servants, and upon the people of his land: for thou knewest that they dealt proudly against them: and thou madest thyself a name, as it is at this day.

11 And thou didst divide the sea before them, and they passed through the midst of the sea on dry land: but their persecutors thou threwest into the depth, as a stone into mighty waters.

12 And in a pillar of a cloud thou wast their leader by day, and in a pillar of fire by night, that they might see the way by which they went.

13 Thou camest down, also, to Mount Sinai, and didst speak with them from heaven, and thou gavest them right judgments, and the law of truth, ceremonies, and good precepts.

14 Thou madest known to them thy holy sabbath, and didst prescribe to them commandments, and ceremonies, and the law, by the hand of Moses, thy servant.

15 And thou gavest them bread from heaven in their hunger, and broughtest forth water for them out of the rock in their thirst, and thou saidst to them that they should go in, and possess the land, upon which thou hadst lifted up thy hand to give it them.

16 But they and our fathers dealt proudly, and hardened their necks, and hearkened not to thy commandments.

17 And they would not hear, and they remembered not thy wonders which thou hadst done for them. And they hardened their necks, and gave the head to return to their bondage, as it were by contentions. But thou, a forgiving God, gracious, and merciful, long-suffering, and full of compassion, didst not forsake them.

18 Yea, when they had made also to themselves a molten calf, and had said: This is thy God, that brought thee out of Egypt: and had committed great blasphemies:

19 Yet thou, in thy many mercies, didst not leave them in the desert: the pillar of the cloud departed not from them by day, to lead them in the way, and the pillar of fire by night, to show them the way by which they should go.

20 And thou gavest them thy good Spirit to teach them, and thy manna thou didst not withhold from their mouth, and thou gavest them water for their thirst.

21 Forty years didst thou feed them in the desert, and nothing was wanting to them: their garments did not grow old, and their feet were not worn.

22 And thou gavest them kingdoms, and nations, and didst divide lots for them: and they possessed the land of Sehon, and the land of the king of Hesebon, and the land of Og, king of Basan.

23 And thou didst multiply their children, as the stars of heaven, and broughtest them to the land concerning which thou hadst said to their fathers, that they should go in and possess it.

24 And the children came and possessed the land, and thou didst humble before them the inhabitants of the land, the Chanaanites, and gavest them into their hands, with their kings, and the people of the land, that they might do with them as it pleased them.

25 And they took strong cities and a fat land, and possessed houses full of all goods: cisterns made by others, vineyards, and oliveyards, and fruit-trees, in abundance: and they eat, and were filled, and became fat, and abounded with delight in thy great goodness.

26 But they provoked thee to wrath, and departed from thee, and threw thy law behind their backs: and they killed thy prophets, who admonished them earnestly to return to thee: and they were guilty of great blasphemies.

27 And thou gavest them into the hands of their enemies, and they afflicted them. And, in the time of their tribulation, they cried to thee, and thou heardest from heaven, and according to the multitude of thy tender mercies thou gavest them saviours, to save them from the hands of their enemies.

28 But after they had rest, they returned to do evil in thy sight: and thou leftest them in the hand of their enemies, and they had dominion over them. Then they returned, and cried to thee: and thou heardest from heaven, and deliveredst them many times in thy mercies.

29 And thou didst admonish them to return to thy law. But they dealt proudly, and hearkened not to thy commandments, but sinned against thy judgments, which if a man do, he shall live in them: and they withdrew the shoulder, and hardened their neck, and would not hear.

30 And thou didst forbear with them for many years, and didst testify against them by thy spirit, by the hand of thy prophets: and they heard not, and thou didst deliver them into the hand of the people of the lands.

31 Yet in thy very many mercies thou didst not utterly consume them, nor forsake them: because thou art a merciful and gracious God.

32 Now, therefore, our God, great, strong, and terrible, who keepest covenant and mercy, turn not away from thy face all the labour which hath come upon us, upon our kings, and our princes, and our priests, and our prophets, and our fathers, and all the people from the days of the king of Assur, until this day.

33 And thou art just in all things that have come upon us: because thou hast done truth, but we have done wickedly.

34 Our kings, our princes, our priests, and our fathers, have not kept thy law, and have not minded thy commandments, and thy testimonies, which thou hast testified among them.

35 And they have not served thee in their kingdoms, and in thy manifold goodness, which thou gavest them, and in the large and fat land, which thou deliveredst before them, nor did they return from their most wicked devices.

36 Behold we, ourselves, this day are bondmen: and the land, which thou gavest our fathers, to eat the bread thereof, and the good things thereof, and we, ourselves, are servants in it.

37 And the fruits thereof grow up for the kings, whom thou hast set over us for our sins, and they have dominion over our bodies, and over our beasts, according to their will, and we are in great tribulation.

38 And because of all this we, ourselves, make a covenant, and write it, and our princes, our Levites, and our priests, sign it.

CHAP. XI.

Who were the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and the other cities.

AND the princes of the people dwelt at Jerusalem: but the rest of the people cast lots, to take one part in ten to dwell in Jerusalem, the holy city, and nine parts in the other cities.

2 And the people blessed all the men that willingly offered themselves to dwell in Jerusalem.

3 These, therefore, are the chief men of the province, who dwelt in Jerusalem, and in the cities of Juda. And every one dwelt in his possession, in their cities: Israel, the priests, the Levites, the Nathinites, and the children of the servants of Solomon.

4 And in Jerusalem there dwelt some of the children of Juda, and some of the children of Benjamin: of the children of Juda, Athaias, the son of Aziam, the son of Zacharias, the son of Amarias, the son of Saphatias, the son of Malalcel: of the sons of Phares,

5 Maasia, the son of Baruch, the son of Cholloza, the son of Hazia, the son of Adaia, the son of Joarib, the son of Zacharias, the son of the Silonite:

6 All these, the sons of Phares, who dwelt in Jerusalem, were four hundred sixty-eight valiant men.

7 And these are the children of Benjamin: Sellum, the son of Mosollam, the son of Joed, the son of Phadaia, the son of Colaia, the son of Masia, the son of Etheel, the son of Isaia,

8 And after him, Gebbai, Sellai, nine hundred twenty-eight.

9 And Joel, the son of Zechri, their ruler, and Judas, the son of Senua, was second over the city.

10 And of the priests, Idaia, the son of Joarib, Jachin,

11 Saraia, the son of Helcias, the son of Mosollam, the son of Sadoc, the son of Meraioth, the son of Achitob, the prince of the house of God,

12 And their brethren that do the works of the temple: eight hundred twenty-two. And Adaia, the son of Jeroham, the son of Phelelia, the son of Amsi, the son of Zacharias, the son of Pheshur, the son of Melchias,

13 And his brethren, the chiefs of the fathers: two hundred forty-two. And Amassai, the son of Azreel, the son of Ahazi, the son of Mosollamoth, the son of Emmer,

14 And their brethren, who were very mighty, a hundred twenty-eight: and their ruler, Zabdiel, son of the mighty.

15 And of the Levites, Semeia, the son of Hasub, the son of Azaricam, the son of Hasabia, the son of Bonni,

16 And Sabathai, and Jozabed, who were over all the outward business of the house of God, of the princes of the Levites.

17 And Mathania, the son of Micha, the son of Zebedei, the son of Asaph, was the principal man to praise, and to give glory in prayer, and Bebecia, the second, one of his brethren, and Abda, the son of Samua, the son of Galal, the son of Idithum.

18 All the Levites in the holy city were two hundred eighty-four.

19 And the porters, Accub, Telmon, and their brethren, who kept the doors: a hundred seventy-two.

20 And the rest of Israel, the priests, and the Levites, were in all the cities of Juda, every man in his possession.

21 And the Nathinites, that dwelt in Ophel, and Siaha, and Gaspah, of the Nathinites.

22 And the overseer of the Levites, in Jerusalem, was Azzi, the son of Bani, the son of Hasabia, the son of Mathania, the son of Micha. Of the sons of Asaph, were the singing-men in the ministry of the house of God.

23 For the king's commandment was concerning them and an order among the singing-men, day by day.

24 And Phathahia, the son of Mesezebel, of the children of Zara, the son of Juda, was at the hand of the king, in all matters concerning the people,

25 And in the houses through all their countries. Of the children of Juda, some dwelt at Cariatharbe, and in 22 The Levites, the chiefs of the families, in the days of Eliasib, and Joiada, and Johanan, and Jeddoa, were recorded, and the priests, in the reign of Darius, the Persian.

23 The sons of Levi, heads of the families, were written in the book of Chronicles, even unto the days of Jonathan, the son of Eliasib.

24 Now the chief of the Levites were Hasebia, Serebia, and Josue, the son of Cedmihel: and their brethren, by their courses, to praise, and to give thanks, according to the commandment of David, the man of God, and to wait equally in order.

25 Mathania, and Becoccia, Obeaia, and Mosollam, Telmon, Accub, were keepers of the gates, and of the entrances before the gates.

26 These were in the days of Joacim, the son of Josue, the son of Josedec, and in the days of Nehemias, the governor, and of Esdras, the priest and scribe.

27 And at the dedication of the wall of Jerusalem, they sought the Levites out of all their places, to bring them to Jerusalem, and to keep the dedication, and to rejoice with thanksgiving, and with singing, and with cymbals, and psalteries, and harps.

28 And the sons of the singing-men were gathered together out of the plain country about Jerusalem, and out of the villages of Nethuphati, 29 And from the house of Galgal, and from the countries of Geba, and Azmaveth: for the singing-men had built themselves villages round about Jerusalem.

30 And the priests, and the Levites, were purified, and they purified the people, and the gates, and the wall.

31 And I made the princes of Juda go up upon the wall, and I appointed two great choirs to give praise.

And they went on the right hand upon the wall toward the dunghill-gate.

32 And after them went Osaias, and half of the princes of Juda,

33 And Azarias, Esdras, and Mosollam, Judas, and Benjamin, and Semeia, and Jeremias.

34 And of the sons of the priests with trumpets, Zacharias, the son of Jonathan, the son of Semeia, the son of Mathania, the son of Michaias, the son of Zechur, the son of Asaph, 35 And his brethren, Semeia, and Azareel, Malalai, Galalai, Maai, Nathanael, and Judas, and Hanani, with the musical instruments of David, the man of God: and Esdras, the scribe, before them at the fountain-gate.

36 And they went up over against them by the stairs of the city of David, at the going up of the wall of the house of David, and to the water-gate eastward:

37 And the second choir of them that gave thanks went on the opposite side, and I after them, and the half of the people upon the wall, and upon the tower of the furnaces, even to the broad wall,

Divers abuses are reformed.

AND on that day they read in the book of Moses, in the hearing of the people: and therein was found written, that the Ammonites and the Moabites should not come into the church of God for ever:

2 Because they met not the children of Israel with bread and water: and they hired against them Balaam, to curse them: and our God turned their curse into blessing.

3 And it came to pass, when they heard the law, that they separated every stranger from Israel.

4 And over this thing was Eliasib, the priest, who was set over the treasury of the house of our God, and was near akin to Tobias.

5 And he made him a great store-room, where before him they laid up gifts, and frankincense, and vessels, and the tithes of the corn, of the wine, and of the oil, the portions of the Levites, and of the singing-men, and of the porters, and the first-fruits of the priests.

6 But in all this time I was not in Jerusalem, because in the two and thirtieth year^b of Artaxerxes, king of Babylon, I went to the king, and after certain days I asked the king:

7 And I came to Jerusalem, and I understood the evil that Eliasib had done for Tobias, to make him a store-house in the courts of the house of God.

8 And it seemed to me exceedingly evil. And I cast forth the vessels of the house of Tobias out of the store-house.

9 And I commanded, and they cleansed the store-houses: and I brought thither again the vessels of the house of God, the sacrifice, and the frankincense.

10 And I perceived that the portions of the Levites had not been given them: and that the Levites, and the

It is probable that he was a different person from the high priest, (Usher,) who had married his grandson to the daughter of Sanaballat, the intimate friend of Tobias. C.

11 And I pleaded the matter against the magistrates, and said: Why have we forsaken the house of God? And I gathered them together, and I made them to stand in their places.

12 And all Juda brought the tithe of the corn, and the wine, and the oil, into the storehouses.

13 And we set over the storehouses Selemias, the priest, and Sadoc, the scribe, and of the Levites, Phadaia, and next to them Hanan, the son of Zachur, the son of Mathania: for they were approved as faithful, and to them were committed the portions of their brethren.

14 Remember me, O my God, for this thing, and wipe not out my kindnesses, which I have done relating to the house of my God, and his ceremonies.

15 In those days I saw in Juda some treading the presses on the sabbath, and carrying sheaves, and lading asses with wine, and grapes, and figs, and all manner of burthens, and bringing them into Jerusalem on the sabbath-day. And I charged them that they should sell on a day on which it was lawful to sell.

16 Some Tyrians also dwelt there, who brought fish, and all manner of wares: and they sold them on the sabbaths to the children of Juda in Jerusalem.

17 And I rebuked the chief men of Juda, and said to them: What is this evil thing that you are doing, profaning the sabbath-day?

18 Did not our fathers do these things, and our God brought all this evil upon us, and upon this city? And you bring more wrath upon Israel by violating the sabbath.

19 And it came to pass, that when the gates of Jerusalem were at rest on the sabbath-day, I spoke: and they shut the gates, and I commanded that they should not open them till after the sabbath: and I set some of my servants at the gates, that none should bring in burthens on the sabbath-day.

21 And I charged them, and I said to them: Why stay you before the wall? if you do so another time, I will lay hands on you. And from that time they came no more on the sabbath.

22 I spoke also to the Levites, that they should be purified, and should come to keep the gates, and to sanctify the sabbath-day: for this, also, remember me, O my God, and spare me according to the multitude of thy tender mercies.

23 In those days, also, I saw Jews that married wives, women of Azotus, and of Ammon, and of Moab.

24 And their children spoke half in the speech of Azotus, and could not speak the Jews' language, but they spoke according to the language of this and that people.

25 And I chid them, and laid my curse upon them. And I beat some of them, and shaved off their hair, and made them swear by God that they would not give their daughters to their sons, nor take their daughters for their sons, nor for themselves, saying:

26 'Did not Solomon, king of Israel, sin in this kind of thing? and surely among many nations, there was not a king like him, and he was beloved of his God, and God made him king over all Israel:' and yet women of other countries brought even him to sin.

27 And shall we also be disobedient, and do all this great evil, to transgress against our God, and marry strange women?

APOCRYPHA.

The Third and Fourth Books of Esdras, and the Prayer of Manasses, (W.) are found in many Latin Bibles, (H.) and translated in that of Douay, (W.) as works of dubious authority. Calmet also inserts the Third and Fourth Books of Machabees. H.—Protestants class under the same head the Books of Tobias, Judith, Wisdom, Ecclesiasticus, and Machabees, (W.) with Baruch, and parts of Esther and Daniel, &c. H.—They acknowledge that they are “holy and worthy to be read in the Church, but not sufficient to prove points of faith.” The truth is, they find them too opposite to their creed; as S. Augustine (Prædest. SS. C. xiv.) observes was the case with some heretics, who rejected the Book of Wisdom. W.—The pretence that these Books were not admitted by many ancient Fathers, would equally strike out of the canon the Epistle to the Hebrews, those of S. James and S. Jude, the Second and Third of S. Peter, and of S. John, and the Apocalypse, the authority of all which was formerly warmly controverted, (H.) and only admitted by degrees (W.): paulatim tempore procedente meruit authoritatem. S. Jerom, in Jacobo.—This holy doctor doubted (Prideaux) whether the Book of Judith was canonical, till he found the decision of the Council of Nice. The declaration of the Church is the only sure rule by which matters of this nature can be decided. H.—“I would not believe the gospel, unless I were influenced to do it by the authority of the Catholic Church.” S. Aug. c. ep. Fund. c. 5.—This Church has spoken in favour of the controverted Books of the Old Testament, as much as for those of the New; so that the inconsistency of Protestants cannot pass unnoticed. If we would relinquish all the parts of Scripture which have been called in question, what book would be safe? Some have been indeed more universally admitted, and may therefore be styled protocanonical, while the deuterocanonical books were recognised rather later, and after all difficulties had been maturely discussed, as has been the case with other articles of faith. But the declaration being promulgated sooner or later, does not alter the truth. The will of God, notified to us by his Church, is our infallible guide. This is the canon, or “rule,” (H.) to regulate our imperfect knowledge. S. Aug. c. Faust. xi. 5, and c. Crescon. ii. 32.—In this sense the Council of Carthage (A. 419) styles these contested books “canonical and divine:” and the ancient Popes, Innocent I. and Gelasius, as well as S. Aug., (Doct. ii. 8,) S. Isidore, (Etyrn. vi. 1,) and others, place them on a level with the other parts of Scripture, as has been done by the general Councils of Florence and of Trent. If the Jews did not admit them into their canon, it was because they were not extant in the Hebrew language, (H.) or known when the canon was closed by Esdras, (Huet. D.) or afterwards. H.—Besides, who sees not that the canon of the Church is preferable to that of the synagogue? W.—Otherwise how shall we receive the New Testament? H.—Many of the Fathers referred only to the Jewish canon, when they gave catalogues of the sacred books. C.—We shall find that they generally admitted the authority of what the Protestants style Apocrypha.

THE BOOK OF TOBIAS.

This Book takes its name from the holy man Tobias, whose wonderful virtues are herein recorded. It contains most excellent documents of great piety, extraordinary patience, and of a perfect resignation to the will of God. His humble prayer was heard, and the angel Raphael was sent to relieve him: he is thankful, and praises the Lord, calling on the children of Israel to do the same. Having lived to the age of one hundred and two years, he exhorts his son and grandsons to piety, foretells the destruction of Ninive, and the rebuilding of Jerusalem: he dies happily. Ch.—The Jews themselves have a great regard for the Book of Tobias (Grot. Sixtus Senens 8): which Origen (ad Afric.) says they “read in Hebrew,” meaning probably the Chaldee, (C.) out of which language S. Jerom translated it. Ep. t. 3. W.—The Greek version seems to have been taken from another copy, or it has been executed with greater liberty by the Hellenist Jews, between the times of the Sept. and of Theodotion. C.—Huet and Prideaux esteem it more original; and Houbigant has translated it in his Bible, as the Council of Trent only spoke of the Latin editions then extant; and S. Jerom followed in his version the Heb. one of a Jew, as he did not understand the Chaldee. H.—The Syriac and the modern Hebrew edition of Fagius agree mostly with the Greek, as that of Munster and another Heb. copy of Huet, and the Arabic version, both unpublished, are more conformable to the Vulgate. The most ancient Latin version used before S. Jerom’s, was taken from the Greek; and the Fathers who lived in those ages speak of it when they call the Book of Tobias canonical. S. Aug. leaves it, however, to adopt S. Jerom’s version, in his Mirror. The copies of all these versions vary greatly, (C.) though the substance of the history is still the same; and in all we discover the virtues of a good parent, of a dutiful son, and virtuous husband, beautifully described. H.—“The servant of God, holy Tobias, is given to us after the law for an example, that we might know how to practise what we read; and that if temptations assail us, we may not depart from the fear of God, nor expect help from any other.” S. Aug. q. 119, ex utroque Test.—The first four chapters exhibit the holy life of old Tobias, and the eight following the journey and affairs of his son, directed by Raphael. In the last two chapters they praise God, and the elder Tobias foretells the better state of the commonwealth. W.—It was written during (C.) or after the captivity at Babylon. E.—The Jews had then little communication with each other in different kingdoms. Tobias was not allowed to go into Media, under Sennacherib; and it is probable that the captives at Babylon would be under similar restrictions: so that we do not need to wonder that they were unacquainted with this history of a private family, the records of which seem to have been kept at Ecbatana. The original Chaldee is entirely lost, so that it is impossible to ascertain whether the Greek or the Vulg. be more conformable to it. The chronology of the latter seems, however, more accurate, as the elder Tobias foretold the destruction of Ninive twenty-three years before the event, which his son just beheld verified, dying in the eighteenth year of king Josias. The accounts which appear to sectaries to be fabulous, may easily be explained. Houbigant.—Josephus and Philo omit this history. C.

Tobias's early piety: his works of mercy, particularly in burying the dead.

CHAP. I. VER. 1. Tobias, “good God,” (T.) is styled Tobis by the ancient Latin version and S. Ambrose, and Tobit by the Greek and Syriac. These copies and the Heb. give a genealogy which does not agree. C.—Beyond, or behind (post. H.); as the Hebrews speak with reference to a man turned towards the west. Hence this way would be on the west, and Sephet on the north.

VER. 2. Salmanasar. When Osee was conquered, A. 3283. See 4 Kings xvii. 6.—Truth. His constancy in the observance of the true religion was so much the more wonderful, as he was rich, and lived among the wicked. C.

VER. 4. Younger. “Very young,” (H.) or the youngest of those who administered their own affairs. The parents of Tobias were deceased. C.—Greek, “when I was young in my country, in the land of Israel, all the tribe,” &c.

VER. 5. All, or the greatest part (H.); for some still feared God (chap. ii. 2. W.); and the Greek of chap. v. 14, or 19, informs us that Ananias and Jonathan accompanied Tobias. H.—Greek is more diffuse. C.—(4) “All the tribe of Nephtali, of my father, departed from the house of Jerusalem, which city had been chosen from all the tribes of Israel, for all the tribes to offer sacrifice; and Jeroboam, king of Israel, had made, he alone fled the company of all,

6 And went to Jerusalem, to the temple of the Lord, and there adored the Lord God of Israel, offering faithfully all his first-fruits, and his tithes.

7 So that in the third year he gave all his tithes to the proselytes, and strangers.

8 These, and such like things did he observe when but a boy, according to the law of God.

9 But when he was a man, he took to wife, Anna, of his own tribe, and had a son by her, whom he called after his own name,

10 And from his infancy he taught him to fear God, and to abstain from all sin.

11 And when, by the captivity, he, with his wife, and his son, and all his tribe, was come to the city of Ninive,

12 (When all eat of the meats of the Gentiles,) he kept his soul, and never was defiled with their meats.

13 And because he was mindful of the Lord with all his heart, God gave him favour in the sight of Salmanasar, the king.

14 And he gave him leave to go whithersoever he would, with liberty to do whatever he had a mind.

15 He, therefore, went to all that were in captivity, and gave them wholesome admonitions.

16 And when he was come to Rages, a city of the Medes, and had ten talents of silver of that with which he had been honoured by the king:

17 And when amongst a great multitude of his kindred, he saw Gabelus in want, who was one of his tribe, taking a note of his hand, he gave him the aforesaid sum of money.

18 But after a long time, Salmanasar, the king, being dead, when Sennacherib, his son, who reigned in his place, had a hatred for the children of Israel:

19 Tobias daily went among all his kindred, and comforted them, and distributed to every one as he was able, out of his goods:

20 He fed the hungry, and gave clothes to the naked, and was careful to bury the dead, and them that were slain.

21 And when king Sennacherib was come back, fleeing from Judea, by reason of the slaughter that God had made about him for his blasphemy, and being angry, slew many of the children of Israel, Tobias buried their bodies.

22 But when it was told the king, he commanded him to be slain, and took away all his substance.

23 But Tobias fleeing naked away with his son, and with his wife, lay concealed; for many loved him.

24 But after forty-five days, the king was killed by his own sons.

25 And Tobias returned to his house, and all his substance was restored to him.

CHAP. II.

Tobias leaveth his dinner to bury the dead: he loseth his sight by God's permission, for manifestation of his patience.

BUT after this, when there was a festival of the Lord, and a good dinner was prepared in Tobias's house,

2 He said to his son: Go, and bring some of our tribe, that fear God, to feast with us.

3 And when he had gone, returning, he told him, that one of the children of Israel lay slain in the street. And he forthwith leaped up from his place at the table, and left his dinner, and came fasting to the body:

4 And taking it up, carried it privately to his house, that after the sun was down, he might bury him cautiously.

5 And when he had hid the body, he eat bread with mourning and fear,

6 Remembering the word which the Lord spoke by Amos, the prophet: Your festival days shall be turned into lamentation and mourning.

7 So when the sun was down, he went and buried him.

8 Now all his neighbours blamed him, saying: Once already commandment was given for thee to be slain because of this matter, and thou didst scarce escape the sentence of death, and dost thou again bury the dead?

9 But Tobias fearing God more than the king, carried off the bodies of them that were slain, and hid them in his house, and at midnight buried them.

10 Now it happened one day, that being wearied with

VER. 18. Time. Salmanasar reigned fourteen years; seven after the captivity, which to people in distress would appear long. C.—Gr. "And after Enemessar was dead, Sennacherib, his son, reigned in his stead; and his ways ceased, (or his high roads were stopped,) and I could no longer go into Media." H.

VER. 19. Goods, under Sennacherib; though he was now deprived of his place. C.—Greek, Syr., and Heb. insinuate that this happened under his predecessor. H.

VER. 20. Slain, by order or connivance of Sennacherib. M.—Tobias buried the dead out of charity, and the belief of a future resurrection. Hence arises the respect for tombs and the relics of the saints. C.

VER. 24. Forty. Arab. twenty-five; Gr. and Syr. fifty; other Gr. copies, fifty-five days. Fagius says Tobias was hidden nineteen days. It seems, therefore, we should date these forty-five days from the return of Sennacherib.—Sons. See 4 Kings xix. 37, and Isa. xxxvii. 38. C.—Gr. adds, "and they fled to the mountains of Ararat, and Sacherdoc, (or Assaraddon,) his son, reigned in his stead; and he appointed Achiachar Anael, the son of my brother, over all the accounts of his kingdom, and over all his government. And Achiachar petitioned for me; and I came to Ninive. But Achiachar was cup-bearer, (Alex. MS. receiver of wine,) and keeper of the ring, and governor and keeper of accounts; and Sacherdonos gave him the second place. But he was my nephew. And when I returned to my house, and my wife Anna, and my son Tobias, were restored to me, at the feast of Pentecost," &c. H.—This seems contrary to ver. 23. Yet the Heb. copies agree in this particular, and mention the dignity of Akikar. But we may judge what credit these additions deserve. C.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. House. The law authorized such feasts. Deut. xii. 12 and xiv. 28. Tobias complied with it, by inviting also the poor servants of God. C.

VER. 2. Tribe. Gr. "brethren indigent, and who remember God." H.—All had not given way to idolatry. W.

VER. 3. Street. Asarhaddon did not protect the Israelites, which renders the elevation of Akikar to the highest dignities suspicious. C.—Fasting. The ancients seldom eat any thing before noon. Gr. "Before I had tasted, I leaped up and took him to a house, till the sun should be set," (H.) to prevent any danger from the Assyrians. M.—If he did not employ another, he must have eaten alone, being rendered unclean. This seems to have been the case; and hence he did not enter his own house, but lay down by the wall. C.—Gr. and Heb. mention that he washed himself before he eat. H.

VER. 10. Now. Gr. "And that very night I was."—He came. Gr. "I lay myself down, being defiled, beside the wall of the court, and my face was uncovered." H.—The touching the dead rendered a person unclean. Num. xix. 11 burying, he came to his house, and cast himself down by the wall, and slept.

11 And as he was sleeping, hot dung, out of a swallow's nest, fell upon his eyes, and he was made blind.^a 12 Now this trial the Lord, therefore, permitted to happen to him, that an example might be given to posterity of his patience, as also of holy Job.

13 For, whereas, he had always feared God from his infancy, and kept his commandments; he repined not against God, because the evil of blindness had befallen him, 14 But continued immoveable in the fear of God, giving thanks to God all the days of his life.

15 For as the kings insulted over holy Job, so his relations and kinsmen mocked at his life, saying:

16 Where is thy hope, for which thou gavest alms, and buriedst the dead?

17 But Tobias rebuked them, saying: Speak not so:

18 For we are the children of saints, and look for that life which God will give to those that never change their faith from him.

19 Now Anna, his wife, went daily to weaving work, and she brought home what she could get for their living by the labour of her hands.

20 Whereby it came to pass, that she received a young kid, and brought it home:

21 And when her husband heard it bleating, he said: "Take heed, lest perhaps it be stolen, restore ye it to its owners; for it is not lawful for us either to eat or to touch any thing that cometh by theft.

22 "At these words, his wife being angry, answered: It is evident thy hope is come to nothing, and thy alms now appear.

23 And with these, and other such like words, she upbraided him.

VER. 12. Now. This is omitted in Greek and Heb. as far as ver. 19. S. Ambrose says beautifully, that Tobias "was more grieved that he could yield no assistance to others, than for the loss of his sight."

judgments are just, and all thy ways are mercy, and truth, and judgment:

3 And now, O Lord, think of me, and take not revenge of my sins; neither remember my offences, nor those of my parents.

4 "For we have not obeyed thy commandments, therefore are we delivered to spoil and to captivity, and death, and are made a fable, and a reproach to all nations, amongst which thou hast scattered us.

5 And now, O Lord, great are thy judgments, because we have not done according to thy precepts, and have not walked sincerely, before thee:

6 And now, O Lord, do with me according to thy will, and command my spirit to be received in peace: for it is better for me to die, than to live.

7 Now it happened on the same day, that Sara, daughter of Raguel, in Rages, a city of the Medes, received a reproach from one of her father's servant-maids.

8 Because she had been given to seven husbands, and a devil named Asmodeus had killed them, at their first going in unto her.

9 So when she reproved the maid for her fault, she answered her, saying: May we never see son, or daughter of thee upon the earth, thou murderer of thy husbands.

10 Wilt thou kill me also, as thou hast already killed seven husbands? At these words she went into an upper chamber of her house: and for three days and three nights did neither eat, nor drink:

11 But continuing in prayer, with tears besought God, that he would deliver her from this reproach.

12 And it came to pass on the third day, when she was making an end of her prayer, blessing the Lord,

13 She said: Blessed is thy name, O God of our fathers: who when thou hast been angry, wilt show mercy, and in the time of tribulation forgive the sins of them that call upon thee.

14 To thee, O Lord, I turn my face, to thee I direct my eyes.

15 I beg, O Lord, that thou loose me from the bond of this reproach, or else take me away from the earth.

frequently seems to indicate that this is the case (Exod. xx. 5); and the Church still prays, Remember not, O Lord, our offences, nor those of our parents. C.—But children are only punished when they imitate the wicked conduct of their ancestors: they may be afflicted, though innocent, as their virtue will thus be tried, and shine more gloriously. H.

VER. 6. Peace. Gr. "that I may be dissolved, and return to the earth (lit. become earth); because it is more advantageous for me to die than to live, since I have heard false reproaches, and am much grieved. Command that I may be freed from this necessity, to go to my eternal place." H.

VER. 7. Rages. In the Greek it is Ecbatana, which was also called Rages. For there were two cities in Media of the name of Rages: Raguel dwelt in one of them, and Gabelus in the other. Ch. M.—Profane authors mention a Rages in the vicinity of Ecbatana. Diod. Bib. 19.—It may here denote the province. W.

VER. 8. Asmodeus, "the fire of Media." Heb. "king of the devils," of that country, exciting people to lust, (M. Serar. q. 8,) and destroying them. W.

VER. 9. Murderer. Gr. "Dost thou not understand that thou hast suffocated thy husbands. Thou hast already had seven husbands, and hast not received the name of any of them. Why dost thou strike us on their account? If they be dead, go along with them. May we," &c. H.

VER. 13. Name. Gr. "Blessed art thou, O Lord, my God, and blessed the name of thy glory, holy and glorious for ever. May all thy works praise thee for ever." H.—As she prayed for a long time, the Vulg. gives some sentences; and the Gr. and Heb. others. Serar. Salien. M.

VER. 15. Earth. Holy men have thus desired to die, as was the case with Moses, Elias, Job, and S. Paul, provided God was willing. M.

VER. 16. Coveted, through impure love. Gr. "I am pure from all the sin of 16 Thou knowest, O Lord, that I never coveted a husband, and have kept my soul clean from all lust.

17 Never have I joined myself with them that play: neither have I made myself partaker with them that walk in lightness.

18 But a husband I consented to take, with thy fear, not with my lust.

19 And either I was unworthy of them, or they, perhaps, were not worthy of me: because, perhaps, thou hast kept me for another man.

20 For thy counsel is not in man's power.

21 But this every one is sure of that worshippeth thee, that his life, if it be under trial, shall be crowned: and if it be under tribulation, it shall be delivered: and if it be under correction, it shall be allowed to come to thy mercy.

22 For thou art not delighted in our being lost: because, after a storm thou makest a calm, and after tears and weeping thou pourest in joyfulness.

23 Be thy name, O God of Israel, blessed for ever.

24 At that time the prayers of them both were heard in the sight of the glory of the most high God:

25 And the holy angel of the Lord, Raphael, was sent to heal them both, whose prayers at one time were rehearsed in the sight of the Lord.

CHAP. IV.

Tobias, thinking he shall die, giveth his son godly admonitions: and telleth him of money he had lent to a friend.

THEREFORE, ^awhen Tobias thought that his prayer was heard that he might die, he called to him Tobias, his son,

2 And said to him: Hear, my son, the words of my mouth, and lay them as a foundation in thy heart.

3 When God shall take my soul, thou shalt bury my body: ^band thou shalt honour thy mother all the days of her life:

4 For thou must be mindful what and how great perils she suffered for thee in her womb.

5 And when she also shall have ended the time of her life, bury her by me.

6 And all the days of thy life have God in thy mind:

VER. 21. Crowned. James i. 12.—Delivered from falling, (M.) and in due time from affliction. H.

VER. 25. Raphael, "the medicine of God." He is invoked not only for health, but also in journeys. C.—Both. Gr. and Heb. of Fagius add, "Tobit, by taking away the white film, and to give Sara . . . for a wife to Tobias . . . and to bind Asmodeus, the wicked devil; because Tobias was to have her. At the same hour, Tobit returning, entered his own house, and Sara . . . descended from her upper room." H.—Lord, by the angel. Acts x.; Apoc. v. W.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1. When. Gr. and Heb. and the old Vulg. (C.) "That very day Tobit remembered the money which he had deposited with Gabael . . . and said within himself, I begged for death; why do I not call Tobias, my son, that I may declare it to him before I die? And calling him, he said: Son, if I die, bury me, and despise not thy mother." H.

VER. 3. Life. S. Aug. (Conf. x. 34) cries out, "O Light, which Tobias had in view, when these corporal eyes being closed, he taught his son the way of life."

VER. 5. By me. Gr. adds, "in the same sepulchre," like the patriarchs.

VER. 7. Substance. Be not liberal of another's property. Gr. adds, "and let not thy eye be envious, when thou givest alms." Do it generously. C.—The same doctrine of the reward of good works occurs Dan. iv. 24. W.

VER. 9. Little. God regards the affections more than the gift. C.

and take heed thou never consent to sin, nor transgress the commandments of the Lord, our God.

7 "Give alms out of thy substance, and turn not away thy face from any poor person: for so it shall come to pass, that the face of the Lord shall not be turned from thee.

8 ^dAccording to thy ability be merciful.

9 If thou have much, give abundantly: if thou have little, take care even so to bestow willingly a little.

10 For thus thou storest up to thyself a good reward for the day of necessity.

11 "For alms deliver from all sin, and from death, and will not suffer the soul to go into darkness.

12 Alms shall be a great confidence before the most high God, to all them that give it.

13 "Take heed to keep thyself, my son, from all fornication, and beside thy wife never endure to know a crime.

14 Never suffer pride to reign in thy mind, or in thy words: ^efor from it all perdition took its beginning.

15 ^hIf any man hath done any work for thee, immediately pay him his hire, and let not the wages of thy hired servant stay with thee at all.

16 "See thou never do to another what thou wouldst hate to have done to thee by another.

17 ^kEat thy bread with the hungry and the needy, and with thy garments cover the naked.

18 Lay out thy bread, and thy wine, upon the burial of a just man, and do not eat and drink thereof with the wicked.

19 Seek counsel always of a wise man.

20 Bless God at all times: and desire of him to direct thy ways, and that all thy counsels may abide in him.

21 I tell thee also, my son, that I lent ten talents of silver, while thou wast yet a child, to Gabelus, in Rages, a city of the Medes, and I have a note of his hand with me.

22 Now, therefore, inquire how thou mayst go to him, and receive of him the foresaid sum of money, and restore to him the note of his hand.

23 Fear not, my son: we lead indeed a poor life, ⁱbut we shall have many good things if we fear God, and depart from all sin, and do that which is good.

VER. 11. Sin, provided faith, &c. be not wanting. M.—When the Scripture seems to attribute salvation to one virtue, to faith, repentance, &c., it always presupposes that the heart is free from all mortal guilt. VER. 18. Burial, or sepulchre. See Bar. vi. 26; Eccli. vii. 37, and xxx. 18. The Jews followed this custom, which was common to the pagans, but from very different motives. The latter supposed that the souls fed on such meats. The Jews, and afterwards Christians, did it to feed the indigent, that they might pray for the deceased. These feasts were sometimes abused, and on that account forbidden by S. Ambrose, to whose authority S. Monica submitted. S. Aug. Conf. vi. 3. See Const. Apost. viii. 24. C.

VER. 20. Abide. Gr. "prosper," (M.) or "be directed. For every nation has not counsel: but this same Lord bestows all good things. And whensoever he will, he humbles, as he pleases. And now, my son, remember my commands, and let them not be effaced from thy heart. Now, also, I make known unto thee the ten talents of silver, which I deposited with Gabael," &c. H.

CHAP. V.

Young Tobias seeking a guide for his journey, the angel Raphael, in shape of a man, undertaketh this office.

THEN Tobias answered his father, and said: I will do all things, father, which thou hast commanded me.

2 But how I shall get this money, I cannot tell: he knoweth not me, and I know not him: what token shall I give him? nor did I ever know the way which leadeth thither.

3 Then his father answered him, and said: I have a note of his band with me, which when thou shalt show him, he will presently pay it.

4 But go now, and seek thee out some faithful man, to go with thee for his hire: that thou mayst receive it, while I yet live.

5 Then Tobias going forth, found a beautiful young man, standing girded, and as it were ready to walk.

6 And not knowing that he was an angel of God, he saluted him, and said: From whence art thou, good young man?

7 But he answered: Of the children of Israel. And Tobias said to him: Knowest thou the way that leadeth to the country of the Medes?

8 And he answered: I know it: and I have often walked through all the ways thereof, and I have abode with Gabelus, our brother, who dwelleth at Rages, a city of the Medes, which is situate in the mount of Ecbatana.

9 And Tobias said to him: Stay for me, I beseech thee, till I tell these same things to my father.

10 Then Tobias going in, told all these things to his father. Upon which his father being in admiration, desired that he would come in unto him.

11 So going in, he saluted him, and said: Joy be to thee always.

12 And Tobias said: What manner of joy shall be to me, who sit in darkness, and see not the light of heaven?

13 And the young man said to him: Be of good courage, thy cure from God is at hand.

14 And Tobias said to him: Canst thou conduct my son to Gabelus, at Rages, a city of the Medes? and when thou shalt return, I will pay thee thy hire.

15 And the angel said to him: I will conduct him thither, and bring him back to thee.

CHAP. V. VER. 2. I cannot. Gr. "as I know him not; and he gave him the handwriting, and said to him: Seek," &c.—Hitherto Tobit had spoken in the first person. H.

VER. 5. Beautiful; resplendent, with celestial majesty. C.—Gr. "he found Raphael, who was an angel, and he knew it not, and said to him: Canst thou go with me to Rages, of Media, and art thou acquainted with the places?" H.—This angel prefigured Jesus Christ, who took indeed our human nature. V. Bede. W.

VER. 7. Israel. This is not in Greek, &c. But the old Vulg. has, "Raphael answered, of the children of Israel, thy brethren, I am come hither for work," (H.) or employment. C.

VER. 8. Often. Gr. "lodged with Gabacl, our brother, and Tobias," &c.

VER. 12. But lest. Gr. Comp. "and Tobit said, Brother, I wish to know thy race and thy name. But he replied, I am of the race of Azarias, and of Ananias, who is also thy brother,"—Azarias. The angel took the form of Azarias; and therefore might call himself by the name of the man whom he personated. Azarias, in Hebrew, signifies the help of God; and Ananias, the grace of God. Ch.

VER. 19. Thy family. Gr., Syr., &c. add, "Thou art my brother, of a noble and good race. For I know Ananias and Jonathan, sons of the great Semei, as we went together to Jerusalem to adore, carrying the first-born, and tithes of the produce; and they did not join in the error of their brethren. Thou art of a great stock, brother. But tell me what reward I shall give thee? A drachm a day, 16 And Tobias said to him: I pray thee, tell me, of what family, or what tribe art thou?

17 And Raphael, the angel, answered: Dost thou seek the family of him thou hirest, or the hired servant himself to go with thy son?

18 But lest I should make thee uneasy, I am Azarias, the son of the great Ananias.

19 And Tobias answered: Thou art of a great family. But I pray thee be not angry that I desired to know thy family.

20 And the angel said to him: I will lead thy son safe and bring him to thee again safe.

21 And Tobias answering, said: May you have a good journey, and God be with you in your way, and his angel accompany you.

22 Then all things being ready, that were to be carried in their journey, Tobias bid his father and his mother farewell, and they set out both together.

23 And when they were departed, his mother began to weep, and to say: Thou hast taken the staff of old age, and sent him away from us.

24 I wish the money for which thou hast sent him, had never been.

25 For our poverty was sufficient for us, that we might account it as riches, that we saw our son.

26 And Tobias said to her: Weep not, our son will arrive thither safe, and will return safe to us, and thy eyes shall see him.

27 For I believe that the good angel of God doth accompany him, and doth order all things well that are done about him, so that he shall return to us with joy.

28 At these words his mother ceased weeping, and held her peace.

CHAP. VI.

By the angel's advice, young Tobias taketh hold on a fish that assaulteth him. Reserveth the heart, the gall, and the liver, for medicines. They lodge at the house of Raguel, whose daughter, Sara, Tobias is to marry: she had before been married to seven husbands, who were all slain by a devil.

AND Tobias went forward, and the dog followed him, and he lodged the first night by the river of Tigris.

2 And he went out to wash his feet, and behold a monstrous fish came up to devour him.

3 And Tobias being afraid of him, cried out with a loud voice, saying: Sir, he cometh upon me.

and what may be requisite for thee and for my son. And I will give more than the hire if you return in health. And they agreed; and he said to Tobias, Be in readiness for the journey, and may you be directed: and his son prepared the requisites for the journey," &c. H.

VER. 27. Angel. This was the persuasion of the ancient Hebrews, approved by the Gospel, Matt. xviii. 10.

CHAP. VI. VER. 1. Dog. Gr. and Heb. specify this circumstance, (chap. v. 22,) but not here. C.—Night, or stage, mansion, (H.) at a caravansera, or house where travellers might stop all night, and sometimes, though seldom, might be supplied with necessaries. Herodotus (v. 52) mentions several in the kingdom of Persia. C.

VER. 2. Feet. Gr. "to bathe."—Fish. The learned are of opinion that this was the fish which Pliny calls callyonymus, (l. xxii. ch. 7,) the gall of which is of sovereign virtue to remove white specks that grow over the eyes. Ch.—Other fishes have the like virtue; and as the aforesaid has no scales, and is not above a short long, it could not be lawfully eaten by the Israelites, nor could it suffice for ten days' provision. Ver. 6. Lev. xi. 10. Others, therefore, prefer (C.) the sea-calf, (Brado,) the hippopotamus, (Grot.) the crocodile, (Carthus.) whale, (Theophrast.) sturgeon, or silurus. Bochart, Anim. iv. 15.—But there are great difficulties with respect to all these; and Fran. George adopts the sentiment of the rabbins in favour of the pike, which seems the least objectionable, as it has scales.

4 And the angel said to him: Take him by the gill, and draw him to thee. And when he had done so, he drew him out upon the land, and he began to pant before his feet.

5 Then the angel said to him: Take out the entrails of this fish, and lay up his heart, and his gall, and his liver, for thee: for these are necessary for useful medicines.

6 And when he had done so, he roasted the flesh thereof, and they took it with them in the way: the rest they salted, as much as might serve them, till they came to Rages, the city of the Medes.

7 Then Tobias asked the angel, and said to him: I beseech thee, brother Azarias, tell me what remedies are these things good for, which thou hast bid me keep of the fish?

8 And the angel answering, said to him: If thou put a little piece of its heart upon coals, the smoke thereof driveth away all kind of devils, either from man or from woman, so that they come no more to them.

9 And the gall is good for anointing the eyes, in which there is a white speck, and they shall be cured.

10 And Tobias said to him: Where wilt thou that we lodge?

11 And the angel answering, said: Here is one whose name is Raguel, a near kinsman of thy tribe, and he hath a daughter named Sara, but he hath no son nor any other daughter beside her.

12 *All his substance is due to thee, and thou must take her to wife.

13 Ask her, therefore, of her father, and he will give her thee to wife.

14 Then Tobias answered, and said: I hear that she hath been given to seven husbands, and they all died: moreover, I have heard, that a devil killed them.

gills, and cannot live long out of water, ver. 4. It grows to a great size in the Tigris, and its gall is good for the eyes. C.

VER. 4. Take him. "It," would be as proper.—Gill. Gr. "Seize the fish. And the boy got the better of the fish, and threw it upon the land." H.—Heb. also omits the gill and the panting, (C.) circumstances which would invalidate the opinions of many respecting the nature of this fish. Ver. 2. H.

VER. 6. Flesh. S. Paul uses the like expression, (1 Cor. xv.,) as well as Pliny, ix. 15. W.—Took. Gr. and Fagius, (C.) "eat, and both went on till they came near to Ecbatana." H.—From Nineve to Rages would be ten or twelve days' journey. C.

VER. 7. Tell. Gr. "what is the heart, the liver, and the gall of the fish for?" H.

VER. 8. Its heart, &c. The liver, ver. 19. God was pleased to give to these things a virtue against those proud spirits, to make them, who affected to be like the Most High, subject to such mean corporal creatures, as instruments of his power. Ch.—God sometimes makes use of things as remedies which have, naturally, a different effect; as when Christ put clay on the eyes of the blind man. John ix. The things which the angel ordered were salutary, by God's appointment. W.

VER. 10. And. Gr. "But as they approached to Rages, the angel said to the young man: Brother, to-day we shall lodge with Raguel, and he is thy relation, and he has an only daughter, by name Sara: I will propose that she may be given to thee for a wife, because the inheritance belongs to thee, and thou art the only one of her kindred. The girl is beautiful and prudent. Now, therefore, give ear to me, and I will speak to her father, and when we return from Rages, we will celebrate the nuptials. For I know Raguel, that he will not give her to another man, conformably to the law of Moses, or he will incur death; because thou art entitled to the inheritance before any other. Then," &c. Ver. 14. H.—The law regulated the marriages of heiresses, (Num. xxxvi. 6,) though not under pain of death. C.

VER. 14. Died. Gr. "were destroyed in the nuptial chamber (νυμφη). And as I am my father's only son, I fear lest, approaching to her, I should die like the former; because a demon is in love with her, which hurts no one but such as approach to her. Now, therefore, I fear lest I should die, and bring down the life of my father and mother upon me to their grave." H.—If this text may be styled Scripture, it only records the opinion of Toby, (C.) or what he had "heard." H.

VER. 15. To hell. That is, to the place where the souls were kept below, 15 Now I am afraid, lest the same thing should happen to me also: and whereas I am the only child of my parents, I should bring down their old age with sorrow to hell.

16 Then the angel, Raphael, said to him: Hear me, and I will show thee who they are, over whom the devil can prevail.

17 For they who in such manner receive matrimony, as to shut out God from themselves, and from their mind, and to give themselves to their lust, as the horse and mule, which have not understanding, over them the devil hath power.

18 But thou, when thou shalt take her, go into the chamber, and for three days keep thyself continent from her, and give thyself to nothing else but to prayers with her.

19 And on that night lay the liver of the fish on the fire, and the devil shall be driven away.

20 But the second night thou shalt be admitted into the society of the holy patriarchs.

21 And the third night thou shalt obtain a blessing, that sound children may be born of you.

22 And when the third night is past, thou shalt take the virgin, with the fear of the Lord, moved rather for love of children than for lust, that in the seed of Abraham thou mayst obtain a blessing in children.

CHAP. VII.

They are kindly entertained by Raguel. Tobias demandeth Sara to wife.

AND ^bthey went in to Raguel, and Raguel received them with joy.

2 And Raguel looking upon Tobias, said to Anna, his wife: How like is this young man to my cousin?

3 And when he had spoken these words, he said Whence are ye, young men, our brethren?

before the coming of Christ (Ch.); as the just had not yet access to heaven. See Gen. xxxvii. W.—Gr. adds, "and they have no other son to bury them."

VER. 16. Raphael. Gr. "said to him: Dost thou not remember that thy father ordered thee to take a wife of thy kindred? Now then hearken to me, brother; for she shall be thy wife. Mind not the devil. For this night she shall be given in marriage to thee; and if thou enter the nuptial chamber, thou shalt take the ashes of incense, and shalt place thereon some of the heart and liver," &c. Ver. 19. H.

VER. 17. Power. Yet he is not always permitted to kill them, as God often allows them time for repentance, or suffers them to draw down heavier judgments. M.—"The devils can do no more than God secretly permits" (S. Aug. de C. ii. 23); and "God justly suffers the wicked to fall victims to their iniquitous appetites." S. Greg. Mor. ii.

VER. 18. Days. No morality could be more pure. The Christian Church has given similar counsels, in the Capitulars of France, and of Erard, archbishop of Tours, and in many rituals published in the 16th century. The Council of Trent only advises people to approach to the sacraments of penance and the holy Eucharist, three days at least before marriage. The Greeks, in the third Council of Carthage, (c. 13,) order the first night to be spent in continence.

VER. 19. Lay. Gr. adds, "some of the heart . . . and make it smoke, and the devil shall smell, and flee away, and shall not return for ever." H.—This is contrary to reason, say our adversaries. But though devils be incorporeal, may they not be affected by certain bodies, as our souls are when our limbs are hurt? The angel chose this sort of usual exorcism, that those who were present might be convinced of the devil's departure.

VER. 20. Society. His marriage resembled that of the patriarchs. C.—Gr. "But when thou shalt go to her, arise both, and cry to the merciful God, and he will save and have pity on you. Fear not, for she was prepared for thee from eternity; and thou shalt save her, and she shall go with thee; and I flatter myself that thou shalt have children of her. And as soon as Tobias heard this, he loved her, and his soul was much attached to her: and they arrived at Ecbatana." H.

CHAP. VII. VER. 1. Joy; though as yet he only took them for Israelites. M.—Gr. "And they came to the house of Raguel. But Sara met them, and saluted them, as they did her, and she introduced them into the house."

VER. 2. Anna. Gr. and Heb. Edna, "pleasure."—Cousin. Gr. adds, "Tobit." H.

4 But they said: We are of the tribe of Nephtali, of the captivity of Ninive.

5 And Raguel said to them: Do you know Tobias, my brother? And they said: We know him.

6 And when he was speaking many good things of him, the angel said to Raguel: Tobias, concerning whom thou inquirest, is this young man's father.

7 And Raguel went to him, and kissed him with tears, and weeping upon his neck, said: A blessing be upon thee, my son, because thou art the son of a good and most virtuous man.

8 And Anna, his wife, and Sara, their daughter, wept.

9 And after they had spoken, Raguel commanded a sheep to be killed, and a feast to be prepared. And when he desired them to sit down to dinner,

10 Tobias said: I will not eat nor drink here this day, unless thou first grant me my petition, and promise to give me Sara, thy daughter.

11 Now when Raguel heard this, he was afraid, knowing what had happened to those seven husbands that went in unto her: and he began to fear, lest it might happen to him also in like manner: and as he was in suspense, and gave no answer to his petition, 12 The angel said to him: Be not afraid to give her to this man, for to him who feareth God, is thy daughter due to be his wife: therefore another could not have her.

13 Then Raguel said: I doubt not but God hath regarded my prayers and tears in his sight.

14 And I believe he hath therefore made you come to me, that this maid might be married to one of her own kindred,* according to the law of Moses: and now doubt not but I will give her to thee.

15 And taking the right hand of his daughter, he gave it into the right hand of Tobias, saying: The God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, be with you, and may he join you together, and fulfil his blessing in you.

16 And taking paper, they made a writing of the marriage.

17 And afterwards they made merry, blessing God.

VER. 5. My. Gr. "our brother. But they replied: We know him. And he said: Is he well? But they answered: He is both alive and in health. And Tobias said: He is my father."

VER. 7. Went. Gr. "leaped up."—A. Gr. "my good . . . man. And hearing that Tobit had lost his sight, he was grieved, and wept."

VER. 9. After. Gr. "and they gave them a cordial reception. And they slew (sacrificed) a ram of the flock, and placed much food before them," (H.) to show their regard. Gen. xviii. 6. C.

VER. 14. Moses. It was not so much in force during the captivity, particularly as Raguel had only moveables; and therefore the seven former husbands had not been near relations. M.—It was a disgrace to refuse marrying a relation, who was an heiress. Num. xxxvi. 6; Ruth iv. 6. C.

VER. 15. Hand. This was the mode of confirming agreements in Media. Alex. Genial v. 3.—The custom prevailed in marriages, (Lam. v. 6; Isa. lxii. 8.) as it does still among Christians.—It. Gr. "her for a wife to Tobias, and said: Behold, take care of her according to the law of Moses, and go to thy father. And he blessed them. And he called Edna, his wife, and taking a book, wrote a note, (H. or contract. C.) and sealed it, and they began to eat. H.—It was almost universally the custom to have such writings, particularly where polygamy prevailed. The wives of lower condition were taken without formality. C.

VER. 18. Chamber. Different from that where they kept the feast, and perhaps (H.) not the same with the nuptial chamber, which had been so unfortunate, in order that Sara might not be so much alarmed. C.

VER. 19. Wept. at the recollection of what had happened. M.

18 And Raguel called to him Anna, his wife, and bid her prepare another chamber.

19 And she brought Sara, her daughter, in thither, and she wept.

20 And she said to her: Be of good cheer, my daughter: the Lord of heaven give thee joy for the trouble thou hast undergone.

CHAP. VIII.

Tobias burneth part of the fish's liver, and Raphael bindeth the devil. Tobias and Sara pray.

AND ^bafter they had supped, they brought in the young man to her.

2 And Tobias, remembering the angel's word, took out of his bag part of the liver, and laid it upon burning coals.

3 Then the angel, Raphael, took the devil, and bound him in the desert of Upper Egypt.

4 Then Tobias exhorted the virgin, and said to her. Sara, arise, and let us pray to God to-day, and to-morrow, and the next day: because for these three nights we are joined to God: and when the third night is over, we will be in our own wedlock.

5 For we are the children of saints, and we must not be joined together like heathens that know not God.

6 So they both arose, and prayed earnestly both together that health might be given them.

7 And Tobias said: Lord God of our fathers, may the heavens and the earth, and the sea, and the fountains, and the rivers, and all thy creatures that are in them, bless thee.

8 ^cThou madest Adam of the slime of the earth, and gavest him Eve for a helper.

9 And now, Lord, thou knowest, that not for fleshly lust do I take my sister to wife, but only for the love of posterity, in which thy name may be blessed for ever and ever.

10 Sara also said: Have mercy on us, O Lord, have mercy on us, and let us grow old both together in health.

11 And it came to pass about the cock crowing, Raguel ordered his servants to be called for, and they went with him together to dig a grave.

^b A. M. 3299.—^c Gen. ii. 7.

VER. 20. And she. Gr. adds, "received the tears of her daughter; and said, I have confidence, child."—For the. Gr. "instead of this sorrow, have a good heart, daughter." H.

CHAP. VIII. VER. 2. Bag, (cassiditi,) resembling a wallet, or pannier, for provisions. C.—Liver. Chap. vi. 8. This mystically represented the Passion of Christ, by which the devil is expelled from men's hearts. S. Aug. ser. 28, de Sancto Prosper. Promis. ii. c. 39. W.—Gr. "and he took the ashes of incense, and placed thereon the heart of the fish and the liver, causing them to smoke. And when the devil perceived the odour, he fled to the highest parts of Egypt, and the angel bound him," (H.) confining his malice to those deserts. Jesus Christ insinuates that the devil walks through dry places. Matt. xii. 24. C.—This country was chosen as being very remote from Media. Houbigant.—It was afterwards sanctified by the presence of many Christian solitaires. H.

VER. 8. Of. Gr. "And gavest him Eve for his wife, an assistant, and a support. From these all the seed of men was formed. Thou didst say, It is not good for man to be alone: Let us make for him a helper like unto himself. And now, Lord," &c.

VER. 9. Only. Gr. "for truth," resolving to be ever faithful to her. H.—We cannot read the pure sentiments of Tobias and Sara, brought up in the midst of infidels, without surprise. Nothing more perfect could be required of Christians (C.) in the married state. H.—S. Aug. (Doct. x. and xviii.) adduces this text to show the true intent of marriage.

VER. 11. It. Gr. "Raguel arising, went and dug a grave, saying, Lest this man also should die. Then Raguel came to his own house, and said to Edna, his wife."

12 For he said : Lest, perhaps, it may have happened to him, in like manner as it did to the other seven husbands that went in unto her.

13 And when they had prepared the pit, Raguel went back to his wife, and said to her :

14 Send one of thy maids, and let her see if he be dead, that I may bury him before it be day.

15 So she sent one of her maid-servants, who went into the chamber, and found them safe and sound, sleeping both together.

16 And returning, she brought the good news : and Raguel, and Anna, his wife, blessed the Lord, 17 And said : We bless thee, O Lord God of Israel, because it hath not happened as we suspected.

18 For thou hast shown thy mercy to us, and hast shut out from us the enemy that persecuted us.

19 And thou hast taken pity upon two only children. Make them, O Lord, bless thee more fully : and to offer up to thee a sacrifice of thy praise, and of their health, that all nations may know, that thou alone art God in all the earth.

20 And immediately Raguel commanded his servants to fill up the pit they had made, before it was day.

21 And he spoke to his wife to make ready a feast, and prepare all kind of provisions that are necessary for such as go a journey.

22 He caused also two fat kine, and four wethers to be killed, and a banquet to be prepared for all his neighbours, and all his friends.

23 And Raguel adjured Tobias, to abide with him two weeks.

24 And of all things which Raguel possessed, he gave one half to Tobias, and made a writing, that the half that remained, should, after their decease, come also to Tobias.

CHAP. IX.

The angel, Raphael, goeth to Gabelus, receiveth the money, and bringeth him to the marriage.

THEN *Tobias called the angel to him, whom he took to be a man, and said to him : Brother Azarias, I pray thee hearken to my words :

2 If I should give myself to be thy servant, I should not make a worthy return for thy care.

3 However, I beseech thee, to take with thee beasts and servants, and to go to Gabelus, to Rages, the city of

* A. M. 3299.

VER. 17. And. Gr. "saying, Blessed art thou, O God, in all pure and holy benediction ; and may all thy saints, and all thy creatures, bless thee. Vea, may all thy angels, and thy elect, bless thee for all ages. Blessed art thou, because thou hast filled me with joy, and it has not happened as I suspected : but thou hast done unto us according to thy great mercy. And," ver. 19.

VER. 19. Make. Gr. "Show them mercy, Lord. Perfect their life in health, with gladness and mercy. But he ordered his domestics to fill up the grave, and he made them a marriage feast for fourteen days. And," ver. 23. The ancient Vulg. seems rather more conformable to the present. "Raguel ordered his wife to make several loaves, and going himself to the flock, he brought two cows and four rams, and ordered them to prepare a feast. He called Tobias, and swore to him, saying, Thou shalt not depart hence these fourteen days, but remain here eating and drinking with me, and shalt fill with joy me and my daughter, who has been greatly afflicted. Receive half of my goods, and thou shalt return safe and sound to thy father ; and after my death, and that of my wife, thou shalt have the other half." H.—Gr. and Heb. mention nothing of the beasts slaughtered, or of Raguel's testament. C.

VER. 23. Adjured. Gr. "said to him before the two days of the marriage were accomplished, with an oath, that he should not depart till the fourteen days of marriage were over ; and then taking half of his goods, he might depart in health to his father, and receive the rest when I and my wife shall be no more." H.

the Medes : and to restore to him his note of hand, and receive of him the money, and desire him to come to my wedding.

4 For thou knowest that my father numbereth the days : and if I stay one day more, his soul will be afflicted.

5 And, indeed, thou seest how Raguel hath adjured me, whose adjuring I cannot despise.

6 Then Raphael took four of Raguel's servants, and two camels, and went to Rages, the city of the Medes : and finding Gabelus, gave him his note of hand, and received of him all the money.

7 And he told him concerning Tobias, the son of Tobias, all that had been done : and made him come with him to the wedding.

8 And when he was come into Raguel's house, he found Tobias sitting at the table : and he leaped up, and they kissed each other : and Gabelus wept, and blessed God,

9 And said : The God of Israel bless thee, because thou art the son of a very good and just man, and that feareth God, and doth alms-deeds :

10 And may a blessing come upon thy wife, and upon your parents.

11 And may you see your children, and your children's children, unto the third and fourth generation : and may your seed be blessed by the God of Israel, who reigneth for ever and ever.

12 And when all had said, Amen ; they went to the feast : but the marriage feast they celebrated, also, with the fear of the Lord.

CHAP. X.

The parents lament the long absence of their son, Tobias. He sets out to return.

BUT^b as Tobias made longer stay upon occasion of the marriage, Tobias, his father, was solicitous, saying : Why, thinkest thou, doth my son tarry, or why is he detained there ?

2 Is Gabelus dead, thinkest thou, and no man will pay him the money ?

3 And he began to be exceedingly sad, both he and Anna, his wife, with him : and they began both to weep together : because their son did not return to them on the day appointed.

4 *But his mother wept and was quite disconsolate, and said : Woe, woe is me, my son, why did we send thee

CHAP. IX. VER. 1. The angel. Gr. "Raphael, and said."—I pray. Gr. "Take with thee a servant and two camels," ver. 6. H.

VER. 5. Whose. Gr. "that I should not go out, and my father," &c., ver. 4. H.

VER. 6. And received. Gr. "But he produced the coffers sealed up, and gave him, and they set off early together, and came to the wedding, and Tobias blessed his wife," (H.) by removing the source of her disgrace. The Heb. of Fagius is equally concise in this chapter, omitting all the rest. C.—Munster has only, "Raguel wept, embracing Tobias, and said, Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, who has made thee (Sara) marry this man. May he, in his mercy, grant you male children, who may employ themselves in the law of the Lord."

CHAP. X. VER. 1. But. Gr. "And Tobit, his father, counted each day and as the days of the journey were ended, and they did not come, Tobit said, Is he not put to shame ?" (H.) and refused payment ? C.—Old Vulg. and Prot. "detained."

VER. 3. He. Gr. "He was much troubled. But his wife said to him, The boy is come to an untimely end, since he tarries ; and she began to mourn for him, and said, I am not, or am I not full of solicitude, my son, that I have let thee go, the light of my eyes and Tobit ?" Ver. 6. Without this interrogation, (H.) the Gr. seems to be corrupt (C.) ; and ὡς, "how," or ὅτι, "woe," should be put instead of ὅτι, "not." Drus., &c. "Now I care for nothing, my son, since I have let thee go, the light," &c. Prot.

to go to a strange country, the light of our eyes, the staff of our old age, the comfort of our life, the hope of our posterity?

5 We, having all things together in thee alone, ought not to have let thee go from us.

6 And Tobias said to her: Hold thy peace, and be not troubled, our son is safe: that man with whom we sent him, is very trusty.

7 But she could by no means be comforted, but daily running out, looked round about, and went into all the ways by which there seemed any hope he might return, that she might, if possible, see him coming afar off.

8 But Raguel said to his son-in-law: Stay here, and I will send a messenger to Tobias, thy father, that thou art in health.

9 And Tobias said to him: I know that my father and mother now count the days, and their spirit is grievously afflicted within them.

10 And when Raguel had pressed Tobias with many words, and he by no means would hearken to him, he delivered Sara unto him, and half of all his substance in men-servants, and women-servants, in cattle, in camels, and in kine, and in much money, and sent him away safe and joyful from him,

11 Saying: The holy angel of the Lord be with you in your journey, and bring you through safe, and that you may find all things well about your parents, and my eyes may see your children before I die.

12 And the parents taking their daughter, kissed her, and let her go:

13 Admonishing her to honour her father and mother-in-law, to love her husband, to take care of the family, to govern the house, and to behave herself irreprehensibly.

CHAP. XI.

Tobias anointeth his father's eyes with the fish's gall, and he recovereth his sight.

AND^a as they were returning they came to Charan, which is in the midway to Ninive, the eleventh day.

2 And the angel said: Brother Tobias, thou knowest how thou didst leave thy father.

3 If it please thee, therefore, let us go before, and let the family follow softly after us, together with thy wife, and with the beasts.

4 And as this their going pleased him, Raphael said to Tobias: Take with thee of the gall of the fish, for it will be necessary. So Tobias took some of that gall and departed.

5 But Anna sat beside the way daily, on the top of a hill, from whence she might see afar off.

6 And while she watched his coming from that place, she saw him afar off, and presently perceived it was her son coming: and returning, she told her husband, saying: Behold thy son cometh.

7 And Raphael said to Tobias: As soon as thou shalt come into thy house, forthwith adore the Lord, thy God: and giving thanks to him, go to thy father, and kiss him:

8 And immediately anoint his eyes with this gall of the fish, which thou carriest with thee. For be assured that his eyes shall be presently opened, and thy father shall see the light of heaven, and shall rejoice in the sight of thee.

9 Then the dog, which had been with them in the way, ran before, and coming as if he had brought the news, showed his joy by his fawning and wagging his tail.

10 And his father, that was blind, rising up, began to run, stumbling with his feet: and giving a servant his hand, went to meet his son.

11 And receiving him, kissed him, as did also his wife, and they began to weep for joy.

12 And when they had adored God, and given him thanks, they sat down together.

13 Then Tobias taking of the gall of the fish, unointed his father's eyes.

14 And he stayed about half an hour: and a white skin began to come out of his eyes, like the skin of an egg.

15 And Tobias took hold of it, and drew it from his eyes, and immediately he recovered his sight.

16 And they glorified God, both he and his wife, and all that knew him.

17 And Tobias said: I bless thee, O Lord, God of Israel, because thou hast chastised me, and thou hast saved me: and behold I see Tobias, my son.

VER. 6. That. Gr. "And she said to him, Be silent, deceive me not. My son is lost; and she went out daily into the road without, by which they departed. In the day time she eat no bread, and the night she spent in bewailing her son, Tobias, till the fourteen days of the wedding were finished, which Raguel had adjured him to tarry there. And," ver. 9. H.

VER. 9. Days. It would require forty-two, (T.) or thirty-eight, (Torniel,) or thirty-four days, (Salien. M.) to perform what is here recorded. H.—But it would be difficult to ascertain the precise time. To go from Ninive to Eebatana would occupy eight or ten days. C.—If, therefore, the parents of Tobias expected that he would return in about twenty days, they might well wonder at the fourteen days' delay occasioned by the marriage. H.

VER. 10. When. Gr. "And Tobias said, No; but dismiss me to my father and mother. Then Raguel rising up, gave him Sarra, his wife, and half his goods, bodies, beasts, and silver." This expression, bodies, (H.) or men, generally denotes slaves; but it may also be put for others, (C.) who were in the train of Sara. Grot.—Safe. Gr. "with blessing, saying, May God prosper you, children, the God of heaven, before I die; and he said to his daughter, Honour thy father and mother-in-law, they are now thy parents. May I hear a good report of thee, and he kissed her; and Edna said to Tobias, Dear brother, may the Lord of heaven re-establish thee, and grant me to behold thy children by my daughter, Sarra, that I may rejoice before the Lord; and behold, I place my daughter with thee as a deposit, and thou must not grieve her. Afterwards she departed, and Toby also blessing God, and he made his journey prosperous, and blessed Raguel, and Edna, his wife." H.—The Jews still adopt many customs similar to those which we here behold, as this is a most excellent description of a holy marriage. Serarius. C.—Some also prevail in the Christian Church, though marriage is now become more holy, and a sacrament. Cat. Rom. q. 22. W.

CHAP. XI. VER. 3. If. Gr. "Let us go quickly before thy wife, and prepare the house." H.—This would be necessary, for the reception of so many goods, as well as to relieve the anxiety (C.) of the aged parents, and prevent surprise.

VER. 4. And. Gr. "Take now in thy hand the gall of the fish. And they went on. And the dog followed close up to them, (H. Syr. 'ran before them,' C.); and Anna."

VER. 6. Cometh. Gr. adds, "and the man who went with him."

VER. 7. To. Gr. "I know, Tobias, that thy father will open his eyes. Anoint, therefore, the gall upon his eyes, and feeling the smart, he will rub and remove the white specks, and shall see thee." H.

VER. 9. The dog. &c. This may seem a very minute circumstance to be recorded in sacred history; but, as we learn from our Saviour, (S. Matt. v. 18,) there are iotas and tittles in the word of God; that is to say, things that appear minute, but which have indeed a deep and mysterious meaning in them. Ch.—V. Bede. S. Jer. in Isa. lvi. S. Aug. con. Faust. xxii. 56. W.—The other versions relate this event. Ver. 4.

VER. 10. And. After ver. 7, Gr. adds, "and Anna, running before, fell upon the neck of her son, and said to him, I have beheld thee, son; henceforth I may die. And they both wept. And Tobit went out towards the door, and he stumbled. But his son ran up to him, and took hold of his father, and he spread the gall upon his father's eyes, saying, Have confidence, father. But as soon as they began to smart, he rubbed his eyes, and the white specks came off like skins from the corners: and beholding his son, he fell upon his neck, and wept. Then he said," ver. 17. H.

VER. 18. Days. Or perhaps hours (H.); as the other versions intimate that Sara arrived the same day. C.—Gr. "And his son entered, rejoicing, and related to his father the great things which had taken place in Media. And Tobit went 18 And after seven days, Sara, his son's wife, and all the family, arrived safe, and the cattle, and the camels, and an abundance of money of his wife's : and that money, also, which he had received of Gabelus :

19 And he told his parents all the benefits of God, which he had done to him by the man that conducted him.

20 And Achior, and Nabath, the kinsmen of Tobias, came, rejoicing for Tobias, and congratulating with him for all the good things that God had done for him.

21 And for seven days they feasted and rejoiced, all with great joy.

CHAP. XII.

Raphael maketh himself known.

THEN Tobias called to him his son, and said to him : What can we give to this holy man that is come with thee ?

2 Tobias answering, said to his father : Father, what wages shall we give him ? or what can be worthy of his benefits ?

3 He conducted me and brought me safe again, he received the money of Gabelus, he caused me to have my wife, and he chased from her the evil spirit, he gave joy to her parents, myself he delivered from being devoured by the fish, thee also he hath made to see the light of heaven, and we are filled with all good things through him. What can we give him sufficient for these things ?

4 But I beseech thee, my father, to desire him, that he would vouchsafe to accept of one half of all things that have been brought.

5 So the father and the son calling him, took him aside : and began to desire him that he would vouchsafe to accept of half of all things that they had brought.

6 Then he said to them secretly : Bless ye the God of heaven, give glory to him in the sight of all that live, because he hath shown his mercy to you.

7 For it is good to hide the secret of a king : but honourable to reveal and confess the works of God.

out to meet his daughter-in-law, rejoicing, and blessing God, to the gate of Ninive. And those who saw him walking were astonished, because he saw. And Tobit confessed before them that God had taken pity on him. And as Tobit approached to Sarra, his daughter-in-law, he blessed her, saying, Mayest thou come with safety, daughter. Blessed be God, who has brought thee to us, and blessed be thy father and thy mother. And there was joy among all his brethren at Ninive. And," ver. 20. H.

VER. 21. Joy. Old Vulg. adds, "and many presents were made to him."

CHAP. XII. VER. 1. What. Gr., Heb., and Syr. C. "See thou give the man who has come with thee his hire, and something must be added to it." H.

VER. 2. Said. Gr. "Father, I shall not be hurt if I give him half of what I have brought, since he has conducted me safe back to thee, and has healed my wife, and brought my money, and likewise has cured thee. And the old man said, He justly deserves it. And he called the angel, and said to him, Take half of what you have brought, and depart in health. Then," ver. 6.

VER. 7. Hide. Gr. "To bless God, and to extol his name, exposing with honour the words of God, and delay not to confess unto him. For," &c. H.—The old Vulg. greatly abridges the remainder of this book, having only, "Then Raphael having called the two Tobies, said to them, Since thou hast not delayed to arise, and to leave thy meals to bury the dead, I have been sent to try thee, to heal thee, and to deliver thy daughter-in-law. I am Raphael, one of the angels who assist and appear before the brightness of God. Hereupon the two Tobies were startled, and fell prostrate on the ground, and were seized with fear. And Raphael said, Fear not, peace be with you. Bless the Lord all the days of your life, and sing his praises. You thought that I eat when I was at table with you. But you saw with your eyes (H. only a vision. C.) ; wherefore bless the Lord upon the earth, and I praise his goodness. As for me, I return to him who sent me. Write down all that has happened. The angel having spoken thus to Tobias, the latter wrote this prayer as a monument of his joy, and said, Blessed be the Lord, who is great in eternity, because his reign endures for ever. It is He who strikes, and who shows mercy, who conducts to the grave, and who, by his majesty, rescues from the greatest miseries ; and no one can withdraw himself from his hands. End of Tobit the just. H.

8 Prayer is good with fasting and alms, more than to lay up treasures of gold :

9 For alms delivereth from death, and the same is that which purgeth away sins, and maketh to find mercy and life everlasting.

10 But they that commit sin and iniquity, are enemies to their own soul.

11 I discover then the truth unto you, and I will not hide the secret from you.

12 When thou didst pray with tears, and didst bury the dead, and didst leave thy dinner, and hide the dead, by day, in thy house, and bury them by night, I offered thy prayer to the Lord.

13 And because thou wast acceptable to God, it was necessary that temptation should prove thee.

14 And now the Lord hath sent me to heal thee, and to deliver Sara, thy son's wife, from the devil.

15 For I am the angel Raphael, one of the seven, who stand before the Lord.

16 And when they had heard these things, they were troubled, and being seized with fear, they fell upon the ground on their face.

17 And the angel said to them : Peace be to you, fear not.

18 For when I was with you, I was there by the will of God : bless ye him, and sing praises to him.

19 I seemed, indeed, to eat, and to drink with you. but I use an invisible meat and drink, which cannot be seen by men.

20 It is time, therefore, that I return to him that sent me : but bless ye God, and publish all his wonderful works.

21 And when he had said these things, he was taken from their sight, and they could see him no more.

22 Then they lying prostrate for three hours upon their face, blessed God : and rising up, they told all his wonderful works.

VER. 8. Alms. Gr. adds, "and justice. Better is a little with justice, than much with iniquity." H.—Fasting and alms are like the wings of prayer. W. See chap. iv. 11.

VER. 10. Soul. If this were understood of the present life, nothing could be less accurate, as the wicked often prosper. See Psal. x. 6 ; John xii. 25. C.

VER. 11. I. Gr. "I will not hide from you any word or thing. I said then : It is good to conceal the mystery of the king, but glorious to manifest the works of God. And now, when thou and thy daughter-in-law, Sarra, did pray, I brought forward the memorial of your prayer before the Holy One." H.—The angels are represented as God's ministers, offering our prayers to him. Apoc. viii. 3. C. S. Aug. W.

VER. 14. From the devil, is not in Greek. H.—In this history, as well as in other parts of Scripture, we have convincing proofs of the good which each one receives from his angel guardian, and from the other blessed spirits. See S. Luke xv. and xvi. S. Chrys. in Col. hom. 3. S. Aug. de Civ. Dei, xi. 31, &c. W.

VER. 15. Raphael. We know also the names of Michael and Gabriel. All others are apocryphal ; such as Uriel, Satiel, Jeadriel, Barahiel, &c.—Seven. This number is clearly specified by S. John, Apoc. i. 4. C.—Lord, ready to fulfil his orders, as innumerable other angels, of inferior degree, are likewise. M. Dan vii. 10.—These were the princes of the heavenly court. S. Jerom (con. Jovin.) admits only seven orders of angels. C.—Gr. "I am Raphael, one of the seven holy angels who offer up the prayers of the saints, and go out before the glory of the Holy One. And they were both troubled," &c. (H.) at so unusual a thing, (M.) and filled with reverential awe. H.

VER. 17. Be. Gr. "shall be with you. But praise God : for I came not of my own accord, but by the will of our God. Wherefore praise him for ever."

VER. 19. I. Gr. "I appeared to you all the days ; yet I did not eat nor drink. But you beheld a vision." H.

VER. 20. It. Gr. "And now confess to God, because I ascend to him who sent me. Write ye all these occurrences in a book. And they arose, and beheld him no longer ; and they proclaimed the great and wonderful works of God, and how the angel of the Lord had appeared to them." H.

CHAP. XIII.

Tobias, the father, praiseth God, exhorting all Israel to do the same. Prophetieth the restoration and better state of Jerusalem.

AND ^aTobias, the elder, opening his mouth, blessed the Lord, and said: Thou art great, O Lord, for ever, and thy kingdom is unto all ages:

2 ^bFor thou scourgest, and thou savest: thou ledest down to hell, and bringest up again: and there is none that can escape thy hand.

3 Give glory to the Lord, ye children of Israel, and praise him in the sight of the Gentiles:

4 Because he hath therefore scattered you among the Gentiles, who know not him, that you may declare his wonderful works, and make them know that there is no other Almighty God besides him.

5 He hath chastised us for our iniquities: and he will save us for his own mercy.

6 See then what he hath done with us, and with fear and trembling give ye glory to him: and extol the eternal King of worlds in your works.

7 As for me, I will praise him in the land of my captivity: because he hath shown his majesty toward a sinful nation.

8 Be converted, therefore, ye sinners, and do justice before God, believing that he will show his mercy to you.

9 And I and my soul will rejoice in him.

10 Bless ye the Lord, all his elect, keep days of joy, and give glory to him.

11 Jerusalem, city of God, the Lord hath chastised thee for the works of thy hands.

12 Give glory to the Lord for thy good things, and bless the God eternal, that he may rebuild his tabernacle in thee, and may call back all the captives to thee, and thou mayst rejoice for ever and ever.

13 Thou shalt shine with a glorious light: and all the ends of the earth shall worship thee.

14 Nations from afar shall come to thee: and shall bring gifts, and shall adore the Lord in thee, and shall esteem thy land as holy.

^a A. M. 3299.—^b Deut. xxxii. 39. 1 Kings ii. 6; Wisd. xvi. 13.—^c Isa. lx. 5.

CHAP. XIII. VER. 1. Tobias. Gr. "Tobit wrote a prayer for exultation, and said." H.

VER. 2. Hell; death. M.—Out of hell there is no redemption or return. H. 1 Kings ii. 6.

VER. 4. Therefore, is not in Greek. H.—But God had the good of the Gentiles in view, that they might become acquainted with his law, and behold the conduct of his saints, Tobias, Esther, Daniel, &c., (C.) as well as to punish his people. H.—Temporal afflictions are sometimes for the spiritual good of others. W.—Gr. "because he has scattered you among them. There show forth his grandeur, and extol him before every one living: for he is our Lord and God, our Father for ever. Yea, he hath chastised us in our iniquities, and again he will have mercy, and will gather us from all nations where he has scattered us, if ye be converted to him with all your heart, and with all your soul, to act sincerely. Then he will turn towards you, and will not hide his face from you; and ye shall behold what he will do with you, and ye shall confess to him with all your mouth, and bless the Lord of power, and extol the King of ages. 1," &c., ver. 7. H.

VER. 7. Nation the Israelites, (M.) whom he has chastised. H.—Ninive was still flourishing. Yet the Greek seems to refer to the Assyrian idolaters, (C.) or to both. Gr. "and I show his power and magnificence to a sinful nation. Who knows if he will love and show his mercy to you? I exalt my God, and my soul magnifies the King of heaven, and shall gladly proclaim his greatness: let all speak and confess to him in justice."

VER. 11. Jerusalem. What is prophetically delivered here, and in the following chapter, with relation to Jerusalem, is partly to be understood of the rebuilding the city after the captivity, and partly of the spiritual Jerusalem, which is the Church of Christ, and the eternal Jerusalem in heaven. Ch.—The Greek shows that (C.) he speaks prophetically (W.): "Jerusalem, holy city, He will chastise thee for the works of thy children, and again he will show mercy on the children of the just. Confess to the Lord, for he is good; and bless the King of ages, that his tabernacle may be again rebuilt in thee with joy." H.

15 For they shall call upon the great name in thee.

16 They shall be cursed that shall despise thee: and they shall be condemned that shall blaspheme thee: and blessed shall they be that shall build thee up.

17 But thou shalt rejoice in thy children, because they shall all be blessed, and shall be gathered together to the Lord.

18 Blessed are all they that love thee, and that rejoice in thy peace.

19 My soul, bless thou the Lord, because the Lord, our God, hath delivered Jerusalem, his city, from all her troubles.

20 Happy shall I be if there shall remain of my seed, to see the glory of Jerusalem.

21 The gates of Jerusalem shall be built of sapphire, and of emerald, and all the walls thereof round about of precious stones.

22 All its streets shall be paved with white and clean stones: and Alleluia shall be sung in its streets.

23 Blessed be the Lord, who hath exalted it, and may he reign over it for ever and ever, Amen.

CHAP. XIV.

Old Tobias dieth at the age of a hundred and two years, after exhorting his son and grandson to piety, foreshowing that Ninive shall be destroyed, and Jerusalem rebuilt. The younger Tobias returneth with his family to Raguel, and dieth happily as he had lived.

AND the words of Tobias were ended. And after Tobias was restored to his sight, he lived two and forty years, and saw the children of his grandchildren.

2 And after he had lived a hundred and two years, he was buried honourably in Ninive.

3 For he was six and fifty years old when he lost the sight of his eyes, and sixty when he recovered it again.

4 And the rest of his life was in joy, and with great increase of the fear of God he departed in peace.

5 And at the hour of his death he called unto him his son, Tobias, and his children, seven young men, his grandsons, and said to them:

6 The destruction of Ninive is at hand: for the word

^d Apoc. xxi. 16.—^e A. M. 3341, A. C. 663.

VER. 13. Thou. Gr. "Many nations from afar shall come to the name of the Lord God, with presents in their hands, presents for the King of heaven; race after race shall praise thee, and give exultation. They," &c., ver. 16. H.

VER. 14. Holy. This soil has been carried into distant countries, out of reverence, (4 Kings v. 17. S. Aug. de Civ. Dei, xxii. 8,) and has been honoured with miracles. S. Greg. Turon. i. 7.

VER. 17. But. Gr. "rejoice, and exult for the children of the just, because they shall be gathered together, and shall bless the Lord of the just." H.—The Jews became more faithful after the captivity, so that the most cruel persecution of Epiphanes could not overcome their resolution; and the world was astonished at the courage of the martyrs. and the exemplary conduct of the primitive Christians. C.

VER. 21. Emerald. Gr. adds, "and precious stone: thy walls, and towers, and battlements, of pure gold. And the streets of Jerusalem shall be strewn with beryl and carbuncle, and stone from Soudair." H.—This description resembles that of Isaiah, (liv. 11,) who lived a little before. S. John (Apoc. xxi. 10) represents the Church in the same ornaments, denoting the merits of Christ and the virtues of his saints. C.

VER. 22. Alleluia, a sound of praise, (S. Aug. ep. 86,) means, "Praise ye the Lord (H.) with joy." W.—It is disused in times of penance. C.—Gr. adds, "and they shall praise, saying, Blessed be God, who has exalted it for ever."

CHAP. XIV. VER. 1. Words. Gr. "confession (or hymn of praise); and he was fifty-eight years old when he lost his sight, which he recovered eight years after, and gave alms, and continued to fear the Lord God, and to confess unto him. Now he arrived at a very advanced age."

VER. 6. Thy. Gr. "Son, take thy children. Behold, I am grown old, and my life is hastening to an end. Depart into Media, my son, for I believe all that the prophet, Jonas, spoke concerning Ninive, that it will be overturned. But in Media there will be more peace for a time, and that our brethren in the land will be scattered from the good land: and Jerusalem shall be deserted, and the house of the Lord must be fulfilled: "and our brethren, that are scattered abroad from the land of Israel, shall return to it.

7 And all the land thereof, that is desert, shall be filled with people, and the house of God which is burnt in it, shall again be rebuilt: and all that fear God shall return thither.

8 And the Gentiles shall leave their idols, and shall come into Jerusalem, and shall dwell in it,

9 And all the kings of the earth shall rejoice in it, adoring the King of Israel.

10 Hearken, therefore, my children, to your father: serve the Lord in truth, and seek to do the things that please him:

11 And command your children that they do justice and alms-deeds, and that they be mindful of God, and bless him at all times in truth, and with all their power.

of God in it will be burnt, and shall be abandoned for a time; and they shall build the house, not like the former, till the times of the world or age be accomplished; and afterwards they shall return from the captivities, and shall build Jerusalem gloriously; and the house of God shall be built in it, and the edifice shall be glorious for ever, as the prophets have spoken concerning it; and all the Gentiles shall turn truly to fear the Lord God, and shall undermine (and destroy) their idols; and all the Gentiles shall bless the Lord," &c., ver. 9. H.—This text is of importance, as it specifies the name of Jonas, and is quoted by S. Jerom (ibid.); though Nahum (iii. 8) and Sophonias (ii. 13) also foretold the destruction of Ninive. It speaks of the future, and not of the past ruin of the temple, which certainly took place after the death of Tobias. C.

VER. 9. And. Gr. "And his people shall confess to God, and the Lord shall exalt his people, and all shall rejoice who love the Lord God in truth and justice, showing mercy to our brethren. And now, son, depart from Ninive; for what he prophet, Jonas, spoke, shall surely be accomplished." H.

VER. 10. Seek with diligence, not barely doing what you are commanded. H.—Gr. is much more diffuse. C.—"But do thou keep the law and the ordinances, be a lover of alms-deeds, and just, that it may be well with thee. Bury me with decency, and thy mother with me, and tarry then no longer at Ninive. Son, behold what Aman (Syr. Acab.) did to Achiachar, who fed him, how he conducted him from light into darkness, and what return he made him. Now, Achiachar met with safety: but he received his due, and he went down into darkness. Manasses gave alms, and was rescued from the snare of death, which was laid for him: but Aman fell into the snare, and perished. And now, son, behold the effects of alms-

12 And now, children, hear me, and do not stay here: but as soon as you shall bury your mother, by me, in one sepulchre, without delay direct your steps to depart hence.

13 For I see that its iniquity will bring it to destruction.

14 And it came to pass, that after the death of his mother, Tobias departed out of Ninive with his wife, and children, and children's children, and returned to his father and mother-in-law.

15 And he found them in health in a good old age: and he took care of them, and he closed their eyes: and all the inheritance of Raguel's house came to him: and he saw his children's children, to the fifth generation.

16 And after he had lived ninety-nine years in the fear of the Lord, with joy they buried him.

17 And all his kindred, and all his generation continued in good life, and in holy conversation, so that they were acceptable, both to God and to men, and to all that dwelt in the land.

deeds, and how justice brings deliverance. While he was speaking these things, his soul failed upon the bed: but he was 150 years old, and he buried him honourably." H.

VER. 14. And. Gr. "And when Anna, his mother, was dead, he buried her with his father. But Tobias departed with his wife and sons to Ecbatana, to Raguel, his father-in-law, and lived to an honourable old age; and he buried honourably his father and mother-in-law, and he inherited their substance, as well as that of his father, Tobit." H.

VER. 16. Nine. Syr. 107. C.—Gr. "But he also died at the age of 127, at Ecbatana, of Media; and he heard, before his death, of the destruction of Ninive, the citizens of which Nabuchodonosor and Assuerus led captives; and he rejoiced over Ninive before he died." We have been more particular in giving the Greek text of this book, because some took upon it as an original; and we should wish to lose no particle of the word of God, which is more precious than gold. H. C.—With joy, may refer to the surviving friends, who rejoiced interiorly at his felicity, while they wept for their own loss; or it may be understood of the deceased, who, like his father, (ver. 4. C.) rejoiced in the Lord, and in performance of good works.

VER. 17. Kindred. Behold the influence of good example (H.); and a proof that the true religion failed not in Israel, much less in Juda, or the Church of Christ. W.—The virtues of these two holy men are truly deserving of applause and imitation. They thought and acted in perfect conformity with the gospel. The father might represent the old law, under all its inconveniences, while the son holds forth the light of Christ, and banishes the devil. C.

THE BOOK OF JUDITH.

The sacred writer of this Book is generally believed to be the high priest Eliachim (called also Joachim). The transactions herein related most probably happened in his days, and in the reign of Manasses, after his repentance and return from captivity. It takes its name from that illustrious woman, by whose virtue and fortitude, and armed with prayer, the children of Israel were preserved from the destruction threatened them by Holofernes and his great army. It finishes with her canticle of thanksgiving to God. Ch.—He was a chief officer at court, under Ezechias, (4 Kings xviii. 18. H.) before he was high priest, assuming his father Helchias's name. S. Jerom (in Agg. i. 6) seems to believe that Judith left these memoirs. Yet we have no certain proof of the author. S. Jerom doubts not but this was written in Chaldee, from which language he translated it; unless he caused it to be first explained to him in Heb., as he did the Book of Tobias. C.—He professes to give "the sense," rather than a verbal translation. The Greek must have been taken from another copy, and is followed by the Syriac, in which we find some passages more exact than in the present Greek copies. The original is entirely lost. Grotius would suppose that this work is only a parable, representing the state of the Jewish church under the persecution of Epiphanes. But this singular notion has no foundation; and if it had, the authenticity of the Book would not be endangered, as the parables both of the Old and New Testament are certainly true, and written by inspiration. C.—Luther styles it a poetical comedy (Pref. et Sympos. 29); but both Jews and Christians have esteemed it a true history (W.): and this innovator (H.) allows that "the Book is beautiful, and written by an inspired prophet." C.—The Fathers have looked upon it with the utmost veneration; and S. Jerom, though he was at one time under some doubts, placed it on a level with the Books of Ruth and Esther, &c. Ep. ad Principiam.—It is admitted by Origen, Tertullian, S. Chrys., S. Hilary, V. Bede, &c., as the history of a most valiant matron, delivering God's people from a cruel tyrant. W.—Some place this event under Cambyzes, son of Cyrus (Euseb., S. Aug.); others under Xerxes, (Torniel,) or Darius Hystaspes, (E.) or Ochus (Sulp. Severus): but the opinion which has been given above is more accurate (C.); or rather Bethulia was saved, while Manasses was in captivity, (in the tenth year of his reign,) and the high priest administered affairs in his absence. At this period Judith might be thirty-five years old. She lived seventy years afterwards; and many days (perhaps eight years more) passed before the country was invaded by Phraao Nechao Chap. xvi. 30. Thus Manasses survived 45 years, Amon 2, Josias 31; total 78. This chronology removes every difficulty. Houbig. Pref.—If true, it seems probable that the work would be originally in Heb., as the Chaldee was used only after the captivity, (H.) which may be further proved from chap. i. 15. Greek Houbigan.

CHAPTER I.

Nabuchodonosor, king of the Assyrians, overcometh Arphaxad, king of the Medes.

NOW Arphaxad, king of the Medes, had brought many nations under his dominion, and he built a very strong city, which he called Ecbatana,

2 Of stones squared and hewed: he made the walls thereof seventy cubits broad, and thirty cubits high, and the towers thereof he made a hundred cubits high. But on the square of them, each side was extended the space of twenty feet.

3 And he made the gates thereof according to the height of the towers:

4 And he gloried as a mighty one in the force of his army, and in the glory of his chariots.

5 Now in the twelfth year^a of his reign: Nabuchodonosor, king of the Assyrians, who reigned in Ninive, the great city, fought against Arphaxad, and overcame him,

6 In the great plain which is called Ragau, about the Euphrates, and the Tigris, and the Jadason, in the plain of Erioch, the king of the Elicians.

7 Then was the kingdom of Nabuchodonosor exalted, and his heart was elevated: and he sent to all that dwelt in Cilicia, and Damascus, and Libanus,

8 And to the nations that are in Carmelus, and Cedar, and to the inhabitants of Galilee, in the great plain of Esdrelon,

9 And to all that were in Samaria, and beyond the river Jordan, even to Jerusalem, and all the land of Jesse, till you come to the borders of Ethiopia.

10 To all these, Nabuchodonosor, king of the Assyrians, sent messengers:

11 But they all, with one mind, refused, and sent them back empty, and rejected them without honour.

12 Then king Nabuchodonosor being angry against all that land, swore by his throne and kingdom, that he would revenge himself of all those countries.

CHAP. II.

Nabuchodonosor sendeth Holofernes to waste the countries of the west.

^a A. M. 3347, A. C. 657.

CHAP. I. VER. 1. Now. Many of the books begin with And; showing their connexion. This work formed a part of the general history. The building of Ecbatana likewise took place soon after the destruction of Ninive, mentioned in the preceding book.—Arphaxad. He was probably the same as is called Dejoces by Herodotus; to whom he attributes the building of Ecbatana, the capital city of Media (Ch.); or rather Arphaxat more resembles both in name and actions the second king, Phraortes, or Aphraartes, (Moufaucou and Houbig.) who fortified and embellished the city. C.

VER. 2. Hewed. Gr. adds, "three cubits broad and six long." The ancients aimed at solidity in their architecture, as appears from their ruins. C.—High. Salien (A. 3345) thinks there is a transposition, and that the walls were 70 cubits high. M.—What need was there of such a breadth? Gr. allows 70 in height, and 50 in breadth, which seems more proportionate. Old Vulg. has 60 cubits high, and 50 broad. On the walls of Ninive three chariots might fight abreast, (C.) and six on those of Babylon. Ctesias.—Fect. Projecting from the wall, to remove an enemy. M.—Gr. "and the towers thereof he placed above the gates 100 cubits, and the foundation was 60 cubits broad. And he made the gates to rise 70 cubits, being 40 cubits in breadth, to send out the armies of his mighty men, and to draw up his infantry." H.

VER. 5. Nabuchodonosor. Not the king of Babylon, who took and destroyed Jerusalem, but another of the same name, who reigned in Ninive; and is called, by profane historians, Easoduchin. He succeeded Asarhaddon in the kingdom of the Assyrians, and was contemporary with Manasses, king of Juda. Ch.—Him. Gr. afterwards (ver. 15) insinuates that he prevented any from mounting the throne of Media, till this work was written, "he transfixed him with his darts, and destroyed him till this day." Houbigant.

VER. 6. Ragau, near Rages. Tob. i. 16. M.—Syr. "Dura," mentioned Dan. iii. 1. C.—Jadason, or Mount Jason, above the Caspian gates (Strabo, 11); unless it may be the city Jassu, in Arinenia. Gr. has "the Hydaspes," a river of

IN^b the thirteenth year of the reign of Nabuchodonosor, the two and twentieth day of the first month, the word was given out in the house of Nabuchodonosor, king of the Assyrians, that he would revenge himself.

2 And he called all the ancients, and all the governors, and his officers of war, and communicated to them the secret of his counsel:

3 And he said that his thoughts were to bring all the earth under his empire.

4 And when this saying pleased them all, Nabuchodonosor, the king, called Holofernes, the general of his armies,

5 And said to him: Go out against all the kingdoms of the west, and against them, especially, that despised my commandment.

6 Thy eye shall not spare any kingdom, and all the strong cities thou shalt bring under my yoke.

7 Then Holofernes called the captains, and officers of the power of the Assyrians: and he mustered men for the expedition, as the king commanded him, a hundred and twenty thousand fighting men on foot, and twelve thousand archers, horsemen.

8 And he made all his warlike preparations to go before with a multitude of innumerable camels, with all provisions sufficient for the armies in abundance, and herds of oxen, and flocks of sheep, without number.

9 He appointed corn to be prepared out of all Syria, in his passage.

10 But gold and silver he took out of the king's house in great abundance.

11 And he went forth, he and all the army, with the chariots, and horsemen, and archers, who covered the face of the earth, like locusts.

12 And when he had passed through the borders of the Assyrians, he came to the great mountains of Ange, which are on the left of Cilicia: and he went up to all their castles, and took all the strong places.

13 And he took by assault, the renowned city of Melothus, and pillaged all the children of Tharsis, and the India, though Curtius (5) places it near Susa; confounding it with the Choaspes.—Elicians. Gr. "Elymeans," perhaps the same with Pontus. Heb. Ellasa. Gen. xiv. 9. C.

VER. 11. Refused. Gr. adds, "and did not come to help him in the war, because they feared him not, (H. supposing he would have enough to do with Arphaxad,) as he was but like their equal, or as one man. C.

VER. 12. Countries. Those who were subject to him did wrong in refusing aid. But the Jews were under no such obligations; and God espoused their cause the more, as the king set up for a deity. Chap. iii. C.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. Thirteenth. Gr. 18th.—Month. Nisan, in spring.

VER. 3. Empire. "The thirst of empire and riches is an old and deep-rooted cause of making war." Sallust. Frag.—Gr. adds, "and they (counsellors) judged that all flesh must be destroyed of those who had not complied with his order." H.—God laughs at the vain designs of men. C.

VER. 4. Armies. Gr. adds, "and the second after himself," in the kingdom. M.

VER. 5. Commandment. Gr. adds, he must demand "earth and water," as an acknowledgment of his dominion, and that all necessities of life belonged to him. This custom prevailed in Persia. Herod. iv. 123; Polyb. xix.; Brisson iii.

VER. 9. Syria: part of which, it seems, had submitted. C.—Gr. "and corn for every man, in abundance," (H.) for fear it should be carried off in the countries which he invaded. M.

VER. 11. Archers. Gr. adds, "a mixed multitude," not bearing arms. Exod. xii. 38.

VER. 12. When. Gr. "and they proceeded from Ninive, three days' journey, to the plain of Bektileth," or Bagdania, in Cappadocia, between Mount Argee and Taurus. Strabo (12) assures us that Argee is the highest mountain in the country, from which the two seas of Cilicia and the Euxine may be seen. C.

VER. 13. Melothus, or Melita, built by Semiramis, (Pliny, vi. 3,) in the same children of Ismahel, who were over against the face of the desert, and on the south of the land of Cellon.

14 And he passed over the Euphrates, and came into Mesopotamia: and he forced all the stately cities that were there, from the torrent of Mambre, till one comes to the sea:

15 And he took the borders thereof, from Cilicia to the coasts of Japheth, which are towards the south.

16 And he carried away all the children of Madian, and stripped them of all their riches, and all that resisted him he slew with the edge of the sword.

17 And after these things he went down into the plains of Damascus in the days of the harvest, and he set all the corn on fire, and he caused all the trees and vineyards to be cut down:

18 And the fear of them fell upon all the inhabitants of the land.

CHAP. III.

Many submit themselves to Holofernes. He destroyeth their cities, and their gods, that Nabuchodonosor only might be called god.

THEN the kings and the princes of all the cities and provinces, of Syria, Mesopotamia, and Syria Sobal, and Lybia, and Cilicia, sent their ambassadors, who coming to Holofernes, said:

2 Let thy indignation towards us cease: for it is better for us to live and serve Nabuchodonosor, the great king, and be subject to thee, than to die and to perish, or suffer the miseries of slavery.

3 All our cities and our possessions, all mountains, and hills, and fields, and herds of oxen, and flocks of sheep, and goats, and horses, and camels, and all our goods, and families, are in thy sight:

4 Let all we have be subject to thy law.

5 Both we and our children are thy servants.

6 Come to us a peaceable lord, and use our service as it shall please thee.

7 Then he came down from the mountains with horsemen, in great power, and made himself master of every city, and all the inhabitants of the land.

country.—Tharsis, or Cilicia, peopled by the son of Javan.—Ismahel, on the Euphrates, east of the Desert Arabia.

VER. 14. Mambre. Gr. "Abrona, (C.) or Arbonai" (H.); that is, from the river Chaboras to the Persian Gulf, or sea. C.

VER. 15. Japheth, or Joppe, now Jaffa. Scerarius.—Gr. "he cut in pieces all who opposed him; and he came to the borders of Japheth, which are on the south, over against Arabia."

VER. 16. Carried. Gr. "surrounded . . and burnt their tents, and plundered their folds for cattle;" μάνδρα. H.—Madian lay to the east of the Dead Sea. C.

VER. 17. Harvest. The rapidity of his conquests was astonishing, as all this had been done in six or seven weeks. Ver. 1. C.—Caused. Gr. "he burnt all their fields, and destroyed their flocks and herds, and plundered their cities, and put to the sword all their young men."

CHAP. III. VER. 1. Kings. Gr. "they sent to him ambassadors, with proposals for peace, saying: Behold we, the servants of Nabuchodonosor, the great king, lay before thee; use us as thou thinkest best," &c. These proposals were made by those on the sea-coast, from Sidon and Tyre to Ascalon, from whom Holofernes took "the choicest men," being received with honour. Ver. 10. H.—Syria, &c. These are not specified in the Greek.—Sobal, or Soba, (1 Kings xiv. 47.) near Damascus, where Ptolemy (5) places Samoulis.

VER. 2. Great. This was his usual title. Dan. ii. 30; 4 Kings xviii. 19. C.—Slavery. Yet they make an unconditional submission. H.

VER. 11. Though. Gr. "He demolished all their borders, and cut down their grove."

VER. 13. Called. Gr. "Worshipped by all nations, and that all their tongues and trices might call him g d." H.

VER. 14. Apamea, on the river Orontes, between which and the river Eleutherus, lay the Mesopotamia here mentioned.—Idumeans, or to "Rama," near Gabaa, which was on the north of Jerusalem: whereas Idumea lay far to the 8 And from all the cities he took auxiliaries, valiant men, and chosen for war.

9 And so great a fear lay upon all those provinces, that the inhabitants of all the cities, both princes and nobles, as well as the people, went out to meet him at his coming,

10 And received him with garlands, and lights, and dances, and timbrels, and flutes.

11 And though they did these things, they could not for all that mitigate the fierceness of his heart.

12 For he both destroyed their cities, and cut down their groves.

13 For Nabuchodonosor, the king, had commanded him to destroy all the gods of the earth, that he only might be called god by those nations which could be brought under him by the power of Holofernes.

14 And when he had passed through all Syria Sobal, and all Apamea, and all Mesopotamia, he came to the Idumeans, into the land of Gabaa,

15 And he took possession of their cities, and stayed there for thirty days, in which days he commanded all the troops of his army to be united.

CHAP. IV.

The children of Israel prepare themselves to resist Holofernes. They cry to the Lord for help.

THEN the children of Israel, who dwelt in the land of Juda, hearing these things, were exceedingly afraid of him.

2 Dread and horror seized upon their minds, lest he should do the same to Jerusalem, and to the temple of the Lord, that he had done to other cities, and their temples.

3 And they sent into all Samaria round about, as far as Jericho, and seized upon all the tops of the mountains:

4 And they compassed their towns with walls, and gathered together corn, for provision for war.

5 And Eliachim, the priest, wrote to all that were over against Esdrelon, which faceth the great plain near Dothain, and to all by whom there might be a passage of way, that they should take possession of the ascents of the south. C.—Yet (H.) Gabaa may designate a mountainous country, as 1 Kings vii. 1, (M.) and there is no reason why Idumea might not have felt the power of Holofernes, as well as Madian, &c. H.—The order of conquests is not observed, (M.) for while the commander-in-chief was in one place, his generals were dispersed into different parts. He had now advanced as far as Gabaa of Saul, (II.) when, meditating a serious attack upon Egypt, he thought proper to concentrate his forces; little expecting to meet with such a check at Bethulia. C.—Gr. "He came to Esdrelon, near Dotaia, (or Dothaim, north of Sichem,) which is opposite the great saw of Judea," or the range of mountains of Ephraim. C.—Old Vulg. "of Juda," dividing it from Idumea. The kings of Israel had fortified the defiles. 3 Kings xv. 17.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1. Juda, whither those had retreated who had escaped the fury of the Assyrians, under Thelathphalassar, &c. H.

VER. 2. Temples. Surrendering would not secure these things; so that their very life and religion were at stake. Resistance, in other circumstances, would have been rashness. C.—Gr. adds, "because they were recently come up from captivity, and lately all the people had been collected out of Judea, and the vessels, and the altar, and the house, had been purified from profanation."

VER. 3. Samaria, though an enemy's country, as the danger was common. M.—Ezechias and Josias seemed to claim a right over the country. 2 Par. xxx. 1, &c.; xxxiv. 6 and 33.

VER. 4. War. Gr. adds, "as the harvest was just ended."

VER. 5. Priest. Gr. "the great priest in Jerusalem, in those days, wrote to the inhabitants of Betouloua, (H. Bethulia, in the tribe of Simeon,) and of Betemestham, (Bethsames. C.) which is over against Esdrelon, and the plain near Dothaim, giving orders to seize the mountainous ascents, by which there was a passage into Judea; and it was easy to stop their progress, as the passage was narrow, and would not admit above two men at once."—It seems the Jews attempted to defend these defiles. They had received the orders before the enemy encamped near Scythopolis mountains, by which there might be any way to Jerusalem, and should keep watch where the way was narrow between the mountains.

6 And the children of Israel did as the priest of the Lord, Eliachim, had appointed them.

7 And all the people cried to the Lord with great earnestness, and they humbled their souls in fastings, and prayers, both they and their wives.

8 And the priests put on hairclothes, and they caused the little children to lie prostrate before the temple of the Lord, and the altar of the Lord they covered with haircloth.

9 And they cried to the Lord, the God of Israel, with one accord, that their children might not be made a prey, and their wives carried off, and their cities destroyed, and their holy things profaned, and that they might not be made a reproach to the Gentiles.

10 Then Eliachim, the high priest of the Lord, went about all Israel, and spoke to them,

11 Saying: Know ye that the Lord will hear your prayers, if you continue with perseverance in fastings and prayers, in the sight of the Lord.

12 Remember Moses, the servant of the Lord, who overcame Amalec, that trusted in his own strength, and in his power, and in his army, and in his shields, and in his chariots, and in his horsemen, not by fighting with the sword, but by holy prayers:

13 "So shall all the enemies of Israel be; if you persevere in this work which you have begun.

14 So they being moved by this exhortation of his, prayed to the Lord, and continued in the sight of the Lord.

15 So that even they who offered the holocausts to the Lord, offered the sacrifices to the Lord, girded with hairclothes, and with ashes upon their head

16 And they all begged of God, with all their heart, that he would visit his people, Israel.

CHAP. V.

Achior gives Holofernes an account of the people of Israel.

AND it was told Holofernes, the general of the army of the Assyrians, that the children of Israel prepared themselves to resist, and had shut up the ways of the mountains.

2 And he was transported with exceedingly great fury

^a Exod. xvii. 12.—^b Gen. xi. 31.—^c Gen. xii. 1.

VER. 6. Them. Gr. adds, "and the senate of all the people of Israel, which sat at Jerusalem."

VER. 7. Wives. Gr. adds, "and their little ones, and beasts, and every sojourner, and hired servant, and slave. They put sackcloth on their loins, and every man, woman, and child, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, fell prostrate before the temple, and sprinkled ashes on their heads." The very beasts were covered with sackcloth, to denote the general sorrow. H.

VER. 8. Priests. Gr. "and they spread their sackclothes before the Lord, and arrayed the altar with sackcloth." H.

VER. 9. Off. Lit. "divided" from their husbands, (H.) or among the victors. M.—Gentiles. Gr. adds, "and God heard their petition, and rescued them from their affliction; and all the people fasted many days in all Judea and Jerusalem, before the sanctuary of the Lord all mighty; and the high priest, Joachim, and all the priests who stood before the Lord, and ministered to the Lord, having their loins girded with sackcloth, offered the accustomed holocaust and the vows and presents of the people, and ashes were upon their caps, and they cried to the Lord with all their power, to look down graciously upon all the house of Jerusalem. And," chap. v.

CHAP. V. VER. 1. Mountains. Gr. adds, "and had fortified every summit of a high mountain, and had placed scandals in the plains," obstructing the passage (H) with ditches, trees, (C.) and snares of every description. H.

and indignation, and he called all the princes of Moab, and the leaders of Ammon,

3 And he said to them: Tell me what is this people that besetteth the mountains: or what are their cities, and of what sort, and how great: also what is their power, or what is their multitude: or who is the king over their warfare:

4 And why they, above all that dwell in the east, have despised us, and have not come out to meet us, that they might receive us with peace?

5 Then Achior, captain of all the children of Ammon, answering, said: If thou vouchsafe, my lord, to hear, I will tell the truth in thy sight, concerning this people, that dwelleth in the mountains, and there shall not a false word come out of my mouth.

6 This people is the offspring of the Chaldeans.

7 "They dwelt first in Mesopotamia, because they would not follow the gods of their fathers, who were in the land of the Chaldeans.

8 Wherefore, forsaking the ceremonies of their fathers, which consisted in the worship of many gods.

9 They worshipped one God of heaven,^a who also commanded them to depart from thence, and to dwell in Charan. And when there was a famine over all the land, "they went down into Egypt, and there for four hundred years were so multiplied, that the army of them could not be numbered.

10 And when the king of Egypt oppressed them, and made slaves of them, to labour in clay and brick, in the building of his cities, they cried to their Lord, and he struck the whole land of Egypt with divers plagues.

11 "And when the Egyptians had cast them out from them, and the plague had ceased from them, and they had a mind to take them again, and bring them back to their service, 12 "The God of heaven opened the sea to them in their flight, so that the waters were made to stand firm as a wall on either side, and they walked through the bottom of the sea, and passed it dry foot.

13 And when an innumerable array of the Egyptians pursued after them in that place, they were so overwhelmed with waters, that there was not one left, to tell what had happened to posterity.

14 And after they came out of the Red Sea, they abode

^d Gen. xli. 6.—^e Exod. xii. 33.—^f Exod. xiv. 29.

VER. 2. Ammon. Gr. adds, "and the satraps of the maritime country," (H.) the Philistines, who had submitted like the rest.

VER. 4. East. Gr. "west," which seems more accurate, unless Holofernes was on the sea-coast, (C.) or that part of the country went by this name, as it does at present. H.

VER. 6. Chaldeans. Abraham was a native of Ur. Gen. xii. C.—This tended to conciliate the favour of the general, who was of the same country. M.

VER. 9. Heaven. Gr. adds, "the God whom they had known, and they (the Chaldean idolaters) cast them out from the face of their gods, and they fled into Mesopotamia, and dwelt there many days: (H. that is, about two years. C.) and their God commanded them to leave their abode, and to go into the land of Chanaan; and they dwelt there, and were enriched: . . . and when," &c.—There. Gr. "and were there till they returned; and there they became innumerable." H.

VER. 11. Plague. Gr. adds, "for which there was no remedy. And the Egyptians cast them out from among them." And God dried up the Red Sea before them, and conducted them to Mount Sinai and Cades-Barne, and cast out all the inhabitants of the desert; and they dwelt in the land of the Amorrites, and exterminated all of Hesebon, by their power. Then crossing the Jordan, they took as their inheritance all the mountainous parts, and ejected the Chanaanite, Perezite, Jebusite, Sichem, and all the Gergesites, and dwelt therein many days. And," ver. 21. H.

in the deserts of Mount Sina, in which never man could dwell or son of man rested.

15 There bitter fountains were made sweet for them to drink, and for forty years they received food from heaven.

16 Wheresoever they went in without bow and arrow, and without shield and sword, their God fought for them, and overcame.

17 And there was no one that triumphed over this people, but when they departed from the worship of the Lord, their God.

18 But as often as, beside their own God, they worshipped any other, they were given to spoil, and to the sword, and to reproach.

19 And as often as they were penitent for having revolted from the worship of their God, the God of heaven gave them power to resist.

20 So they overthrew the king of the Chanaanites, and of the Jebusites, and of the Pherezites, and of the Hethites, and of the Hevites, and of the Amorrites, and all the mighty ones in Hesebon, and they possessed their lands, and their cities :

21 And as long as they sinned not in the sight of their God, it was well with them : for their God hateth iniquity.

22 And even some years ago, when they had revolted from the way which God had given them, to walk therein, they were destroyed in battles by many nations, and very many of them were led away captive into a strange land.

23 But of late returning to the Lord, their God, from the different places wherein they were scattered, they are come together, and are gone up into all these mountains, and possess Jerusalem again, where their holies are.

24 Now, therefore, my lord, search if there be any iniquity of theirs in the sight of their God : let us go up to them, because their God will surely deliver them to thee, and they shall be brought under the yoke of thy power :

25 But if there be no offence of this people in the sight of their God, we cannot resist them, because their God will defend them : and we shall be a reproach to the whole earth.

26 And it came to pass, when Achior had ceased to speak these words, all the great men of Holofernes were angry, and they had a mind to kill him, saying to each other :

27 Who is this, that saith the children of Israel can resist king Nabuchodonosor, and his armies, men unarmed, and without force, and without skill in the art of war ?

VER. 22. Battles. He seems to speak of the captivity of Manasses, (W.) of the ten tribes, and of the loss sustained by Achaz. 2 Par. xxviii. 5. M.—By many. Gr. “exceedingly; and they were led captive into a land which was not their own, and the temple of their God became as a pavement, and their cities were taken by the enemies. But now, returning to their God, they are come up from the places to which they had been scattered, and have possession of Jerusalem, where is their sanctuary; and they have inhabited the mountainous country, for it was a desert.” H.

VER. 26. All the. Gr. “all the people round the tent murmured; and the great men of Holofernes, and all who dwell in the maritime country, and in Moab, threatened to cut him to pieces. For we shall not fear the children of Israel. Lo! a people without power, strength, or army in battle-array! We shall then go up, and they shall be for food to all thy army, lord Holofernes. And,” chap. vi.

CHAP. VI. VER. 1. Achior. Gr. adds, “before all the populace of the strangers. And who art thou, Achior, before all this company of foreigners,

28 That Achior, therefore, may know that he deceiveth us, let us go up into the mountains: and when the bravest of them shall be taken, then shall he, with them, be stabbed with the sword :

29 That every nation may know that Nabuchodonosor is god of the earth, and besides him there is no other.

CHAP. VI.

Holofernes, in great rage, sendeth Achior to Bethulia, there to be slain with the Israelites.

AND it came to pass, when they had left off speaking, that Holofernes, being in a violent passion, said to Achior :

2 Because thou hast prophesied unto us, saying, that the nation of Israel is defended by their God, to show thee that there is no God, but Nabuchodonosor :

3 When we shall slay them all as one man, then thou also shalt die with them, by the sword of the Assyrians, and all Israel shall perish with thee :

4 And thou shalt find that Nabuchodonosor is lord of the whole earth: and then the sword of my soldiers shall pass through thy sides, and thou shalt be stabbed, and fall among the wounded of Israel, and thou shalt breathe no more till thou be destroyed with them.

5 But if thou think thy prophecy true, let not thy countenance sink, and let the paleness that is in thy face depart from thee, if thou imaginest these, my words, cannot be accomplished.

6 And that thou mayst know that thou shalt experience these things, together with them, behold from this hour thou shalt be associated to their people, that when they shall receive the punishment they deserve from my sword, thou mayst fall under the same vengeance.

7 Then Holofernes commanded his servants to take Achior, and to lead him to Bethulia, and to deliver him into the hands of the children of Israel.

8 And the servants of Holofernes taking him, went through the plains: but when they came near the mountains, the slingers came out against them.

9 Then turning out of the way by the side of the mountain, they tied Achior to a tree hand and foot, and so left him bound with ropes, and returned to their master.

10 And the children of Israel coming down from Bethulia, came to him. And loosing him, they brought him to Bethulia, and setting him in the midst of the people, asked him what was the matter, that the Assyrians had left him bound.

11 In those days the rulers there were Ozias, the son and the sons of Moab? and what are the mercenaries of Ephraim, that thou? Ver. 2.

VER. 2. To show. Gr. “and who is God but Nabuchodonosor? He will,” &c. H.—The generous advice of Achior was highly resented.

VER. 6. People. Gr. “my slaves shall station thee on the mountainous country, and in one of the cities on the ascents, (of which thou hast so much spoken,) and thou shalt not perish till thou perish with them. But if thou believest in thy heart that they will not be taken, let not thy countenance fall. I have spoken, and nothing that I have said shall be without effect.”

VER. 7. Bethulia. Travellers, depending on the uncertain traditions of the country, generally place this fortress in the tribe of Zabulon, about three miles west of Tiberias. See Brocard, &c. But S. Jerom places it nearer Egypt (Vita Nil.); and the Scripture speaks of Bethul, in the tribe of Simeon, (Jos. xix. 4,) to which Judith and the ancients belonged. Holofernes left his camp near Scythopolis, (chap. vii. 1,) when he proceeded (C.) to attack the southern cities. H.

of Micha, of the tribe of Simeon, and Charmi, called also Gothoniel.

12 And Achior related in the midst of the ancients, and in the presence of all the people, all that he had said, being asked by Holofernes. and how the people of Holofernes would have killed him for this word,

13 And how Holofernes himself, being angry, had commanded him to be delivered for this cause to the Israelites: that when he should overcome the children of Israel, then he might command Achior also himself to be put to death by diverse torments, for having said: The God of heaven is their defender.

14 *And when Achior had declared all these things, all the people fell upon their faces, adoring the Lord, and all of them together, mourning and weeping, poured out their prayers with one accord to the Lord,

15 Saying: O Lord God of heaven and earth, behold their pride, and look on our low condition, and have regard to the face of thy saints, and show that thou forsakest not them that trust on thee, and that thou humblest them that presume of themselves, and glory in their own strength.

16 So when their weeping was ended, and the people's prayer, in which they continued all the day, was concluded, they comforted Achior,

17 Saying: The God of our fathers, whose power thou hast set forth, will make this return to thee, that thou rather shalt see their destruction.

18 And when the Lord, our God, shall give this liberty to his servants, let God be with thee also in the midst of us: that as it shall please thee, so thou, with all thine, mayest converse with us.

19 Then Ozias, after the assembly was broken up, received him into his house, and made him a great supper.

20 And all the ancients were invited, and they refreshed themselves together after their fast was over.

21 And afterwards all the people were called together, and they prayed all the night long within the church, desiring help of the God of Israel.

CHAP. VII.

Holofernes besiegeth Bethulia. The distress of the besieged.

BUT Holofernes, on the next day, gave orders to his army, to go up against Bethulia.

2 Now there were in his troops a hundred and twenty thousand footmen, and two and twenty thousand horsemen, besides the preparations of those men who had been taken, and who had been brought away out of the provinces and cities, of all the youth.

* Supra, v. 6.

3 All these prepared themselves together to fight against the children of Israel, and they came by the hill side to the top, which looketh towards Dothain, from the place which is called Belma, unto Chelmon, which is over against Esdrelon.

4 But the children of Israel, when they saw the multitude of them, prostrated themselves upon the ground, putting ashes upon their heads, praying, with one accord, that the God of Israel would show his mercy upon his people.

5 And taking their arms of war, they posted themselves at the places, which by a narrow path-way lead directly between the mountains, and they guarded them all day and night.

6 Now Holofernes, in going round about, found that the fountain which supplied them with water, run through an aqueduct without the city, on the south side: and he commanded their aqueduct to be cut off.

7 Nevertheless, there were springs not far from the walls, out of which they were seen secretly to draw water, to refresh themselves a little rather than to drink their fill.

8 But the children of Ammon, and Moab, came to Holofernes, saying: The children of Israel trust not in their spears, nor in their arrows, but the mountains are their defence, and the steep hills and precipices guard them.

9 Wherefore, that thou mayst overcome them without joining battle, set guards at the springs, that they may not draw water out of them, and thou shalt destroy them without sword, or at least being wearied out, they will yield up their city, which they suppose, because it is situate in the mountains, to be impregnable.

10 And these words pleased Holofernes, and his officers, and he placed all round about a hundred men at every spring.

11 And when they had kept this watch for full twenty days, the cisterns, and the reserve of waters, failed among all the inhabitants of Bethulia, so that there was not within the city enough to satisfy them, no not for one day, for water was daily given out to the people by measure.

12 Then all the men and women, young men, and children, gathering themselves together to Ozias, all together with one voice,

13 Said: ^bGod be judge between us and thee, for ^b Exod. v. 21.

VER. 11. And. Gr. adds, "Chabris, the son of Othoniel, and Charmis, the son of Melchiel." M.—The former is, in effect, mentioned chap. viii. 9. C.

VER. 15. Saints. Syr. "sanctuary." This version and the Greek have only, "Look upon the face of the persons (or things) sanctified unto thee on this day. And they consoled Achior, and praised him greatly. And Ozias took him from the assembly to his own house, and made a feast (lit. drinking) for the ancients, and they invoked the God of Israel to assist them during all that night." H.

VER. 21. The church. That is, the synagogue or place where they met in prayer. Ch.—For such places were established, particularly after the captivity, though some have denied that there were any synagogues, even in the days of the Machabees. See Matt. iv. 23; Est. iv. 16. C.

CHAP. VII. VER. 4. Of them. Gr. adds, "were greatly afraid, and each one said to his neighbour: Now these will consume (Complut. shut up) the face of the earth, and neither the high mountains, nor the vales, nor the hills, will bear their weight. Then taking their arms, and lighting fires upon their towers, they kept guard all that night: but the second day, Holofernes brought out all his army against the Israelites in Bethulia, and he reconnoitred the ascent of their city, and came to the fountains of their waters, and took them; and leaving a guard of soldiers, he returned to his men," &c. Ver. 8. H.—The Syr. is also silent about the aqueduct and the small springs. C.—The servants of God first humble themselves, and then take arms, confiding in God. W.

VER. 10. Spring. Gr. and Syr. intimate that the Ammonites and Moabites, with 5000 Assyrian infantry, guarded the springs: the rest of the army, according to the old Vulg., was stationed in the plain. Gr. and Syr. specify over against Dothaim, which seems too remote (C.); though such an immense army might cover a great part of the country, as all would not be necessary to besiege Bethulia, and it was agreed only to blockade the place, in order that no men might be lost, and the army might be ready to march against the more distant and powerful nations of Egypt. Another detachment was (H.) "southward, at Ecrebel, (Syr. Ekarbat, probably Akrabim, the ascent of the scorpions,) near Orah, (or Arabia,) which is above the torrent Mochmur, (Syr. Peor, or Bezor. C.) and the rest of the army of the Assyrians encamped in the plain, and covered the face of the earth." H.

VER. 11. Days. Gr. "And all the collection of the Assyrians continued round them = thirty-four days." H.—Old Vulg. "twenty-four days." Syr. "two thou hast done evil against us, in that thou wouldst not speak peaceably with the Assyrians, and for this cause God hath sold us into their hands.

14 And therefore there is no one to help us, while we are cast down before their eyes in thirst, and sad destruction.

15 And now, assemble ye all that are in the city, that we may, of our own accord, yield ourselves all up to the people of Holofernes.

16 For it is better that, being captives, we should live and bless the Lord, than that we should die, and be a reproach to all flesh, after we have seen our wives and our infants die before our eyes.

17 We call to witness this day heaven and earth, and the God of our fathers, who taketh vengeance upon us according to our sins, conjuring you to deliver now the city into the hand of the army of Holofernes, that our end may be short by the edge of the sword, which is made longer by the drought of thirst.

18 And when they had said these things, there was great weeping and lamentation of all in the assembly, and for many hours with one voice they cried to God, saying :

19 "We have sinned with our fathers, we have done unjustly, we have committed iniquity :

20 Have thou mercy on us, because thou art good, or punish our iniquities, by chastising us thyself, and deliver not them that trust in thee to a people that knoweth not thee,

21 That they may not say among the Gentiles : Where is their God ?

22 And when, being wearied with these cries, and tired with these weepings, they held their peace,

23 Ozias, rising up all in tears, said : Be of good courage, my brethren, and let us wait these five days for mercy from the Lord.

24 For perhaps he will put a stop to his indignation, and will give glory to his own name.

25 But if, after five days be past, there come no aid, we will do the things which you have spoken.

months and four days."—Measure. Gr. adds, "the infants, women, and young men fainted, and fell down dead." H.

VER. 15. Assemble. Gr. "Call them, and give up all the city to plunder to the," &c.

VER. 17. Conjuring. Gr. "And the sins of our parents, that he may not treat us thus to-day," and deliver us up to death. H.

VER. 18. Saying. Gr. "And Ozias said to them : Take courage, brethren." Ver. 23. H.

VER. 25. Spoken. Gr. and Syr. add, "And he dispersed the people to their tents, and they went upon the walls and towers of the city, and sent their wives and children home. And they were under great humiliation in the city."

CHAP. VIII. VER. 1. Idox. Gr. "Ox," &c. All the versions disagree, as the copyists have probably taken in part of ver. 3 too soon, supposing that the genealogy of women was never given. S. Fulgentius (ep. ad Gallam) differs from all, giving the ancestors of Manasses as the same with those of Judith. C.—Simeon, the son of Ruben. In the Greek it is, the son of Israel. For Simeon, the patriarch, from whom Judith descended, was not the son, but the brother of Ruben. It seems more probable, that the Simeon and the Ruben here mentioned are not the patriarchs, but two of the descendants of the patriarch Simeon : and that the genealogy of Judith, recorded in this place, is not carried up so high as the patriarchs ; no more than that of Elcana, the father of Samuel, (1 Kings i. 1,) and that of king Saul, 1 Kings ix. 1. Ch.—Others think that Judith descended from Ruben, by her father, and from Simeon, by her mother (E.) ; or that, instead of son of Ruben, we should read "brother." But as we know that Judith calls Simeon her father, (chap. ix. 2,) it is more likely that Ruben has been placed for Israel, as it is in Syr. S. Fulg., &c. This correction is maintained by Bellarmine, Salien, M. C.

VER. 2. Who. Gr. adds, "of her tribe and family and he died in the days," &c.

CHAP. VIII.

The character of Judith : her discourse to the ancients.

NOW it came to pass, when Judith, a widow, had heard these words, who was the daughter of Merari, the son of Idox, the son of Joseph, the son of Ozias, the son of Elai, the son of Jamnor, the son of Gedeon, the son of Raphaim, the son of Achitob, the son of Melchias, the son of Enan, the son of Nathanas, the son of Salathiel, the son of Simeon, the son of Ruben :

2 And her husband was Manasses, who died in the time of the barley-harvest :

3 For he was standing over them that bound sheaves in the field ; and the heat came upon his head, and he died in Bethulia, his own city, and was buried there with his fathers.

4 And Judith, his relict, was a widow now three years and six months.

5 And she made herself a private chamber in the upper part of her house, in which she abode, shut up with her maids,

6 And she wore haircloth upon her loins, and fasted all the days of her life, except the sabbaths, and new moons, and the feasts of the house of Israel.

7 And she was exceedingly beautiful, and her husband left her great riches, and very many servants, and large possessions of herds of oxen, and flocks of sheep.

8 And she was greatly renowned among all, because she feared the Lord very much, neither was there any one that spoke an ill word of her.

9 When, therefore, she had heard that Ozias had promised that he would deliver up the city after the fifth day, she sent to the ancients, Chabri and Charmi.

10 And they came to her, and she said to them : What is this word, by which Ozias hath consented to give up the city to the Assyrians, if within five days there come no aid to us ?

11 And who are you that tempt the Lord ?

12 This is not a word that may draw down mercy, but rather that may stir up wrath, and enkindle indignation.

13 You have set a time for the mercy of the Lord,

VER. 3. Died. Gr. "fell upon his couch (Grabe adds, "and died in Betoulia, his own city") ; and they buried him with his fathers, in the field between Dothaim and Balamo." H.

VER. 4, 5. Six. So the old Vulg., Gr., and Syr., have four months.—In which. Gr. "and she put sackcloth," &c. Ver. 6. H.—Judith led a most religious life, in prayer, haircloth, and fasting, all the year, except on the festivals. W.

VER. 6. Loins. Gr. "and she had on the garments of her widowhood, and." H.—She laid these aside. Chap. x. 2. C.—Life. Gr. "widowhood, except the day before the sabbath, and the sabbaths, and the new moons, and feasts, and days of rejoicing of the house of Israel." H. C.—New moons were days of rejoicing. M. 1 Kings xx. 5.—The Jews kept two days together, for fear of missing the day on which the moon really appeared. Several fasts were also prescribed perhaps before this time, on the 1st and 22nd of Nisan, &c.

VER. 7. Ox. Gr., Syr., &c., add, "and fields, and she lived on them."

VER. 8. Her. "The reputation of chastity in women is tender, and, like a beautiful flower, presently withers at the least blast, and perishes ; particularly when they are at an age prone to vice, and destitute of the authority of a husband, whose shadow is the safeguard to a wife." S. Jer. ad Salvinam.—The Scripture could not give Judith a greater character. C.

VER. 9. When. Gr. and Syr. "And she heard of the evil discourses of the populace against the magistrate, as they lost courage on account of the scarcity of water ; and Judith heard of all the words of Ozias to them, how he had sworn to them that he would deliver up the city to the Assyrians after five days. Then sending her maid, whom she had placed at the head of all her possessions, she called Ozias," &c.

VER. 13. Pleasure. She blames the magistrates for taking a rash oath, pretending to fathom the designs of God, and to fix a time for him, and not attempting to make any resistance, though the welfare of the whole nation, and the sacred things, depended on their exertions. C.

and you have appointed him a day, according to your pleasure.

14 But forasmuch as the Lord is patient, let us be penitent for this same thing, and with many tears let us beg his pardon :

15 For God will not threaten like man, nor be inflamed to anger like the son of man.

16 And therefore, let us humble our souls before him, and continuing in an humble spirit, in his service :

17 Let us ask the Lord with tears, that according to his will so he would show his mercy to us : that as our heart is troubled by their pride, so also we may glory in our humility :

18 For we have not followed the sins of our fathers, who forsook their God, and worshipped strange gods.

19 For which crime, they were given up to their enemies, to the sword, and to pillage, and to confusion : but we know no other God but him.

20 Let us humbly wait for his consolation, and the Lord, our God, will require our blood of the afflictions of our enemies, and he will humble all the nations that shall rise up against us, and bring them to disgrace.

21 And now, brethren, as you are the ancients among the people of God, and their very soul resteth upon you : comfort their hearts by your speech, that they may be mindful how our fathers were tempted, that they might be proved, whether they worshipped their God truly.

22 *They must remember how our father, Abraham, was tempted, and being proved by many tribulations, was made the friend of God.

23 So Isaac, so Jacob, so Moses, and all that have pleased God, passed through many tribulations, remaining faithful.

24 But they that did not receive the trials with the fear of the Lord, but uttered their impatience, and the reproach of their murmuring, against the Lord, 25 ^bWere destroyed by the destroyer, and perished by serpents.

26 As for us, therefore, let us not revenge ourselves for these things which we suffer,

27 But esteeming these very punishments to be less than our sins deserve, let us believe that these scourges of the Lord, with which, like servants, we are chastised, have happened for our amendment, and not for our destruction.

28 And Ozias, and the ancients, said to her : All things which thou hast spoken are true, and there is nothing to be reprehended in thy words.

29 Now therefore pray for us, for thou art a holy woman, and one fearing God.

30 And Judith said to them : As you know that what I have been able to say, is of God :

31 So that which I intend to do, prove ye if it be of God, and pray that God may strengthen my design.

32 You shall stand at the gate this night, and I will go out with my maid-servant : and pray ye, that as you have said, in five days the Lord may look down upon his people, Israel.

33 But I desire that you search not into what I am doing ; and till I bring you word, let nothing else be done but to pray for me to the Lord, our God.

34 And Ozias, the prince of Juda, said to her : Go in peace, and the Lord be with thee, to take revenge of our enemies. So, returning, they departed.

CHAP. IX.

Judith's prayer, to beg of God to fortify her in her undertaking.

AND when they were gone, Judith went into her oratory : and putting on haircloth, laid ashes on her head : and falling down prostrate before the Lord, she cried to the Lord, saying :

2 O Lord God of my father Simeon, *who gavest him a sword to execute vengeance against strangers, who had defiled by their uncleanness, and uncovered the virgin unto confusion :

3 And who gavest their wives to be made a prey, and their daughters into captivity : and all their spoils to be divided to thy servants, who were zealous with thy zeal : assist, I beseech thee, O Lord God, me, a widow.

4 For thou hast done the things of old, and hast devised one thing after another : and what thou hast designed, hath been done.

5 For all thy ways are prepared, and in thy providence thou hast placed thy judgments.

6 *Look upon the camp of the Assyrians now, as thou wast pleased to look upon the camp of the Egyptians,

* Gen. xxii. 1.—^b 1 Cor. x. 9.

VER. 18. For. Gr. "As there has not arisen in our families generations, nor is there at this day either tribe, or family, or populace, or city among us, adoring gods made with hands, as it happened in days past ;" in the former part of the reign of Manasses. All had begun to open their eyes at the sight of the dreadful catastrophe. H.

VER. 20. Let. Gr. "Wherefore we hope that he will not despise us, nor those of our race ; nor, if we be taken, will Judea be so styled, our sacred things will be plundered. He will require his profanation at our mouth," &c. She shows the dreadful consequences which will ensue from the rash oath, and from such dastardly conduct under trial. H.

VER. 21. Brethren. Gr. adds, "Let us show our brethren that their soul depends on us, and the holy things, and the house, (temple,) and the altar, are supported by us." These were not therefore demolished. Ch. v. 22. H.—"Yea, let us give thanks, above all, to the Lord our God, who tries us like our fathers. Remember," &c.

VER. 23. Jacob. Gr. adds, "in Mesopotamia . . because he does not take vengeance on us, as he made them pass through fire to examine their heart. But the Lord, for an admonition, chastises those who approach to him. And Ozias," ver. 28. H.

VER. 28. Words. Gr. adds, "for it is not to-day only that thy wisdom has appeared, but from thy earliest days all the people has known thy prudence, as information (H. Syr. the thought. C.) of thy heart is good. But the people much oppressed with thirst, and they forced us to . . take an oath, which we break. Now," &c. H.

* Gen. xxxiv. 26.—^d Exod. xiv. 9.

VER. 29. God. Gr. adds, "and the Lord will send rain to fill our reservoirs, and we shall faint no longer. And Judith replied : Hear me, and I will perform an action which shall come to the ears of all future generations of our race. You," &c., ver. 32. H.

VER. 33. And till. Gr. "for I shall not tell you, till what I am about be accomplished. And Ozias, with the princes, said to her."

CHAP. IX. VER. 1. Oratory. Of such our Saviour speaks, Matt. vi. ; and Baronius at large. A. D. 298. W.—Gr. "But Judith fell prostrate, and sprinkled ashes upon her head, (Syr. adds, and tore her tunic,) and uncovered the sackcloth which she had on. That evening the incense had just been offered, in the house of the Lord, at Jerusalem. And Judith cried aloud," &c.

VER. 2. Gavest him a sword, &c. The justice of God is here praised, in punishing by the sword of Simeon the crime of the Sichemites : and not the fact of Simeon, which was justly condemned by his father. Gen. xlix. 5. Though even with regard to this fact, we may distinguish between his zeal against the crime committed by the ravishers of his sister, which zeal may be considered just ; and the manner of his punishing that crime, which was irregular and excessive. Ch.—The former is here commended. W. M.

VER. 4. Of old. Gr. "before these, and these, and what followed, and is at present, and things to come, thou hast foreseen." All events depend on Thee. "For the things which thou hadst decreed were at hand, and said : Behold, we are here." H.

VER. 5—Judgments. All is foreseen : nothing can resist the decrees of God.

VER. 6. As. Gr. speaks not of the Egyptians : "For behold the Assyrians when they pursued armed after thy servants, trusting in their chariots, and in their horsemen, and in a multitude of warriors.

7 But thou lookedst over their camp, and darkness wearied them.

8 The deep held their feet, and the waters overwhelmed them.

9 So may it be with these also, O Lord, who trust in their multitude, and in their chariots, and in their pikes, and in their shields, and in their arrows, and glory in their spears,

10 And know not that thou art our God, who destroyest wars from the beginning, and the Lord is thy name.

11 Lift up thy arm as from the beginning, and crush their power with thy power: let their power fall in their wrath, who promise themselves to violate thy sanctuary, and defile the dwelling-place of thy name, and to beat down with their sword the horn of thy altar.

12 Bring to pass, O Lord, that his pride may be cut off with his own sword.

13 Let him be caught in the net of his own eyes, in my regard, and do thou strike him by the graces of the words of my lips.

14 Give me constancy in my mind, that I may despise him: and fortitude, that I may overthrow him.

15 *For this will be a glorious monument for thy name, when he shall fall by the hand of a woman.

16 For thy power, O Lord, is not in a multitude, nor is thy pleasure in the strength of horses, nor from the beginning have the proud been acceptable to thee: but the prayer of the humble and the meek hath always pleased thee.

17 O God of the heavens, creator of the waters, and Lord of the whole creation, hear me, a poor wretch, making supplication to thee, and presuming of thy mercy.

18 Remember, O Lord, thy covenant, and put thou words in my mouth, and strengthen the resolution in my heart, that thy house may continue in thy holiness:

19 And all nations may acknowledge that thou art God, and there is no other besides thee.

Judith goeth out towards the camp, and is taken, and brought to Holofernes.

* Judg. iv. 21, and v. 26.

are multiplied in their power, and exalted on account of their cavalry; they have boasted on the strong arm of the infantry, have trusted in their shield, and bow, and sling; and they have not known that thou art the Lord, making an end of wars: Thy name is Lord; break their force, by thy power," &c., ver. 11. H.

VER. 13. Lips. Or with my endearing speeches. M.—She meant innocently to engage the affections of Holofernes, (H.) and prays that he may receive her in that manner, as he might have done without sin. But when he abused his free-will, God turned his sin to the good of others. See Exod. vii. 8. Aug. ser. 288. W.—Gr. "Give that power which I have devised to the hand of me, a widow. Strike the slave by the lips of my delusion, (or by my insinuating words,) with the prince; and the chief, with his minister, break their haughtiness by the hand of a female."

VER. 15. H.—This prayer seems contrary to sound morality, as well as the indiscreet conduct of Judith, in exposing herself to danger, though her intention was good. C.—But are not stratagems lawful in war? See 2 Kings xv. God approved of her designs, and enhanced her beauty. Chap. x. 4. H.

VER. 16. Horses. Gr. "the potent, but thou art the Lord of the humble."

CHAP. X. VER. 3. Body. Compl. Gr. "mouth." But other editions seem more accurate. H.—Best. Gr. "thick," probably the myrobalanum of Pliny, xii. 21, and xiii. 1.—Bonnet, or mitre, tied with ribands, hanging down behind, like those of bishops.—Sandals, highly ornamented, and worn by people of quality. C.—Lilies, pendent from the neck. Grot.

VER. 4. And. Gr. "and she was richly adorned, so that she might captivate (lit. deceive) the eyes of whatever men should behold her. And," ver. 5. H.—The Fathers highly extol her virtue, and she was, no doubt, actuated by the purest

AND it came to pass, when she had ceased to cry to the Lord, that she rose from the place wherein she lay prostrate before the Lord.

2 And she called her maid, and going down into her house, she took off her haircloth, and put away the garments of her widowhood,

3 And she washed her body, and anointed herself with the best ointment, and plaited the hair of her head, and put a bonnet upon her head, and clothed herself with the garments of her gladness, and put sandals on her feet, and took her bracelets, and lilies, and earlets, and rings, and adorned herself with all her ornaments.

4 And the Lord also gave her more beauty: because all this dressing up did not proceed from sensuality, but from virtue: and therefore the Lord increased this her beauty, so that she appeared to all men's eyes incomparably lovely.

5 And she gave to her maid a bottle of wine to carry, and a vessel of oil, and parched corn, and dry figs, and bread and cheese, and went out.

6 And when they came to the gate of the city, they found Ozias, and the ancients of the city waiting.

7 And when they saw her they were astonished, and admired her beauty exceedingly.

8 But they asked her no question, only they let her pass, saying: The God of our fathers give thee grace, and may he strengthen all the counsel of thy heart with his power, that Jerusalem may glory in thee, and thy name may be in the number of the holy and just.

9 And they that were there said, all with one voice: So be it, so be it.

10 But Judith praying to the Lord, passed through the gates, she and her maid.

11 And it came to pass, when she went down the hill, about break of day, that the watchmen of the Assyrians met her, and stopped her, saying: Whence comest thou? or whither goest thou?

12 And she answered: I am a daughter of the Hebrews, and I am fled from them, because I knew they would be made a prey to you, because they despised you, and would not of their own accord yield themselves, that they might find mercy in your sight.

13 For this reason, I thought with myself, saying: I will go to the presence of the prince Holofernes, that I motives. Yet she might be guilty of some indiscretion. God inspired her with the laudable design of freeing her country, but the means were left to her own choice. C.—The making use of this rich attire was not, however, sinful in itself; and we have no right to suspect that Judith gave any way either to vanity or to sensuality. H.

VER. 5. Bottle; made of leather, (C.) used for carrying wine. Pollux. M.—Corn. It was eaten either steeped in water or mixed with oil.—Cheese. So the Syr. reads. Gr. "pure loaves." C.—Why she took her provisions with her she explains, chap. xii. 2. M.

VER. 7. Her. Gr. adds, "with her countenance and robes changed."

VER. 8. But. Gr. "And they said to her, May God, the God of,"—With. Gr. "For the glory of the Israelites, and the exaltation of Jerusalem; and they adored God. And she said to them, Order the gate of the city to be opened for me, and I will go out to accomplish what you were talking about to me. And they commanded the young men to open for her; and they did so. But Judith and her maid went out. And the citizens looked at her while she descended the hill, till she had passed the valley, when they lost sight of her; and they passed along straight through the vale, and the advanced guard of," &c. H.

VER. 12. Because I knew, &c. In this and the following chapter, some things are related to have been said by Judith, which seem hard to reconcile with truth. But all that is related in Scripture of the servants of God, is not approved by the Scripture: and even the saints in their enterprises may sometimes slip into venial sins. Ch.—I knew. Gr. "Because they are about to be given up a prey to you. Therefore, I come to Holofernes, general in chief of your army, to inform him of may tell him their secrets, and show him by what way he may take them, without the loss of one man of his army.

14 And when the men had heard her words, they beheld her face, and their eyes were amazed, for they wondered exceedingly at her beauty.

15 And they said to her: Thou hast saved thy life by taking this resolution, to come down to our lord.

16 And be assured of this, that when thou shalt stand before him, he will treat thee well, and thou wilt be most acceptable to his heart. And they brought her to the tent of Holofernes, telling him of her.

17 And when she was come into his presenee, forthwith Holofernes was caught by his eyes.

18 And his officers said to him: Who can despise the people of the Hebrews, who have such beautiful women, that we should not think it worth our while for their sakes to fight against them?

19 And Judith, seeing Holofernes sitting under a canopy, which was woven of purple and gold, with emeralds and precious stones:

20 After she had looked on his face, bowed down to him, prostrating herself to the ground. And the servants of Holofernes lifted her up, by the command of their master.

CHAP. XI.

Judith's speech to Holofernes.

THEN Holofernes said to her: Be of good comfort, and fear not in thy heart: for I have never hurt a man that was willing to serve Nabuehodonosor, the king.

2 And if thy people had not despised me, I would never have lifted up my spear against them.

3 But now tell me, for what cause hast thou left them, and why it hath pleased thee to come to us?

4 And Judith said to him: Receive the words of thy handmaid, for if thou wilt follow the words of thy handmaid, the Lord will do with thee a perfect thing.

5 For as Nabuchodonosor, the king of the earth, liveth, and his power liveth, which is in thee for the chastising of all straying souls: not only men serve him through thee, but also the beasts of the field obey him.

the truth, and to show," &c. H.—She spoke many things certainly true, and others which would probably have taken place, if God had not sent relief. W.

VER. 15. Lord. Gr. adds, "and now proceed to his tent, and some of us shall give thee into his hands. But if thou stand before him, let not thy heart fear, but tell him this, and he will treat thee well. And they selected one hundred men, and surrounded her and her servant-maid, and conducted her to the tent of Holofernes. And they ran from all parts of the camp, as soon as her coming was made known, and they came round her as she stood without the tent of Holofernes, till they had told him of her. And they were astonished at her beauty, and at the Israelites, and said to each other. Who," &c., ver. 18.

VER. 18. That we. Gr. "For it is not expedient to leave one man of them alive, lest they should delude all the earth." (Old Vulg. omits the negation.)

VER. 20. After. Gr. "And they told him of her, and he came out to the forepart of the tent, and silver lamps preceded him, (H.) either for grandeur, as they did the kings of Persia and the emperors of Rome and of the Turks, or because it was still dark." C.—"But as soon as Judith came in sight of him and of his ministers, they all were astonished at the beauty of her face; and falling prostrate, she adored him, (with civil respect,) and his servants lifted her up." H.

CHAP. XI. VER. 3. Why. Gr. "And art come to us? For thou art come for thy own safety. Take courage, for thou shalt live this night and henceforth, as no one shall hurt thee, but shall do thee good, as the servants of my lord, Nabuchodonosor, the king, are treated."

VER. 4. Handmaid. Gr. adds, "and I will tell no untruth to my lord this night, for," &c.—Thing. Gr. adds, "and none of the projects of my lord shall fail." H.

VER. 5. Liveth. She imitates Joseph, (Gen. xlii. 15,) and Eliseus (4 Kings ii. 4); and speaks the truth, as the general had subjected many to his master. M.—Her speech was not superstitious, but showed a civil respect. C.

6 For the industry of thy mind is spoken of among a nations, and it is told through the whole world, that thou only art excellent and mighty in all his kingdom, and thy discipline is cried up in all provinces.

7 *It is known, also, what Achior said, nor are we ignorant of what thou hast commanded to be done to him.

8 For it is certain that our God is so offended with sins, that he hath sent word by his prophets to the people, that he will deliver them up for their sins.

9 And because the children of Israel know they have offended their God, thy dread is upon them.

10 Moreover, also, a famine hath come upon them, and for drought of water they are already to be counted among the dead.

11 And they have a design even to kill their cattle, and to drink the blood of them.

12 And the consecrated things of the Lord, their God, which God forbid them to touch, in corn, wine, and oil these have they purposed to make use of, and they design to consume the things which they ought not to touch with their hands: therefore, because they do these things it certain they will be given up to destruction.

13 And I, thy handmaid, knowing this, am fled from them, and the Lord hath sent me to tell thee these very things.

14 For I, thy handmaid, worship God even now that I am with thee, and thy handmaid will go out, and I will pray to God,

15 And he will tell me when he will repay them for their sins, and I will come and tell thee, so that I may bring thee through the midst of Jerusalem, and thou shalt have all the people of Israel, as sheep that have no shepherd, and there shall not so much as one dog bark against thee:

16 Because these things are told me by the providence of God.

17 And because God is angry with them, I am sent to tell these very things to thee.

18 And all these words pleased Holofernes, and his

* Supra, v. 5.

VER. 7. To him. Gr. intimates that she advised him to follow his counsel. "For our nation is not punished with the sword, unless they sin against their God. But now let not my lord be at a loss what to do. For death has fallen upon them, and sin has taken possession of them, so that they have irritated God by their folly," &c. Ver. 10.

VER. 11. Drink. Gr. "and all that God had forbidden them to eat by his laws." (H.) without making any distinction between the clean and unclean. Grot.—Blood was prohibited even before the law. Gen. ix. 4; Lev. xvii. 14. C.

VER. 12. Oil. Gr. may explain this. "And the first-fruits of corn, and the tithes of wine and of oil, which they had reserved as sacred for the priests, standing in Jerusalem, before our God, they have decreed to consume; though none of the people ought so much as to touch these things. Yet they have sent to obtain permission of the senate at Jerusalem, where the people have done the like. And when they shall have obtained an answer, they will fall to work, and then they will be abandoned to be destroyed by thee." H.—She insinuates that her countrymen are in the utmost distress, and not much attached to religion (C.) though in extreme want the distinction of meats is not to be enforced. H.

VER. 13. Tell. Gr. "To perform with thee a feat which will astonish all who shall hear these things. For thy handmaid is religious, and serveth the God of heaven day and night; and now, my lord, I am," &c.

VER. 15. He will. Gr. "They shall have completed their sins."—Tell thee. Gr. adds, "and thou shalt go out with all thy forces, and none of them shall resist thee; and I will bring thee through Judea, over against Jerusalem, and will place thy throne in the midst of it, and thou shalt drive them like sheep," &c.—Dog. This is proverbial. Exod. xi. 7. C.—All Israel was at rest after the death of Holofernes. Judith brought his head in triumph through the country. M.

servants, and they admired her wisdom, and they said one to another :

19 There is not such another woman upon earth in look, in beauty, and in sense of words.

20 And Holofernes said to her : God hath done well who sent thee before the people, that thou mightest give them into our hands :

21 And because thy promise is good, if thy God shall do this for me, he shall also be my God, and thou shalt be great in the house of Nabuchodonosor, and thy name shall be renowned through all the earth.

CHAP. XII.

Judith goeth out in the night to pray : she is invited to a banquet with Holofernes.

THEN he ordered that she should go in where his treasures were laid up, and bade her tarry there, and he appointed what should be given her from his own table.

2 And Judith answered him, and said : Now I cannot eat of these things which thou commandest to be given me, lest sin come upon me : but I will eat of the things which I have brought.

3 And Holofernes said to her : If these things which thou hast brought with thee fail thee, what shall we do for thee ?

4 And Judith said : As thy soul liveth, my lord, thy handmaid shall not spend all these things till God do by my hand that which I have proposed. And his servants brought her into the tent which he had commanded.

5 And when she was going in, she desired that she might have liberty to go out, at night, and before day, to prayer, and to beseech the Lord.

6 And he commanded his chamberlains that she might go out and in, to adore her God as she pleased, for three days.

7 And she went out in the nights into the valley of Bethulia, and washed herself in a fountain of water.

8 And as she came up, she prayed to the Lord, the God of Israel, that he would direct her way to the deliverance of his people.

9 And going in, she remained pure in the tent, until she took her own meat in the evening.

10 And it came to pass on the fourth day, that Holofernes made a supper for his servants, and said to Vagao,

VER. 20. That. Gr. "To increase our strength, and to bring destruction on those who have despised my lord."

VER. 21. Because. Gr. "And now thou art comely in thy appearance, and good in thy discourse. If then thou perform what thou hast spoken, thy God shall," &c. H.

CHAP. XII. VER. 1. And bade. Gr. "and ordered a bed (or table) to be prepared for her, to eat of his own meat, and drink of his wine," (H.) that her beauty might be enhanced, (Dan. i.) and to honour her. M.

VER. 3. Thee. Gr. adds, "for there is none of thy race."

VER. 4. Which I. Gr. "he."—Which. Gr. "and she slept till midnight, and she arose at the morning watch." H.

VER. 5. And. Gr. "and she sent to Holofernes, saying : May my lord please to order that thy handmaid may go out to pray. And," &c., ver. 6. H.—She had prepared him to grant this request before : but out of civility, and that he may have greater confidence in her, she asks again. The choice of a retired place for prayer is very commendable, but she made choice of the fields, that she might go out of the camp afterwards without being suspected. C.

VER. 6. Chamberlains. Gr. "life-guards, not to hinder her ; and she remained in the camp three days." H.

VER. 7. Water. Gr. "in the camp."

VER. 10. Servants. Gr. adds, "only, and he did not call any of those whom he usually employed," (H.) that they might not witness his excesses.

his eunuch : Go, and persuade that Hebrew woman, to consent of her own accord to dwell with me.

11 For it is looked upon shameful among the Assyrians, if a woman mock a man, by doing so as to pass free from him.

12 Then Vagao went in to Judith, and said : Let not my good maid be afraid to go in to my lord, that she may be honoured before his face, that she may eat with him, and drink wine, and be merry.

13 And Judith answered him : Who am I, that I should guinsay my lord ?

14 All that shall be good and best before his eyes. I will do. And whatsoever shall please him, that shall be best to me all the days of my life.

15 And she arose and dressed herself out with her garments, and going in, she stood before his face.

16 And the heart of Holofernes was smitten, for he was burning with the desire of her.

17 And Holofernes said to her : Drink now, and sit down and be merry ; for thou hast found favour before me.

18 And Judith said : I will drink, my lord, because my life is magnified, this day, above all my days.

19 And she took, and eat and drank before him, what her maid had prepared for her.

20 And Holofernes was made merry on her occasion, and drank exceedingly much wine, so much as he had never drank in his life.

CHAP. XIII.

Judith cutteth off the head of Holofernes, and returneth to Bethulia.

AND when it was grown late, his servants made haste to their lodgings, and Vagao shut the chamber doors, and went his way.

2 And they were all overcharged with wine.

3 And Judith was alone in the chamber.

4 But Holofernes lay on his bed, fast asleep, being exceedingly drunk.

5 And Judith spoke to her maid to stand without before the chamber, and to watch :

6 And Judith stood before the bed, praying with tears, and the motion of her lips in silence,

7 Saying : Strengthen me, O Lord, God of Israel, and in this hour look on the works of my hands, that as thou hast promised, thou mayst raise up Jerusalem, thy city :

VER. 12. Merry. This would pave the way for greater liberties. C.—(Gr. adds, "and to become this day as a daughter of the Assyrians, standing to wait in the house of Nabuchodonosor." He probably alludes to those courtesans (C.) who sung at night, before the palace, &c. Athen. Dip. xii. 2.

VER. 15. Garments. Gr. adds, "and all her female ornaments ; and her servant came and spread on the ground, before Holofernes, the fleeces which she had received from Bagoas for her daily use, to eat lying upon them. And coming in, Judith fell prostrate." H.—The custom of sitting on the ground, upon skins, to eat, is very ancient, (Targum. Est. i.) and is still observed by the Turks. The kings of Persia let none eat with them at the same table. Heraclides. Athen. v. 10.—The character of drunkenness, with which this nation has been branded, seems not unfounded. C.

VER. 16. Her. Gr. adds, "company ; and he had sought an opportunity of deluding her, from the day when he first beheld her."

CHAP. XIII. VER. 1. Doors. Gr. adds, "without," yet so that Judith could open them. C.

VER. 5. The. Gr. "her chamber."—Watch. Gr. adds, "her coming out as on other days ; for she had said she would go out to pray, and she had told this to Bagoas. And all had departed," &c. All these precautions were necessary. H.

VER. 6. Judith. She seems not to have disclosed her secret even to her companion, taking the whole upon herself.—Lips. Gr. "in her heart." C.

and that I may bring to pass that which I have purposed, having a belief that it might be done by thee.

8 And when she had said this, she went to the pillar that was at his bed's head, and looser¹ his sword that hung tied upon it.

9 And when she had drawn it out, she took him by the hair of his head, and said: Strengthen me, O Lord God, at this hour.

10 And she struck twice upon his neck, and cut off his head, and took off his canopy from the pillars, and rolled away his headless body.

11 And after a while she went out, and delivered the head of Holofernes to her maid, and bade her put it into her wallet.

12 And they two went out according to their custom, as if it were to prayer, and they passed the camp, and having compassed the valley, they came to the gate of the city.

13 And Judith, from afar off, cried to the watchmen upon the walls: Open the gates, for God is with us, who hath shown his power in Israel.

14 And it came to pass, when the men had heard her voice, that they called the uncients of the city.

15 And all ran to meet her, from the least to the greatest: for they had now no hopes that she would come.

16 And lighting up lights they all gathered round about her: and she went up to a higher place, and commanded silence to be made. And when all had held their peace, 17 Judith said: Praise ye the Lord, our God, who hath not forsaken them that hope in him.

18 And by me, his handmaid, he hath fulfilled his mercy, which he promised to the house of Israel: and he hath killed the enemy of his people, by my hand, this night.

19 Then she brought forth the head of Holofernes out of the wallet, and showed it them, saying: Behold the head of Holofernes, the general of the army of the Assyrians, and behold his canopy, wherein he lay in his drunkenness, where the Lord, our God, slew him by the hand of a woman.

20 But as the same Lord liveth, his angel hath been my keeper, both going hence, and abiding there, and returning from thence hither: and the Lord hath not suffered me, his handmaid, to be defiled, but hath brought me back to you without pollution of sin, rejoicing for his victory, for my escape, and for your deliverance.

VER. 8. Pillar. Gr. κάνον, "the rule," (C.) or pole on which the arms were hung. Hesychius.—Sword, (acinace.) used by the Persians, (M.) and shorter than the Greek or Roman sword. C.

VER. 10. Canopy, to convince all that it was the head of Holofernes. M.

VER. 13. Open. Gr. repeats, "open ye now the gate; God, our God is with us, still to show power in Israel, and strength against the enemies, as he hath done to-day." H.

VER. 14. That. Gr. "They hastened to descend to the gate of their city, and called," &c.

VER. 15. Had now. Gr. "it was a paradox to them that she should come, and they opened the gate, and received them."

VER. 16. And she. Gr. "said to them with a loud voice: Praise God, praise, ye, praise God, because he hath not withdrawn his mercy from the house of Israel, but hath destroyed our enemies by my hand this night." H.

VER. 19. Drunkenness. "The fasting of one woman overthrew an innumerable host of drunkards," S. Amb. de Jej. 9. W.

VER. 20. And abiding. Gr. "for my face has deluded him to his ruin, and 21 "Give all of you glory to him, because he is good, because his mercy endureth for ever.

22 And they all adored the Lord, and said to her. The Lord hath blessed thee by his power, because by thee he hath brought our enemies to nought.

23 And Ozias, the prince of the people of Israel, said to her: Blessed art thou, O daughter, by the Lord, the most high God, above all women upon the earth.

24 Blessed be the Lord who made heaven and earth, who hath directed thee to the cutting off of the head of the prince of our enemies.

25 Because he hath so magnified thy name this day, that thy praise shall not depart out of the mouth of men, who shall be mindful of the power of the Lord, for ever, for that thou hast not spared thy life, by reason of the distress and tribulation of thy people, but hast prevented our ruin in the presence of our God.

26 And all the people said: So be it, so be it.

27 And Achior, being called for, came, and Judith said to him: The God of Israel, to whom thou gavest testimony, that he revengeth himself of his enemies, he hath cut off the head of all the unbelievers this night by my hand.

28 And that thou mayst find that it is so, behold the head of Holofernes, who in the contempt of his pride despised the God of Israel: and threatened thee with death, saying: When the people of Israel shall be taken, I will command thy sides to be pierced with a sword.

29 Then Achior, seeing the head of Holofernes, being seized with a great fear, he fell on his face upon the earth, and his soul swooned away.

30 But after he had recovered his spirits, he fell down at her feet, and revered her, and said:

31 Blessed art thou, by thy God, in every tabernacle of Jacob, for in every nation which shall hear thy name, the God of Israel shall be magnified on occasion of thee.

CHAP. XIV.

The Israelites assault the Assyrians, who, finding their general slain, are seized with a panic fear.

AND Judith said to all the people: Hear me, my brethren, hang ye up this head upon our walls:

2 And as soon as the sun shall rise, let every man take his arms, and rush ye out, not as going down beneath, but as making an assault.

3 Then the watchmen must needs run to awake their prince for the battle.

4 And when the captains of them shall run to the tent

he has not committed sin with me, for defilement and shame. And all the people were much amazed; and bowing down, they adored the Lord, and said, with one accord: Our God, thou art blessed, because this day thou hast brought the enemies of thy people to nought." H.—Judith's guardian angel defended her; as Jacob's did him. Gen. xlviii. W.

VER. 30. Reverenced. Lit. "adored;" a word often used in this sense. H.

CHAP. XIV. VER. 1. Walls. Gr. adds, "upon the pinnacle."

VER. 2. Beneath. Into the valley; but make your appearance just out of the walls, as if you were rushing upon the enemy. Gr. adds after arms, "and you shall appoint a leader over them, as if descending into the plain to the advanced guard of the Assyrians; but ye shall not go down. Then these seizing all their armour, will go to the camp, and awake the leaders of the Assyrians, and they will run to the tent of Holofernes, and shall not find him. Then fear shall seize upon them, and they will flee before us. Whereupon ye, and all who inhabit the confines of Israel, shall follow after, and strew them in their paths," slain and wounded. Ver. 6. H.

of Holofernes, and shall find him without his head, wallowing in his blood, fear shall fall upon them.

5 And when you shall know that they are fleeing, go after them securely, for the Lord will destroy them under your feet.

6 Then Achior, seeing the power that the God of Israel had wrought, leaving the religion of the Gentiles, he believed God, and circumcised the flesh of his foreskin, and was joined to the people of Israel, with all the succession of his kindred, until this present day.

7 And immediately at break of day, they hung up the head of Holofernes upon the walls, and every man took his arms, and they went out with a great noise and shouting.

8 And the watchmen, seeing this, ran to the tent of Holofernes.

9 And they that were in the tent, came and made a noise before the door of the chamber to awake him, endeavouring by art to break his rest, that Holofernes might awake, not by their calling him, but by their noise.

10 For no man durst knock, or open and go into the chamber of the general of the Assyrians.

11 But when his captains and tribunes were come, and all the chiefs of the army of the king of the Assyrians, they said to the chamberlains:

12 Go in, and awake him, for the mice coming out of their holes, have presumed to challenge us to fight.

13 Then Vagao going into his chamber, stood before the curtain, and made a clapping with his hands: for he thought that he was sleeping with Judith.

14 But when with hearkening, he perceived no motion of one lying, he came near to the curtain, and lifting it up, and seeing the body of Holofernes, lying upon the ground, without the head, weltering in his blood, he cried out with a loud voice, with weeping, and rent his garments.

15 And he went into the tent of Judith, and not finding her, he ran out to the people,

16 And said: One Hebrew woman hath made confusion in the house of king Nabuchodonosor: for behold Holofernes lieth upon the ground, and his head is not upon him.

VER. 6. Then. Gr., &c. "But before ye do this, call to me Achior, the Ammonite, that seeing, he may recognise the contemner of the house of Israel, and the man who sent him away to us unto certain death. And they called Achior from the house of Ozias. But as soon as he came, and saw the head of Holofernes in the hand of one of the assembly of the people, he fell," &c., as chap. xiii. 29, 30. "Blessed art thou in every tent of Juda, and in every nation. All who shall hear thy name shall be amazed. But now tell me what thou hast done during these days. And Judith, in the midst of the people, informed him of all that she had performed, since the day of her departure till the time when she was speaking. She had no sooner ended her speech, than all the people set up a loud shout of joy in their city. Then," &c.—Leaving. Gr. "He believed in God greatly," or with the utmost sincerity. H.—Hitherto Achior had only considered the Deity as the peculiar God of Israel, (C.) or as the common gods "revered by all nations" (Virg. 12. Servius); but not as the only Supreme Being. He now becomes a proselyte, not merely, like Naaman, to adore one God; but also to observe all the rites of the Jewish religion.

VER. 8. Ran. Gr. "Sent to their officers. But they went to the leaders and captains of thousands, and to every chief among them, and they proceeded to the tent of Holofernes, and said to his chief steward: Awaken now our lord, for the slaves have been so bold as to come down to offer us battle for their utter ruin. Then Bagoas," &c., ver. 13. H

VER. 13. Into. Gr. "In, knocked at the hall (ἀνὰ, or antechamber) of the tent, for he suspected that he was sleeping with Judith. But as no one answered, he opened and went into the bed-chamber, and found him thrown upon the floor, dead, and his head taken from him, and he cried," &c.

17 Now when the chiefs of the army of the Assyrians had heard this, they all rent their garments, and an intolerable fear and dread fell upon them, and their minds were troubled exceedingly.

18 And there was a very great cry in the midst of their camp.

CHAP. XV.

The Assyrians flee: the Hebrews pursue after them, and are enriched by their spoils.

AND when all the army heard that Holofernes was beheaded, courage and counsel fled from them, and being seized with trembling and fear, they thought only to save themselves by flight.

2 So that no one spoke to his neighbour, but hanging down the head, leaving all things behind, they made haste to escape from the Hebrews, who, as they heard, were coming armed upon them, and fled by the ways of the fields, and the paths of the hills.

3 So the children of Israel, seeing them fleeing, followed after them. And they went down sounding with trumpets and shouting after them.

4 And because the Assyrians were not united together, they went without order in their flight; but the children of Israel, pursuing in one body, defeated all that they could find.

5 And Ozias sent messengers through all the cities and countries of Israel.

6 And every country and every city, sent their chosen young men armed after them, and they pursued them with the edge of the sword, until they came to the extremities of their confines.

7 And the rest that were in Bethulia, went into the camp of the Assyrians, and took away the spoils, which the Assyrians in their flight had left behind them, and they were loaded exceedingly.

8 But they that returned conquerors to Bethulia, brought with them all things that were theirs, so that there was no numbering of their cattle, and beasts, and of all their moveables, insomuch, that from the least to the greatest, all were made rich by their spoils.

9 And Joachim, the high priest, came from Jerusalem to Bethulia, with all his ancients, to see Judith.

CHAP. XV. VER. 1. All. Gr. "Those who were in the tents heard, they were astonished at the fact; and fear and trembling fell upon them, and there was not a man remaining before his neighbour; but rushing out, with one accord, they fled through every path, in the plains and in the mountains; and those who were encamped in the high places around Bethulia, (H. the Moabites, &c., chap. vii. 8. C.) fled. Then every warrior of Israel rushed out upon them, and Ozias," ver. 5.

VER. 5. Israel. Gr. adds, "informing them of what had been accomplished, and that all might pour upon the enemies, to cut them off. But when the Israelites heard this, they all, unanimously, fell upon them, as far as Chobai (H. Hoba. C.): in like manner those from Jerusalem came up, and from all the mountainous country; for they also were informed of what had happened in the camp of their enemies; and the men of Galaad and of Galilee scattered them with great slaughter, till they had passed Damascus and its boundaries." H.

VER. 8. They. Gr. "The Israelites, returning from the slaughter, took possession of the remainder, and the villages and cities, both in the mountainous and champaign country, took many spoils; for there was great abundance. But Joachim," &c.

VER. 9. Came. Gr. adds, "and the senate of Israel, residing at Jerusalem, came." To see. Gr. adds, "the good things (Compl. to confirm or lay a foundation for the good things) which God had done to Israel, and to see Judith, and speak peace with her." Prot. "to salute her." H.—Joachim is the same with Eliacim; El being only prefixed. T.—He is the Sadoc II. or Odeas of Josephus (Reinec.); and succeeded Sobna both in spiritual and temporal power. Isa. xlii. Bellarmin

10 And when she was come out to him, they all blessed her with one voice, saying: Thou art the glory of Jerusalem, thou art the joy of Israel, thou art the honour of our people:

11 For thou hast done manfully, and thy heart has been strengthened, because thou hast loved chastity, and after thy husband hast not known any other: therefore, also, the hand of the Lord hath strengthened thee, and therefore thou shalt be blessed for ever.

12 And all the people said: So be it, so be it.

13 And thirty days were scarce sufficient for the people of Israel to gather up the spoils of the Assyrians.

14 But all those things that were proved to be the peculiar goods of Holofernes, they gave to Judith, in gold and silver, and garments, and precious stones, and all household stuff, and they all were delivered to her by the people.

15 And all the people rejoiced with the women and virgins, and young men, playing on instruments and harps.

CHAP. XVI.

The canticle of Judith: her virtuous life and death.

THEN Judith sung this canticle to the Lord, saying:

2 Begin ye to the Lord with timbrels, sing ye to the Lord with cymbals, tune unto him a new psalm, extol, and call upon his name.

3 The Lord putteth an end to wars, the Lord is his name.

4 He hath set his camp in the midst of his people, to deliver us from the hand of all our enemies.

5 The Assyrian came out of the mountains from the north in the multitude of his strength: his multitude stopped up the torrents, and their horses covered the valleys.

6 He bragged that he would set my borders on fire, and kill my young men with the sword, to make my infants a prey, and my virgins captives.

7 But the Almighty Lord hath struck him, and delivered him into the hands of a woman, and hath slain him.

VER. 10. She. Gr. "They were gone into her apartment, they," &c.—Art the. Gr. adds, "great joy, and the great boast of our race; because thou hast done all these things with thy hand, thou hast procured the good of Israel, and God hath been pleased with them. Be thou blessed by the omnipotent Lord for ever." H.—Judith was a figure of the blessed Virgin, to whom these praises chiefly belong. Fulbert. W.

VER. 11. Chastity, &c. This is not in Syr., &c., and though, generally speaking, celibacy was not esteemed honourable among the Jews; yet chastity was so much the more admired, as it was more uncommon. A widow was deserving of praise for not lightly entering upon a second marriage. C.

VER. 13. Thirty. Gr. "And the people plundered the camp thirty (Syr. three) days." The camp of the Assyrians was in various places, and the people waited a month before they began to divide the spoils among all, according to their laws. Num. xxxi. 27, and 1 Kings xxx. 24. C.

VER. 14. But. Gr. "And they gave to Judith the tent of Holofernes, and all the silver plate, and beds, and basins, and all his furniture, which she taking, placed upon her mule, and put to her chariots, and heaped them thereon; and every woman of Israel ran to see her, and they blessed her, and danced in her honour. Then she took some thyrsus (H. or branches entwined with ivy, &c. C.) in her hands, and gave to those women who accompanied her; and they crowned with olive both her and her attendant; (maid, or Alex. Sept. 'and she was crowned with olive, and her mule;') Grabe substitutes 'female companions;') and she went before all the people, leading the dance of all the women; and every man of Israel followed in arms, with crowns, and with hymns in their mouth. Then," &c. Chap. xvi. H.—The bearing of green branches on such occasions was very common. Lev. xxiii. 40; 2 Mac. x. 7; Matt. xxi. 8.—The processions of the Church often admit of similar ornaments in honour of God, (T.) and to promote piety. H.

CHAP. XVI. VER. 1. Sung. Gr. "Gave out this confession, in all Israel: and all the people echoed this praise" (H.); either repeating the whole after her, or singing the first verse as a chorus. Exod. xv. 20; 1 Kings xviii. 6; 1 Par. xvi. 8. C.—Saying. Gr. "And Judith said: Begin ye to my Lord." H.—It is time for us to break silence, and to sound forth the praises of God. C.

8 For their mighty one did not fall by young men, neither did the sons of Titan strike him, nor tall giants oppose themselves to him, but Judith, the daughter of Merari, weakened him with the beauty of her face.

9 For she put off her the garments of widowhood, and put on her the garments of joy, to give joy to the children of Israel.

10 She anointed her face with ointment, and bound up her locks with a crown, she took a new robe to deceive him.

11 Her sandals ravished his eyes, her beauty made his soul her captive, with a sword she cut off his head.

12 The Persians quaked at her constancy, and the Medes at her boldness.

13 Then the camp of the Assyrians howled, when my lowly ones appeared, parched with thirst.

14 The sons of the damsels have pierced them through, and they have killed them like children fleeing away: they perished in battle before the face of the Lord, my God.

15 Let us sing a hymn to the Lord, let us sing a new hymn to our God.

16 O Adonai, Lord, great art thou, and glorious in thy power, and no one can overcome thee.

17 *Let all thy creatures serve thee: because thou hast spoken, and they were made: thou didst send forth thy Spirit, and they were created, and there is no one that can resist thy voice.

18 The mountains shall be moved from the foundations with the waters: the rocks shall melt as wax before thy face.

19 But they that fear thee, shall be great with thee in all things.

20 Woe be to the nation that riseth up against my people: for the Lord Almighty will take revenge on them; in the day of judgment he will visit them.

21 For he will give fire, and worms into their flesh, that they may burn, and may feel for ever.

* Psal. xxxii. 9.

VER. 3. Wars, or destroys armies. H.—God is often represented as a mighty warrior. Isa. i. 24; Jer. ii. 20; Rom. ix. 29. C.—This passage is quoted by S. Ephrem (scr. de 2 Adv.) as a part of Scripture. W.—Lord is. Gr. "For he has drawn me from the hands of my persecutors, into his camp, in the midst of the people." H.

VER. 5. Mountains of Cilicia, and through the defiles of Libanus and Hermon, on the north of Palestine, by which road they were forced to come. The desert Arabia was impassable for a large army. C.—North, inclining to the east. H. Isa. xiv. 13; Jer. i. 13; Ezech. i. 4.

VER. 6. To make. Gr. "that he would throw my children, at the breast, on the pavement, and make," &c. H.

VER. 8. Men; soldiers. Chap. xiv. 6; Gen. xiv. 24.—Titan. So the Sept. render Raphaim. 2 Kings v. 18. The Greek translator of this work seems to have read the poets, who pretend that the Titans attempted to take heaven by storm. C.

VER. 10. Crown. Gr. "mitre," or riband, ornamented with jewels. Chap. x. 3. Syr. "net-work."—New. Gr. "linen stole," which was a long robe, usually of linen, and worn both by men and women. C.

VER. 11. Sandals. The bandages which tied the shoe-soles (H.) to the feet, were most ornamental. Isa. iii. C.—With. Gr. "a sword (acinace) passed through his neck."

VER. 13. Then. Gr. "Then my lowly ones (H. she speaks thus contemptuously of the Assyrians. C.) howled, my weak ones cried out through fear; they raised their voice, and were overthrown." H.—Others think that she is speaking of her fellow-citizens, (T.) or of both. H.

VER. 14. Children, or "slaves." Syr. Being thus overtaken, what could they do but sue for pardon? C.—Before. Gr. "of the Lord," &c.

VER. 19. Great. Gr. "treated mercifully by thee: for little with thee is all sacrifice, for the odour of sweetness; and all fat is but the least for thy holocausts. But he who fears the Lord, is ever great." H.

VER. 21. Flesh, which is thus punished for ever, (S. Aug. de Civ. Dei xxv. 4,) while the soul is still more tormented with the loss of God's vision. W.—The bodies of those who persecute God's people will not only be thrown out with ignominy, but the impenitent shall suffer eternal torments. These worms and 22 And it came to pass after these things, that all the people, after the victory, came to Jerusalem to adore the Lord: and as soon as they were purified, they all offered holocausts, and vows, and their promises.

23 And Judith offered for an anathema of oblivion all the arms of Holofernes, which the people gave her, and the canopy that she had taken away out of his chamber.

24 And the people were joyful in the sight of the sanctuary, and for three months the joy of this victory was celebrated with Judith.

25 And after those days every man returned to his house, and Judith was made great in Bethulia, and she was most renowned in all the land of Israel.

26 And chastity was joined to her virtue, so that she knew no man all the days of her life, after the death of Manasses, her husband.

27 And on festival days she came forth with great glory.

28 And she abode in her husband's house a hundred and five years, and made her handmaid free, and she died and was buried with her husband in Bethulia.

29 And all the people mourned for seven days.

30 And all the time of her life there was none that troubled Israel, nor many years after her death.

31 But the day of the festivity of this victory is received by the Hebrews in the number of holy days, and is religiously observed by the Jews, from that time until this day.

Pres do not cease: They are not merely figurative, but real, according to the Fathers. Serar. q. 1. T. Essais de Mor.—Though the damned have not yet their bodies, they are no less affected with pain; as people who have lost a member often seem to feel pain in it. That our soul should even now suffer, when the body is hurt, depends on God's appointment. The Jews spoke of eternal torments in similar terms. Eccli. vii. 19; Isa. lxvi. 24; Mark ix. 45.

VER. 22. And. Gr. "But as soon as they arrived at Jerusalem, they adored God; and when the people were purified, they offered their holocausts, and free gifts, and presents." H.

VER. 23. An anathema of oblivion. That is, a gift or offering made to God, by way of an everlasting monument, to prevent the oblivion or the forgetting of so great a benefit. Ch.

VER. 24. Three. Syr. "one entire month." C.—Joy. Gr. "and Judith remained with them."

VER. 25. Was made. Gr. "returned also to Bethulia, and dwelt on her own possessions; and in her time, was honourable throughout all the land."

VER. 26. Chastity. Gr. "many desired to have her, (H. in marriage. W.) but no man knew her, all," &c. H.—She again practised the same mortifications which she had done before. Suidas. C.—Husband. Gr. adds, "when he was removed to his people. And proceeding, (to the temple, or advancing in age,) she was very great, and she grew old in her," &c. H.

VER. 28. Five. Suidas alone reads "fifty." Some would suppose that Judith lived 105 years after her husband's death; so that she might have been in all 125 years old. But she would thus have survived the siege of Jerusalem under Nabuchodonosor (C.); and the text does not require this sense. H. See Exod. xii. 40. T.—Free; as she had been her assistant in such a glorious work. M.—Died. Gr. adds, "in Bethulia; and they buried her in the cave of her husband, Manasses." See chap. viii. 3.

VER. 29. Seven days. The usual term (Eccli. xxii. 13); but it was extraordinary for the whole province (C.) to mourn for an individual. Gr. and Syr. add, "And she divided all her possessions, before her death, among the nearest relations of her husband, Manasses, and among her own" (H.): which was very equitable, as she had no children, (C.) we may suppose. T. H.

VER. 30. Years. Gr. "days." See the pref. H.—Judith was a widow near seventy years, showing an excellent pattern to all in that state. Notwithstanding the many inducements which she might have had to marry again, she chose to abstain, for greater perfection. Matt. xix., and 1 Cor. vii. W.—From the death of Holofernes (A. 3348) to that of Josias, (A. 3394,) only forty-six years of peace would occur in Juda. Hence Hardouin would suppose that the text speaks of the kingdom of Israel. But it would be hard to prove that it existed at that time, after the ten tribes had been led away. A. 3283. As the Scripture does not specify how old Judith was when she addressed Holofernes, (C.) she might be sixty-five. Vitre.—If, therefore, we should make this peace last till the coming of Nabuchodonosor to attack Jerusalem, about forty-six years might elapse before the time her assigned. C.—It is, however, much more probable (H.) that the peace subsisted from the 11th of Manasses to the death of Josias, seventy-three (Gr. seventy-eight) years (T.); and that she was not above forty when she performed her exploit; as she was then styled a beautiful girl, (chap. xii. 12,) and many desired to marry her. H.

VER. 31. But. This is taken from the Chaldee of S. Jerom, though omitted in the old Vulg., as well as in the Gr. and Syriac. We find no express mention of this festival in the Jews' Calendar, (C.) though no one can doubt but it once was kept. D.—It probably ceased during the captivity; as that, in memory of the victory over Nicanor, (which was kept in the days of Josephus, xii. 16,) has been long since abolished, (C.) with many others. D.

THE BOOK OF ESTHER.

This Book takes its name from queen Esther; whose history is here recorded. The general opinion of almost all commentators on the Holy Scripture makes Mardochai the writer of it; which also may be collected below from chap. ix. 20. C.—He and the queen were certainly authors of the letter (H.) enjoining the celebration of the feast of Purim, or "lots," which is the ground-work (C.) of the present narration. D.—The compiler has also had recourse to the archives of the kingdom of Persia; so that his work has all the authority that can be required of a profane historian; and being, moreover, inspired in all its parts, we cannot refuse to receive it with the utmost respect. Those additions which are not now in Hebrew, (C.) though they were perhaps formerly, (W. Origen. D.) have been carefully preserved by S. Jerom, and were recognised by the ancient Vulg., as they are at present by the Greek, without any distinction. Lysimachus, the Greek translator, was probably the author of them. Chap. xi. 1. C.—The Jews, who have rejected this work entirely, with Melito, (Eus. Hist. iv. 26. S. Greg. Naz. &c.,) ought not to prevail against the consent of the majority, (C.) expressed in the Councils of Laodicea, Carthage, Trent, Sess. 4, &c. To read this book according to the order of time, we should begin chap. xi. 2, &c., chap. i. ii., and xii., and iii. to ver. 14; then we find the distress of the Jews in the rest of that chapter, and in chap. xiii. to ver. 8, and their delivery in chap. iv. to ix. ver. 17, and chap. xiii. ver. 8, &c., and chap. xiv., xv., and xvi. The consequences of these events are recorded chap. ix. 17, &c., to chap. xi. 1, (W.) with which verse the book ends in the Greek editions. H.—They vary considerably, as did the copies of the ancient Vulgate, which called forth the complaints of S. Jerom, Pref. But the Church has distinguished what was spurious from the genuine word of God; so that the doubts of Lyran, Sixtus, (Bib. 8,) &c. respecting the fragments at the end of the book being not canonical, ought no longer to be indulged; much less can the boldness of many Lutherans, (C.) and particularly of Le Clerc, (Houbigant,) be tolerated, who represent the whole work as a mere fiction. The Jews have a greater respect for it than for any of the prophets; whose works, they say, will perish at the coming of the Messias: whereas this will subsist with the books of Moses, and the feast of Purim will never be abolished. Chap. ix. 28. Maimon.—Ben. Gorion (ii. 2) admits the additions. But Josephus is silent about them, as he probably did not find them in his copy. C.—He recites, however, both the epistles of Assuerus. Ant. xi. 6. D.—It is not agreed whether these events happened before or after the captivity. But it is now most commonly supposed that Esther was married to Darius Hystaspes, A. 3489, about the time of the dedication of the temple. Chap. xiv. 9. He had been on the throne six years, and reigned other thirty. See Herod. vii. 4. C.—Josephus thinks that Esther was the queen of Artaxerxes Longimanus, who was a great friend of the Jews. D.—The Talmud attributes this work to the great Synagogue, consisting of Esdras, Mardochai, Joelhim, &c., and, as various persons might write the same history, the Greek, with the additions, seems to be taken from one copy, and the Hebrew from another rather more ancient, (Huet. D.) but equally inspired. H.

CHAPTER I.

King Assuerus maketh a great feast. Queen Vasthi being sent for, refuseth to come: for which disobedience she is deposed.

IN the days of Assuerus, who reigned from India to Ethiopia over a hundred and twenty-seven provinces:

2 When he sat on the throne of his kingdom, the city Susan was the capital of his kingdom.

3 Now in the third year ^a of his reign he made a great feast for all the princes, and for his servants, for the most mighty of the Persians, and the nobles of the Medes, and the governors of the provinces, in his sight,

4 That he might show the riches of the glory of his kingdom, and the greatness, and boasting of his power, for a long time, to wit, for a hundred and fourscore days.

5 And when the days of the feast were expired, he invited all the people that were found in Susan, from the greatest to the least: and commanded a feast to be made seven days in the court of the garden, and of the wood, which was planted by the care and the hand of the king.

6 And there were hung up on every side sky-coloured, and green, and violet hangings, fastened with cords of silk, and of purple, which were put into rings of ivory, and were held up with marble pillars. The beds, also, were of gold and silver, placed in order upon a floor, paved with porphyry and white marble: which was embellished with painting of wonderful variety.

7 And they that were invited, drank in golden cups, and the meats were brought in divers vessels, one after another. Wine, also, in abundance and of the best was presented, as was worthy of a king's magnificence.

8 Neither was there any one to compel them to drink that were not willing, but as the king had appointed, who set over every table one of his nobles, that every man might take what he would.

CHAP. I. VER. 1. In. Heb. "and in." In this manner the books of Scripture are usually connected. Sept. place first the dream of Mardochai. Chap. xi. 2. C.—Assuerus. Sept. Artaxerxes; as chap. xvi. 1. The former is the title of the Median, the latter of the Persian, monarchs. This king reigned over both nations, and was most probably Darius Hystaspes, the third king of the Persians, (T.) who subdued India, &c. Herod. C. T.—Some understand Cambyses, (1 Esd. iv. Genebrard,) or Xerxes, (Scalig.) or Artaxerxes Longimanus, (Bellarm. Salien,) or Memnon, (Euseb.) or Oehus. Serarius.—India. Part had been (C.) subject to Xerxes. Herod. vii. 65.—But Darius subdued the country, and imposed a heavy tribute. Herod. iv. 44.—Ethiopia, beyond Egypt, paid an acknowledgment. Cambyses had taken possession of this country. C.—Seven: one hundred and twenty had been regulated by Darius, the Mede. Dan. vi. 1. H.—The number might vary as the monarch chose. D.

VER. 2. Capital. Heb. "palace, (Prot. H.) or castle," (C.) may also signify "a capital." Mont., &c.—Hystaspes founded this ancient royal city of Persia, (Pliny, vi. 27,) or he greatly embellished it. C. Ælian, Anim. xiii. 18. T.

VER. 3. Reign. When he was solemnly crowned again, (T.) or removed his court, (C.) and dedicated this new capital, with feasting, &c. H.

VER. 4. Days, or a full half year, according to their reckoning. Nabuchodonosor, after his victory over Arphaxad, (Judith i.) feasted one hundred and twenty days; Dionysius of Syraeuse, ninety (Aristot.); Solomon, seven (3 Kings viii. 63); and David three; when he was recognised by all Israel. 1 Par. xii. 39.

VER. 5. Exp'ed, (Feu'ardent), or in the last week. M. C.—King. The Persian monarchs delighted in agriculture.

VER. 6. Were. Prot. "where were" white, green, and blue hangings.—Ivory. Heb. "silver." H.—Beds, to lie down on at table; though sitting was formerly the fashion. Gen. xliii. 33. The other custom prevailed among the more luxurious nations, and was observed in our Saviour's time, each person reclining upon his left arm, and having his feet behind the next. T.—Variety, in Mosaic work. T.—They lay upon sheep skins. Chal. Sept. "and the beds (or coverlets) were transparent, with various flowers, and full-blown roses, all round." H.

VER. 8. Neither. Heb. "and the drinking was according to the law." Gr. "was not according to the pre-established law" (H.); as the usual custom was altered on this occasion; and thus both may be accurate. The Persians had com-

9 Also Vasthi, the queen, made a feast for the women in the palace, where king Assuerus was used to dwell.

10 Now on the seventh day, when the king was merry, and after very much drinking, was well warmed with wine, he commanded Mauman, and Bazatha, and Harbona, and Bagatha; and Abgatha, and Zethar, and Charcas, the seven eunuchs that served in his presence.

11 To bring in queen Vasthi before the king, with the crown set upon her head, to show her beauty to all the people, and the princes: for she was exceedingly beautiful.

12 But she refused, and would not come at the king's commandment, which he had signified to her by the eunuchs. Whereupon the king, being angry, and inflamed with a very great fury,

13 Asked the wise men, who, according to the custom of the kings, were always near his person, and all he did was by their counsel, who knew the laws, and judgments of their forefathers:

14 (Now the chief and nearest him were, Charsena and Sethar, and Admatha, and Tharsis, and Mares, and Marsana, and Mamuchan, seven princes of the Persians and of the Medes, who saw the face of the king, and were used to sit first after him:)

15 What sentence ought to pass upon Vasthi, the queen, who had refused to obey the commandment of king Assuerus, which he had sent to her by the eunuchs?

16 And Mamuchan answered, in the hearing of the king and the princes: Queen Vasthi hath not only injured the king, but also all the people and princes that are in all the provinces of king Assuerus.

17 For this deed of the queen will go abroad to all women, so that they will despise their husbands, and will say: King Assuerus commanded that queen Vasthi should come in to him, and she would not.

18 And by this example, all the wives of the princes of the Persians, and the Medes, will slight the command-mently a king of the feast, whose orders all were obliged to obey in drinking. Hor. i. Ode 4. Eccli. xxxii. 1.

VER. 9. Vasthi. Sept. Astin. H.—The name is not very different from that of Atossa, the daughter of Cyrus, who was married to Cambyses, Smerdis, and Darius; to the latter of whom she bore four children. Herod. iii. 68, and vii. 3.—This prince had other wives, particularly Artistona, (C. our Hadossa, (H.) or Esther,) whom he espoused a virgin, and loved the most. Herodotus seems to confound her with Atossa.—Dicell. Some Greek copies have "in her own palaces." Usher.—It was proper for women to be more retired. M.—The men feasted in the open air. H.

VER. 10. Wine. From the king's excess, and the haughtiness of Vasthi, God took occasion to advance Esther, and to deliver his people. C.—Mauman. Sept. "Aman." T.—But the names vary.

VER. 11. Head. But without any other covering. Chal.—Some Greek copies assert, very improbably, (C.) that she was sent for "to be crowned queen."—Beautiful. "The Persian ladies were noted for beauty," (Ammian,) inasmuch that Alexander called them "eye-sores," oculorum dolores. Curt.

VER. 12. Fury. This is the usual consequence of excess. W.

VER. 13. According. Heb. "knew the times (for so was the king's custom with those who knew law and judgment). And the next," &c. H.—These were the magi, more particularly versed in the constitutions of the country. The Persians commonly held their consultations over wine. Herod. i. 133.—Sept. "and the king said to his friends, Thus has Astin spoken; do therefore, in this affair, law and judgment. Then came forth to him Arkesaios and Saresthaïos, and Malesear, the princes of the Persians and Medes, men near the king, and who sat first after the king." H.—The old Vulg. places Mardochæus first. These seven counsellors were perhaps styled the king's relations, (Brisson, i. p. 171,) and administered justice; as even the kings referred their causes to them. Plut. Artax., &c.

VER. 16. Mamuchan. Old Vulg. "Mardochæus." Yet the Jews say this was the infamous Aman; and one Greek copy has Bilgaïos, (C.) and Arabo, "Mouchaios." Chap. iii. 1, and xii. 6. He was the youngest, but spoke first, as was sometimes the case.

VER. 18. Wives. Gr. ῥαπάγνιδες, "princesses, or female tyrants."—Slight. Sept. "dare to slight their husbands. Wherefore if," &c. H.—Just. H.

ments of their husbands: wherefore, the king's indignation is just.

19 If it please thee, let an edict go out from thy presence, and let it be written according to the law of the Persians, and of the Medes, which must not be altered, that Vasthi come in no more to the king, but another, that is better than she, be made queen in her place.

20 And let this be published through all the provinces of thy empire, (which is very wide,) and let all wives, as well of the greater as of the lesser, give honour to their husbands.

21 His counsel pleased the king, and the princes: and the king did according to the counsel of Mamuchan.

22 And he sent letters to all the provinces of his kingdom, as every nation could hear and read, in divers languages and characters, that the husbands should be rulers and masters in their houses: and that this should be published to every people.

CHAP. II.

Esther is advanced to be queen. Mardochoi detecteth a plot against the king.

AFTER this, when the wrath of king Assuerus was appeased, he remembered Vasthi, and what she had done, and what she had suffered:

2 And the king's servants and his officers said: Let young women be sought for the king, virgins, and beautiful.

3 And let some persons be sent through all the provinces to look for beautiful maidens and virgins: and let them bring them to the city of Susan, and put them into the house of the women, under the hand of Egeus, the eunuch, who is the overseer and keeper of the king's women, and let them receive women's ornaments, and other things necessary for their use.

4 And whosoever among them all shall please the king's eyes, let her be queen instead of Vasthi. The word pleased the king: and he commanded it should be done as they had suggested.

5 There was a man in the city of Susan, a Jew, named Mardochai, "the son of Jair, the son of Semei, the son of Cis, of the race of Jemini,

6 Who had been carried away from Jerusalem at the time that Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, carried away "Jechonias, king of Juda;"

7 And he had brought up his brother's daughter, Edissa, who, by another name, was called Esther: now she had lost both her parents, and was exceedingly fair and beautiful. And her father and mother being dead, Mardochai adopted her for his daughter.

8 And when the king's ordinance was noised abroad, and, according to his commandment, many beautiful virgins were brought to Susan, and were delivered to Egeus, the eunuch: Esther, also, among the rest of the maidens, was delivered to him to be kept in the number of the women.

9 And she pleased him, and found favour in his sight. And he commanded the eunuch to hasten the women's ornaments, and to deliver to her her part, and seven of the most beautiful maidens of the king's house, and to adorn and deck out both her and her waiting-maids.

10 And she would not tell him her people nor her country. For Mardochai had charged her to say nothing at all of that:

11 And he walked every day before the court of the house, in which the chosen virgins were kept, having a care for Esther's welfare, and desiring to know what would befall her.

12 Now when every virgin's turn came to go in to the king, after all had been done for setting them off to advantage, it was the twelfth month: so that for six months they were anointed with oil of myrrh, and for other six months they used certain perfumes and sweet spices.

13 And when they were going in to the king, whatsoever they asked to adorn themselves they received: and being decked out, as it pleased them, they passed from the chamber of the women to the king's chamber.

14 And she that went in at evening, came out in the morning, and from thence she was conducted to the second house, that was under the hand of Susagaz, the eunuch, who had the charge over the king's concubines: neither could she return any more to the king, unless the king desired it, and had ordered her, by name, to come.

15 And as the time came orderly about, the day was at

"enough of contempt and indignation." This may be referred either to the king or to the women's husbands. The example will prove a source of continual quarrels. C.

VER. 19. Altered. This regarded the more solemn acts, signed by the counsellors. Dan. vi. 17. Grotius.—Some decrees were neglected or changed. Chap. viii. 9; 1 Esd. iv. 5, 21, and vi. 1. C.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. Suffered. He began to repent. The Persians used to deliberate when warm with wine; but their decrees were not ratified till they had examined them again the next day. Herod. i. 133.—This was not the case here; the king divorced his wife without any delay. C.—Sept., intimate that he presently lost thoughts of her. "He no longer remembered Vasthi with any affection, reflecting what she had said, and how he had condemned her." H.—But the Alex. copy agrees with the Heb. C.

VER. 2. Beautiful. Thus Abisag was brought to David. 3 Kings i. 2.

VER. 3. House. Distinct from the palace. Ver. 14.

VER. 5. Jew. He was of the tribe of Benjamin. But all went by this name after the captivity. Mardochai had probably returned from Jerusalem, seeing things were unfinished there. 1 Esd. ii. 2. C.—Semei, who cursed David. Chal.—Cis. The head of the royal family of Saul; whence authors have concluded that he and Esther were of royal blood, (C.) and descendants of Miphiboseth. T.

VER. 6. Who. This may refer to Cis, the great-grandfather of Mardochai, if we postpone this history till the latter end of the Persian monarchy. D.—But it more naturally applies to Mardochai himself, who (chap. xi. 4. T.) was led captive eighty years before, being then perhaps ten years old, so that he would now be only ninety; an age when many are fit for great things. C. Cic. de Senect.—He might even have been an infant when taken, and of course would not be much above eighty when he came into such favour. H.

VER. 7. Brother's. Josephus, (xi. 6,) the old Latin version of the Syr. Abenezra, &c., suppose that Mardochai was uncle to Esther. But the Heb., Syr., Gr., and Chal., assert that he was only her cousin. Sept., daughter of Aminadab, (or rather Abihail, ver. 15,) his father's brother, and her name was Esther; and after her parents were dead, he educated her for a wife; "ἐκ γυναικα, as some Rabbins also maintain, believing she was an heiress. Yet other Greek copies, Heb., &c., read, "he educated her as a daughter, θυγάτηρ; for the damsel was very beautiful." He had probably adopted her. C.—Edissa. Heb. edse, (H.) or Hadassah, signifies "of myrtle." M.—Esther, "a sheep." C.

VER. 9. And he, Egeus, commanded the under eunuch. T.—Heb. "he quickly gave her her things for purifications, (ver. 3,) and her portions, with seven maids, suitable for her, out of the king's house; and he charged her and her maids to dwell in the best of the women's house," (H.) where things were the most commodious. C.

VER. 11. Court. He was one of the life-guards. Chap. xi. 3. T.—This situation enabled him to disclose a conspiracy, (ver. 23, and chap. xii. 5,) as he often went to inquire after the health of Esther. C.

VER. 12. Turn. This was rigidly observed in that country, where polygamy prevailed. Gen. xxx. 16; Herod. iii. 69.—The wives were "shut up in separate apartments," (Just. i. 9,) in the remotest parts of the palace C.—Twelfth. A full year elapsed before they could be admitted. H.

hand, when Esther, the daughter of Abihail, the brother of Mardochoi, whom he had adopted for his daughter, was to go in to the king. But she sought not women's ornaments, but whatsoever Egeus, the eunuch, the keeper of the virgins, had a mind, he gave her to adorn her. For she was exceedingly fair, and her incredible beauty made her appear agreeable, and amiable, in the eyes of all.

16 So she was brought to the chamber of king Assuerus the tenth month, which is called Tebeth, in the seventh year^a of his reign.

17 And the king loved her more than all the women, and she had favour and kindness before him above all the women, and he set the royal crown on her head, and made her queen instead of Vasthi.

18 And he commanded a magnificent feast to be prepared for all the princes, and for his servants, for the marriage and wedding of Esther. And he gave rest to all the provinces, and bestowed gifts according to princely magnificence.

19 And when the virgins were sought the second time, and gathered together, Mardochoi stayed at the king's gate,

20 Neither had Esther as yet declared her country, and people, according to his commandment. For whatsoever he commanded, Esther observed: and she did all things in the same manner as she was wont at that time, when he brought her up a little one.

21 At that time, therefore, when Mardochoi abode at the king's gate, Bagathan, and Thares, two of the king's eunuchs, who were porters, and presided in the first entry of the palace, were angry: and they designed to rise up against the king, and to kill him.

22 And Mardochoi had notice of it, and immediately he told it to queen Esther: and she to the king in Mardochoi's name, who had reported the thing unto her.

23 It was inquired into, and found out: and they were both hanged on a gibbet. And it was put in the histories, and recorded in the chronicles before the king.

Vatab.—Some Gr. copies and the Chal. insinuate that they were displeased at the advancement of Mardochoi. The latter supposes that they meant also to poison Esther. VER. 23. King. Such histories were preserved with great care. I Esd. vi. 1. C.—Sept. "the king ordered a memorial of it to be kept in the royal library, for the praise of Mardochoi's good will." H.—The latter also wrote an account. Chap. xii. 4.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. Aman means "a disturber." II.—Who. Sept. add.

CHAP. III.

Aman, advanced by the king, is offended at Mardochoi, and therefore procures the king's decree to destroy the whole nation of the Jews.

AFTER these things, king Assuerus advanced Aman, the son of Amadathi, who was of the race of Agag: and he set his throne above all the princes that were with him.

2 And all the king's servants, that were at the doors of the palace, bent their knees, and worshipped Aman: for so the emperor had commanded them; only Mardochoi did not bend his knee, nor worship him.

3 And the king's servants that were chief at the doors of the palace, said to him: Why dost thou alone not observe the king's commandment?

4 And when they were saying this often, and he would not hearken to them, they told Aman, desirous to know whether he would continue in his resolution: for he had told them that he was a Jew.

5 Now when Aman had heard this, and had proved by experience that Mardochoi did not bend his knee to him, nor worship him, he was exceedingly angry.

6 And he counted it as nothing to lay his hands upon Mardochoi alone: for he had heard that he was of the nation of the Jews, and he chose rather to destroy all the nation of the Jews that were in the kingdom of Assuerus.

7 In the first month, (which is called Nisan,) in the twelfth year^b of the reign of Assuerus, the lot was cast into an urn, which, in Hebrew, is called Phur, before Aman, on what day and what month the nation of the Jews should be destroyed: and there came out the twelfth month, which is called Adar.

8 And Aman said to king Assuerus: There is a people scattered through all the provinces of thy kingdom, and separated one from another, that use new laws and ceremonies, and moreover despise the king's ordinances: and thou knowest very well that it is not expedient for thy kingdom that they should grow insolent by impunity.

9 If it please thee, decree that they may be destroyed, and I will pay ten thousand talents to thy treasurers.

"Bougaïos, or Gogaïos." Gog designates Scythia, where Aman might have been born. Pliny (iv. 12) places there the lake and river Buges. But the Bugean, in Greek, may mean "greatly puffed up;" or it may stand for Bagoze, "an eunuch," (Judith xii. 11,) like Putiphar.—Agag, the king of Amalec. I Kings xv. This title, like that of Macedonian, (chap. xvi. 10,) is probably used out of contempt, as the Jews frequently styled their enemies "race of Chanaan." Ezec. xvi. 3; Dan. xiii. 56. C.

VER. 2. Worship him, with Divine honours, as he required, in imitation of the kings. Judith iii. 13. On certain solemn occasions the latter at least exacted this respect from their subjects. But the pious Jews avoided appearing at such times, or the kings dispensed with them. The mere bending the knee, out of civil respect, would not have been objected to; and Mardochoi says he would not have refused to kiss the footsteps of Aman. Chap. xiii. 12. C. S. Tho. ii. 2, q. 84. T.—But he could not give such worship as was claimed by the minor gods. W.

VER. 7. Lot. The Persians were much addicted to divination. The superstitious Aman, though he would appear a deity, was to be regulated by lots! Providence caused almost a whole year to intervene before the cruel execution was to commence. C.—Phur. Heb. "they cast Pur, that is the lot, before Aman." H.—The explanation intimates that Pur is a Persian word. D.—Yet Pagnin maintains that it means in Heb. "to crush," a wine-press, or vessel; and the lot, which is thrown therein. M.

VER. 9. Talents. Heb., &c. add, "of silver." M.—If the Heb. talent be meant, this sum would be immense for an individual (C.); though Aman might expect to raise it by the confiscation of the Jews' effects. Ver. 13. Some think he speaks of the Babylonian talent, on which supposition the sum would amount

10 And the king took the ring that he used, from his own hand, and gave it to Aman, the son of Amadathi, of the race of Agag, the enemy of the Jews,

11 And he said to him: As to the money which thou promisest, keep it for thyself: and as to the people, do with them as seemeth good to thee.

12 And the king's scribes were called in the first month, Nisan, on the thirteenth day of the same month: and they wrote, as Aman had commanded, to all the king's lieutenants, and to the judges of the provinces, and of divers nations, as every nation could read, and hear, according to their different languages, in the name of king Assuerus: and the letters, sealed with his ring,

13 Were sent by the king's messengers to all provinces, to kill and destroy all the Jews, both young and old, little children, and women, in one day, that is, on the thirteenth of the twelfth month, which is called Adar, and to make a spoil of their goods.

14 And the contents of the letters were to this effect, that all provinces might know, and be ready against that day.

15 The couriers, that were sent, made haste to fulfil the king's commandment. And, immediately, the edict was hung up in Susan, the king and Aman feasting together, and all the Jews, that were in the city, weeping.

CHAP. IV.

Mardochai desireth Esther to petition the king for the Jews. They join in fasting and prayer.

NOW when Mardochai had heard these things, he rent his garments, and put on sackcloth, strewing ashes on his head: and he cried with a loud voice in the street, in the midst of the city, showing the anguish of his mind.

2 And he came, lamenting in this manner, even to the gate of the palace: for no one clothed with sackcloth might enter the king's court.

3 And in all provinces, towns, and places, to which the king's cruel edict was come, there was great mourning among the Jews, with fasting, wailing, and weeping, many using sackcloth and ashes for their bed.

told her. And when she heard it, she was in a consternation: and she sent a garment, to clothe him, and to take away the sackcloth: but he would not receive it.

5 And she called for Athach, the eunuch, whom the king had appointed to attend upon her, and she commanded him to go to Mardochai, and to learn of him, why he did this.

6 And Athach going out, went to Mardochai, who was standing in the street of the city, before the palace gate:

7 And Mardochai told him all that had happened, how Aman had promised to pay money into the king's treasures to have the Jews destroyed.

8 He gave him, also, a copy of the edict which was hanging up in Susan, that he should show it to the queen, and admonish her to go in to the king, and to entreat him for her people.

9 And Athach went back and told Esther all that Mardochai had said.

10 She answered him, and bade him say to Mardochai.

11 All the king's servants, and all the provinces that are under his dominion, know that whosoever, whether man or woman, cometh into the king's inner court, who is not called for, is immediately to be put to death without any delay: except the king shall hold out the golden sceptre to him, in token of clemency, that so he may live. How then can I go in to the king, who, for these thirty days now, have not been called unto him?

12 And when Mardochai had heard this,

13 He sent word to Esther again, saying: Think not that thou mayst save thy life only, because thou art in the king's house, more than all the Jews:

14 For if thou wilt now hold thy peace, the Jews shall be delivered by some other occasion: and thou, and thy father's house shall perish. And who knoweth whether thou art not, therefore, come to the kingdom, that thou mightest be ready in such a time as this?

15 And again Esther sent to Mardochai in these words:

16 Go, and gather together all the Jews whom thou shalt find in Susan, and pray ye for me. Neither eat, nor drink, for three days and three nights: and I, with my handmaids, will fast in like manner, and then I will

This admitted the light only by the door, before which hung a curtain, so that the king could see (C.) who came into the hall of audience, (H.) without being seen. None durst come even to this antechamber without being called. It was also death to appear with their hands out of their sleeves, (Cyrop. 2,) or to sit down. Yet after two nights and one full day were elapsed, Esther ventured to go to the king. Chap. v. 1. We have here another instance of go in to the king, against the law, not being called, and expose myself to death and to danger.

17 So Mardochai went, and did all that Esther had commanded him.

CHAP. V.

Esther is graciously received: she inviteth the king and Aman to dinner. Aman prepareth a gibbet for Mardochai.

AND "on the third day Esther put on her royal apparel, and stood in the inner court of the king's house, over against the king's hall: now he sat upon his throne in the hall of the palace, over against the door of the house.

2 And when he saw Esther, the queen, standing, she pleased his eyes, and he held out toward her the golden sceptre, which he held in his hand: and she drew near, and kissed the top of his sceptre.

3 And the king said to her: What wilt thou, queen Esther? what is thy request? if thou shouldst even ask one half of the kingdom, it shall be given to thee.

4 But she answered: If it please the king, I beseech thee to come to me this day, and Aman with thee, to the banquet which I have prepared.

5 And the king said forthwith: Call ye Aman quickly, that he may obey Esther's will. So the king and Aman came to the banquet which the queen had prepared for them.

6 And the king said to her, after he had drank wine plentifully: What dost thou desire should be given thee? and for what thing askest thou? although thou shouldst ask the half of my kingdom, thou shalt have it.

7 And Esther answered: My petition and request is this:

8 If I have found favour in the king's sight, and if it please the king to give me what I ask, and to fulfil my petition: let the king and Aman come to the banquet which I have prepared them, and to-morrow I will open my mind to the king.

9 So Aman went out that day joyful and merry. And when he saw Mardochai sitting before the gate of the palace, and that he not only did not rise up to honour him, but did not so much as move from the place where he sat, he was exceedingly angry:

10 But dissembling his anger, and returning into his house, he called together to him his friends, and Zares, his wife:

12 And after this he said: Queen Esther also hath invited no other to the banquet with the king, but me: and with her I am also to dine to-morrow, with the king.

13 And whereas I have all these things, I think I have nothing, so long as I see Mardochai, the Jew, sitting before the king's gate.

14 Then Zares, his wife, and the rest of his friends, answered him: Order a great beam to be prepared, fifty cubits high, and in the morning speak to the king, that Mardochai may be hanged upon it, and so thou shalt go full of joy with the king to the banquet. The counsel pleased him, and he commanded a high gibbet to be prepared.

CHAP. VI.

The king hearing of the good service done him by Mardochai, commandeth Aman to honour him next to the king, which he performeth.

THAT "night the king passed without sleep, and he commanded the histories and chronicles of former times to be brought him. And when they were reading them before him,

2 They came to that place where it was written, how Mardochai had discovered the treason of Bagathan and Thares, the eunuchs, who sought to kill king Assuerus.

3 And when the king heard this, he said: What honour and reward hath Mardochai received for this fidelity? His servants and ministers said to him: He has received no reward at all.

4 And the king said immediately: Who is in the court? for Aman was coming in to the inner court of the king's house, to speak to the king, that he might order Mardochai to be hanged upon the gibbet which was prepared for him.

5 The servants answered: Aman standeth in the court. And the king said: Let him come in.

6 And when he was come in, he said to him: What ought to be done to the man whom the king is desirous to honour? But Aman thinking in his heart, and supposing that the king would honour no other but himself,

10 And the king said to him: Make haste and take the robe and the horse, and do as thou hast spoken to Mardochai, the Jew, who sitteth before the gates of the palace. Beware thou pass over any of those things which thou hast spoken.

11 So Aman took the robe and the horse, and arraying Mardochai in the street of the city, and setting him on the horse, went before him, and proclaimed: This honour is he worthy of, whom the king hath a mind to honour.

12 And Mardochai returned to the palace gate: and Aman made haste to go to his house, mourning, and having his head covered:

13 And he told Zares, his wife, and his friends, all that had befallen him. And the wise men whom he had in counsel, and his wife answered him: If Mardochai be of the seed of the Jews, before whom thou hast begun to fall, thou canst not resist him, but thou shalt fall in his sight.

4 For we are given up, I and my people, to be destroyed, to be slain, and to perish. And would God we were sold for bond-men and bond-women: the evil might be borne with, and I would have mourned in silence: but now we have an enemy, whose cruelty redoundeth upon the king.

5 And king Assuerus answered, and said: Who is this, and of what power, that he should do these things?

6 And Esther said: It is this Aman that is our adversary and most wicked enemy. Aman hearing this, was forthwith astonished, not being able to bear the countenance of the king and of the queen.

7 But the king being angry rose up, and went from the place of the banquet into the garden set with trees. Aman also rose up, to entreat Esther, the queen, for his life, for he understood that evil was prepared for him by the king.

8 And when the king came back out of the garden set with trees, and entered into the place of the banquet, he found Aman was fallen upon the bed on which Esther lay, and he said: He will force the queen, also, in my presence, in my own house. The word was not yet gone out of the king's mouth, and immediately they covered his face.

9 And Harbona, one of the eunuchs that stood waiting on the king, said: Behold the gibbet which he hath prepared for Mardochai, who spoke for the king, standeth in Aman's house, being fifty cubits high. And the king said to him: Hang him upon it.

10 So Aman was hanged on the gibbet which he had prepared for Mardochai: and the king's wrath ceased.

Mardochai is advanced: Aman's letters are reversed.

ON that day king Assuerus gave the house of Aman, the Jews' enemy, to queen Esther, and Mardochai came in before the king. For Esther had confessed to him that he was her uncle.

2 And the king took the ring which he had commanded to be taken again from Aman, and gave it to Mardochai. And Esther set Mardochai over her house.

the king's feet and wept, and speaking to him, besought him that he would give orders that the malice of Aman, the Agagite, and his most wicked devices which he had invented against the Jews, should be of no effect.

4 But he, as the manner was, held out the golden sceptre with his hand, which was the sign of clemency: and she arose up and stood before him,

5 And said: If it please the king, and if I have found favour in his sight, and my request be not disagreeable to him, I beseech thee, that the former letters of Aman, the traitor, and enemy of the Jews, by which he commanded that they should be destroyed in all the king's provinces, may be reversed by new letters.

6 For how can I endure the murdering and slaughter of my people?

7 And king Assuerus answered Esther, the queen, and Mardochai, the Jew: I have given Aman's house to Esther, and I have commanded him to be hanged on a gibbet, because he durst lay hands on the Jews.

8 Write ye, therefore, to the Jews, as it pleaseth you in the king's name, and seal the letters with my ring. For this was the custom, that no man durst gainsay the letters which were sent in the king's name, and were sealed with his ring.

9 Then the king's scribes and secretaries were called for (now it was the time of the third month, which is called Siban) the three and twentieth day of the month, and letters were written, as Mardochai had a mind, to the Jews, and to the governors, and to the deputies, and to the judges, who were rulers over the hundred and twenty-seven provinces, from India even to Ethiopia: to province and province, to people and people, according to their languages and characters, and to the Jews, according as they could read and hear.

10 And these letters which were sent in the king's name, were sealed with his ring, and sent by posts: who were to run through all the provinces, to prevent the former letters with new messages.

11 And the king gave orders to them, to speak to the Jews in every city, and to command them to gather themselves together, and to stand for their lives, and to kill and destroy all their enemies, with their wives and children, and all their houses, and to take their spoil.

12 And one day of revenge was appointed through all the provinces, to wit, the thirteenth of the twelfth month, Adar.

13 And this was the content of the letter, that it should be notified in all lands and peoples that were subject to the empire of king Assuerus, that the Jews were ready to be revenged of their enemies.

14 So the swift posts went out carrying the messages, and the king's edict was hung up in Susan.

15 And Mardochai going forth out of the palace, and from the king's presence, shone in royal apparel, to wit, of violet and sky-colour, wearing a golden crown on his head, and clothed with a cloak of silk and purple. And all the city rejoiced, and was glad.

16 But to the Jews a new light seemed to rise, joy, honour, and dancing.

17 And in all peoples, cities, and provinces, whithersoever the king's commandments came, there was wonderful rejoicing feasts, and banquets, and keeping holy-day; insomuch that many of other nations and religion, joined themselves to their worship and ceremonies. For a great dread of the name of the Jews had fallen upon all.

CHAP. IX.

The Jews kill their enemies that would have killed them. The days of Phurim are appointed to be kept holy.

SO on the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, which, as we have said above, is called Adar, when all the Jews were designed to be massacred, and their enemies were greedily after their blood, the case being altered, the Jews began to have the upper hand, and to revenge themselves of their adversaries.

2 And they gathered themselves together in every city and town, and place, to lay their hands on their enemies and their persecutors. And no one durst withstand them, for the fear of their power had gone through every people.

3 And the judges of the provinces, and the governors, and lieutenants, and every one in dignity, that presided over every place and work, extolled the Jews, for fear of Mardochai:

4 For they knew him to be prince of the palace, and to have great power: and the fame of his name increased daily, and was spread abroad through all men's mouths.

5 So the Jews made a great slaughter of their enemies, and killed them, repaying according to what they had prepared to do to them:

6 Insomuch that even in Susan they killed five hundred men, besides the ten sons of Aman, the Agagite, the enemy of the Jews: whose names are these:

C.

VER. 9. Third. Rom. Sept. "first . . Nisan," ten days after Aman's decree, who seems to have been presently brought to judgment. Yet two whole months might easily elapse, (C.) and ten days more, before this contrary edict was dispatched. H.—The day of slaughter was still remote. M.

VER. 11. Spoil. This was retaliating, as they were to have been treated in like

VER. 6. Sons. It seems as if they had been slain with their father, ver. 10. See chap. vii. 9. 10 And when they had slain them, they would not touch the spoils of their goods.

11 And presently the number of them that were killed in Susan was brought to the king.

12 And he said to the queen: The Jews have killed five hundred men in the city of Susan, besides the ten sons of Aman: how many dost thou think they have slain in all the provinces? What askest thou more, and what wilt thou have me to command to be done?

13 And she answered: If it please the king, let it be granted to the Jews, to do to-morrow, in Susan, as they have done to-day, and that the ten sons of Aman may be hanged upon gibbets.

14 And the king commanded that it should be so done. And forthwith the edict was hung up in Susan, and the ten sons of Aman were hanged.

15 And on the fourteenth day of the month Adar, the Jews gathered themselves together, and they killed, in Susan, three hundred men: but they took not their substance.

16 Moreover, through all the provinces which were subject to the king's dominion, the Jews stood for their lives, and slew their enemies and persecutors: insomuch that the number of them that were killed amounted to seventy-five thousand, and no man took any of their goods.

17 Now the thirteenth day of the month, Adar, was the first day with them all of the slaughter, and on the fourteenth day they left off. Which they ordained to be kept holyday, so that all times hereafter they should celebrate it with feasting, joy, and banquets.

18 But they that had killed in the city of Susan, were employed in the slaughter on the thirteenth and fourteenth day of the same month: and on the fifteenth day they rested. And, therefore, they appointed that day to be a holyday of feasting and gladness.

19 But those Jews that dwelt in towns, not walled, and in villages, appointed the fourteenth day of the month, Adar, for banquets and gladness, so as to rejoice on that day, and send one another portions of their banquets and meats.

20 And Mardochai wrote all these things, and sent them comprised in letters to the Jews that abode in all the king's provinces, both those that lay near, and those afar off,

21 That they should receive the fourteenth and fifteenth day of the month, Adar, for holydays, and always, at the return of the year, should celebrate them with solemn honour:

22 Because, on those days, the Jews revenged themselves of their enemies, and their mourning and sorrow were turned into mirth and joy, and that these should be days of feasting and gladness, in which they should send one to another portions of meats, and should give gifts to the poor.

23 And the Jews undertook to observe, with solemnity, all that they had begun to do at that time, which Mardochai, by letters, had commanded to be done.

24 For Aman, the son of Amadathi, of the race of Agag, the enemy and adversary of the Jews, had devised evil against them, to kill them, and destroy them: and had cast Phur, that is, the lot.

25 And, afterwards, Esther went in to the king, beseeching him that his endeavours might be made void by the king's letters: and the evil that he had intended against the Jews, might return upon his own head. And so both he and his sons were hanged upon gibbets.

26 And since that time, these days are called Phurim, that is, of lots: because Phur, that is, the lot, was cast into the urn. And all things that were done, are contained in the volume of this epistle, that is, of this book:

27 And the things that they suffered, and that were afterwards changed, the Jews took upon themselves and their seed, and upon all that had a mind to be joined to their religion, so that it should be lawful for none to pass these days without solemnity: which the writing testifieth, and certain times require, as the years continually succeed one another.

28 These are the days which shall never be forgot: and which all provinces in the whole world shall celebrate throughout all generations: neither is there any city wherein the days of Phurim, that is, of lots, must not be observed by the Jews, and by their posterity, which is bound to these ceremonies.

29 And Esther, the queen, the daughter of Abihail, and Mardochai, the Jew, wrote also a second epistle, that with all diligence, this day should be established a festival for the time to come.

VER. 13. Susan. Aman's influence had been the greatest there, and had stirred up many enemies to the Jews, who were to be carefully sought out. H.—If we should consider only the dictates of clemency, we should think that the Jews were too eager in their revenge. But when we reflect that their enemies had intended to destroy them all, and to seize their effects, we shall allow that they did not exceed the limits of justice, as they acted by royal authority, and abstained from touching any effects of the deceased. W.—Yet it would seem that both days were enjoined, ver. 27, 28. H.—The Jews still observe them, as they gratify their vanity and vindictive spirit. The 13th is kept a rigid fast for all above sixteen, for twenty-four hours, during which they eat nothing. C.—If that day should be the sabbath, or its eve, they fast on the 11th or 12th. Drusus.—They were formerly accustomed to crucify a man of straw, which they burnt with the cross, till Christian emperors put a stop to them; as it was concluded, from their curses, &c., that they had an eye to our Saviour. VER. 25. And. Heb. "But when she came." Sept. "and how he came to the king, asking leave to hang Mardochai. But his machinations against the Jews turned upon his own head; and so," &c. H.

VER. 28. Ceremonies. The king also enjoined (chap. xvi. 22) all his subjects (T.) to keep a day of rejoicing, (H.) as the death of Aman was deemed a public benefit. C.

VER. 29. Second. The first might be the edict, (chap. viii. 9,) or else the provisional establishment of the festival, as it could not have general authority till it was ratified by the high priest; after which this second letter was despatched. C.—Sept. "And queen Esther, daughter of Aminadab, &c. . . wrote all that they had done, and also the confirmation of the epistle of the Phourai." Assuerus's greatness. Mardochai's dignity.

AND king Assuerus made all the land, and all the islands of the sea, tributary.

2 And his strength and his empire, and the dignity and greatness wherewith he exalted Mardochai, are written in the books of the Medes, and of the Persians:

3 And how Mardochai, of the race of the Jews, was next after king Assuerus: and great among the Jews, and acceptable to the people of his brethren, seeking the good of his people, and speaking those things which were for the welfare of his seed.

4 Then Mardochai said: God hath done these things.

5 I remember a dream that I saw, which signified these same things: and nothing thereof hath failed.

6 The little fountain which grew into a river, and was turned into a light, and into the sun, and abounded into many waters, is Esther, whom the king married, and made queen.

Sept. only add for this and the following chapter, to ver. 9: "They set them apart during their lives, and by their advice (C. Ed. Alex. 'for their health and counsel'); and Esther established for ever, and wrote as a memorial: My nation," &c. II.

VER. 30. Peace: receive these glad tidings, and faithfully observe the injunctions. C.

VER. 31. Fasts and cries. See ver. 21. C.—Prot. "the matters of their fastings and their cry: and the decree of Esther confirmed these matters of Purim, and it was written in the book." II.—This feast, instituted by Mardochai, was accepted and observed by the Jews as a constitution agreeable to, and not contrary to, the law. Deut. iv. 2, and xii. 32. W.

CHAP. X. VER. 1. Land. He conquered many countries on the continent, and several to which he could not come but by water, which the Jews call islands, whether they were surrounded on all sides by the sea or not. Heb. has not the word all; but as the expressions are indefinite, they are usually taken in this sense. Yet we must not suppose that the dominion of Assuerus extended over the whole world, any more than that of the Romans, who were styled masters of it. C.

VER. 4. Then Mardochai, &c. Here S. Jerom advertises the reader, that what follows is not in the Hebrew; but is found in the Sept. Greek edition, which the seventy-two interpreters translated out of the Hebrew, or added by the inspiration of the Holy Ghost. Ch.—He says, "What is extant in Heb. I have faithfully translated. What follows I found in the Vulg. edition, contained in the Greek language and character: and in the mean time, or waving all dispute for the present, (interim,) this little chapter was inserted at the end of the book, which, according to our custom, we have marked with an obel or spit." H.

VER. 5. A dream. This dream was prophetic and extraordinary, otherwise the general rule is, not to observe dreams. Ch.

VER. 6. And was. Sept. "and there was light, and the sun and much water." The light enabled him to discern the progress of the little fountain. Yet

10 And he commanded that there should be two lots, one of the people of God, and the other of all the nations.

11 And both lots came to the day appointed already from that time before God to all nations:

12 And the Lord remembered his people, and had mercy on his inheritance.

13 And these days shall be observed in the month of Adar, on the fourteenth, and fifteenth day of the same month, with all diligence, and joy of the people, gathered into one assembly, throughout all the generations, hereafter, of the people of Israel.

CHAP. XI.

The dream of Mardochai, which, in the ancient Greek and Latin Bibles, was in the beginning of the book, but was detached by S. Jerom, and put in this place.

IN the fourth year^a of the reign of Ptolemy and Cleopatra, Dosithius, who said he was a priest, and of the Levitical race, and Ptolemy, his son, brought this epistle of Phurim, which they said Lysimachus, the son of Ptolemy, had interpreted in Jerusalem.

2 In the second year^b of the reign of Artaxerxes the great, in the first day of the month Nisan, Mardochai, the son of Jair, the son of Semei, the son of Cis, of the tribe of Benjamin:

3 A Jew, who dwelt in the city of Susan, a great man and among the first of the king's court, had a dream.

4 Now he was of the number of the captives, whom Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, had carried away from Jerusalem, with Jechonias, king of Juda:

5 And this was his dream: Behold there were voices and tumults, and thunders, and earthquakes, and a disturbance upon the earth.

6 And behold two great dragons came forth ready to fight one against another.

7 And at their cry all nations were stirred up to fight against the nation of the just.

it was not absurd that the water should appear luminous, like the sun, as it was intended to show the wonderful exaltation of Esther. II.—She extinguished a great fire, which threatened ruin. M.

VER. 10. Lots. Alluding to the Purim of Aman (C. Capel.); or rather these are only mentioned, ver. 13. Houbigant.—Gr. "He had therefore made two lots, . . . and the two lots came to the hour and time and day of judgment before God, and for all nations." H.

VER. 11. Time. From all eternity (T.) God had ordained to save his people, and this he declared to his servant, by showing him two lots. H.

VER. 12. Mercy. Gr. "justified." But this often means, showed mercy. Exod. xxxiv. 7. C.

CHAP. XI. VER. 1. Cleopatra. So the kings and queens of Egypt were styled after Lagus; whence we can only gather that this translation was brought after the reign of Alexander, and most probably under Philometer, the sixth of his successors. He was a great admirer of the Jews, and employed one Dosithius as his general, who might be the priest here mentioned; as such an office was not incompatible with his character. T.—Usher is of this opinion. See Jos. con. Ap. 2. But would he then be mentioned as if he had been a person almost unknown? C.—We may say that he only raised himself by merit, after this time. H.—Jerusalem. Here S. Jerom subjoins, "This beginning was also in the Vulg. edition, which does not occur in Heb., or in any interpreter," (H.) except the Sept. W.—This must be referred to what follows.

VER. 2. Second year, the same when Darius gave an edict for building the temple, (1 Esd. iv. T.) and the year before the great feast, (chap. i. 3,) when the Jews little thought of such danger hanging over them. C. W.—Benjamin. Chap. ii. 5, we read Jemini, which shows that they have the same import. T.

VER. 3. Court, afterwards. C.—He had a dream in the second year. Houbigant.

VER. 4. Juda. This has been noticed already. Chap. ii. 5. But we need not be surprised at such repetitions. We find the like in the books of Moses, and 1 Kings xvi. 10, and xvii. 12, &c. II.—S. Jerom says, "Librum Esther variis trans-

8 And that was a day of darkness and danger, of tribulation and distress, and great fear upon the earth.

9 And the nation of the just was troubled, fearing their own evils, and was prepared for death.

10 And they cried to God : and as they were crying, a little fountain grew into a very great river, and abounded into many waters.

11 The light and the sun rose up, and the humble were exalted, and they devoured the glorious.

12 And when Mardochai had seen this, and arose out of his bed, he was thinking what God would do : and he kept it fixed in his mind, desirous to know what the dream should signify.

CHAP. XII.

Mardochai detects the conspiracy of the two eunuchs.

AND he abode at that time in the king's court with Bagatha, and Thara, the king's eunuchs, who were porters of the palace.

2 And when he understood their designs, and had diligently searched into their projects, he learned that they went about to lay violent hands on king Artaxerxes, and he told the king thereof.

3 Then the king had them both examined ; and after they had confessed, commanded them to be put to death.

4 But the king made a record of what was done : and Mardochai also committed the memory of the thing to writing.

5 And the king commanded him, to abide in the court of the palace, and gave him presents for the information.

6 But Aman, the son of Amadathi, the Bugite, was in great honour with the king, and sought to hurt Mardochai and his people, because of the two eunuchs of the king who were put to death.

CHAP. XIII.

A copy of a letter sent by Aman to destroy the Jews. Mardochai's prayer for the people.

AND this was the copy of the letter. Artaxerxes, the great king, who reigneth from India to Ethiopia, to the princes and governors of the hundred and twenty-seven provinces, that are subject to his empire, greeting.

atoribus constat esse vitiatum ;" or various historical documents may have been improperly inserted in the Greek, though they be true ; and therefore S. Jerom has rightly removed them to the end. Houbigant.

CHAP. XII. VER. 1. At that time, is not in Greek. Capellus therefore argues in vain against the Greek author, as if this event took place in the second year. Houbigant.—The expression often occurs in Scripture, without determining the precise time. H.

VER. 2. When. Gr. "for he heard their deliberations."—Told, by the mouth of Esther. Chap. ii. 21. H.

VER. 5. Palace, as an officer.—Presents, of small value. C.—The king had inquired, (Gr. chap. vi. 3,) "What glory or favour have we done to Mardochai ? and the ministers replied : Thou hast done nothing to him," to honour him as he deserves.

VER. 6. Bugite, may refer to some town of Macedon. Chap. iii. 1.—Honour. Yet he might be still more exalted, after the conspiracy was detected (Houbig.) ; as the king little suspected that he was concerned in it. H.

CHAP. XIII. VER. 1. "Hitherto," S. Jerom observes, "the preface extends. What follows was placed in that part of the volume where it is written, And they, &c., (chap. iii. 13, where the edict should naturally appear. C.) which we have found only in the Vulg. edition." H.

VER. 2. World. This is an exaggeration. Princes are flattered with high titles, but none more so than those of the East. C.—Quietly. Lit. "in silence." Gr. "undisturbed by the stormy billows, (ἀκυσάντων), at all times ; and that the kingdom might be rendered quiet, and the roads unmolested, to the very extremities ; that peace, which is desired by all men, may be renewed." I' brought all the world under my dominion, I was not willing to abuse the greatness of my power, but to govern my subjects with clemency and lenity, that they might live quietly without any terror, and might enjoy peace, which is desired by all men.

3 But when I asked my counsellors how this might be accomplished, one that excelled the rest in wisdom and fidelity, and was second after the king, Aman by name,

4 Told me that there was a people scattered through the whole world, which used new laws, and acted against the customs of all nations, despised the commandments of kings, and violated by their opposition the concord of all nations.

5 Wherefore having learned this, and seeing one nation in opposition to all mankind, using perverse laws, and going against our commandments, and disturbing the peace and concord of the provinces subject to us,

6 We have commanded, that all whom Aman shall mark out, who is chief over all the provinces, and second after the king, and whom we honour as a father, shall be utterly destroyed by their enemies, with their wives and children, and that none shall have pity on them, on the fourteenth day of the twelfth month, Adar, of this present year :

7 That these wicked men going down to hell in one day, may restore to our empire the peace which they had disturbed.

8 But Mardochai besought the Lord, remembering all his works,

9 And said : O Lord, Lord, almighty King, for all things are in thy power, and there is none that can resist thy will, if thou determine to save Israel.

10 Thou hast made heaven and earth, and all things that are under the cope of heaven.

11 Thou art Lord of all, and there is none that can resist thy majesty.

12 Thou knowest all things, and thou knowest that it was not out of pride and contempt, or any desire of glory, that I refused to worship the proud Aman,

13 (For I would willingly and readily for the salvation of Israel have kissed even the steps of his feet,)

14 But I feared lest I should transfer the honour of my

VER. 3. After. Gr. "of all kingdoms as a reward, Aman showed me," &c. C.

VER. 4. A people. Gr. "a certain perverse people, mixed with every tribe through," &c.—New. Gr. "opposite to those of every nation, which always easteth aside the edicts of kings, so that we cannot extend to them that upright and blameless dominion which we exercise over you."

VER. 6. Second. Gr. "our second father." C.—Compl. "the second after us, shall be all extirpated by," &c. H.—This king is represented as very stupidly giving orders for the destruction of a nation which he never names (Capel.) ; but he intimates that Aman would do it, in whom he placed the most unbounded confidence. H.—Fourteenth. Josephus has the same day, though the thirteenth is specified in Heb., &c., (chap. iii. 12,) and in the Gr. and Vulg., chap. xvi. 20. We must, therefore, allow that the Jews might be slaughtered on both days, or that the Greek is incorrect in this place. C.

VER. 7. Hell. Prot. "grave." The king only wanted to send them out of this world. At the end of this verse, S. Jerom says, "Hitherto is given the copy of the epistle. I found what follows after that place where we read, So Mardochai, &c., (chap. iv. 17,) yet it is not in Heb., nor does it appear in any of the interpreters." H.—He means Aquila, &c. For he plainly asserts before that it was in the Septuagint, which he calls the Vulgate ; and all know that this version was taken from the Heb. The Church reads this prayer of Mardochai (T.) in the mass against pagans. (W.) and 21st Sunday after Pentecost, &c., so that this is a part of Scripture which the Council of Trent will not suffer to be rejected. T.

VER. 14. To a man ; "as if," says Capellus, "the salutation and civil honour be not quite different from adoration or religious worship, which must be given God to a man, and lest I should adore any one except my God.

15 And now, O Lord, O King, O God of Abraham, have mercy on thy people, because our enemies resolve to destroy us, and extinguish thy inheritance.

16 Despise not thy portion, which thou hast redeemed for thyself out of Egypt.

17 Hear my supplication, and be merciful to thy lot and inheritance, and turn our mourning into joy, that we may live and praise thy name, O Lord, and shut not the mouths of them that sing to thee.

18 And all Israel, with like mind and supplication, cried to the Lord, because they saw certain death hanging over their heads.

CHAP. XIV.

The prayer of Esther, for herself and her people.

QUEEN Esther, also, fearing the danger that was at hand, had recourse to the Lord.

2 And when she had laid away her royal apparel, she put on garments suitable for weeping and mourning, instead of divers precious ointments, she covered her head with ashes and dung, and she humbled her body with fasts: and all the places in which before she was accustomed to rejoice, she filled with her torn hair.

3 And she prayed to the Lord, the God of Israel, saying: O my Lord, who alone art our King, help me, a desolate woman, and who have no other helper but thee.

4 My danger is in my hands.

5 *I have heard of my father that thou, O Lord, didst take Israel from among all nations, and our fathers from all their predecessors, to possess them as an everlasting inheritance, and thou hast done to them as thou hast promised.

6 We have sinned in thy sight, and therefore thou hast delivered us into the hands of our enemies:

7 For we have worshipped their gods. Thou art just, O Lord.

8 And now they are not content to oppress us with most hard bondage, but attributing the strength of their hands to the power of their idols,

9 They design to change thy promises, and destroy thy inheritance, and shut the mouths of them that praise thee, and extinguish the glory of thy temple and altar,

10 That they may open the mouths of Gentiles, and to God alone. Neither did Haman demand religious adoration, but only salutation and civil honour. . . . To bend the knee is frequently used in civil honour, nor is it necessarily understood of religious worship." May our English Protestants deign to borrow this grain of common sense from one of their foreign brethren, when they attempt to impugn the respect given by Catholics to the saints. H.

CHAP. XIV. VER. 1. Fearing. Gr. "caught in the agony of death." The old Vulgate has many variations in this chapter. C.—This prayer should be placed after that of Mardochai, at the end of chap. iv. M.

VER. 2. Ointments. Gr. "instead of the proud sweets, she filled her head with ashes and dust." Such as might be soon cleansed again. H.—Torn. Gr. "curled hair," (στριπτῶν τρίχων. H.) some of which she cut off. See Lev. xix. 27, and xxi. 5. Houbig.

VER. 7. For. Gr. "since we have extolled," &c. Esther had not been guilty herself of this prevarication; but too many of the people had. H.

VER. 8. But. Gr Compl. "Yea, thou hast placed (or rather as the Alex. MS. reads, they have placed) their hands upon the hands of their idols, (H. making a league together. C.) to tear away the decree of thy mouth," (H.) and to put in execution the projects of (M.) the devil. H.

VER. 12. Gods. Gr. "nations, and Lord of all power." H.

VER. 13. Lion. This expression seems not sufficiently respectful. Capellus.—

praise the strength of idols, and magnify, for ever, a carnal king.

11 Give not, O Lord, thy sceptre to them that are not, lest they laugh at our ruin: but turn their counsel upon themselves, and destroy him that hath begun to rage against us.

12 Remember, O Lord, and show thyself to us in the time of our tribulation, and give me boldness, O Lord, King of gods, and of all power:

13 Give me a well ordered speech in my mouth in the presence of the lion, and turn his heart to the hatred of our enemy, that both he himself may perish, and the rest that consent to him.

14 But deliver us by thy hand, and help me, who have no other helper but thee, O Lord, who hast the knowledge of all things,

15 And thou knowest that I hate the glory of the wicked, and abhor the bed of the uncircumcised, and of every stranger.

16 Thou knowest my necessity, that I abominate the sign of my pride and glory, which is upon my head in the days of my public appearance, and detest it as a menstruous rag, and wear it not in the days of my silence.

17 And that I have not eaten at Aman's table, nor hath the king's banquet pleased me, and that I have not drunk the wine of the drink-offerings:

18 And that thy handmaid hath never rejoiced, since I was brought hither unto this day, but in thee, O Lord, the God of Abraham.

19 O God, who art mighty above all, hear the voice of them, that have no other hope, and deliver us from the hand of the wicked, and deliver me from my fear.

CHAP. XV.

Esther comes into the king's presence: she is terrified, but God turns his heart.

AND he commanded her (no doubt but he was Mardochai) to go to the king, and petition for her people, and for her country.

2 Remember (said he) the days of thy low estate, how thou wast brought up by my hand, because Aman, the second after the king, hath spoken against us unto death.

3 And do thou call upon the Lord, and speak to the king for us, and deliver us from death.

4 And on the third day she laid away the garments she wore, and put on her glorious apparel.

5 And glittering in royal robes, after she had called

But why might not Esther use it with regard to one, who was raging against her people more than any lion, as S. Paul applies it to Nero, probably after her example? Houbigant. 2 Tim. iv. 17.—David also thus styles Saul and his persecutors in general. Psal. vii. 3, &c. C.

VER. 15. Stranger. Only those near Chanaan were forbidden to marry; and S. Paul commends Eunice, who had espoused an infidel. Capel.—But this was not the reason of his commendation; for he ordains, Bear not the yoke with infidels. A pious woman might, therefore, very well refrain from such contracts, to which the Jews, at this time, were in a manner forced.

VER. 16. Sign. The diadem. It was no sin to wear it. Capel.—What then? May not a pious prince despise such ornaments, raising his mind above them? Houbig.—Silence, when I am alone. Nothing could give us a higher idea of Esther's virtue and greatness of soul, as her elevation did not make her forget herself. C.

CHAP. XV. VER. 1. S. Jerom says, "These additions I also found in the Vulg. edition." H.—This history is more succinctly related, chap. v. C.—Ver. Lit. "And he commanded her (no doubt Mardochai did Esther) to go," &c. The parenthesis was added by S. Jerom. H.

VER. 2. Remember. This is not here in Greek, but more regularly. Chap. iv. 8. C.

VER. 3.—Death. S. Jerom subjoins, I found there "also what follows."

upon God, the ruler and saviour of all, she took two maids with her,

6 And upon one of them she leaned, as if for delicateness and overmuch tenderness, she were not able to bear up her own body:

7 And the other maid followed her lady, bearing up her train flowing on the ground.

8 But she with a rosy colour in her face, and with gracious and bright eyes, hid a mind full of anguish, and exceedingly great fear.

9 So going in she passed through all the doors in order, and stood before the king, where he sat upon his royal throne, clothed with his royal robes, and glittering with gold, and precious stones, and he was terrible to behold.

10 And when he had lifted up his countenance, and with burning eyes had shown the wrath of his heart, the queen sunk down, and her colour turned pale, and she rested her weary head upon her handmaid:

11 And God changed the king's spirit into mildness, and all in haste and in fear he leaped from his throne, and holding her up in his arms, till she came to herself, caressed her with these words:

12 What is the matter, Esther? I am thy brother, fear not.

13 Thou shalt not die: for this law is not made for thee, but for all others.

14 Come near then, and touch the sceptre.

15 And as she held her peace, he took the golden sceptre, and laid it upon her neck, and kissed her, and said: Why dost thou not speak to me?

16 She answered: "I saw thee, my lord, as an angel of God, and my heart was troubled for fear of thy majesty.

17 For thou, my lord, art very admirable, and thy face is full of graces.

18 And while she was speaking, she fell down again, and was almost in a swoon.

VER. 6. As if. Gr. "as being delicate. But the other followed, holding up her garment. But she, blushing in the height of her beauty, with a cheerful and most lovely countenance, felt the pressure of fear on her heart."

VER. 10. Eyes. Gr. adds, "with glory," with which he was surrounded. This made him at first resent the coming in of women uncalled, till he perceived Esther, and saw her fainting. H.—Assuérus had at first only perceived the maid, who went before the queen, and the hall was very spacious. Houbig.—Pale. Gr. "in a fainting fit, and she leaned upon the head of her maid, (Abra.) who was going before."

VER. 13. Others, is not expressed (H.); and Esther might well suppose that she was included, as she probably was, (chap. iv. 11. Capellus,) though the king now altered his mind. Houbig.—Gr. "our decree is common," made for our subjects. C.

VER. 14. Then. Gr. "and taking the golden sceptre, he laid," &c.

VER. 15. Why. Gr. "speak to me; and she said to him." H.

VER. 16. Angel. The Chaldees had the same notions as the Jews about angels; and the latter never showed more devotion towards them than after the captivity, when the Scriptures speak more plainly on this subject. Jacob compares his brother Esau to an angel, (C.) or to God. Gen. xxxiii. 10. See also 1 Kings xxix. 9. and 2 Kings xiv. 17. H.

CHAP. XVI.

A copy of the king's letter in favour of the Jews.

THE great king Artaxerxes, "from India to Ethiopia, to the governors and princes of a hundred and twenty-seven provinces, which obey our command, sendeth greeting.

2 Many^c have abused unto pride the goodness of princes, and the honour that hath been bestowed upon them:

3 And not only endeavour to oppress the king's subjects, but not bearing the glory that is given them, take in hand to practise also against them that gave it.

4 Neither are they content not to return thanks for benefits received, and to violate in themselves the laws of humanity, but they think they can also escape the justice of God, who seeth all things.

5 And they break out into so great madness, as to endeavour to undermine by lies such as observe diligently the offices committed to them, and do all things in such manner as to be worthy of all men's praise.

6 While with crafty fraud they deceive the ears of princes that are well-meaning, and judge of others by their own nature.

7 Now this is proved both from ancient histories, and by the things which are done daily how the good designs of kings are depraved by the evil suggestions of certain men.

8 Wherefore we must provide for the peace of all provinces.

9 Neither must you think, if we command different things, that it cometh of the levity of our mind, but that we give sentence according to the quality and necessity of times, as the profit of the commonwealth requireth.

10 Now that you may more plainly understand what we say,^d Aman, the son of Amadathi, a Macedonian, both in mind and country, and having nothing of the Persian blood, but with his cruelty staining our goodness, was received, being a stranger, by us:

11 And found our humanity so great toward him, that he was called our father, and was worshipped by all, as the next man after the king:

increased in folly, and not only endeavour to injure our subjects, but, unable to bear the weight of favours, devise schemes against their benefactors."

VER. 4. Neither. Gr. "And they not only take away gratitude from among men, but elated with good fortune, which they had not before experienced, they flatter themselves that they will escape the sentence of an all-seeing God, levelled against the wicked." H.—Artaxerxes insists with reason on the ingratitude of Aman, as it was a crime punishable by their laws (Cyrop. 1. Brisson, ii. p. 250); and the Persian kings were particularly careful to reward those who had done them good. C.

VER. 5. And. Gr. "For oftentimes fair speeches, or (H.) revenge, (παρρησία. Isa. i. 24. C.) has made several of those who have been in authority, and intrusted with the affairs of their friends, partakers in the spilling of innocent blood, and involved them in irremediable calamities, by the wicked craft of those who purposely lead astray the unsuspecting benevolence of governors." H.

VER. 7. Provid. Gr. "may be seen, not so much from ancient histories, as we have observed, but more so, if ye examine what wicked things have been done recently, by the fault (or cruelty) of those who have been unworthily in command; and if ye attend, in future, that we may without trouble settle our kingdom in peace for all men. For though we make some changes, yet we make a discernment of what falls under our inspection, and order things with more equity."

VER. 10. Now. Gr. "For as Aman, of Amadathos, a Macedonian, a stranger to the real blood of the Persians, and of a very different character from our goodness, and who, though a stranger to us, partook of that philanthropy which we have for every nation, inasmuch as to be styled," &c. H.—Staining. The fault of ministers often redound to the disgrace of those who employ them. M.

12 But he was so far puffed up with arrogance, as to go about to deprive us of our kingdom and life.

13 For with certain new and unheard of devices, he hath sought the destruction of Mardochai, by whose fidelity, and good services, our life was saved; and of Esther, the partner of our kingdom, with all their nation:

14 Thinking that after they were slain, he might work treason against us, left alone, without friends, and might transfer the kingdom of the Persians to the Macedonians.

15 But we have found that the Jews, who were, by that most wicked man, appointed to be slain, are in no fault at all, but, contrariwise, use just laws,

16 And are the children of the highest, and the greatest, and the ever-living God; by whose benefit the kingdom was given, both to our fathers and to us, and is kept unto this day.

17 Wherefore know ye that those letters which he sent in our name, are void, and of no effect.

18 For which crime, both he himself that devised it, and all his kindred, hang on gibbets, before the gates of this city, Susan: not we, but God, repaying him as he deserved.

19 But this edict, which we now send, shall be published in all cities, that the Jews may freely follow their own laws.

20 And you shall aid them, that they may kill those who had prepared themselves to kill them, on the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, which is called Adar.

21 For the Almighty God hath turned this day of sadness and mourning into joy to them.

22 Wherefore, you shall also count this day among other festival days, and celebrate it with all joy, that it may be known also in times to come,

23 That all they who faithfully obey the Persians, receive a worthy reward for their fidelity; but they that are traitors to their kingdom, are destroyed for their wickedness.

24 And let every province and city, that will not be partaker of this solemnity, perish by the sword, and by fire, and be destroyed in such manner as to be made unpassable, both to men and beasts, for an example of contempt, and disobedience.

VER. 12. Life. This he might only suspect (C.); or his machinations with the two porters might be declared after his disgrace. H.

VER. 14. Without. Gr. "abandoned." H.—Macedonians; or to himself, who was of that nation.

VER. 22. Days. A festival was kept in memory of the destruction of the magi, in which this king was a principal actor. Herod. iii. 79.—The Persians were ordered to keep the 13th of Adar, on account of the preservation of the royal family, and the ruin of a great enemy. C.

VER. 24. And. Gr. "But every country or city throughout the kingdom, which shall not comply, shall be consumed with the spear and fire in wrath."—Beasts. Gr. adds hyperbolically, "and birds, and also be accounted most abominable for ever." H.—Mardochai and Esther have left us in this work the most perfect examples of virtue. The latter is given as a pattern of Christian sovereigns, and a figure of the Church. S. Jerom ad Paulin., (C.) and Prol. in Sophon.—Like Judith, she proved the salvation of her people, and the ruin of their adversaries.

THE BOOK OF JOB.

This Book takes its name from the holy man of whom it treats; who, according to the more probable opinion, was of the race of Esau, and the same as Jobab, king of Edom, mentioned Gen. xxxvi. 33. It is uncertain who was the writer of it. Some attribute it to Job himself; others to Moses, or some one of the prophets. In the Hebrew it is written in verse, from the beginning of the third chapter to the forty-second chapter. Ch.—The beginning and conclusion are historical, and in prose. The sacred writers speak of Job as of a personage who had really existed, (C.) and set the most noble pattern of virtue, and particularly of patience. Tob. ii. 12; Ezec. xiv. 14; James v. 11.—The time when Job lived is not clearly ascertained. Some have supposed (C.) that he was a contemporary with Esther (D. Thalmud); on which supposition the work is here placed in its chronological order. But Job more probably lived during the period when the Hebrews groaned under the Egyptian bondage, (H.) or sojourned in the wilderness. Num. xiv. 9. The Syrians place the book at the head of the Scriptures. C.—Its situation has often varied, and is of no great importance. The subject which is here treated, is of far more; as it is intended to show that the wicked sometimes prosper, while the good are afflicted. H.—This had seldom been witnessed before the days of Abraham: but as God had now selected his family to be witnesses and guardians of religion, a new order of things was beginning to appear. This greatly perplexed Job himself; who, therefore, confesses that he had not sufficiently understood the ways of God, till He had deigned to explain them in the parable of the two great beasts. Chap. xlii. 3. We cannot condemn the sentiments expressed by Job, since God has declared that they were right, (ib. ver. 8,) and reprimands Elihu, (chap. xxxviii. 2,) and the other three friends of Job, for maintaining a false opinion, though, from the history of past times, they had judged it to be true. This remark may exculpate them from the stain of wilful lying and vain declamation. Houbigant.—However, as they asserted what was false, their words of themselves are of no authority; and they are even considered as the forerunners of heretics. S. Greg., S. Aug., &c. T.—Job refutes them by sound logic. S. Jerom.—We may discover in this book the sum of Christian morality, (W.) for which purpose it has been chiefly explained by S. Gregory. The style is very poetical, (H.) though at the same time simple, like that of Moses. D.—It is interspersed with many Arabic and Chaldaic idioms (S. Jer.); whence some have concluded that it was written originally by Job and his friends (H.) in Arabic, and translated into Heb. by Moses, for the consolation of his brethren. W.—The Heb. text is in many places incorrect (Houbig.); and the Sept. seem to have omitted several verses. Orig.—S. Jerom says almost eight hundred, (C.) each consisting of about six words. H.—Those who desire further information may consult Pineda, (W.) whose voluminous work, in two folios, will nearly (H.) give all necessary information. C.

CHAPTER I.

Job's virtue and riches. Satan, by permission from God, strippeth him of all his substance. His patience.

THERE^a was a man in the land of Hus, whose name was Job, and that man was simple and upright, and fearing God, and avoiding evil.

2 And there were born to him seven sons and three daughters.

3 And his possession was seven thousand sheep, and three thousand camels, and five hundred yoke of oxen, and five hundred she-asses, and a family exceedingly great: and this man was great among all the people of the east.

4 And his sons went, and made a feast by houses, every one in his day. And sending, they called their three sisters, to eat and drink with them.

5 And when the days of their feasting were gone about, Job sent to them, and sanctified them: and rising up early, offered holocausts for every one of them. For he said: Lest perhaps my sons have sinned, and have blessed God in their hearts. So did Job all days.

6 Now on a certain day, when the sons of God came to stand before the Lord, satan also was present among them.

7 And the Lord said to him: Whence comest thou? And he answered and said: I have gone round about the earth, and walked through it.

8 And the Lord said to him: Hast thou considered my servant, Job, that there is none like him in the earth, a simple and upright man, and fearing God, and avoiding evil?

9 And satan answering, said: Doth Job fear God in vain?

10 Hast thou not made a fence for him, and his house, and all his substance round about, blessed the works of his hands, and his possession hath increased on the earth?

11 But stretch forth thy hand a little, and touch all that he hath, and see if he bless thee not to thy face.

12 Then the Lord said to satan: Behold, all that he hath is in thy hand: only put not forth thy hand upon his person. And satan went forth from the presence of the Lord.

13 Now upon a certain day, when his sons and daugh-

CHAP. I. VER. 1. Hus. The land of Hus was a part of Edom: as appears from Lam. iv. 21.—Simple. That is, innocent, sincere, and without guile, (Ch.) in opposition to hypocrites and double dealers. C.—Heb. Thom, "perfect."

VER. 3. Sheep. Heb. including "goats," which are equally valuable in that country for milk.—Camels. These animals were used for riding in those barren sands, where they can travel for four days without water; and that which is muddy is the best for them.—East, in the desert Arabia. Sept. add at the end of the book, that Job was king; and he seems to have been independent, (C.) and to have had other kings who acknowledged his authority. Pineda. Chap. xxix. 7, &c.

VER. 5. Blessed. For greater horror of the very thought of blasphemy, the Scripture both here and ver. 11, and in the following chapter, (ver. 5, and 9,) uses the word bless, to signify its contrary. Ch. 3 Kings xxi. 10.

VER. 6. The sons of God. The angels, (Ch.) as the Sept. express it. C.—Satan also, &c. This passage represents to us in a figure, accommodated to the ways and understandings of men, 1. The restless endeavours of satan against the servants of God. 2. That he can do nothing without God's permission. 3. That God doth not permit him to tempt them above their strength; but assists them by his Divine grace in such manner, that the vain efforts of the enemy only serve to illustrate their virtue and increase their merit. Ch.

ters were eating and drinking wine, in the house of their eldest brother,

14 There came a messenger to Job, and said: The oxen were ploughing, and the asses feeding beside them,

15 And the Sabeans rushed in, and took all away, and slew the servants with the sword; and I alone have escaped to tell thee.

16 And while he was yet speaking, another came, and said: The fire of God fell from heaven, and striking the sheep and the servants, hath consumed them; and I alone have escaped to tell thee.

17 And while he also was yet speaking, there came another, and said: The Chaldeans made three troops, and have fallen upon the camels, and taken them; moreover, they have slain the servants with the sword: and I alone have escaped to tell thee.

18 He was yet speaking, and behold another came in, and said: Thy sons and daughters were eating and drinking wine in the house of their eldest brother,

19 A violent wind came on a sudden from the side of the desert, and shook the four corners of the house, and it fell upon thy children, and they are dead: and I alone have escaped to tell thee.

20 Then Job rose up, and rent his garments, and having shaven his head, fell down upon the ground, and worshipped, 21 And said:^b Naked came I out of my mother's womb, and naked shall I return thither: the Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away: as it hath pleased the Lord, so is it done: blessed be the name of the Lord.

22 In all these things Job sinned not by his lips, nor spoke he any foolish thing against God.

CHAP. II.

Satan, by God's permission, striketh Job with ulcers from head to foot. His patience is still invincible.

AND it came to pass, when on a certain day the sons of God came, and stood before the Lord, and satan came amongst them, and stood in his sight,

2 That the Lord said to satan: Whence comest thou? And he answered, and said: I have gone round about the earth, and walked through it.

3 And the Lord said to satan: Hast thou considered my servant, Job, that there is none like him in the earth, a man simple and upright, and fearing God, and avoiding

VER. 16. Heaven, or the air, where the devils exercise a power. Eph. ii. 2.

VER. 17. Chaldeans. Some copies of the Sept. read "horsemen." These nations inhabited the other side of the Euphrates, but made frequent incursions to plunder their neighbours. C.

VER. 21. Thither. To that earth from which all are taken. H.

VER. 22. By his lips, is not in Heb., but occurs chap. ii. 10.—God. Much less did he blaspheme, as satan had said, ver. 11. He did not consider all as the effect of chance, or like a mere philosopher. His thoughts were regulated by religion and the fear of God. C.—The virtue of Job was so much the more wonderful, as he lived among the wicked. S. Greg.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. Day. Job had been under trial for some time, perhaps a year. C.

VER. 2. Through it. Seeking whom he might devour. 1 Pet. v. 8. H.

evil, and still keeping his innocence? But thou hast moved me against him, that I should afflict him without cause.

4 And satan answered, and said: Skin for skin; and all that a man hath, he will give for his life:

5 But put forth thy hand, and touch his bone and his flesh, and then thou shalt see that he will bless thee to thy face.

6 And the Lord said to satan: Behold, he is in thy hand, but yet save his life.

7 So satan went forth from the presence of the Lord, and struck Job with a very grievous ulcer, from the sole of the foot even to the top of his head:

8 And he took a potsherd and scraped the corrupt matter, sitting on a dunghill.

9 And his wife said to him: Dost thou still continue in thy simplicity? bless God and die.

10 And he said to her: Thou hast spoken like one of the foolish women: If we have received good things at the hand of God, why should we not receive evil? In all these things Job did not sin with his lips.

11 Now when Job's three friends heard all the evil that had befallen him, they came every one from his own place, Eliphaz, the Themanite, and Baldad, the Suhite, and Sophar, the Naamathite. For they had made an appointment to come together and visit him, and comfort him.

12 And when they had lifted up their eyes afar off, they knew him not, and crying out, they wept, and rending their garments, they sprinkled dust upon their heads toward heaven.

13 And they sat with him on the ground seven days and seven nights, and no man spoke to him a word: for they saw that his grief was very great.

CHAP. III.

Job expresseth his sense of the miseries of man's life, by cursing the day of his birth.

VER. 3. Simple. Plain-dealing, mild, and without guile. S. Greg. W.—Without cause. This may form a new sentence. H.—Thy proposal and attempts are vain. C.—Job has not deserved this treatment. S. Chrys., &c.

VER. 4. Skin: a proverbial expression, denoting that a man will part with any thing sooner than his life, (C.) or health. H.—Satan hints that if those inestimable blessings should be endangered, (C.) Job would show his real sentiments. H.

VER. 8. Potsherd. His nails were worn, and poverty had left him nothing else.—Dunghill. Heb. “ashes.” H.—S. Chrysostom represents this place as visited by pilgrims, instructive and more brilliant than any throne. Hom. 5, ad Pop. Ant.—Sept. add, “upon the dung, without the city: and after a long time had elapsed, his wife also said to him, How long wilt thou wait, saying: Lo, I will still tarry a little while, expecting the hope of my salvation? For behold thy memory is perished from the land, thy sons and daughters, the pains and labours of my womb, whom I brought forth in labour and sorrow, to no purpose. But thou sittest in the open air, the night long, amid the corruption of worms, while I wander like a slave, seeking for one place and house after another, in expectation of the sun setting, that my labours may cease, and the sorrows which now surround and hold me fast. But speak thou some word to (or against) the Lord, and die.” H.—This addition has been omitted in the Comp. edition, to make it like the Vulg., (C.) though it is found in all the Greek copies (Nobilius) and Fathers, and also in several Latin Bibles. It seems, however, to be only a gloss of some transcriber. C.

VER. 9. Bless. She speaks with cruel irony. C.—Curse God, that he may take away (S. Basil) thy miserable life; or, after taking this revenge on such unjust treatment, put an end to thy own existence. Beza and Amama excuse this woman, though condemned by Job. They pretend that she only meant to insinuate, like the rest of his friends, that he must be guilty of some grievous crime, which she urges him to confess, giving glory to God, before it be too late. H.

VER. 12. Heaven. This denoted mourning or indignation. Jos. vii. 6; Acts xxii. 23.

VER. 13. Seven days, &c. They sat with him for a good part of the day, and of the night, during seven days: and spoke nothing all that time that could give him any uneasiness. Ch. M. Olympiad.—They mourned for him as if he had been dead. Their mutual grief was too great for utterance. But the text seems to

AFTER this, Job opened his mouth, and cursed his day,
2 And he said:

3 *Let the day perish wherein I was born, and the night in which it was said: A man child is conceived.

4 Let that day be turned into darkness, let not God regard it from above, and let not the light shine upon it.

5 Let darkness, and the shadow of death, cover it, let a mist overspread it, and let it be wrapped up in bitterness.

6 Let a darksome whirlwind seize upon that night, let it not be counted in the days of the year, nor numbered in the months.

7 Let that night be solitary, and not worthy of praise.

8 Let them curse it who curse the day, who are ready to raise up a leviathan:

9 Let the stars be darkened with the mist thereof: let it expect light, and not see it, nor the rising of the dawning of the day:

10 Because it shut not up the doors of the womb that bore me, nor took away evils from my eyes.

11 Why did I not die in the womb? why did I not perish when I came out of the belly?

12 Why received upon the knees? why suckled at the breasts?

13 For now I should have been asleep and still, and should have rest in my sleep:

14 With kings and consuls of the earth, who build themselves solitudes:

15 Or with princes, that possess gold, and fill their houses with silver:

16 Or as a hidden untimely birth, I should not be, or as they that, being conceived, have not seen the light.

17 There the wicked cease from tumult, and there the wearied in strength are at rest.

18 And they sometime bound together without disquiet, have not heard the voice of the oppressor.

intimate that they remained with Job all this time. Scultet. C.—Their design in coming was really to afford him consolation; but being under a mistake respecting the conduct of Providence towards mankind, (C.) they erred involuntarily, (T.) and by attempting to prove their assertions, as if none but criminals could be so grievously afflicted, they eventually insulted the holy man. Tob. ii. 15.—They argued on the principle, “that under a just God no one is miserable, unless he have deserved it;” not reflecting that God sometimes puts his best servants to the trial, that their merit and glory may increase. W.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. Cursed his day. Job cursed the day of his birth, not by way of wishing evil to any thing of God's creation; but only to express in a stronger manner his sense of human miseries in general, and of his own calamities in particular. Ch.—He has these only in view: though, in another light, it is better for a man to be born, and to undergo any misery, than he may obtain eternal rewards. H.—Jeremias, (xx. 14,) Habacuc, (i. 2,) the psalmist, and even our Saviour in his agony, made use of such strong expressions. Matt. xxvi. 39, and xxvii. 46.

VER. 7. Praise, by the appearance of the stars. Chap. xxxviii. 7. C.

VER. 8. Leviathan. Prot. “their mourning.” De Dieu rejects this interpretation, substituting “and thou, leviathan, rouse up,” &c. The Fathers generally understand the devil to be thus designated. Sept. “he who is about to seize the great whale,” (H.) or fish, which they also explain of the conflict of satan with Jesus Christ. Origen, &c.

VER. 10. Nor took. Sept. “for it would then have freed my eyes from labour.”

VER. 11. In the. Heb. “from the womb,” (H.) or as soon as I was born. C.

VER. 14. Consuls. Heb. “counsellors,” or any in great authority. Sept. “kings, the counsellors of the land, who rejoiced, boasting of their swords.” The same word, erbuth, (H.) means both swords and solitudes. D.

VER. 16. Light; dying in the womb. He expresses a desire that he had been thus prevented from feeling his present miseries and danger of sin. H.

VER. 17. Tumult. In the grave they can no longer disturb the world. M.—In strength. Sept. “in body.”

VER. 18. Bound in chains, like incorrigible slaves. (C.) or debtors. Cocceius—These were formerly treated with great severity. Luke xii. 59. C.

19 The small and great are there, and the servant is free from his master.

20 Why is light given to him that is in misery, and life to them that are in bitterness of soul?

21 That look for death, and it cometh not, as they that dig for a treasure:

22 And they rejoice exceedingly when they have found the grave?

23 To a man whose way is hidden, and God hath surrounded him with darkness?

24 Before I eat I sigh: and as overflowing waters, so is my roaring:

25 For the fear which I feared, hath come upon me: and that which I was afraid of, hath befallen me.

26 Have I not dissembled? have I not kept silence? have I not been quiet? and indignation is come upon me.

CHAP. IV.

Eliphaz charges Job with impatience, and pretends that God never afflicts the innocent.

THEN Eliphaz, the Themanite, answered, and said:

2 If we begin to speak to thee, perhaps thou wilt take it ill; but who can withhold the words he hath conceived?

3 Behold thou hast taught many, and thou hast strengthened the weary hands:

4 Thy words have confirmed them that were staggering, and thou hast strengthened the trembling knees:

5 But now the scourge is come upon thee, and thou faintest: It hath touched thee, and thou art troubled.

6 Where is thy fear, thy fortitude, thy patience, and the perfection of thy ways?

7 Remember, I pray thee, who ever perished being innocent? or when were the just destroyed?

8 On the contrary, I have seen those who work iniquity, and sow sorrows, and reap them, a Infra, xxv. 4.—b Infra, xv. 15;

VER. 21. Not. They feel the same eagerness for death as those who seek for a treasure (C.); and when death is at hand, they rejoice no less than those who discover a grave, in which they hope to find some riches, ver. 15, 22.

VER. 22. Grave. full of stores, or the place where they may repose. H.

VER. 23. To. Why is life given to? &c. The uncertainty whether a man be worthy of love or hatred, (Eccl. ix. 1,) and whether he will persevere to the end, is what fills Job with distress; though we must trust that God will suffer none to be tempted above their strength. 1 Cor. x. 13.—He finds himself surrounded with precipices, and in the dark. C.—So God often tries his faithful servants. D.

VER. 25. Fear. In prosperity he feared the assaults of pride. Now he is in danger of yielding to impatience and despair. C.

VER. 26. Dissembled my sufferings, making no complaint, not only during the seven days that his friends had been with him, but long before. Heb. and Sept. "I was not in safety, nor at rest; neither was I indolent (H. in the administration of affairs. C.); yet trouble came." H.—I have enjoyed no peace, since the wrath of the Lord has found me. C.—In such a situation Job might well beg to be delivered, (H.) and to pray that those things which obstructed his repose in God might be removed; considering them not so much the works of God, as the effects of sin. Pineda. W.—In this light he curses his birth-day, and will no longer look upon it as a joyful and happy day. D.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1. Themanite. People of this city, about twelve miles from Petra, in Arabia, were renowned for wisdom. Jer. xlix. 7; Bar. iii. 22.—Eliphaz attempts to prove that no innocent person is chastised. He does not speak of small faults, to which any person may be exposed, and which God may severely punish. But he will have Job to be a great offender, at least in secret, and represents himself in too advantageous a light; though he was really a good man, and meant well. C.—But this did not exempt him from sin, (chap. xlii.) no more than Eliu. Chap. xxxii.

VER. 2. Conceived? and to which the speech of Job had given occasion. M.—Sept. "Who shall bear the force of thy words? For if thou," &c. H.

VER. 5. And thou. Sept. "and has touched thee. But thou makest haste" (H.) to flee. Heb. "art consternated." We may easily prescribe for others, but when we are sick we know not what to do. C.

9 Perishing by the blast of God, and consumed by the spirit of his wrath.

10 The roaring of the lion, and the voice of the lioness, and the teeth of the whelps of lions, are broken:

11 The tiger hath perished for want of prey, and the young lions are scattered abroad.

12 Now there was a word spoken to me in private, and my ears by stealth, as it were, received the veins of its whisper.

13 In the horror of a vision by night, when deep sleep is wont to hold men,

14 Fear seized upon me, and trembling, and all my bones were affrighted:

15 And when a spirit passed before me, the hair of my flesh stood up.

16 There stood one whose countenance I knew not, an image before my eyes, and I heard the voice, as it were, of a gentle wind.

17 "Shall man be justified in comparison of God, or shall a man be more pure than his Maker?"

18 "Behold, they that serve him are not stedfast, and in his angels he found wickedness:

19 How much more shall they that dwell in houses of clay, who have an earthly foundation, be consumed as with the moth?

20 From morning till evening they shall be cut down: and because no one understandeth, they shall perish for ever.

21 And they that shall be left, shall be taken away from them: they shall die, and not in wisdom.

CHAP. V.

Eliphaz proceeds in his charge, and exhorts Job to acknowledge his sins.

CALL now, if there be any that will answer thee, and turn to some of the saints.

2 Anger indeed killeth the foolish, and envy slayeth the little one.

2 Pet. ii. 4; Jude 6.

VER. 6. Where? Sept. "Rather is not thy fear foolishness as well as thy hope, and the innocence of thy path?" H.—Is not all hypocrisy? M. C.—Many of the assertions of Job's friends are true, but their inferences are false. M.

VER. 7. Destroyed? They never were eternally. But Abel and many other just persons have been exposed to tribulation in this world, (W.) for their greater improvement. Yet Eliphaz falsely concludes from the sufferings of Job, that he must have been a criminal. C.

VER. 12. Private. Heretics pretend such obscure visions, rather to get credit than to edify others. S. Greg. v. 18. W.—Many suppose that Eliphaz was guilty of feigning: but the greatest part think that he had truly seen a vision, but did not draw the proper conclusions from it. C.

VER. 15. Spirit: angel, or gentle breeze. C.

VER. 16. And I. Prot. "there was silence, and I heard a voice." Marg. "a still voice." Sept. "But I heard a breeze and a voice." H.

VER. 17. Maker. It is thought that these were the words of the angel. If God punish without cause, may not the sufferer esteem himself the better of the two? You must therefore be guilty. C.—The highest angel has nothing but what he has received from God, in comparison with whom he is still as a mere nothing. But this does not prove that Job was a criminal, or that he pretended to arrogate to himself any excellence independent of the giver of all good gifts. He did not assert that he was impeccable: yet, with God's grace, he might be innocent. C.

VER. 18. Angels, who fell, as the Fathers explain it. E. T.—Heb. "behold, he put no trust in his servants, and his angels he charged with folly." Chap. xv. 15, and xxv. 5, and 2 Pet. ii. 4. Prot. H.

VER. 20. Understandeth. Heb. "regardeth." Sept. "can help himself." H.—Man is justly punished because he does not reflect on what he ought. C.

VER. 21. And they. Heb. "doth not their dignity pass away with them? They die without wisdom." H.

CHAP. V. VER. 1. Saints. This is a proof of the invocation of saints (C.) and angels. H.—The Jews often begged God to have mercy on them for the sake of the patriarchs. 2 Par. vi. 42. C.—Eliphaz, therefore, exhorts Job, if he have any patron or angel, to bring him forward in his defence. M.—Sept. "Invoke now if any one will hear thee, or if thou perceive any of the holy angels," (H.) as I have done. M.

3 I have seen a fool with a strong root, and I cursed his beauty immediately.

4 His children shall be far from safety, and shall be destroyed in the gate, and there shall be none to deliver them.

5 Whose harvest the hungry shall eat, and the armed man shall take him by violence, and the thirsty shall drink up his riches.

6 Nothing upon earth is done without a cause, and sorrow doth not spring out of the ground.

7 Man is born to labour, and the bird to fly.

8 Wherefore I will pray to the Lord, and address my speech to God:

9 Who doth great things, and unsearchable and wonderful things without number:

10 Who giveth rain upon the face of the earth, and watereth all things with waters:

11 Who setteth up the humble on high, and comforteth with health those that mourn.

12 Who bringeth to nought the designs of the malignant, so that their hands cannot accomplish what they had begun:

13 ^aWho catcheth the wise in their craftiness, and disappointeth the counsel of the wicked:

14 They shall meet with darkness in the day, and grope at noon-day as in the night.

15 But he shall save the needy from the sword of their mouth, and the poor from the hand of the violent.

16 And to the needy there shall be hope, but iniquity shall draw in her mouth.

17 Blessed is the man whom God correcteth: refuse not, therefore, the chastising of the Lord.

18 For he woundeth, and cureth: he striketh, and his hands shall heal.

19 In six troubles he shall deliver thee, and in the seventh, evil shall not touch thee.

20 In famine he shall deliver thee from death; and in battle, from the hand of the sword.

21 Thou shalt be hidden from the scourge of the tongue: and thou shalt not fear calamity when it cometh.

^a 1 Cor. iii. 19.

VER. 3. And I. Sept. "But presently their subsistence was eaten up." I envied not their riches: but judged they would soon end. H.

VER. 7. Bird. Heb. "sparks fly up." H.—You can no more then expect to pass unpunished, since it is impossible for man to be innocent (C.)! and, at any rate, labour is inevitable. M.

VER. 8. I will, or if I were in your place, I would sue for pardon. C.—Prot. "I would seek unto God," (H.) under affliction. M.

VER. 19. In six, mentioned below (M.); or in many, indefinitely. C.

VER. 21. Scourge. Eccles. (xxvi. 9, and xxviii. 21) has the same expression. See James iii. 6. C.—Calamity, from robbers, as the Heb. ssud, (H.) intimates. The word is rendered destruction, vastitate, ver. 22. M.

VER. 23. Stones, so as not to stumble; or, the rocks will be a retreat for thee.

VER. 24. Beauty does not mean his wife, as some grossly imagine, (C.) but a house well ordered. M.—Heb. "thy habitation."

VER. 26. Abundance. "With loud lamentations." De Dieu.—"In full age, like as a shock of corn cometh in its season." Prot.

VER. 27. Which thou. Sept. "And what we have heard: but do thou reflect with thyself what thou hast done." H.—What had been revealed to Eliphaz was very true. Yet his conclusions were unwarrantable. C.

CHAP. VI. VER. 2. My sins, &c. In the Heb. my wrath. He does not mean to compare his sufferings with his real sins; but with the imaginary crimes which his friends falsely imputed to him: and especially with his wrath, or grief, expressed in the third chapter, which they so much accused. Though, as he tells them here, it bore no proportion with the greatness of his calamity. Ch.—Job does not deny but he may have transgressed. C. See chap. vii. 20.—But he is not conscious of any mortal offence; such as his friends insisted he must have 22 In destruction and famine thou shalt laugh: and thou shalt not be afraid of the beasts of the earth.

23 But thou shalt have a covenant with the stones of the lands, and the beasts of the earth shall be at peace with thee.

24 And thou shalt know that thy tabernacle is in peace, and visiting thy beauty, thou shalt not sin.

25 Thou shalt know also that thy seed shall be multiplied, and thy offspring like the grass of the earth.

26 Thou shalt enter into the grave in abundance, as a heap of wheat is brought in its season.

27 Behold, this is even so, as we have searched out which thou having heard, consider it thoroughly in thy mind.

CHAP. VI.

Job maintains his innocence, and complains of his friends.

BUT Job answered, and said:

2 O that my sins, whereby I have deserved wrath, and the calamity that I suffer, were weighed in a balance.

3 As the sand of the sea, this would appear heavier: therefore, my words are full of sorrow:

4 For the arrows of the Lord are in me, the rage whereof drinketh up my spirit, and the terrors of the Lord war against me.

5 Will the wild ass bray when he hath grass? or will the ox low when he standeth before a full manger?

6 Or can an unsavoury thing be eaten, that is not seasoned with salt? or can a man taste that which, when tasted, bringeth death?

7 The things which before my soul would not touch, now, through anguish, are my meats.

8 Who will grant that my request may come: and that God may give me what I look for?

9 And that he that hath begun may destroy me, that he may let loose his hand, and cut me off?

10 And that this may be my comfort, that afflicting me with sorrow, he spare not, nor I contradict the words of the Holy one.

11 For what is my strength, that I can hold out? or what is my end, that I should keep patience?

committed, as he was so cruelly tormented. H.—Wrath. Heb. "O that my grief (H. or complaints. C.) were thoroughly weighed, and my calamity laid in the balances together." Prot. H.

VER. 3. Heavier. The figure hyperbole is frequently used in Scripture, to give us some idea of what surpasses our understanding. Job intimates that the punishment was incomparably greater than his sins. Sept. "Yea, these (sorrows) are heavier than the sand of the sea-shore. But, it seems, my words are wicked." H.

VER. 4. Rage. Heb. "poison," (H.) or "venom" (Chal. M.); as it was customary to use poisoned arrows. C.—Sept. "When I begin to speak, they pierce me. For what! Does the wild ass continually bray, except when he is in quest of food?" H.—It is easy for those to be silent who suffer nothing.

VER. 6. Salt. I wonder not that you should consider my lamentations as insipid; I now find some consolation in them, ver. 7. C.—Or can. Heb. "or is there any taste in the white of an egg" (Prot.)? or in blue milk (Mercer)? or "in the spittle, which a man swallows in a dream?" See Isa. xxviii. 8. If pain did not extort these complaints, should I find any pleasure in them? C.—Sept. "is there any taste in vain words?" Can I hear your arguments without indignation? H. M.—Some MSS. add, "For to a hungry soul even bitter things appear to be sweet," from Prov. xxvii. 7. C.

VER. 9. Off, and release me from this state of misery and danger. H.—He is ready to die cheerfully, if it be God's will. C.—Sept. "May the Lord, who has begun, wound me, but not take me away finally. Yea, let my city, over which I have exulted, be my grave. I will not spare, for I have not belied a word of my holy God." H.

VER. 11. End. Sept. "time." I am too weak and short-lived to bear all this. H.—I can perceive no end. M.—Keep. Prot. "prolong my life" "— "What is the extent of my soul, to reach so far?" C.

12 My strength is not the strength of stones, nor is my flesh of brass.

13 Behold there is no help for me in myself, and my familiar friends also are departed from me.

14 He that taketh away mercy from his friend, forsaketh the fear of the Lord.

15 My brethren have passed by me, as the torrent that passeth swiftly in the valleys.

16 They that fear the hoary frost, the snow shall fall upon them.

17 At the time when they shall be scattered they shall perish: and after it groweth hot, they shall be melted out of their place.

18 The paths of their steps are entangled: they shall walk in vain, and shall perish.

19 Consider the paths of Thema, the ways of Saba, and wait a little while.

20 They are confounded, because I have hoped: they are come also even unto me, and are covered with shame.

21 Now you are come: and now, seeing my affliction, you are afraid.

22 Did I say: Bring to me, and give me of your substance?

23 Or deliver me from the hand of the enemy, and rescue me out of the hand of the mighty?

24 Teach me, and I will hold my peace: and if I have been ignorant of any thing, instruct me.

25 Why have you detracted the words of truth, whereas there is none of you that can reprove me?

26 You dress up speeches only to rebuke, and you utter words to the wind.

27 You rush in upon the fatherless, and you endeavour to overthrow your friend.

28 However, finish what you have begun: give ear, and see whether I lie.

29 Answer, I beseech you, without contention: and speaking that which is just, judge ye.

30 And you shall not find iniquity in my tongue, neither shall folly sound in my mouth.

VER. 12. Brass. This is proverbial. Those who are aware of their own frailty, ought not to expose themselves to dangerous company, particularly to those of the other sex.

VER. 13. Myself. Sept. "Have I not placed my trust in him?" God alone. H.—All my other friends have abandoned me, ver. 15. C. Can they wonder if I express my grief? H.—Familiar. Heb. "is wisdom removed far from me?" H.—"Has my strength abandoned me, so that I cannot be recognised?" C.

VER. 16. Them. They shall run from a less to a greater evil. C.—Sept. "Those who respected me, have now fallen upon me, like snow or ice; (17) as when it is consumed with heat, it is no longer known where it was; (18) thus I have been abandoned by all, lost and expelled from my house." Consider, (19) Heb. continues, in the comparison of the torrents, (15) "which are hidden by the ice and snow," and are left dry and of no service in summer, when most wanted. H.—So these friends stood by me only in the days of my prosperity. C.

VER. 19. While. Till the torrent subside, when the caravans from these owns of Arabia may pass on.

VER. 20. I. Heb. "they had hoped" to pass along. H.

VER. 21. Come. Heb. "are good for nothing." C.—Prot. marg. "like to them."

VER. 25. Why. Heb. "How strong are the words of truth?" C.—Whereas. Prot. "But what doth your arguing reprove?" What part of my discourse do you find erroneous? Sept. "But it seems the words of the man of truth are deceitful. Yet I do not beg from you (a word or) strength." H.

VER. 26. Wind. Job humbles the vanity of Eliphaz. C.—Sept. "nor shall your rebuke silence my words: for I will not admit the sound of your discourse. Nay, you rush," &c. H.

VER. 30. Mouth. He engages their attention. C.—Heb. "Cannot my taste discern perverse things?" (Prot. H.) or, "the evil" which I endure? My complaints are not surely unfounded. C.

CHAP. VII. VER. 1. Warfare. Heb. "is it not determined?" (H.) for some short space, as the Levites had to serve from thirty to fifty years of age (Num. iv.

CHAP. VII.

Job declares the miseries of man's life: and addresses himself to God.

THE life of man upon earth is a warfare, and his days are like the days of a hireling.

2 As a servant longeth for the shade, as the hireling looketh for the end of his work;

3 So I also have had empty months, and have numbered to myself wearisome nights.

4 If I lie down to sleep, I shall say: When shall I rise? and again, I shall look for the evening, and shall be filled with sorrows even till darkness.

5 My flesh is clothed with rottenness and the filth of dust; my skin is withered and drawn together.

6 My days have passed more swiftly than the web is cut by the weaver, and are consumed without any hope.

7 Remember that my life is but wind, and my eye shall not return to see good things.

8 Nor shall the sight of man behold me: thy eyes are upon me, and I shall be no more.

9 As a cloud is consumed, and passeth away: so he that shall go down to hell shall not come up.

10 Nor shall he return any more into his house, neither shall his place know him any more.

11 Wherefore, I will not spare my mouth, I will speak in the affliction of my spirit: I talk with the bitterness of my soul.

12 Am I a sea, or a whale, that thou hast inclosed me in a prison?

13 If I say: My bed shall comfort me, and I shall be relieved, speaking with myself on my couch:

14 Thou wilt frighten me with dreams, and terrify me with visions.

15 So that my soul rather chooseth hanging, and my bones death.

16 I have done with hope, I shall now live no longer: spare me, for my days are nothing.

17 What is a man, that thou shouldst magnify him? or why dost thou set thy heart upon him?

3, and viii. 25); and the days of a hireling are also defined and short. Isa. xvi. 14. Amama.

VER. 3. And have. Heb. "they have appointed for me." C.—God treats me with more severity, as even the night is not a time of rest for me, and my months of service are without any present recompence. H.

VER. 4. And again. Heb. "and the night be completed, I toss to and fro," (H.) or "I am disturbed with dreams," (C.) till day break. Vulg. insinuates that night and day are equally restless to a man in extreme pain. H.—As I find no comfort, why may I not desire to die? M.—I desire to be dissolved, as being much better, said S. Paul.

VER. 6. Web. Heb. "the weaver's shuttle," chap. xvi. 23; Isa. xxxviii. 12. H.—Sept. "my life is swifter than speech." Tetrapla, "than a runner." C.

VER. 7. Wind. What is life compared with eternity, or even with past ages? C.

VER. 8. Eyes, in anger, (C.) or thy mercy will come too late when I shall be no more.

VER. 9. Hell, or the grave. M.—He was convinced of the resurrection. But he meant that, according to the natural course, we can have no means of returning to this world after we are dead.

VER. 10. More. This may be explained both of the soul and of the body Psal. cii. 16. The former resides in the body for a short time, and then seems to take no further notice of it (C.) till the resurrection.

VER. 12. Sea. Ungovernable and malicious.—Am I so violent as to require such barriers? Am I capacious or strong enough to bear such treatment? C.

VER. 15. Hanging. Prot. "strangling and death, rather than my life," or, marg. "bones." H.—Any species of death would be preferable to this misery. C.—Who would not entertain the same sentiments, if the fear of worse in the other world did not withhold him? But Job had reason to hope that his sorrows would end with his life. H.—It is thought that he was dreadfully tempted to despair. C.—Yet he resisted manfully, and overcame all attempts of the wicked one.

18 Thou visitest him early in the morning, and thou provest him suddenly.

19 How long wilt thou not spare me, nor suffer me to swallow down my spittle?

20 I have sinned: what shall I do to thee, O keeper of men? why hast thou set me opposite to thee, and am I become burdensome to myself?

21 Why dost thou not remove my sin, and why dost thou not take away my iniquity? Behold now I shall sleep in the dust: and if thou seek me in the morning, I shall not be.

CHAP. VIII.

Baldad, under pretence of defending the justice of God, accuses Job, and exhorts him to return to God.

THEN Baldad, the Suhite, answered, and said:

2 How long wilt thou speak these things, and how long shall the words of thy mouth be like a strong wind?

3 Doth God pervert judgment, or doth the Almighty overthrow that which is just?

4 Although thy children have sinned against him, and he hath left them in the hand of their iniquity:

5 Yet if thou wilt arise early to God, and wilt beseech the Almighty:

6 If thou wilt walk clean and upright, he will presently awake unto thee, and will make the dwelling of thy justice peaceable:

7 Inasmuch, that if thy former things were small, thy latter things would be multiplied exceedingly.

8 For inquire of the former generation, and search diligently into the memory of the fathers:

9 (For we are but of yesterday, and are ignorant^a that our days upon earth are but a shadow:)

10 And they shall teach thee: they shall speak to thee, and utter words out of their hearts.

11 Can the rush be green without moisture? or a sedge-bush grow without water?

12 When it is yet in flower, and is not plucked up with the hand, it withereth before all herbs.

^a Infra, xiv. 2; Psal. cxliii. 4.

13 Even so are the ways of all that forget God, and the hope of the hypocrite shall perish:

14 His folly shall not please him, and his trust shall be like the spider's web.

15 He shall lean upon his house, and it shall not stand: he shall prop it up, and it shall not rise:

16 He seemeth to have moisture before the sun cometh; and at his rising, his blossom shall shoot forth.

17 His roots shall be thick upon a heap of stones, and among the stones he shall abide.

18 If one swallow him up out of his place, he shall deny him, and shall say: I know thee not.

19 For this is the joy of his way, that others may spring again out of the earth.

20 God will not cast away the simple, nor reach out his hand to the evil doer:

21 Until thy mouth be filled with laughter, and thy lips with rejoicing.

22 They that hate thee, shall be clothed with confusion: and the dwelling of the wicked shall not stand.

CHAP. IX.

Job acknowledges God's justice: although he often afflicts the innocent.

AND Job answered, and said:

2 Indeed I know it is so, and that man cannot be justified, compared with God.

3 If he will contend with him, he cannot answer him one for a thousand.

4 He is wise in heart, and mighty in strength: who hath resisted him, and hath had peace?

5 Who hath removed mountains, and they whom he overthrew in his wrath, knew it not.

6 Who shaketh the earth out of her place, and the pillars thereof tremble.

7 Who commandeth the sun, and it riseth not: and shutteth up the stars, as it were, under a seal:

8 Who alone spreadeth out the heavens, and walketh upon the waves of the sea.

9 Who maketh Arcturus, and Orion, and Hyades, and the inner parts of the south.

VER. 17. Magnify him, or put him to such severe trials. He is not worthy of thy attention. C.—Heb. ii. 6. H.

VER. 20. Sinned. I acknowledge my frailty. M.—How may I obtain redress? C.—Job's friends maintained that he was guilty. But he does not acquiesce in their conclusion, that these sufferings were precisely in punishment of some crime, though he acknowledges that he is not without his faults. H.—Shall. Heb. also, "what have I done to thee?" I have only hurt myself. C.—Opposite, as a butt to shoot at. H.—Myself. Heb. was formerly "to thee," till the Jews changed it, as less respectful. Cajet.—Sept. still read, "and why am I a burden to thee" (11.)? as I am under the necessity of complaining, in my own defence. C.

CHAP. VIII. VER. 1. Suhite, from Suc, the son of Abraham, who dwelt in the desert Arabia (Gen. xxv. 2); though several suppose, without reason, (C.) that Baldad resided at Sueta, in Coelosyria. M.—He was the second in age and dignity. Pineda.

VER. 2. How long. He seems tired with hearing, (H.) and accuses Job of want of moderation, representing him as a hypocrite, (C.) and an obstinate defender of his own opinion, against the better judgment of Eliphaz (M.); though he was in reality only a constant asserter of truth. W.

VER. 3. Just. He begins with the same principle as Eliphaz, which nobody denied. But he does not reflect, that God may cause even the just to be afflicted, for their trial and improvement.

VER. 6. Peaceable. Justice and peace shall kiss. H.—Prosperity will attend me righteous. C.

VER. 9. That. Heb. "because our days." H.—Baldad strives, in vain, to prove what nobody contested. But he does not come to the point, and show that Job was guilty. Past histories might have informed him that the just are often persecuted, like Abel, Abraham, Jacob, and Joseph. C.—It is true, these were afterwards comforted in honour, except the first, who was slain, and better off in the other world.

VER. 12. Herbs, for want of moisture. C.

VER. 14. Him, the hypocrite, or God. C.—Both shall one day condemn the ill use of riches. H.

VER. 16. Seemeth. Heb. "he is green before the sun" beat upon him.—Rising, ortu, for hortu, (H.) as the Heb., &c. have "garden," (M.) with some Latin editions. He had compared the wicked to a rush without moisture. But the just is like a plant in a fine garden, which is not hurt by the sun-beams. It will grow even among stones, (C.) and may be transplanted without danger, ver. 19. H.—The whole may be, however, a continuation of the former simile. The rush will presently be scorched, as if it were thrown among stones, and its place will know it no longer, ver. 18. M.

VER. 19. Joy. Sept. "the catastrophe of the wicked, for another shall spring," &c. H.

VER. 21. Until. If thou be simple, (H.) or irreproachable, (C.) God will make thee exult. H.—Until, &c. M.—He will restore thee to thy former state of affluence. C.

CHAP. IX. VER. 2. God. Job answers both his friends, and with admirable humility acknowledges that in God's sight he is full of defects; but not of such a nature as to fall (C.) under the cognizance of man. I am not conscious to myself of any thing; but . . . God is the judge. 1 Cor. iv. 4. H.

VER. 3. Thousand. Psal. cxlii. 2, "Woe even to the praise-worthy life of man, if God judge without mercy!" S. Aug. H.

VER. 4. Resisted. Heb. and Sept. "hardened himself against him."

VER. 7. Seal. So that they appear not. He alludes (C.) to masters covering their servants with seals, before locks were invented. Macrob. vii. 3.—From these noble effects of God's power Job takes occasion to humble himself. C.

VER. 8. Heavens, like a tent. Psal. ciii. 2. These nations lived under tents (C.); and beholding the magnificent one which God had spread over the heads of all, Job, in rapture, (H.) wonders that he should have created such a pavilion for his servants.

VER. 9—Arcturus, &c. These are names of stars or constellations. In 10 Who doth things great and incomprehensible; and wonderful, of which there is no number.

11 If he come to me, I shall not see him: if he depart, I shall not understand.

12 If he examine on a sudden, who shall answer him? who can say: Why dost thou so?

13 God, whose wrath no man can resist, and under whom they stoop that bear up the world.

14 What am I then, that I should answer him, and have words with him?

15 I, who although I should have any just thing, would not answer, but would make supplication to my judge.

16 And if he should hear me when I call, I should not believe that he had heard my voice.

17 For he shall crush me in a whirlwind, and multiply my wounds even without cause.

18 He alloweth not my spirit to rest, and he filleth me with bitterness.

19 If strength be demanded, he is most strong: if equity of judgment, no man dare bear witness for me.

20 If I would justify myself, my own mouth shall condemn me: if I would show myself innocent, he shall prove me wicked.

21 Although I should be simple, even this my soul shall be ignorant of, and I shall be weary of my life.

22 One thing there is that I have spoken, both the innocent and the wicked he consumeth.

23 If he scourge, let him kill at once, and not laugh at the pains of the innocent.

24 The earth is given into the hand of the wicked, he covereth the face of the judges thereof: and if it be no he, who is it then?

25 My days have been swifter than a post: they have fled away and have not seen good.

26 They have passed by as ships carrying fruits, as an eagle flying to the prey.

27 If I say: I will not speak so: I change my face, and am tormented with sorrow.

28 I feared all my works, knowing that thou didst not spare the offender.

29 But if so also I am wicked, why have I laboured in vain?

30 If I be washed, as it were, with snow-waters, and my hands shall shine ever so clean:

31 Yet thou shalt plunge me in filth, and my garments shall abhor me.

32 For I shall not answer a man that is like myself nor one that may be heard with me equally in judgment.

33 There is none that may be able to reprove both, and to put his hand between both.

34 Let him take his rod away from me, and let not his fear terrify me.

35 I will speak, and will not fear him: for I cannot answer while I am in fear.

CHAP. X.

Job laments his afflictions, and begs to be delivered.

MY soul is weary of my life, I will let go my speech against myself, I will speak in the bitterness of my soul.

2 I will say to God: Do not condemn me: tell me why thou judgest me so?

Hebrew, Ash, Cesil, and Cimah. Ch.—And edri thimon, (II.) the “bottom or seals of the south,” which were to him invisible, being the Antarctic constellations. The ancients were acquainted only with these four, (Homer, Virg. Æn. iii., &c.) which denoted the four quarters and seasons. C.—Ass, Arcturus, “the bear’s tail,” near the north pole, (H.) rises in autumn, when the year begins (C.) in Arabia. Cosil, (II.) or Orion, on the west, styled by astronomers “the heart of the scorpion,” rises about the autumnal equinox, and presides over winter (C.); as Cime, (H.) the Hyades, or the seven “rainy” stars, do over spring, the “pleasing” season, as Cime denotes, (chap. xxxviii. 31,) when navigation commences. “The seals of the south,” designate summer. C.—Inner. Prot. “the chambers.” They agree with the Vulg. in the other names. Sept. “who makes the Pleiads, and Hesper, and Arcturus, and the store-rooms of the south?” H.—They are styled inner with respect to us, who cannot see them.

VER. 11. Understand, as he is a spirit (M.); and not that God is changeable, but his works and judgments are above our comprehension, and we are always liable to change.

VER. 13. God. Prot. “If God will not withdraw his anger, the proud helpers do stoop under him.” Sept. “For he is not turned aside by wrath;” (or Rom. edit.) “God, whose anger cannot be averted,” (H.) unless we repent (C.): “under him the whales below heaven bend.” H.

VER. 14. What? Heb. “Much less shall I answer him, choosing even my words with him.” H.—This is the conclusion from the display of God’s power. C.—No eloquence will persuade him. II.—Though not conscious of any sin, Job will not justify himself (1 Cor. iv. W.) before God. II.

VER. 16. Voice. So much am I beneath his notice. How unjust were the aspersions of Job’s friends, who accused him of presumption and blasphemy! C.—No one ever spoke with greater humility (H.) and respect of God’s absolute dominion. C.—He will attribute nothing to his own prayers, as he is still in the dark. M.

VER. 17. Without cause. That is, without my knowing the cause; or without any crime of mine. Ch.—To argue from my afflictions, that I am a criminal, is unjust. Chap. ii. 3.

VER. 19. Equity. Heb. “if judgment, who will appoint me a time,” (H.) or “set me before him,” and undertake my defence? Who will dare to sit as judge between us?

VER. 21. Life, under this uncertainty and affliction. M.

VER. 22. Consumeth. Eccles. ix. 2. H.—This principle is incontrovertible. W.—I do not retract it. M.—The misery inflicted on the just is not contrary to the goodness of the Almighty. Job perfectly discovered this truth, which puzzled his enlightened friends, and most of those who lived before Christ (Psal. lxxii. 2; Jer. xii. 1. C.); and even Job himself was not fully convinced of the motives of Providence, till God had explained them. Houbigant. Chap. xlii.

VER. 23. Innocent. Having expressed his sentiments clearly, now he mentions what he could desire under the pressure of misery. M.—Seeing the danger of falling, to which he was exposed, he begged to be delivered by death. We are taught by our Saviour to pray, Lead us not into temptation. Matt. vi. 13. God does not laugh at our sufferings, but he acts like a surgeon, and cuts without minding our complaints.—Heb. “If the scourge slay suddenly, he will laugh at the trial of the innocent.” Prot. H.

VER. 24. Wicked one, (II.) the devil, (M.) or any impious person who enjoys prosperity. He, (C.) or even God permissively, covered the face, (H.) by bribes; so that judges pass sentence unjustly.—Then. If it be not the devil, (M.) or God. C.

VER. 25. Good, of late. Heb. “they see no good.”

VER. 26. Carrying. Heb. Lit. “of desire,” belonging to one person, or full of goods, which he desires to carry quickly to market. M.—Chal. agrees with us. But most interpreters vary. Pagnin retains the original, abe (H.); supposing the river Abrahah, or Avah, is meant. It certainly implies expedition; “they have hastened like (C.) the eagle to its prey.” Sept. “Is there any trace of ships, or of an eagle flying in quest of food?” H.

VER. 27. Sorrow. I cannot entirely repress it. C.—The more I strive, (II.) the greater is my pain. M.

VER. 28. Works. Heb. “sorrows.” I dread their increase, and fear impatience. Even in the midst of prosperity, Job offered sacrifice, lest the sins of his children should be laid to his charge.

VER. 29. Vain. Why have I endeavoured to repress my grief in silence? God does not forbid us to complain, but only to murmur. C.—Sept. “Since I am wicked, why did I not die?” H.—Should a wretch be even suffered to live? S. Chrys.

VER. 33. There. Sept. “O that an umpire (or a mediator) were between us, and one arguing and giving ear in the midst of both!”

VER. 35. Fear him. Sept. “and I shall not fear, but speak. For I am not conscious to myself of injustice.” H.—The dread of incurring God’s displeasure makes me prefer to be silent; and if I had no other reason, this fear would suffice, as I should not be master of myself under such anxiety and pain. C.

CHAP. X. VER. 1. Life. Job had intimated a fear to proceed any further. C.—But perceiving that he had not convinced his friends, he continues his discourse (H.) in still stronger terms, yet so as to acknowledge the justice of God. C.—Speech against. Heb. “complaint upon, (H.) or respecting myself,” I will deplore my misfortunes, (C.) or I will say no more about them. M.

VER. 3. Calumniate permissively, by treating me in such a manner that others lay false crimes to my charge. Heb. “oppress and despise the work,”—Wicked, who are ready enough (H.) to assert that virtue is useless, (C.) and that God mindeth not human affairs. My affliction will confirm them in their false

3 Doth it seem good to thee that thou shouldst calumniate me, and oppress me, the work of thy own hands, and help the counsel of the wicked?

4 Hast thou eyes of flesh: or, shalt thou see as man seeth?

5 Are thy days as the days of man, and are thy years as the times of men:

6 That thou shouldst inquire after my iniquity, and search after my sin?

7 And shouldst know that I have done no wicked thing, whereas there is no man that can deliver out of thy hand?

8 Thy hands have made me, and fashioned me wholly round about, and dost thou thus cast me down headlong on a sudden?

9 Remember, I beseech thee, that thou hast made me as the clay, and thou wilt bring me into dust again.

10 Hast thou not milked me as milk, and curdled me like cheese?

11 Thou hast clothed me with skin and flesh: thou hast put me together with bones and sinews:

12 Thou hast granted me life and mercy, and thy visitation hath preserved my spirit.

13 Although thou conceal these things in thy heart, yet I know that thou rememberest all things.

14 If I have sinned, and thou hast spared me for an hour: why dost thou not suffer me to be clean from my iniquity?

15 And if I be wicked, woe unto me: and if just, I shall not lift up my head, being filled with affliction and misery.

16 And for pride thou wilt take me as a lioness, and returning, thou tormentest me wonderfully.

17 Thou renewest thy witnesses against me, and multiplieth thy wrath upon me, and pains war against me.

18 Why didst thou bring me forth out of the womb? O that I had been consumed, that eye might not see me!

19 I should have been as if I had not been, carried from the womb to the grave.

20 Shall not the fewness of my days be ended shortly? Suffer me, therefore, that I may lament my sorrow a little:

21 Before I go and return no more, to a land that is dark and covered with the mist of death:

22 A land of misery and darkness, where the shadow of death, and no order, but everlasting horror dwelleth

CHAP. XI.

Sophar reproveth Job for justifying himself, and inviteth him to repentance.

THEN Sophar, the Naamathite, answered, and said
2 Shall not he that speaketh much, hear also? or shall a man full of talk be justified?

3 Shall men hold their peace to thee only? and when thou hast mocked others, shall no man confute thee?

4 For thou hast said: My word is pure, and I am clean in thy sight.

5 And I wish that God would speak with thee, and would open his lips to thee,

6 That he might show thee the secrets of wisdom, and that his law is manifold, and thou mightest understand that he exacteth much less of thee, than thy iniquity deserveth.

7 Peradventure thou wilt comprehend the steps of God, and wilt find out the Almighty perfectly?

8 He is higher than heaven, and what wilt thou do? he is deeper than hell, and how wilt thou know?

9 The measure of him is longer than the earth, and broader than the sea.

10 If he shall overturn all things, or shall press them together, who shall contradict him?

11 For he knoweth the vanity of men, and when he seeth iniquity, doth he not consider it?

12 A vain man is lifted up into pride, and thinketh himself born free like a wild ass's colt.

13 But thou hast hardened thy heart, and hast spread thy hands to him.

14 If thou wilt put away from thee the iniquity that is in thy hand, and let not injustice remain in thy tabernacle:

15 Then mayst thou lift up thy face without spot, and thou shalt be steadfast, and shalt not fear.

16 Thou shalt also forget misery, and remember it only as waters that are passed away.

17 And brightness like that of the noon-day, shall arise to thee at evening: and when thou shalt think thyself consumed, thou shalt rise as the day-star.

notion, (H.) and my friends will triumph as if their arguments were well founded. The devil will also exult. C.

VER. 5. Days sometimes denote judgments. 1 Cor. iv. 3. Is God liable to change, like men, or does he stand in need of time to examine them, or fear lest they should escape? C.

VER. 8. Sudden, like a potter's vessel? Job was reduced to misery all at once. C.—He acknowledges that God may destroy him as his creature; but that character encourages him to hope for mercy, grace, and glory. W.

VER. 10. Milked. Heb. "poured me out as milk, and curdled me like cheese?" H.—See Wisd. vii. 1.

VER. 13. Rememberest. Sept. "canst do all things." Heb. "this is with thee." H.

VER. 15. Woe. Thou wilt not suffer me to pass unpunished. C.—Head. I will adore in silence. Chap. ix. 15, 31. Ven. Bede. C.

VER. 17. Witnesses, afflictions (M.); "wounds." Pagnin. T.

VER. 20. Lament. Heb. "take comfort," (H.) or breath. C.

VER. 21. Death, to the grave, or to hell, (C.) if my sins deserve it. H.

VER. 22. Horror. At death all distinction of ranks is at an end. T.—Heb. "where the light is as darkness." Prot. "To the land of eternal darkness, where there is no sound, nor life of mortals to see." Sept. H.

CHAP. XI. VER. 1. Naamathite. Sept. "the Minean," in Arabia Felix, or rather of the Meonim, not far from the Themanites. Judg. x. 11.

VER. 2. Much. The speeches of Job seemed tedious to him, because he was not of his opinion. M.

VER. 3. Men. Heb. "shall thy lies make men keep silence?" Sept. "Blessed be the short-lived son of a woman. Speak not un eh, for there is no one to give sentence against thee." H.

VER. 4. Sight. Job had just said the reverse: Chap. ix. 2. S. Chrys.

VER. 6. Law. Heb. Thussie, (H.) "the essence" of any thing. Hence it is explained, "law, strength, comfort," &c. We might translate, "and that the reality of thy crimes deserved double punishment," &c. The obligations of the natural, and also of the written law of Moses, with which Job was (C.) perhaps (H.) acquainted, (chap. xxii. 22,) are very numerous and difficult. C.—Sept. "for it is double of what has come against thee, and then thou wouldst know that thy sins are justly requited." Prot. "that they are double to that which is: Know, therefore, that God exacteth of thee less than thine iniquity deserveth." 1 Esd. ix. 13. H.

VER. 11. It? to inflict punishment. Sept. "he will not overlook." H.

VER. 12. Is. Heb. "is he heart? or wise," (C.) he who is born like a," &c. Shall he assert his independence, or pretend to be wise? H.—The Hebrews place wisdom in the heart, as we do courage. Chap. xii. 3; Prov. ii 2, &c. C.

VER. 13. But. Heb. "If thou direct thy heart, &c. Thou mayst lift up thy face" (ver. 15. H.) without fear. 2 Kings ii. 22. C.

VER. 15. Without. Sept. "as clean water, thou shalt put away corruption, and shalt not fear."

VER. 17. Brightness. Sept. "But thy prayer, like the day-star and life, shall arise to thee from the south, or as at noon-day." Heb. "Thy age (H.) shall appear clearer than the noon-day, and darkness like the morning." Prosperity shall succeed, (C.) when thou shalt think all lost. M.

18 And thou shalt have confidence, hope being set before thee, and being buried thou shalt sleep secure.

19 "Thou shalt rest, and there shall be none to make thee afraid: and many shall entreat thy face.

20 "But the eyes of the wicked shall decay, and the way to escape shall fail them, and their hope the abomination of the soul.

CHAP. XII.

Job's reply to Sophar. He extols God's power and wisdom.

THEN Job answered, and said:

2 Are you then men alone, and shall wisdom die with you?

3 "I also have a heart as well as you: for who is ignorant of these things which you know?

4 "He that is mocked by his friend as I, shall call upon God and he will hear him: for the simplicity of the just man is laughed to scorn.

5 The lamp despised in the thoughts of the rich, is ready for the time appointed.

6 "The tabernacles of robbers abound, and they provoke God boldly; whereas it is he that hath given all into their hands.

7 But ask now the beasts, and they shall teach thee: and the birds of the air, and they shall tell thee.

8 Speak to the earth, and it shall answer thee: and the fishes of the sea shall tell.

9 Who is ignorant that the hand of the Lord hath made all these things?

10 In whose hand is the soul of every living thing, and the spirit of all flesh of man.

11 "Doth not the ear discern words, and the palate of him that eateth, the taste?

12 In the ancient is wisdom, and in length of days prudence.

13 With him is wisdom and strength, he hath counsel and understanding.

14 "If he pull down, there is no man that can build up: if he shut up a man, there is none that can open.

15 If he withhold the waters, all things shall be dried up: and if he send them out, they shall overturn the earth.

* Lev. xxvi. 6.—b Lev. xxvi. 16.—c Infra, xx. 2.—d Prov. xiv. 2.

VER. 18. Secure, dying full of hope. Chal. Heb. "thou shalt dig," (for water, which was there a great treasure. Gen. xxi. 25, and xxvi. 15,) or to fasten down thy tent, (C.) "and rest secure." H.

VER. 20. Soul, because hope deferred causeth pain to the soul. Prov. xiii. 12. M.—Heb. "their hope shall be the sorrow, or the breathing out of the soul." C.—Prot. "the giving up of the ghost." Margin, "a puff of breath." Chap. xviii. 14. H.

CHAP. XII. VER. 2. You. Heb. "Truly you are the people, and wisdom will die with you!" This irony is very sharp. C.—"Are ye alone men? or shall?" &c. Sept., Syr.

VER. 4. Mocked. He retaliates on Sophar, (chap. xi. 3. H.) who had very seriously exhorted Job to call on God, as if he had been ignorant of this duty. C.

VER. 5. The lamp. Such is the just man, who under affliction is (H.) exposed to the ridicule of men who live at their ease.—For. Heb. "to fall." C.—Sept. "It was appointed for me to fall under others at the time fixed."

VER. 6. Abound. Heb. "are at peace." C.—The prosperity of the wicked is therefore no proof that they are pleasing to him. H.—All nature testifies that God exercises a sovereign dominion over his works. He may therefore cause the just to suffer, though they be guiltless. This is one of Job's grand maxims. C.

VER. 12. Ancient. He rather chides the youth of Sophar for offering to give him lessons.

VER. 17. To a. Heb. "to be despoiled" of their wisdom and riches. C.—Sept. "into captivity." H.

VER. 18. Looseth. Sept. "setteth kings upon the throne," &c.—Belt. This was usually very magnificent, and a military ornament. Job intimates that God deprives kings of their authority at pleasure. Heb. may also signify that he looseth the bond or prisoner of kings, and reduces themselves to slavery. C.

16 With him is strength and wisdom: he knoweth both the deceiver and him that is deceived.

17 He bringeth counsellors to a foolish end, and judges to insensibility.

18 He looseth the belt of kings, and girdeth their loins with a cord.

19 He leadeth away priests without glory, and overthroweth nobles.

20 He changeth the speech of the true speakers, and taketh away the doctrine of the aged.

21 He poureth contempt upon princes, and relieveth them that were oppressed.

22 He discovereth deep things out of darkness, and bringeth up to light the shadow of death.

23 He multiplieth nations, and destroyeth them, and restoreth them again after they were overthrown.

24 He changeth the heart of the princes of the people of the earth, and deceiveth them, so that they walk in vain where there is no way.

25 They shall grope as in the dark, and not in the light, and he shall make them stagger like men that are drunk.

CHAP. XIII.

Job persists in maintaining his innocence: and reproves his friends.

BEHOOLD my eye hath seen all these things, and my ear hath heard them, and I have understood them all.

2 According to your knowledge, I also know: neither am I inferior to you.

3 But yet I will speak to the Almighty, and I desire to reason with God:

4 Having first shown that you are forgers of lies, and maintainers of perverse opinions.

5 And I wish you would hold your peace, that you might be thought to be wise men.

6 Hear ye therefore my reproof, and attend to the judgment of my lips.

7 Hath God any need of your lie, that you should speak deceitfully for him?

8 Do you accept his person, and do you endeavour to judge for God?

9 Or shall it please him, from whom nothing can be

* Psal. xliii. 11, and xlviii. 7.—f Infra, xxxiv. 3.—g Isa. xxii. 22; Apoc. iii. 7.

VER. 19. Without. Heb. "despoiled." Sept. "captive."

VER. 20. Speakers. Permitting them to speak deceitfully, (C.) or causing their oracles to be contemned. H.—Heb. "he withdraws speech from men of confidence." C.—Namnim, (H.) ambassadors or prime ministers. Num. xii. 7.

VER. 21. Relieveth. Heb. "ungirdeth (disarms) the strong." C.—Sept. "but the lowly (humble) he has healed."

VER. 22. Of death. Tsolmuth (H.) may perhaps simply denote darkness. C.—God bringeth to light the most hidden things. H.

VER. 23. Multiplieth. Heb., Sept., and Syr. "deceiveth," (C.) suffering them to confide too much in their strength, so that they fall an easy prey. H.

VER. 24. Changeth. Heb. "taketh away the heart," or prudence "of princes." Hence they follow the most absurd counsels. Isa. xxix. 19. C.

CHAP. XIII. VER. 3. Reason. Heb. "to dispute with, or before God," concerning the matter which we have in hand. He appeals to God, as to the judge of all.

VER. 4. Having. Heb. "But ye are sewers of lies." C.—Sept. "unskilful surgeons, (who, instead of sewing up a wound, increase it,) and all of you doctors of evil;" vain empirics.

VER. 5. Men. Prov. xvii. 28. If you had been silent, you might still have had the reputation of wisdom. C.

VER. 6. Judgment. Heb. "pleading" before our common judge. H.

VER. 8. Accept. Heb. "will you not be seized with fear?" C.—Sept. "Are you sent to be judges?" &c., or, do you suppose that you please him by asserting that he punishes me for my sins? H.

VER. 9. Or. Heb. "Is it good that he should examine you, would you escape?" C. concealed? or shall he be deceived as a man, with your deceitful dealings?

10 He shall reprove you, because in secret you accept his person.

11 As soon as he shall move himself, he shall trouble you: and his dread shall fall upon you.

12 Your remembrance shall be compared to ashes, and your necks shall be brought to clay.

13 Hold your peace a little while, that I may speak whatsoever my mind shall suggest to me.

14 Why do I tear my flesh with my teeth, and carry my soul in my hands?

15 Although he should kill me, I will trust in him: but yet I will reprove my ways in his sight.

16 And he shall be my saviour: for no hypocrite shall come before his presence.

17 Hear ye my speech, and receive with your ears hidden truths.

18 If I shall be judged, I know that I shall be found just.

19 Who is he that will plead against me? let him come: why am I consumed, holding my peace?

20 Two things only do not to me, and then from thy face I shall not be hid.

21 Withdraw thy hand far from me, and let not thy dread terrify me.

22 Call me, and I will answer thee: or else I will speak, and do thou answer me.

23 How many are my iniquities and sins? make me know my crimes and offences.

24 Why hidest thou thy face, and thinkest me thy enemy?

25 Against a leaf, that is carried away with the wind, thou showest thy power, and thou pursuest a dry straw.

26 For thou writest bitter things against me, and wilt consume me for the sins of my youth.

^a Supra, viii. 9; Psal. cxliii. 4.

VER. 10. His. Heb. "persons." Because you see me afflicted, you infer that I am guilty; and think this mode of judging most honourable to God, whom you wish thus to please. H.—But he stands not in need of lies (C.); and something further is still to be proved. H.

VER. 12. Necks. Sept. "body." Heb. also, (H.) "heights," (C.) or "fortifications." Grotius.

VER. 13. Whatsoever. Heb. "come what will." Sept. "that my anger may cease." H.

VER. 14. Why, you seem to ask, do I thus eagerly desire to die, (H.) as if I were tearing my own flesh, and exposing my soul to danger, (W.) like a madman? T.—Is it not better for me to address myself to God, that he would hasten my departure, than thus to tear my flesh with my teeth? C.

VER. 15. In him. Heb. lu is read, though la, "not," is written in the Heb. text. H.—Prot., &c., follow the sense of the Vulg., and Junius comes to the same, as he reads la with an interrogation: "Should I not hope in him?"—Sept. "If the powerful (or Lord) lay [not] hands on me, since it is commenced? No: but I shall speak and arraign [you] before him," &c. The words not and you are thus placed in Grabe's edition. H.—Ways. I do not pretend that I am quite blameless. C.—Prot. "I will maintain (marg. prove, or argue) mine own ways before him." H.—I will hope, like Abraham, even against hope, to show that I am not actuated by despair: yet I will continue to declare my innocence. VER. 16. T.

VER. 17. Truths. Lit. "riddles" to you. Heb. āēuth, (H.) means "instruction," &c. C.

VER. 19. Peace. It will be some consolation to explain my reasons. If I am fairly overcome, I shall die with more content. C.

VER. 20. Only. He makes the same petition to God as chap. ix. 34, and xxxii. 7. H.

VER. 23. Offences, which might be hidden to Job himself. W.—He speaks to God with the freedom which he had requested, desiring to know if he were really guilty, (C.) that he might give glory to him, (H.) by an humble confession.

VER. 26. Bitter. The judge wrote down the sentence; which he read, or gave to his officer. C.—Youth, for which I thought I had satisfied. H.

27 Thou hast put my feet in the stocks, and hast observed all my paths, and hast considered the steps of my feet:

28 Who am to be consumed as rottenness, and as a garment that is moth-eaten.

CHAP. XIV.

Job declares the shortness of man's days: and professes his belief of a resurrection.

MAN born of a woman, living for a short time, is filled with many miseries.

2 "Who cometh forth like a flower, and is destroyed, and fleeth as a shadow, and never continueth in the same state.

3 And dost thou think it meet to open thy eyes upon such an one, and to bring him into judgment with thee?

4 "Who can make him clean that is conceived of unclean seed? is it not thou who only art?

5 The days of man are short, and the number of his months is with thee: thou hast appointed his bounds which cannot be passed.

6 Depart a little from him, that he may rest, until his wished-for day come, as that of the hireling.

7 A tree hath hope: if it be cut, it groweth green again, and the boughs thereof sprout.

8 If its root be old in the earth, and its stock be dead in the dust:

9 At the scent of water it shall spring; and bring forth leaves, as when it was first planted.

10 But man when he shall be dead, and stripped and consumed, I pray you where is he?

11 As if the waters should depart out of the sea, and an emptied river should be dried up:

12 So man, when he is fallen asleep, shall not rise again: till the heavens be broken, he shall not awake, nor rise up out of his sleep.

^b Psal. l. 4.

VER. 27. Stocks, in which the person's legs were sometimes stretched to the sixth hole (C.); at other times the neck was confined. M.—Some translate the Heb. "in the mud," which agrees with the other part of the verse.—Steps. 1. 2b. and Sept. "roots," or ancles, which retained the prints made by the stocks.

CHAP. XIV. VER. 1. Man. He exposes to God the common miseries of mankind. C.

VER. 3. With thee. He seems beneath God's attention (Arist. Met. viii. 9. Cicero, Nat. ii.): but as the knowledge and other attributes of the Deity are infinite, he must necessarily attend to the whole creation. The moral actions of men being also infinite in their object, tending to God, or contradicting his ordinances, they are not beneath the consideration of an infinite Being. C.

VER. 4. Seed, is not expressed in Heb. "unclean." It may refer to Adam T.—Only art. Essence itself. Carthus.—"The justification of the sinner is a greater miracle than the creation of the world," S. Aug. ibid.—The birth of Jesus Christ was free from stain (Luke i. 35); as was also the conception of his virgin Mother, by the power of God (M.); and his grace, as it is piously believed. H.—He alone can purify man. C.—Heb. "who can produce what is clean out of the unclean? Not one." Or Chal. "Is there not one?" Sept. "For who shall be pure from corruption? Not so much as one: (5) though his life be only of one day upon earth." The more ancient Fathers have generally quoted the text in this manner, to prove original sin (H. S. Cyp., Tert., S. Leo Mag. in Nat. i., &c. T.); and Bellarmine almost does the same, (Grat. iv. 4), observing that the Sept have taken in three words from the following verse: "though his days are few." Yet there are some words which are not in Heb., though the doctrine here maintained be indubitable. Amama.—Job was fully convinced of it, and adduced it as a plea for mercy. It also tends to keep us in the most profound humility and watchfulness, to resist the motions of concupiscence. C.

VER. 10. Is he? Will he naturally come to life again?

VER. 11. Sea. There would be no supply of rain for the fountains. Eccles. i. 7. All would continue dry: so when the blood is once gone, life is at an end. Sec 2 Kings xiv. 14. C.—The water cannot go back. M.

VER. 12. Till. At that time the general resurrection will take place. V. Scultet. —

13 Who will grant me this, that thou mayst protect me in hell, and hide me till thy wrath pass, and appoint me a time when thou wilt remember me?

14 Shall man that is dead, thinkest thou, live again? a. the days, in which I am now in warfare, I expect until my change come.

15 Thou shalt call me, and I will answer thee: to the work of thy hands thou shalt reach out thy right hand.

16 *Thou indeed hast numbered my steps, but spare my sins.

17 Thou hast sealed up my offences as it were in a bag, but hast cured my iniquity.

18 A mountain falling cometh to nought, and a rock is removed out of its place.

19 Waters wear away the stones, and with inundation the ground by little and little is washed away: so in like manner thou shalt destroy man.

20 Thou hast strengthened him for a little while, that he may pass away for ever: thou shalt change his face, and shalt send him away.

21 Whether his children come to honour or dishonour, he shall not understand.

22 But yet his flesh, while he shall live, shall have pain, and his soul shall mourn over him.

CHAP. XV.

Eliphaz returns to the charge against Job, and describes the wretched state of the wicked.

AND Eliphaz, the Themanite, answered, and said:

2 Will a wise man answer as if he were speaking in the wind, and fill his stomach with burning heat?

3 Thou reprovest him by words, who is not equal to thee, and thou speakest that which is not good for thee.

4 As much as is in thee, thou hast made void fear, and hast taken away prayers from before God.

5 For thy iniquity hath taught thy mouth, and thou imitatest the tongue of blasphemers.

6 Thy own mouth shall condemn thee, and not I: and thy own lips shall answer thee.

* Infra, xxxi. 4, and xxxiv. 21; Prov. v. 21.

VER. 13. That thou mayst protect me in hell. That is, in the state of the dead; and in the place where the souls are kept waiting for their Redeemer (Ch.); and in the grave, where the body awaits the resurrection. H.—These words are repeated in the office for the dead, in the name of the souls in purgatory. Carthus. a. 34.—They are adduced in proof of limbo. But ssal denotes also “the grave.” Amama.—What then? The soul is not confined there. It must consequently be explained of the lower receptacle for souls, as well as of the grave. H.

VER. 14. Dead. Shall one in a condition nearly as bad, like myself, be restored to health? Yes, I entertain this hope. C.—Thinkest thou, is not in Heb. or Sept. The latter speaks (H.) clearly of the resurrection. C.

VER. 17. Cured. Heb. “sewed up.” This method and sealing was in use to keep things of value, before locks were invented. C.

VER. 19. Man. Heb. and Sept. “the hope of man.” H.—He must not expect to be more privileged than all other things, which time consumes. C.—Job again deplores human misery. M.

VER. 21. Or dishonour. He cannot naturally be informed. M.—God may, however, reveal to souls departed, what may increase their accidental happiness or misery. H.—Hence the Church prays to the saints. Job is speaking chiefly of the body in the grave, and of what appears exteriorly. During life man cannot foresee the state of his children; nor in the other world, would their condition render him happy or otherwise. C. Mercer.—Sept. “If his sons be many, . . . or a few, he knows not.” H.

CHAP. XV. VER. 2. Heat. Heb. “east wind,” (M.) or give vent to passion. H.—Eliphaz now rebukes Job without any reserve. C.—He was perhaps displeased at the comparison used by the latter. Chap. xiii. 4.

VER. 3. Equal. God, who is far above thee. Heb. “Will he (the wise) argue with useless words, or with speeches which are nothing to the purpose?” C.

VER. 4. God. Another, after thy example, will assert his own innocence under affliction, and will not fear, nor have recourse to God by humble prayer. Behold the dangerous consequences of thy principle. C.

7 Art thou the first man that was born, or wast thou made before the hills?

8 Hast thou heard God's counsel, and shall his wisdom be inferior to thee?

9 What knowest thou that we are ignorant of? what dost thou understand that we know not?

10 *There are with us also aged and ancient men, much elder than thy fathers.

11 Is it a great matter that God should comfort thee? but thy wicked words hinder this.

12 Why doth thy heart elevate thee? and why dost thou stare with thy eyes, as if they were thinking great things?

13 Why doth thy spirit swell against God, to utter such words out of thy mouth?

14 What is man that he should be without spot, and he that is born of a woman that he should appear just?

15 *Behold among his saints none is unchangeable, and the heavens are not pure in his sight.

16 How much more is man abominable, and unprofitable, who drinketh iniquity like water?

17 I will show thee, hear me: and I will tell thee what I have seen.

18 Wise men confess and hide not their fathers.

19 To whom alone the earth was given, and no stranger hath passed among them.

20 The wicked man is proud all his days, and the number of the years of his tyranny is uncertain.

21 The sound of dread is always in his ears: and when there is peace, he always suspecteth treason.

22 He believeth not that he may return from darkness to light, looking round about for the sword on every side.

23 When he moveth himself to seek bread, he knoweth that the day of darkness is ready at his hand.

24 Tribulation shall terrify him, and distress shall surround him, as a king that is prepared for the battle.

25 For he hath stretched out his hand against God and hath strengthened himself against the Almighty.

b Ecclesi. xviii. 8.—c Supra, iv. 18.

VER. 5. Blasphemers. Heb. “of the crafty,” which is sometimes taken in a good sense. Sept. “thou hast not distinguished the speeches of the princes.” Thou hast not shown respect to our admonitions, (C.) or understood our meaning. H.

VER. 7. First. Is thy experience so great, (M.) or art thou the most excellent of men? To hear thee we are but novices. Chap. xiii. 5. C.

VER. 8. Wis. Heb. “dost thou restrain wisdom to thyself?” Sept. “or has wisdom come to thee?” H.

VER. 10. Fathers. Heb. and Sept. “father.” H.—Eliphaz always speaks first, and hints that he was as old, perhaps older, than Job; who had rather found fault with the youth of Sophar. Chap. xii. 12. He also boasts that they, or their country, furnished masters of greater wisdom and experience than even Job's father. C.

VER. 11. Thee. This would not be difficult, (T.) if thy presumption did not prove an obstacle. Thou makest small account of those comforts, or of our advice, trusting in thy own justice. C.—Sept. “Thou hast been chastised little, considering thy sins. Thou hast spoken with excessive insolence.”

VER. 12. Why. Sept. “What has thy heart dared, or what have thine eyes brought thee?” Heb. “what do thy eyes wink at?” (H.) through pride and disdain. Psal. xxxiv. 19; Prov. vi. 13. C.

VER. 15. Unchangeable, of his own nature, and during this life. C.—Heb. and Sept. “is not trusted by him,” till they have been tried.

VER. 18. Wise. Prot. “which wise men have told from their fathers, and have not hid it.” Chap. viii. 8. The authority of tradition was then very great; and why should it now be despised? H.

VER. 20. Proud; uncertain. Heb. “in pain.” H.—Sept. “numbered,” or few. Gen. xxxiv. 30. These are the maxims which Eliphaz had received in a vision, or from the ancients, ver. 17. Juv. x. 113; Ib. xiii.; Hor. iii. Ode i.—These miseries are incident to the wicked, but are improperly addressed to Job. W

26 He hath run against him with his neck raised up, and is armed with a fat neck.

27 Fatness hath covered his face, and the fat hangeth down on his sides.

28 He hath dwelt in desolate cities, and in desert houses that are reduced into heaps.

29 He shall not be enriched, neither shall his substance continue, neither shall he push his root in the earth.

30 He shall not depart out of darkness: the flame shall dry up his branches, and he shall be taken away by the breath of his own mouth.

31 He shall not believe, being vainly deceived by error, that he may be redeemed with any price.

32 Before his days be full, he shall perish: and his hands shall wither away.

33 He shall be blasted as a vine when its grapes are in the first flower, and as an olive tree that casteth its flower.

34 For the congregation of the hypocrite is barren, and fire shall devour their tabernacles, who love to take bribes.

35 *He hath conceived sorrow, and hath brought forth iniquity, and his womb prepareth deceits.

CHAP. XVI.

Job expostulates with his friends: and appeals to the judgment of God.

THEN Job answered, and said:

2 I have often heard such things as these: you are all troublesome comforters.

3 Shall windy words have no end? or is it any trouble to thee to speak?

4 I also could speak, like you: and would God your soul were for my soul.

5 I would comfort you also with words, and would wag my head over you.

6 I would strengthen you with my mouth, and would move my lips, as sparing you.

* Psal. vii. 15; Isa. lix. 4.

VER. 26. And is. Heb. "even upon the thick bosses of his buckler." H.—God thus seizes his antagonist, who, like Pharaoh, swells with pride. C. Deut. xxxii. 15.

VER. 28. Heaps, by his ambition and fury, (C.) and exactions, (Cajet. M.) till the king chooses to rebuild the cities. Vatab.

VER. 31. That he. Heb. and Sept. "for vanity shall be his reward." H.—If he would repent, he might still be safe. M.

VER. 32. His branch; strength and prosperity. C.—Sept. "his branch shall not grow thick." H.

VER. 33. First. Heb. "unripe." H.—He shall derive no aid or comfort from his young family.

VER. 34. Congregation, or family.—Bribes. Lit. "presents," which (H.) frequently were not given freely, but extorted as a real tribute. C.—Sept. "for the death of the wicked is a martyrdom," or proof of his impiety. "But fire shall consume the houses of the present (or bribe) receivers."

VER. 35. Sorrow. Heb. "mischief." H. See Psal. vii. 15; Isa. xlix. 4.—The tree is known by its fruit. Eliphaz sufficiently insinuates that he is speaking of Job. C.—His, or "its," the congregation's womb. Ver. 34. Prot. "their belly." H.

CHAP. XVI. VER. 2. Comforters. "Job's friends or comforters," are become proverbial, to denote people who do the contrary to what they seem to promise. H.—Never did men sustain worse the character of comforters. They all magnify their knowledge and piety, and make the most absurd application of their principles to Job's condition. C.

VER. 3. Windy, inconclusive arguments. They all entertain a mean opinion of their adversaries, as they did not agree in the application of the propositions. Hence though they might be true, they were nothing to their present purpose. Chap. xv. 3. H.—Trouble. You can speak without any pain: but the case is far different with me. M.—Heb. "what emboldeneth thee to answer?" H.—Who asks thee for advice? C.

VER. 4. My soul. If you had experienced my state of misery, (H.) surely you had not have behaved thus to you. C.

7 But what shall I do? If I speak, my pain will not rest: and if I hold my peace, it will not depart from me.

8 But now my sorrow hath oppressed me, and all my limbs are brought to nothing.

9 My wrinkles bear witness against me, and a false speaker riseth up against my face, contradicting me.

10 He hath gathered together his fury against me, and threatening me, he hath gnashed with his teeth upon me: my enemy hath beheld me with terrible eyes.

11 They have opened their mouths upon me, and reproaching me, they have struck me on the cheek; they are filled with my pains.

12 God hath shut me up with the unjust man, and hath delivered me into the hands of the wicked.

13 I that was formerly so wealthy, am all on a sudden broken to pieces: he hath taken me by my neck, he hath broken me, and hath set me up to be his mark.

14 He hath compassed me round about with his lances, he hath wounded my loins, he hath not spared, and hath poured out my bowels on the earth.

15 He hath torn me with wound upon wound, he hath rushed in upon me like a giant.

16 I have sewed sackcloth upon my skin, and have covered my flesh with ashes.

17 My face is swoln with weeping, and my eye-lids are dim.

18 These things have I suffered without the iniquity of my hand, when I offered pure prayers to God.

19 O earth, cover not thou my blood, neither let my cry find a hiding-place in thee.

20 For behold my witness is in heaven, and he that knoweth my conscience is on high.

21 My friends are full of words: my eye poureth out tears to God.

22 And O that a man might so be judged with God, as the son of man is judged with his companion!

23 For behold short years pass away, and I am walking in a path by which I shall not return.

VER. 5. Wag, or shake my head out of pity. Chap. xlii. 11; Nah. iii. 7. The same sign often indicates astonishment, or contempt. Psa. xxi. 8; Matt. xxvii. 39. C.

VER. 7. But. Heb. "If I speak," &c.

VER. 9. Against me, in your opinion, as if I were guilty of lies. Heb. "my leanness bears witness, my falsehood has risen up against me, and answered me to my face," which may be understood in the same sense as the argument of Eliphaz. He is designated by the false speaker (C.); unless we explain it of the wrinkles, which falsely indicated that Job was advanced in years, or of the malady; whence it was gathered that he must be a criminal. M.—Prot. "my leanness riseth up." H.

VER. 11. Cheek. His friends seemed so enraged, as to be disposed to do so. C.—These expressions were strikingly verified in Christ. M.

VER. 14. Lances. Heb. "archers." Sept. "they have encompassed me, throwing lances into my veins, or loins, not sparing," &c. H.—Bowels. Heb. and Sept. "gall," being afflicted with a dysentery. C.—S. Thomas explains it of his children, who were slain. H.

VER. 16. Flesh. Heb. "horn." Sept. "strength." H.—I have lost all my beauty and splendour, and have put on the garments of penance. C.

VER. 17. Dim. Heb. and Sept. "covered with the shadow of death," (H.) greatly impaired. C.

VER. 18. Hand, which has not been defiled with any injustice. M.—When. Heb. "and my prayer was pure." I never neglected this sacred duty, (chap. i. 5,) as my friends accuse me. Chap. xv. 4. H.

VER. 19. In thee. Let the cry of my blood, which issues from my wounds, and the injury which my reputation has suffered, come before the throne of God. Calumny is a species of murder. See Gen. iv. 10. C.

VER. 22. Judged. Heb. "might plead." H.—Earthly judges may be compelled to pronounce sentence publicly. Job is afraid lest the justice of his cause should remain undecided, till death overtook him, ver. 23. Pineda.

CHAP. XVII. VER. 1. Spirit. Heb. "breath is corrupt," (H.) or spent.

CHAP. XVII.

Job's hope in God: he expects rest in death.

MY spirit shall be wasted, my days shall be shortened, and only the grave remaineth for me.

2 I have not sinned, and my eye abideth in bitterness.

3 Deliver me, O Lord, and set me beside thee, and let any man's hand fight against me.

4 Thou hast set their heart far from understanding, therefore they shall not be exalted.

5 He promiseth a prey to his companions, and the eyes of his children shall fail.

6 He hath made me, as it were, a by-word of the people, and I am an example before them.

7 My eye is dim through indignation, and my limbs are brought, as it were, to nothing.

8 The just shall be astonished at this, and the innocent shall be raised up against the hypocrite.

9 And the just man shall hold on his way, and he that hath clean hands shall be stronger and stronger.

10 Wherefore, be ye all converted, and come, and I shall not find among you any wise man.

11 My days have passed away, my thoughts are dissipated, tormenting my heart.

12 They have turned night into day, and after darkness I hope for light again.

13 If I wait, hell is my house, and I have made my bed in darkness.

14 I have said to rottenness: Thou art my father; to worms, my mother and my sister.

15 Where is now then my expectation, and who considereth my patience?

16 All that I have shall go down into the deepest pit: thinkest thou that there, at least, I shall have rest?

CHAP. XVIII.

Baldad again reproves Job: and describes the miseries of the wicked.

THEN Baldad, the Subite, answered, and said:

2 How long will ye throw out words? understand first, and so let us speak.

I cannot breathe without the greatest difficulty. C.—Only. Sept. "But I want the grave, and do not obtain it." H.

VER. 2. Not sinned. That is, I am not guilty of such sins as they charge me with. Ch.—Heb. "the wicked were not with me" in friendship at any time. Prot. "Are there not mockers with me?" H.—Job was doubly afflicted, with corporal pain and calumny: yet hopeth in God. W.

VER. 3. Fight. I am secure under thy protection. Heb. "who will strike hands with me?" or stand bondsman for my debt? Prov. vi. 1.

VER. 5. He. My friend. C.—Heb. "speaketh flattery," (H.) or promiseth to caress me, while he neglects his own children. But the sense of the Vulg. and Chal. seems preferable. My friends speak as if they could do any thing, and as if no trial would stagger their resolution. But they durst not be in my situation for a short time. C.

VER. 6. Example. Prot. "a tabret." H.—The people sing over my misfortunes. Lam. iii. 14. I am represented as a victim of God's just indignation. C.—Sept. "a laughter," or laughing-stock. H.

VER. 7. Indignation of God, or of myself. M.—Nothing. Heb. "as a shadow." C.

VER. 8. Hypocrite. If you condemn me, I shall comfort myself with the approbation of the righteous, and still maintain my station. H.—Men of sense and virtue will tremble at the judgments of God, and will never join the crowd of scoffers. C.

VER. 12. Day. Sleep flies from me. M.—All is in confusion.—After. Heb. and Sept. "light is near in the face of darkness." H.—I still hope for relief.

VER. 13. Hell. Seol. The region of the dead. Ch.—Prot. "grave." H.—But this text proves that there was a place of rest called hell. W.—He speaks here chiefly of the body. C.

VER. 14. Sister. I am nearly related to such things, and ready to drop into the grave, as my flesh is already devoured by worms. M.

VER. 15. Who. Heb. "who shall see my hope?" I wish all might witness it. H.—But I expect no redress on this side of the grave. C.

3 Why are we reputed as beasts, and counted vile before you?

4 Thou that destroyest thy soul in thy fury, shall the earth be forsaken for thee, and shall rocks be removed out of their place?

5 Shall not the light of the wicked be extinguished, and the flame of his fire not shine?

6 The light shall be dark in his tabernacle, and the lamp that is over him shall be put out.

7 The step of his strength shall be straitened, and his own counsel shall cast him down headlong.

8 For he hath thrust his feet into a net, and walketh in its meshes.

9 The sole of his foot shall be held in a snare, and thirst shall burn against him.

10 A gin is hidden for him in the earth, and his trap upon the path.

11 Fears shall terrify him on every side, and shall entangle his feet.

12 Let his strength be wasted with famine, and let hunger invade his ribs.

13 Let it devour the beauty of his skin, let the first-born, death, consume his arms.

14 Let his confidence be rooted out of his tabernacle, and let destruction tread upon him like a king.

15 Let the companions of him that is not, dwell in his tabernacle, let brimstone be sprinkled in his tent.

16 Let his roots be dried up beneath, and his harvest destroyed above.

17 "Let the memory of him perish from the earth, and let not his name be renowned in the streets.

18 He shall drive him out of light into darkness, and shall remove him out of the world.

19 His seed shall not subsist, nor his offspring among his people, nor any remnants in his country.

20 They that come after him shall be astonished at his day, and horror shall fall upon them that went before.

* Prov. ii. 22.

VER. 16. Deepest pit. Literally hell. Ch.—Heb. "We shall go down to the bars of the pit, when we shall rest together in the dust." My hopes may be frustrated by death (H.); or you, my friends, must also go to the house of eternity. C.

CHAP. XVIII. VER. 2. Understand ye. Teach this man to comprehend what we say. He deigns not to address Job in person; but repeats most of his former remarks respecting the wicked, as if they were unquestionably applicable to Job. Chap. viii. C.—Heb. "mark ye." Sept. "do thou attend." H.

VER. 3. Reputed. Sept. "silent as four-footed animals before thee?" (H.) without discipline or understanding. Chap. xvii. 4. M.

VER. 4. Thou. Heb. "He teareth his soul in his fury!" H.—This is spoken with an air of contempt, as if Job were mad. Chap. xiii. 14. C.—Place. We should expect to see such effects, as soon as we would allow that God punishes thee, without thy being guilty. Hitherto he has treated the wicked only with such rigour. Still thou wouldst assert that thou art a singular example of an innocent man under oppression! C.

VER. 6. Light; prosperity, (M.) offspring, &c. C.

VER. 8. Meshes, (maculis,) or holes of the net. M.—The more he strives to get out, the more he gets entangled. C.

VER. 9. Thirst: the greedy hunter. C.—Heb. "the robber." H.

VER. 13. First-born denotes the best, or the worst. H.—Death. Heb. "of death," the devil, or a premature death, and most cruel enemy. C.—Sept. "But death devours his most beautiful things." H.

VER. 14. Confidence. Sept. "health."—Let. Prot. "and it shall bring him to the king of terrors" (H.); or, "thou (O God) shalt," &c. Sept. "let him be in the greatest (C.) want, on account of a royal accusation," (H.) of high treason. C.

VER. 16. Harvest. Heb. also, "branch" (C.); his family, (M.) and all on which he trusted. C.—All must be destroyed, root and branch.

VER. 20. Them. Lit. "the first," who were witnesses of his misery. H

21 These then are the tabernacles of the wicked, and this the place of him that knoweth not God.

CHAP. XIX.

Job complains of the cruelty of his friends: he describes his own sufferings: and his belief of a future resurrection.

THEN Job answered, and said:

2 How long do you afflict my soul, and break me in pieces with words?

3 Behold, these ten times you confound me, and are not ashamed to oppress me.

4 For if I have been ignorant, my ignorance shall be with me.

5 But you set yourselves up against me, and reprove me with my reproaches.

6 At least now understand, that God hath not afflicted me with an equal judgment, and compassed me with his scourges.

7 Behold I shall cry, suffering violence, and no one will hear: I shall cry aloud, and there is none to judge.

8 He hath hedged in my path round about, and I cannot pass, and in my way he hath set darkness.

9 He hath stript me of my glory, and hath taken the crown from my head.

10 He hath destroyed me on every side, and I am lost; and he hath taken away my hope, as from a tree that is plucked up.

11 His wrath is kindled against me, and he hath counted me as his enemy.

12 His troops have come together, and have made themselves a way by me, and have besieged my tabernacle round about.

13 He hath put my brethren far from me, and my acquaintance, like strangers, have departed from me.

CHAP. XIX. VER. 3. Ten times; very often.—Oppress me. Heb. word occurs no where else, and is variously translated. It may signify, “to dig a pit for me.” Chap. vi. 27; Psal. vi. 6. Job repeats nearly what he had said before, only with greater vehemence. He admits that Providence treats him in an unusual manner. Yet he still retains an assured hope, and arraigns his adversaries before the Divine tribunal. C.

VER. 4. With me. I alone am answerable for it. But I am no wiser for your remarks. If I have sinned, have I not been sufficiently punished? C.—Sept. “Yea, truly, I was under a mistake; and the mistake still remains with me, to have spoken a word which was not becoming. But my speeches are erroneous and importunate.” He talks thus ironically. H.

VER. 6. With an equal judgment. S. Gregory explains these words thus: Job being a just man, and truly considering his own life, thought that his affliction was greater than his sins deserved; and in that respect, that the punishment was not equal, yet it was just, as coming from God, who gives a crown of justice to those who suffer for righteousness’ sake, and proves the just with tribulations, as gold is tried by fire. Ch.—He knew that God would surely give a just reward. 2 Tim. iv. S. Greg. xiv. 16. W.—The friends of Job had too contracted a notion of Providence, supposing that the virtuous should not be afflicted. Job allowed that the ordinary rules were not here observed. Heb. “the Lord hath perverted, or overthrown me.” C.

VER. 12. Troops (latrones): “free-booters,” (H.) or “soldiers.” Sanctius.—Those nations made a practice of plundering one another’s territories, without any declaration of war. Sept. “his temptations (C. or militia: πειραῖς) came rushing together upon me; lying down (H.) in ambush, (C.) they surrounded my paths.” H.

VER. 17. Entreated. Prot. add, “for the children’s sake of mine own body.” Sept. “I invited with flattering speeches the sons of my concubines. (18) But they cast me from them for ever. When I arise, they speak against me.” H.—Interpreters generally suppose that Job speaks of the children by his inferior wives: though he might have some at home by the first wife, who were not old enough to be invited to the feast with those who were destroyed. C.

VER. 20. Teeth. I am like a skeleton, so strangely emaciated, and my flesh corrupted: even my bones are not entire. H.—Heb. “I have escaped with the skin of my teeth.” Only my gums are left. My bones cut the skin. Sym. “I tore my skin with my teeth.”

VER. 24. In a. Heb. “I cad, in the rock for ever.” Prot. Sept. have, “for ever,” after book, (ver. 23.) and subjoins, “with a writing instrument of iron and (or) lead, or he engraven on the rocks for a memorial.” Grabe insinuates that 14 My kinsmen have forsaken me, and they that knew me have forgotten me.

15 They that dwell in my house, and my maid servants, have counted me as a stranger, and I have been like an alien in their eyes.

16 I called my servant, and he gave me no answer, I entreated him with my own mouth.

17 My wife hath abhorred my breath, and I entreated the children of my womb.

18 Even fools despised me, and when I was gone from them, they spoke against me.

19 They that were some time my counsellors, have abhorred me: and he whom I loved most, is turned against me.

20 The flesh being consumed, my bone hath cleaved to my skin, and nothing but lips are left about my teeth.

21 Have pity on me, have pity on me, at least you, my friends, because the hand of the Lord hath touched me.

22 Why do you persecute me as God, and glut yourselves with my flesh?

23 Who will grant me that my words may be written? who will grant me that they may be marked down in a book:

24 With an iron pen, and in a plate of lead, or else be graven with an instrument in flint-stone?

25 For I know that my Redeemer liveth, and in the last day I shall rise out of the earth.

26 And I shall be clothed again with my skin, and in my flesh I shall see my God.

27 Whom I myself shall see, and my eyes shall behold, and not another: this, my hope, is laid up in my bosom.

before there was only, “and on lead, or he engraven on the rocks.” H.—It was long very usual to make use of lead. Pineda.—What he desired to have written in such durable characters, (H.) was the following sentence, in proof of his unshaken confidence in God, and as a refutation of his friends, who accused him of despair and blasphemy, (C.) as also the whole history of his conflict. His desire has been granted. T.

VER. 25. Redeemer may be understood of the Deity, without confining it to the second Person (Isa. xli. 14, and xlix. 7. Piscator); though it may have a more peculiar reference to Christ (Junius. H.); in whom he believed, as the Redeemer of all mankind. C.—Earth. Yea, ere long I shall be restored to health, (S. Chrys. Grot.) as an earnest and figure of the resurrection. Nothing is more common, in Scripture, than for the same prophecy to have a double accomplishment; one soon after it is made public, and another more sublime and remote. Job seemed to have no expectation of surviving his present misery, (ver. 7, and chap. vii. 7, and xxiv. 15,) unless God now revealed it to him, as a figure of his future resurrection, founded on the hope of our Saviour’s, which he expresses in much clearer terms. Heb. “I know that my Redeemer is living, and that he will raise himself one day upon the earth,” (C.) like a conqueror, (H.) or wrestler, having overthrown his antagonist (Amama): or, “he will stand the last upon the earth, or dust,” (Piscator,) ascending his throne, to judge all. Deodat.

VER. 26. And I. Sept. “But he will raise up my body or skin, which has sustained these things. This now has been accomplished for me by the Lord; (27) which I know within myself, which my eyes have seen, and not another. For all things are accomplished in my bosom.” I am as fully convinced of this glorious event, (H.) as if it were past. C.—Heb. “and though, after my skin, worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God.” Prot. or, in the margin, “After I shall awake, though this body be destroyed, yet out of,” &c.—God. Sixtus V., and some other editions, add “Saviour.” C.—Job would see the Messiah by the eyes of his posterity. S. Aug. or Faustus, ser. 234, t. v. App. Sanctius.—He hoped also to see God face to face in glory, (C.) though not by means of his corporeal eyes, (H.) and to be restored to favour, so that God would no longer turn his back on him. Chap. xlii. 5.

VER. 27. Myself. Heb. “for myself,” and for my comfort; not like the reprobate, who shall see their judge to their eternal confusion. Job insists so much on this point, that he shows that he is not speaking merely of the Divine favour being restored to him, in the re-establishment of his health and affairs, but that he raises his mind to something more solid and desirable, of which the former was only a faint representation. C.—“No one since Christ has spoken so plainly of the resurrection, as this man did before the coming of the Messiah.”

28 Why then do you say now : Let us persecute him, and let us find occasion of word against him ?

29 Flee ther. from the face of the sword, for the sword is the revenger of iniquities : and know ye that there is a judgment.

CHAP. XX.

Sophar declares the shortness of the prosperity of the wicked : and their sudden downfall.

THEN Sophar, the Naamathite, answered, and said :

2 Therefore various thoughts succeed one another in me, and my mind is hurried away to different things.

3 The doctrine with which thou reprovest me, I will hear, and the spirit of my understanding shall answer for me.

4 This I know from the beginning, since man was placed upon the earth,

5 That the praise of the wicked is short, and the joy of the hypocrite but for a moment.

6 If his pride mount up even to heaven, and his head touch the clouds :

7 In the end he shall be destroyed, like a dunghill ; and they that had seen him, shall say : Where is he ?

8 As a dream that fleeth away, he shall not be found ; he shall pass as a vision of the night :

9 The eyes that had seen him, shall see him no more, neither shall his place any more behold him.

10 His children shall be oppressed with want, and his hands shall render to him his sorrow.

11 His bones shall be filled with the vices of his youth, and they shall sleep with him in the dust.

12 For when evil shall be sweet in his mouth, he will hide it under his tongue.

13 He will spare it, and not leave it, and will hide it in his throat.

14 His bread in his belly shall be turned into the gall of asps within him.

15 The riches which he hath swallowed, he shall vomit up, and God shall draw them out of his belly.

S. Jer. ad Pam.—This. Heb. “though my reins be consumed within me” (Prot. H.); or, “my reins (desires and tender affections) are completed in my bosom.” C.

VER. 28. Let us. Sept. “Why do we contend against him ? and the root of the word (reason) we shall find in him.” He provokes us to speak thus. H.—Heb. reads, “in me.” But the Chal., &c., “have him,” as the sequel requires ; unless Job speak this in his own person. I am ready to answer you ; or, have you really discovered in me any grounds for your virulent attack ? C.

VER. 29. Know. Sept. “And then they shall know that their power is no where ;” or, “where is their substance ?” Grabe. H.—Job menaces his friends with God’s judgments, as they had done him. C.

CHAP. XX. VER. 2. Therefore. From this concession which thou hast just made. M.—Various. Heb. “Hence do my thoughts cause me to answer, and for this I hasten.” Sept. “I did not thus suspect that thou wouldst contradict these things,” &c. H.

VER. 4. I know. Heb. and Sept. “dost thou not know ?”

VER. 6. Pride. Sept. “presents.” H.—Riches may be meant by pride. C.

VER. 9. Behold him, as if it were susceptible of resentment, and entered into the views of God. Chap. vii. 10 ; Psal. xxvi. 35. C.

VER. 10. Be. Heb. “seek to please the poor, and his hands shall restore their goods,” which the wicked had gotten by oppression. H.

VER. 11. Vices of, is not in Heb., but must be understood. H.—Youth. Some translate, “hidden.”—Youth may also denote the sin in which we are born, which is the source of all our maladies, and is always dragging us towards the grave. C.

VER. 12. Evil of any kind, and particularly (H.) injustice, which at first seems sweet, but will prove in the end a mortal poison. C.—The unjust will be forced to restore his ill-gotten goods, or suffer eternally for the neglect, ver. 14, 18. H.—Habitual sins are also overcome with most difficulty, ver. 11. M.

VER. 16. Head. Heb. “venom.” Sept. “the wrath of dragons.” C.—Evils. The same Heb. term is elsewhere rendered basilisk, or asp. The precise import of such things is not easily ascertained. Pineda.

16 He shall suck the head of asps, and the viper’s tongue shall kill him.

18 He shall be punished for all that he did, and yet shall not be consumed : according to the multitude of his devices so also shall he suffer.

19 Because he broke in, and stript the poor : he hath violently taken away a house which he did not build.

20 And yet his belly was not filled : and when he hath the things he coveted, he shall not be able to possess them.

21 There was nothing left of his meat, and therefore nothing shall continue of his goods.

22 When he shall be filled, he shall be straitened ; he shall burn, and every sorrow shall fall upon him.

23 May his belly be filled, that God may send forth the wrath of his indignation upon him, and rain down his war upon him.

24 He shall flee from weapons of iron, and shall fall upon a bow of brass.

25 The sword is drawn out, and cometh forth from its scabbard, and glittereth in his bitterness : the terrible ones shall go and come upon him.

26 All darkness is hid in his secret places : a fire that is not kindled shall devour him : he shall be afflicted when left in his tabernacle.

27 The heavens shall reveal his iniquity, and the earth shall rise up against him.

28 The offspring of his house shall be exposed, he shall be pulled down in the day of God’s wrath.

29 This is the portion of a wicked man from God, and the inheritance of his doings from the Lord.

CHAP. XXI.

Job shows that the wicked often prosper in this world, even to the end of their life : but that their judgment is in another world.

THEN Job answered, and said :

2 Hear, I beseech you, my words, and do penance.

• Eccl. v. 9.

VER. 18. Suffer eternal torments. C.—Heb. “according to his substance shall the restitution be, and he shall not rejoice.” Prot.

VER. 20. Them. Death will overtake him, like the rich man. Luke xii. 20. C.

VER. 21. Continue. Heb. “no one shall look for his goods.” The sinner eat up all in his life-time, or saw his possessions slip from him. H.—At least, he shall not take them with him to the grave. C.

VER. 23. May. Heb. “And when he shall be about to fill his belly,” like king Baltassar, death shall hurry him away. C.—Rain. Sept. “hurl sorrows upon him,” (H.) by an untimely death, followed with eternal hunger and thirst. Thus was treated the rich glutton. Luke xvi. 22. C.

VER. 24. Brass ; of which metal the strongest bows were made. Prot. have “steel” (H.) ; but brass was used by the ancients for the same purpose. C.

VER. 25. The sword is, occurs not in the Vulg., (H.) though it be in the Compl. and Sixtine editions. C.—Heb. “It is drawn, and cometh out of the body ; the glittering sword cometh out of his gall ; terrors are upon him.” Prot. “May likewise the dart come out through his body,” &c. H.—Ones. Heb. Enim ; giants, who formerly inhabited the land of Moab, near the eastern Idumea. Their name might be placed for any cruel enemies. C.

VER. 26. Darkness, or misery. C.—Sept. “Terrors upon him, (26) and all darkness may await him.” H.—He shall find no means of escaping. C.—Kindled. Heb. “blown.” S. Gregory observes that hell-fire is corporeal, but very different from our material fire. Chal., &c., explain this passage in the same sense. It may also intimate interior anguish, (C.) lightning, (Vatable,) pestilence, (Grot.) and every species of calamity. C.—Tabernacle, in hell. M.

VER. 27. Heavens, as his sins have cried for vengeance. Gen. xviii. 20. C.—All creatures shall fight against the wicked. M.

VER. 28. Exposed. Heb. “the bud, (C.) or increase of his house, shall depart,” (H.) and be led away into captivity, (C.) and ruined. Sept. “Let final destruction drag away his house, and the day of wrath overtake him.”

VER. 29. Doings. Lit. “words.” Heb. “of his decree.” H.—This is what he may expect for his impiety both in words and actions. C.

CHAP. XXI. VER. 2. Do. “Alter your opinion.” M.—Sym. “hear.

2 Suffer me, and I will speak; and after, if you please, laugh at my words.

4 Is my debate against man, that I should not have just reason to be troubled?

5 Harken to me and be astonished, and lay your finger on your mouth.

6 As for me, when I remember, I am afraid, and trembling taketh hold on my flesh.

7 *Why then do the wicked live, are they advanced, and strengthened with riches?

8 Their seed continueth before them, a multitude of kinsmen, and of children's children in their sight.

9 Their houses are secure and peaceable, and the rod of God is not upon them.

10 Their cattle have conceived, and failed not: their cow hath calved, and is not deprived of her fruit.

11 Their little ones go out like a flock, and their children dance and play.

12 They take the timbrel and the harp, and rejoice at the sound of the organ.

13 They spend their days in wealth, and in a moment they go down to hell.

14 Who have said to God: Depart from us, we desire not the knowledge of thy ways.

15 *Who is the Almighty, that we should serve him? and what doth it profit us if we pray to him?

16 Yet because their good things are not in their hand, may the counsel of the wicked be far from me.

17 How often shall the lamp of the wicked be put out, and a deluge come upon them, and he shall distribute the sorrows of his wrath?

* Jer. xii. 1; Hab. i. 13.

Sept. "may this be for your consolation," (Heb.) which I shall receive from you, or which you may make use of, if you should be afflicted (C.) as I am. H.—Job undertakes to show that the wicked are sometimes suffered to enjoy a long prosperity.

VER. 4. Troubled. Heb. "Why is not my spirit shortened" by death, if your assertion be true (H.)? or why may I not be "troubled," since I have to deal, not with an enlightened judge, but with men who are under the greatest prejudices? C.—I seem to you to dispute against God. Have I not then reason to tremble? Ver. 6. H.

VER. 5. Hearken to. Lit. "look stedfastly on me." H.—Compare my present with my former condition, and do not pretend to fathom God's judgments; which fill me also with astonishment, when I consider why the virtuous are distressed, and the wicked prosper. Ver. 7.

VER. 7. Riches. This is what fills me with great anxiety. Yet it quite destroys the force of your argument, (C.) since you pretend that the prosperity of the wicked is never of long duration.

VER. 9. Rod. Divine judgments. M. Psal. lxxii. 5.

VER. 11. Their. Sept. "They continue like eternal sheep," as if they and their flocks would never die. C.

VER. 13. Moment. Sept. "in the rest of the lower region, ἀδόν, they shall be laid" (H.) in the grave. M.—Hell. The same term is used for the place where the damned are tormented as for that where the souls of the just waited (chap. vii., and xvii.) for their Redeemer's coming. But here Job is speaking of the apparent happiness of the wicked (H.); and only alludes to the grave, (C. M.) or comfortable death and burial of the reprobate; though, at the same time, he may declare that their souls are buried in hell. H.

VER. 16. Because, is not in Heb. "Lo, their good is not." They are not possessed of true riches, or of good sense. Alex. Sept. "For good things were in their hands; but the works of the impious are not pure." No: the more they possess, the greater is their perversity. Grabe substitutes ὁκαθ' ὅρα for καθ' ὅρα; God "does not behold" the works, &c., which is more conformable to the other editions; and thus the blasphemies of the impious are continued. H.

VER. 17. How often. When do we witness the downfall of the wicked? Mercr.—Or, in a contrary sense, how often are they miserable as well as the just? Such things are, therefore, a very equivocal argument, to prove either side of the question. Those who are afflicted, and cling closer to God, must be accounted virtuous and happy; while that prosperity is fatal which is an occasion of our neglecting his service. C.—Job answers his own question, ver. 7. If the wicked be happy for a time, their future state is deplorable, and often they forfeit even their temporal advantages. M.

VER. 19. The sorrow Prot. "his iniquity." Marg. "that is, the punishment."

18 They shall be as chaff before the face of the wind, and as ashes which the whirlwind scattereth.

19 God shall lay up the sorrow of the father for his children: and when he shall repay, then shall he know.

20 His eyes shall see his own destruction, and he shall drink of the wrath of the Almighty.

21 For what is it to him what befalleth his house after him: and if the number of his months be diminished by one half?

22 Shall any one teach God knowledge, who judgeth those that are high?

23 One man dieth strong and hale, rich and happy.

24 His bowels are full of fat, and his bones are moistened with marrow.

25 But another dieth in bitterness of soul, without any riches:

26 And yet they shall sleep together in the dust, and worms shall cover them.

27 Surely I know your thoughts, and your unjust judgments against me.

28 For you say: Where is the house of the prince? and where are the dwelling-places of the wicked?

29 Ask any one of them that go by the way, and you shall perceive that he knoweth these same things.

30 Because the wicked man is reserved to the day of destruction, and he shall be brought to the day of wrath.

31 Who shall reprove his way to his face? and who shall repay him what he hath done?

32 He shall be brought to the graves, and shall watch in the heap of the dead.

33 He hath been acceptable to the gravel of Cocytus,

* Mal. iii. 14.

ment." H.—The children shall share in his punishment, (C.) when they have been partakers, or imitators, of his injustice. H.—Know his offence, and whether there be a God (C.) and providence. M.

VER. 21. And if. Heb. "when" he is cut off in the midst of his days: he does not regard the happiness or misery of those whom he leaves behind. H.

VER. 23. Hale, or healthy. Heb. "in perfect strength." H.—Sept. "simplicity, or folly." S. Aug. reads with the old Vulg. "in the strength of his simplicity," (C.) or innocence. H.

VER. 24. Bowels. Prot. "breasts" (marg. "milk-pails") are full of milk. But the Sept., Bochart, &c. agree with the Vulgate. Job describes a corpulent man (C.) living in luxury, like the glutton. H.

VER. 25. Any. Heb. "ever having eaten with pleasure." H.

VER. 28. Prince. Job, (M.) or rather the tyrant, whose lot we know is miserable, as he falls a victim to God's justice. Chap. xx. 7.

VER. 30. To the. He will be requited indeed, at last; or rather, when others are in the utmost danger, he will be protected as it were by God. Sept. (C.) or Theodotion, "the wicked is kept on high," κοιμίζεται. All from ver. 28 to 33 inclusively, is marked as an addition to the Sept. by Grabe, who has supplied many similar omissions, of which Origen and S. Jerom complained. H.

VER. 32. Dead. Heb. "the sheaves," being quite ripe for harvest, and even in the tomb, the tyrant retains some sort of pre-eminence, as he is buried with honour, and set like a more elevated sheaf, to inspect the rest. C.—Godiss is rendered by Prot. "tomb," (margin,) "heap." But (chap. v. 26) where only the word occurs again, we find "a shock of corn," and this comparison seems very suitable here.—"Eternity," says Bridayne, (ser. in Maury's Eloq.,) "is a pendulum, the vibration of which sounds continually, Always! Never! In the mean while, a reprobate cries out: What o'clock is it? And the same voice answers, Eternity!" Thus at last the wicked shall awake from the sleep in which they have spent their days (H.); and their watching, restless, and immortal souls (S. Thom.) will bitterly lament their past folly.

VER. 33. Acceptable to the gravel of Cocytus. The Hebrew word, which S. Jerom has here rendered by the name Cocytus, (which the poets represent as a river in hell,) signifies a valley, or a torrent: and in this place is taken for the low region of death, and hell; which willingly, as it were, receives the wicked at their death: who are ushered in by innumerable others that have gone before them; and are followed by multitudes above number. Ch.—Isaias (xiv. 9) and Ezechiel (xxxii. 21) describe the splendid reception in hell of the kings of Babylon and of Egypt nearly in the same manner as Job does that of any sinner who has lived in prosperity. Chap. xxxviii. 17.—Cocytus is a branch of the Styx, a river of Areadia, of a noxious quality, which the poets have placed in hell. Pineda.—Sept. "The pebbles of the torrent became sweet to him, and in his train and he shall draw every man after him, and there are innumerable before him.

34 How then do ye comfort me in vain, whereas your answer is shown to be repugnant to truth?

CHAP. XXII.

Elphaz falsely imputes many crimes to Job: but promises him prosperity if he will repent.

THEN Eliphaz, the Themanite, answered, and said:

2 Can man be compared with God, even though he were of perfect knowledge?

3 What doth it profit God if thou be just? or what dost thou give him if thy way be unspotted?

4 Shall he reprove thee for fear, and come with thee into judgment:

5 And not for thy manifold wickedness, and thy infinite iniquities?

6 For thou hast taken away the pledge of thy brethren without cause, and stript the naked of their clothing.

7 Thou hast not given water to the weary, thou hast withdrawn bread from the hungry.

8 In the strength of thy arm thou didst possess the land, and, being the most mighty, thou holdest it.

9 Thou hast sent widows away empty, and the arms of the fatherless thou hast broken in pieces.

10 Therefore art thou surrounded with snares, and sudden fear troubleth thee.

11 And didst thou think that thou shouldst not see darkness, and that thou shouldst not be covered with the violence of overflowing waters?

12 Dost not thou think that God is higher than heaven, and is elevated above the height of the stars?

13 And thou sayest: What doth God know? and he judgeth as it were through a mist.

14 The clouds are his covert, and he doth not consider our things, and he walketh about the poles of heaven.

15 Dost thou desire to keep the path of ages, which wicked men have trodden?

16 Who were taken away before their time, and a flood hath overthrown their foundation:

17 Who said to God: Depart from us: and looked upon the Almighty as if he could do nothing.

18 Whereas he had filled their houses with good things: whose way of thinking be far from me.

19 "The just shall see, and shall rejoice, and the innocent shall laugh them to scorn.

20 Is not their exaltation cut down, and hath not fire devoured the remnants of them?

21 Submit thyself then to him, and be at peace: and thereby thou shalt have the best fruits.

22 Receive the law of his mouth, and lay up his words in thy heart.

23 If thou wilt return to the Almighty, thou shalt be built up, and shalt put away iniquity far from thy tabernacle.

24 He shall give for earth flint, and for flint torrents of gold.

25 And the Almighty shall be against thy enemies, and silver shall be heaped together for thee.

26 Then shalt thou abound in delights in the Almighty, and shalt lift up thy face to God.

27 Thou shalt pray to him, and he will hear thee, and thou shalt pay vows.

28 Thou shalt decree a thing, and it shall come to thee, and light shall shine in thy ways.

29 "For he that hath been humbled, shall be in glory: and he that shall bow down his eyes, he shall be saved.

30 The innocent shall be saved, and he shall be saved by the cleanness of his hands.

a Psal. cvi. 42.

b Prov. xxix. 23.

every man shall come, and unnumbered men before him."—The Church reads in her office for S. Stephen, Lapides torrentis illi dulces fuerunt: ipsum sequuntur omnes animæ justæ.

VER. 34. Vain. These arguments show that your assertions are destitute of proof, and afford me no comfort. C.

CHAP. XXII. VER. 2. Knowledge. How then canst thou dispute with God?

VER. 3. Profit. God rules all with justice or with mercy: since, therefore, he punishes, it must be for some guilt, and not for his own advantage. But he might still chastise for the good of man, or to manifest his own power. John ix. 3. God also punishes the sinner for the wrong which he does to himself. S. Aug. Conf. iii. 8. Any one may discover the sophism of Eliphaz. If God were indifferent with regard to our virtue, who would be able to advance one step towards him? C.—Man is unprofitable indeed to God, but he may reap great advantage from piety himself; and this is what God desires, as well as his own glory. Matt. v. 17. W.

VER. 4. Fear. Thus malefactors are condemned, that they may no longer disturb society. But may not God afflict the just, though he have nothing to fear? C.

VER. 6. Pledge. Heb. "person." Debtors might be sold. Matt. xviii. 30.

VER. 7. Water. Job's disposition was the reverse. Chap. xxix. 15. Such inhumanity would hardly be conceived possible among us. But the Idumeans were guilty of it (Num. xx. 18; Isa. xxi. 14,) and if it had not been probable, Eliphaz would not have dared to speak thus. C.

VER. 8. It. Heb. and Sept. intimate that Job accepted persons, and gave sentence in favour of his rich friends. H.

VER. 12. Stars; and of course, that his Providence regardeth not human affairs. C.—When an infidel observed, "I think the gods are too great to want my adoration," Socrates well replied, "The greater they appear to thee, the more oughtest thou to treat them with respect and honour." Xenophon, Memor.

VER. 14. Doth. Heb. "seeth not." Sept. "is not seen."—Poles, on which the whole machine seems to turn. C.

VER. 15. Wicked. Sept. Alex. "just." But Græc substitutes unjust (H.); as otherwise Eliphaz would argue against his own principles: unless just be put ironically for hypocrites. C.—Wilt thou imitate the ancient giants, before the deluge? C.

VER. 16. Flood. Heb. "river," (Sept. C.) or "flood." Prot. This does not certainly allude to the deluge, though Job could not be unacquainted with an event (H.) which appears in the writings of the most ancient pagan authors. Grot. Relig.

VER. 18. From me. He thus insinuates that Job entertained such sentiments, though he seemed to condemn them. Chap. xxi. 16. C.—Sept. "is far from him," God.

VER. 19. Shall. Sept. "saw." The Jews explain this of Noe, who saw the ruin of the giants with pity, mixed with joy, as he approved of the Divine judgments. Vatab., &c.—The just can thus rejoice, only on this account; as they would not be just if they were devoid of charity. S. Greg. Psal. lviii. 11, and cvi. 42. C.

VER. 20. Their. Heb. "our." C.—"Whereas our substance is not cut down." Prot. H.—But the Sept. and Chal. agree with the Vulg., which gives a better sense.—Fire, which consumed Sodom, &c. C.

VER. 24. Gold, as the gospel declares, Matt. xxiii. 12. The Heb. is more perplexed. "When men are cast down, then thou shalt say, there is lifting up." Prot. (H.) or "when thy eyes shall be cast down, they shall say to thee, Arise." C.

VER. 25. Silver. Sept. "But he shall purify thee, as silver, which has passed the fire." H.

VER. 26. Face, with confidence of being in favour and accepted. C.

VER. 28. Decree. Thy projects shall succeed. Sept. "But he shall appoint for thee the rule of justice." H.

VER. 29. Glory. as the gospel declares. Matt. xxiii. 12. The Heb. is more perplexed. "When men are cast down, then thou shalt say, there is lifting up." Prot. (H.) or "when thy eyes shall be cast down, they shall say to thee, Arise." C.

VER. 30. Innocent. Heb. "He shall deliver even the man who is not innocent, and that for the sake of the purity of thy hands." Chal., Jun., &c.—God will even spare the guilty, to manifest the regard which he has for the intercession of the saints. These interpreters have taken ai in the same sense as ain, which is the case, I Kings iv. 21. C.—Others explain, "He shall deliver the island of the innocent, and it is delivered by the pureness of thine hands." Prot. This also would show the merit and protection of the saints, as a whole island may owe its safety to one of God's servants. In effect, the world stands by the prayers of the saints. H.

CHAP. XXIII.

Job wishes to be tried at God's tribunal.

THEN Job answered, and said :

2 Now also my words are in bitterness, and the hand of my scourge is more grievous than my mourning.

3 Who will grant me that I might know and find him, and come even to his throne?

4 I would set judgment before him, and would fill my mouth with complaints.

5 That I might know the words that he would answer me, and understand what he would say to me.

6 I would not that he should contend with me with much strength, nor overwhelm me with the weight of his greatness.

7 Let him propose equity against me, and let my judgment come to victory.

8 But if I go to the east, he appeareth not : if to the west, I shall not understand him.

9 If to the left hand, what shall I do? I shall not take hold on him : if I turn myself to the right hand, I shall not see him.

10 But he knoweth my way, and has tried me as gold that passeth through the fire.

11 My foot hath followed his steps ; I have kept his way, and have not declined from it.

12 I have not departed from the commandments of his lips, and the words of his mouth I have hid in my bosom.

13 For he is alone, and no man can turn away his thought : and whatsoever his soul hath desired, that hath he done.

14 And when he shall have fulfilled his will in me, many other like things are also at hand with him.

15 And therefore I am troubled at his presence, and when I consider him I am made pensive with fear.

16 God hath softened my heart, and the Almighty hath troubled me.

17 For I have not perished because of the darkness that hangs over me, neither hath the mist covered my face.

CHAP. XXIII. VER. 2. Bitterness. Instead of comfort, he only meets with insult from his friends. He therefore appeals to God, (W.) but with fear. C.—Scourge is not in Heb. M.—But it explains the meaning of “my hand,” (H.) or the heavy chastisement (S. Greg.) which I endure. M.

VER. 6. Nor. Prot. “No, but he would put strength in me.” He would enable me to stand my trial. H.—He would lay no falsehood to my charge.

VER. 7. Victory. Before such a judge I should hope to be acquitted. Job must have been well convinced of his innocence. For woe to man, if God treat him according to the rigour of his justice! C.—Sept. “For truth and reproof are with him. But, oh! that he would bring my judgment to an end.” H.

VER. 8. East, or Heb. “before . . . if behind I cannot perceive him.” C.—Where, then, shall I find this just judge? ver. 3. H.

VER. 12. Lips, given to Noe, (Gen. ix. 5,) or to Moses. This work was written by a Jew, who dresses up the sentiments of Job in his own style. The holy man was also acquainted with the Mosaic dispensation, though he was not bound to observe the ceremonial part of it. C.—Hid. Prot. “esteemed . . . more than my necessary food.” H.—Sept. agree with the Vulg.

VER. 13. Alone. Self-existent. Heb. “in one thing,” or resolution. He is immutable: all I could say would avail nothing. C.

VER. 14. With him, to punish me afresh. Heb. “when he shall have appointed me my portion, he shall still have many such.” He may treat me as a slave, allowing me only a certain portion of meat. Prov. xxx. 8; and xxxi. 15. C.

VER. 17. Face. My afflictions have not yet taken away my life, as might have been expected. H.—I am less affected with my miseries than with the dread of God's presence. Ver. 15, 16. C.

CHAP. XXIV. VER. 1. Days, when he will punish. M.—Job now comes to prove that he had not denied Providence. For though he asserted that the wicked were sometimes at ease, he maintained that there was another world, where all

CHAP. XXIV.

God's providence often suffers the wicked to go on a long time in their sins: but punishes them in another life.

TIMES are not hid from the Almighty : but they that know him, know not his days.

2 Some have removed land-marks, have taken away flocks by force, and fed them.

3 They have driven away the ass of the fatherless, and have taken away the widow's ox for a pledge.

4 They have overturned the way of the poor, and have oppressed together the meek of the earth.

5 Others, like wild asses in the desert, go forth to their work : by watching for a prey, they get bread for their children.

6 They reap the field that is not their own, and gather the vintage of his vineyard whom by violence they have oppressed.

7 They send men away naked, taking away their clothes who have no covering in the cold :

8 Who are wet with the showers of the mountains, and, having no covering, embrace the stones.

9 They have violently robbed the fatherless, and stript the poor common people.

10 From the naked, and them that go without clothing, and from the hungry, they have taken away the ears of corn.

11 They have taken their rest at noon among the stores of them who, after having trodden the wine-presses, suffer thirst.

12 Out of the cities they have made men to groan, and the soul of the wounded hath cried out, and God doth not suffer it to pass unrevenged.

13 They have been rebellious to the light, they have not known his ways, neither have they returned by his paths.

14 The murderer riseth at the very break of day, he killeth the needy, and the poor man : but in the night he will be as a thief.

would be set to rights. Without this the book would be inexplicable. C.—Know him. Sept. “the impious.” H.

VER. 4. Poor, by oppression, not allowing them to get their bread, or to walk on the same road. C.—And have. Heb. and Sept. “the meek . . . have hidden themselves together.”

VER. 5. Others. Heb. “Behold as,” (H.) which may be explained of these oppressors, or rather of the poor, who are forced to flee before them to seek for food. C.—The Vulg. and Sept. seem more favourable to the former supposition. H.

VER. 6. Not, is omitted by the Prot. H.—Heb. “they reap in the field food for the cattle.” C.—His. Heb. “the wicked man's vineyard.” H.—They do not examine whether the person whom they plunder be just or not. C.—Sept. “they have reaped before the season the field which was not theirs. But the poor (helpless men) have laboured in the vineyards of the wicked without wages or meat.” H.

VER. 9. Robbed. Heb. and Sept. “snatched from the breast.”—Stript Sept. “knocked down.” Hcb. “taken a pledge of, or seized the poor.” C.

VER. 10. Corn, which they had gleaned for their daily sustenance. Heb. also, “the poor, perishing through hunger, carry the sheaf” of the rich.

VER. 11. Of them. Heb. “of corn, and thirst while pressing out their olives.” C.—Prot. “they take away the sheaf from the hungry, (H.) which make oil within their walls, and tread their wine-presses, and suffer thirst,” (H.) not being allowed to taste any thing, though the law of Moses would not suffer even the ox to be muzzled. Deut. xxv. 4.

VER. 12. Suffer. Heb. “and God suffers no disorder,” according to ver. C.—Sym. “God inspireth not folly : but they have,” &c. ver. 13. Sept. “But why does he not regard,” (H.) or punish these things? C.

VER. 13. Light of reason and humanity. C.

VER. 14. Thief. Oppressing the poor, (Ven. Bede,) and taking away their bread. Eccli. xxxiv. 25.

16 He diggeth through houses in the dark, as in the day they had appointed for themselves, and they have not known the light.

17 If the morning suddenly appear, it is to them the shadow of death: and they walk in darkness as if it were in light.

18 He is light upon the face of the water: cursed be his portion on the earth; let him not walk by the way of the vineyards.

19 Let him pass from the snow waters to excessive heat, and his sin even to hell.

20 Let mercy forget him: may worms be his sweetness: let him be remembered no more, but be broken in pieces as an unfruitful tree.

21 For he hath fed the barren that beareth not, and to the widow he hath done no good.

22 He hath pulled down the strong by his might: and when he standeth up, he shall not trust to his life.

23 *God hath given him place for penance, and he abuseth it unto pride: but his eyes are upon his ways.

24 They are lifted up for a little while and shall not stand, and shall be brought down as all things, and shall be taken away, and as the tops of the ears of corn they shall be broken.

25 And if it be not so, who can convince me that I have lied, and set my words before God?

CHAP. XXV.

Baldad represents the justice of God, before whom no man can be justified.

THEN Baldad, the Suhite, answered, and said:

2 Power and terror are with him, who maketh peace in his high places.

3 Is there any numbering of his soldiers; and upon whom shall not his light arise?

* Apoc. ii. 21.

VER. 16. Themselves. The hand of robbers had marked out their prey. H.—Heb. “In the day-time they lie concealed, and know not the light.” C.—Sept. or rather Theodotion, from whom ver. 15–17 is taken, “They have sealed themselves up during the day.” If we should read ἑαυτοῖς, Heb. lonu, we might translate as well “they marked them out for themselves.” H.

VER. 17. Death. They are as much afraid of the light as others are of profound darkness. C.—They dread being detected. H.

VER. 18. He is light, &c. That is, the adulterer, that he may not be perceived and discovered, steps as nimbly and as light as if he were walking upon the waters. Or the sense is: he is as light, that is, as swift and nimble as the running waters.—By the way of the vineyards. That is, by the way where he may meet with fruit and blessings. Ch.

VER. 19. Let. Heb. “Drought and heat consume the snow waters; so doth the grave those which have sinned.” Prot. Chal. H.—The wicked die quickly, and without a lingering illness. Piscat.—What foundation, therefore, has the hell of cold as well as of fire? says Amama. S. Jerom (in Matt. x.) observes, “We read very plainly in the Book of Job, that there is a double gehenna, both of too much heat and of too much cold;” the latter occasions the gnashing of teeth. Matt. viii. Carthus.

VER. 21. Fed the barren. That is, the harlot. Or else, he hath fed; that is, he hath fed upon the barren; that is, the poor and desolate. Ch.—Sept. agree with the Vulg. H.—But most explain the Heb. “He hath oppressed the barren; which may denote those whose husband and children have been slain. C.—No good, but even dealt with them dishonestly. Cajetan.

VER. 22. Down. Heb. “taketh along with him his guards for his defence. He riseth and is not sure of his life,” fearing lest his enemies may still overpower him. This is a description of the tyrant’s continual anxiety. C.

VER. 23. God. Sept. “Being sick, let him not expect to be healed, but he shall fall under sickness.” Heb. “Though it be given him to be in safety, whereon he resteth, yet his eyes are upon their ways.” Prot. or “he has given (H.) himself, or appointed them (guards) for his defence, and rests on them; yet his eyes,” &c. He suspects the fidelity of his servants. C.

VER. 25. And set. Sept. and Prot. “and make my speech nothing worth.” H.—This conclusion comes frequently. Chap. ix. 15, and xvii. 15.

CHAP. XXV. VER. 1. Answered. He directs his attack against Job’s desiring to plead before God, and gives a wrong statement of his request, which he also attempts to refute, by urging the same inconclusive arguments as before. C.

4 Can man be justified, compared with God, or he that is born of a woman appear clean?

5 Behold even the moon doth not shine, and the stars are not pure in his sight.

6 How much less man that is rottenness, and the son of man who is a worm?

CHAP. XXVI.

Job declares his sentiments of the wisdom and power of God.

THEN Job answered, and said:

2 Whose helper art thou? is it of him that is weak? and dost thou hold up the arm of him that has no strength?

3 To whom hast thou given counsel? perhaps to him that hath no wisdom, and thou hast shown thy very great prudence.

4 Whom hast thou desired to teach? was it not him that made life?

5 Behold the giants groan under the waters, and they that dwell with them.

6 Hell is naked before him, and there is no covering for destruction.

7 He stretched out the north over the empty space, and hangeth the earth upon nothing.

8 He bindeth up the waters in his clouds, so that they break not out and fall down together.

9 He withholdeth the face of his throne, and spreadeth his cloud over it.

10 He hath set bounds about the waters, till light and darkness come to an end.

11 The pillars of heaven tremble, and dread at his beck.

12 By his power the seas are suddenly gathered together, and his wisdom has struck the proud one.

13 His spirit hath adorned the heavens, and his artful hand brought forth the winding serpent.

VER. 3. Soldiers. The works of the whole creation, particularly the stars and angels. M.

VER. 4. Clean. Job had used a similar expression, as well as Eliphaz. Chap. iv. 17, and xiv. 4, and xv. 15. The holy man did not assert that he was free from sin, but only that God did not punish him (C.) so dreadfully (H.) on that account, and that he has just reasons for afflicting his servants, if it were only to manifest his own power and glory. C.

CHAP. XXVI. VER. 4. Life. Sept. also seem to understand this of God. C.—Job does not blame his friends for undertaking to approve the ways of Providence, but for condemning himself (S. Chrys.) rashly, (H.) and, with an air of haughtiness, endeavouring to restrain him from pleading his cause before the Divine tribunal. M.—Heb. “Whose spirit came from thee?” Prot. (H.) Did I receive my life, or do I seek advice from thee? C.—God stood in no need of Baldad’s wisdom, (W.) no more than Job. H.

VER. 6. Hell. The grave.—Destruction. Heb. abdon. H.—S. John (Apoc. ix. 11) styles the bottomless abyss (C.); or its angel, (H.) Abaddon, or Apollyon. It may here be called destruction, (C.) as all its victims are lost for ever to every thing that is good. The obscurity of the grave, and even that of hell, can hide nothing from God.

VER. 7. North pole, which alone was visible in Idumea, and continued unmoved, while all the stars performed their revolutions. C.

VER. 9. Over it. The firmament, with all its beauty, is but like a cloud, to conceal from our feeble eyes the splendour of God’s throne.

VER. 10. End. Till the end of the world, the ocean will respect these limits. H.—The ancients looked upon it as a continual miracle that the world was not deluged, as the waters are higher than the earth. Jer. v. 22; Amos v. 8. S. Bas. and S. Amb. Hexem. Cicero, Nat. 2.

VER. 12. Together, at the beginning. Gen. i. 9. Heb. “By his strength he has divided the sea; and by his wisdom he has pierced the proud, or Egypt.” Reb, (H.) or Rachab, is often put for Egypt (Psalm lxxxviii. 11); and all would naturally have concluded that the fall of Pharaoh was pointed at, if it had not been supposed that Job lived before that event. That is, however, dubious. Isaias (li. 9) uses the same terms in describing the fall of this tyrant. C.—Yet the Sept. translate, “the whale,” (H.) or some sea monster, which God holds in subjection, (Pincha,) like the weakest creature. H.—The foaming billows (M.) are likewise subject to his control. H.

VER. 13. Heavens, with stars, &c. Psalm xxxii. 6; Wisd. i. 7. God also sends winds to disperse the clouds, that the heavens may appear. C.—Artful 14 Lo, these things are said in part of his ways: and seeing we have heard scarce a little drop of his word; who shall be able to behold the thunder of his greatness?

CHAP. XXVII.

Job persists in asserting his own innocence, and that hypocrites will be punished in the end.

JOB also added, taking up his parable, and said:

2 As God liveth, who hath taken away my judgment, and the Almighty, who hath brought my soul to bitterness,

3 As long as breath remaineth in me, and the Spirit of God in my nostrils,

4 My lips shall not speak iniquity, neither shall my tongue contrive lying.

5 God forbid that I should judge you to be just: till I die I will not depart from my innocence.

6 My justification, which I have begun to hold, I will not forsake: for my heart doth not reprehend me in all my life.

7 Let my enemy be as the ungodly, and my adversary as the wicked one.

8 For what is the hope of the hypocrite, if through covetousness he take by violence, and God deliver not his soul?

9 Will God hear his cry, when distress shall come upon him?

10 Or can he delight himself in the Almighty, and call upon God at all times?

11 I will teach you by the hand of God, what the Almighty hath, and I will not conceal it.

12 Behold you all know it; and why do you speak vain things without cause?

13 This is the portion of a wicked man with God, and the inheritance of the violent, which they shall receive of the Almighty.

(obstetricante), "being the midwife." The least things are ruled by Providence. W.—Serpent; a constellation, lightning, the devil, or rather the leviathan. Isa. xxvii. 1. Drusus. C.—Sept. "by his decree, he killed the apostate dragon." H.—But there is no need of having recourse to allegory. C.

VER. 14. Drop. This comparison is often applied to speech. Deut. xxxii. 2; Isa. lv. 10. If the little that we know of God's works give us such an exalted idea of his greatness, what should we think if we could fully comprehend his mysteries? C.

CHAP. XXVII. VER. 1. Parable: speaking in a figurative poetic style. Num. xxiii. 7. Job grants that God generally punishes the wicked, but he maintains that he also chastises the just; and hence admonishes all to revere his judgments and wisdom, and to decline from evil; which truths must always subsist, whatever may be the conduct of Providence. C.

VER. 2. Judgment. Chal. "my rule of judging." Sept. "Live the Lord, who hath judged me thus." Sym. "hath despised my judgment." The expression seems very harsh, and may be one of those which God blames. Chap. xl. 3. E. C.—Yet we shall examine that point later. Chap. xlii. H.—He may only mean that he is so well convinced of his innocence, that he calls God to witness it, (C.) and adores his ways, (H.) in not permitting him to appear before his tribunal, (C.) to justify himself (M.); so that he is abandoned to the rash judgments of others. Chap. xxxiv. 5.

VER. 5. Till. Never will I abandon this path, (H.) nor will I yield to your reasons, (C.) or cease to defend myself. M.—It would have been contrary to justice and charity, (H.) as well as to truth, to confess a false crime. W.

VER. 9. Him. Like Antiochus, the wicked pray only through fear of punishment, and their request is therefore rejected. 2 Mac. ix. 13. M.

VER. 11. Hand, or grace of God.—Hath, how he acts, and with what design. C.—Quid disponat Deus. S. Aug.

VER. 13. Portion. This you have repeatedly asserted; and (H.) I acknowledge it is generally, but not always, the case. C.

VER. 14. Bread. Sept. "if they grow up to manhood, they shall beg." Psal. xxxvi. 25. H.

VER. 15. In death, without honour. Sanctius.—Wap for him. Sept. "his widows no one shall lament, or pity." H. Psal. lxxvii. 63. M.

VER. 18. Moth. Heb. "as the polar star." Jun.—But the Chal., &c.

14 If his sons be multiplied, they shall be for the sword, and his grandsons shall not be filled with bread.

15 They that shall remain of him, shall be buried in death, and his widows shall not weep.

16 If he shall heap together silver as earth, and prepare raiment as clay:

17 He shall prepare indeed, but the just man shall be clothed with it: and the innocent shall divide the silver.

18 He hath built his house as a moth, and as a keeper he hath made a booth.

19 The rich man when he shall sleep shall take away nothing with him: he shall open his eyes and find nothing.

20 Poverty, like water, shall take hold on him; a tempest shall oppress him in the night.

21 A burning wind shall take him up, and carry him away, and as a whirlwind shall snatch him from his place.

22 And he shall cast upon him, and shall not spare: out of his hand he would willingly flee.

23 He shall clasp his hands upon him, and shall hiss at him, beholding his place.

CHAP. XXVIII.

Man's industry searcheth out many things: true wisdom is taught by God alone.

SILVER hath beginnings of its veins, and gold hath a place, wherein it is melted.

2 Iron is taken out of the earth, and stone melted with heat is turned into brass.

3 He hath set a time for darkness, and the end of all things he considereth, the stone also that is in the dark, and the shadow of death.

4 The flood divideth from the people that are on their journey, those whom the foot of the needy man hath forgotten, and who cannot be come at.

5 The land, out of which bread grew in its place, hath been overturned with fire.

* Psal. xlviii. 18.

translate with the Vulg., which agrees better with the latter part of the verse. The moth devours another's property, like the wicked man, who lodges communally, though not at his own expense.—Keeper of a field, or of a vineyard. C.—Sept. "His house has slipped away like a moth, and what he has kept (or his riches) like a spider." H.

VER. 19. Nothing. His riches are all left behind! The men of riches have slept their sleep, and have found nothing in their hands. They awake as from a dream, (chap. xx. 8. H.) and then they form a true estimate of things. M.—God chiefly punishes the wicked in death. Psal. lxxv. W.

VER. 22. And he (God) shall, or Sept. the wind, (C.) "shall fall upon him." H.—Flee. Yet he will not escape, (M.) though he flee with all expedition. H.

VER. 23. Place. God having waited patiently a long time, at last displays the effects of his indignation with a sort of contempt. Prov. i. 26; Ezech. v. 13. C. Psal. ii. 4. M. Pineda.

CHAP. XXVIII. VER. 1. Silver. Heb. "Surely there is a vein, or mine, for silver." H.—The sagacity of man has discovered all these things. Wonderful also is the instinct of animals, ver. 7. Yet wisdom comes from God alone; and those act rashly, who pretend to dive into his counsels in punishing his creatures and ruling the world. C.

VER. 2. Stone. Prot. "and brass is molten out of the stone." H.

VER. 3. He (God) hath, &c. H.—Darkness, before which these inventions could not be made (M.); or, man has been able to measure the hours of day and night by the shadow of the sun, and by other means. He always strives to perfect his works, and examines with care the mines which lay concealed in the most profound obscurity. C.—Precious stones and metals lie the deepest. M.

VER. 4. At. Nations are separated by waters from each other. C.—Some, like the Chinese, keep all strangers at a distance. H.—But the industry of man breaketh through all barriers. Heb. "a river separates a foreign nation forgotten by travellers; but these waters cannot stop man: they flow away." C.—"The flood breaketh out from the inhabitant, even the waters; forgotten of the foot, they are dried up; they are gone away from men." Prot. "Sand cuts off a torrent: but those who forget the way of justice, have become infirm, and have been instable among mortals." Sept. H.

VER. 5. In its, &c. Heb. and Sept. "and under it is turned to as it was"

6 The stones of it are the place of sapphires, and the clods of it are gold.

7 The bird hath not known the path, neither hath the eye of the vulture beheld it.

8 The children of the merchants have not trodden it, neither hath the lioness passed by it.

9 He hath stretched forth his hand to the flint, he hath overturned mountains from the roots.

10 In the rocks he hath cut out rivers, and his eye hath seen every precious thing.

11 The depths also of rivers he hath searched, and hidden things he hath brought forth to light.

12 But where is wisdom to be found, and where is the place of understanding?

13 Man knoweth not the price thereof, neither is it found in the land of them that live in delights.

14 The depth saith: It is not in me: and the sea saith: It is not with me.

15 The finest gold shall not purchase it, neither shall silver be weighed in exchange for it.

16 It shall not be compared with the dyed colours of India, or with the most precious stone sardonyx, or the sapphire.

17 Gold or crystal cannot equal it, neither shall any vessels of gold be changed for it.

18 High and eminent things shall not be mentioned in comparison of it: but wisdom is drawn out of secret places.

19 The topaz of Ethiopia shall not be equal to it, neither shall it be compared to the cleanest dyeing.

20 Whence then cometh wisdom? and where is the place of understanding?

a Wisd. vii. 9.

fire," which lies in it. H.—Fire, like Sodom; to which event Job alludes. Chap. xxi. 20. C.

VER. 7. Path of these metals, (M.) or a path in general. H.

VER. 8. Merchants, who go the shortest road. H.—Heb. "of lions," which find their dens without asking for the path. C.

VER. 10. Rivers. Or, the waters lodged in the mines. M.—He hath even cut canals through the hardest rocks, (H.) and sunk wells. C.

VER. 11. Searched, by diving (C.); or, Heb. "he bindeth the rivers from flowing;" diverting their course by dams, &c.

VER. 12. Understanding, of supernatural things, which teaches us to love God, and to comprehend his counsels. This is very different from the human sagacity of which he has been speaking; and this is the gift of God alone. C.

VER. 13. Price. It has none, like other precious things. Bar. iii. 15.—In delights is not expressed in Heb. or Sept. C.—But to live in misery is hardly to be accounted living, (H.) and the addition restrains the proposition, as some men possess this treasure, though not those who take no pains (C.) to mortify corrupt nature. H.—Chal. "it is not found in the land of the proud, whose life is spent in sin." C.—True wisdom is found, not in natural, but in supernatural, things. W.

VER. 15. Finest, obrizum, which has the colour of fire. Pliny, xxiii. 3. The old Vulg. and Sept. read "locked-up gold," aurum conclusum, (C.) and the Heb. Sogur, (H.) "that which is shut up," like things of value: gold is sometimes specified. 3 Kings vi. 20.

VER. 16. Dyed, &c. Heb. cothom auvir, (H.) "the shut up" (gold, though the Vulg., Sept., &c. vary in the interpretation) "of Ophir." This country was famous for its gold. C.—Its situation is not clearly ascertained. S. Jerom seems to have placed it in India, with Josephus, "in the golden country," now Malacca. —Stone. Prot. onyx. Heb. seem (H.) means, probably, the emerald. Gen. ii. 12. C.—But these names are very indeterminate. Theodotion, from whom great part of this chapter is inserted in the Sept., has "the gold of Ophir, and the precious onyx and sapphire." H.

VER. 18. Things. Heb. Ramuth and Gobiss (H.) are terms much controverted. The first may denote the unicorn, (Deut. xxxiii. 17,) and the latter the thunderbolt, or ceramium, which were in high request. Pliny, xxxvii. 9. Ezechiel (xlii. 11, and xxvii. 16) mentions the former as carried by merchants to Tyre. These stones, which fell from the sky, were used by the Partlian magi, &c., for secret purposes. They have given rise to many fabulous accounts. Those which are to be seen, are by no means beautiful. C.—Yet if the people esteemed them, Job might well include them among other things of most value. Prot. "No mention shall be made of coral or of pearls, for the price of wisdom is above rubies."

21 It is hid from the eyes of all living, and the fowls of the air know it not.

22 Destruction and death have said: With our ears we have heard the fame thereof.

23 God understandeth the way of it, and he knoweth the place thereof.

24 For he beholdeth the ends of the world: and looketh on all things that are under heaven.

25 Who made a weight for the winds, and weighed the waters by measure.

26 When he gave a law for the rain, and a way for the sounding storms.

27 Then he saw it, and declared, and prepared, and searched it.

28 And he said to man: Behold the fear of the Lord, that is wisdom: and to depart from evil, is understanding.

CHAP. XXIX.

Job relates his former happiness, and the respect that all men showed him.

JOB also added, taking up his parable, and said:

2 Who will grant me, that I might be according to the months past, according to the days in which God kept me?

3 When his lamp shined over my head, and I walked by his light in darkness?

4 As I was in the days of my youth, when God was secretly in my tabernacle?

5 When the Almighty was with me: and my servants round about me?

6 When I washed my feet with butter, and the rock poured me out rivers of oil?

7 When I went out to the gate of the city, and in the street they prepared me a chair?

H.—The latter part of the verse would be rather, "the fishing for wisdom would be more difficult than that for pearls" (C.); or, "the extraction of wisdom is above the drawing forth of poninim." H.—The pinna is a kind of fish which is fastened to the bottom of the sea, by roots, of which the byssus was made. 1 Par. xv. 27. Pearls were commonly found in the Persian Gulf, near Idumea. The art of diving for them, and extracting them from the fish, was very difficult, but nothing in comparison with the labour requisite to discover wisdom. The ancients describe some pearls of a reddish gold colour. Athen. iii. 13. Jer. Lam. iv. 7.—Adam, which is interpreted red, in Jeremias, means also any thing very shining; in which sense the word purpureus is used. Hor. iv. Ode i. Boehart, Anim. p. 2, b. v., vi. (C.) and t. iii. 681, 91. The opinion of this author seems preferable to that of Hutchinson and Cooke, who would translate poninim (H.) by "loadstones or magnets," which the former says are like "reddish clay," though they are really of a dusky iron grey, sometimes tinged with brown or red. This complexion would not be very beautiful.

VER. 19. Ethiopia, on the east of the Red Sea. Pliny (vi. 29) mentions the isle of Chuthis, which was also famous for the topaz.—Dyeing. Heb. cothom, (H.) which we have observed relates to gold, ver. 16.

VER. 25. Measure. He regulates the winds, and knows the drops of water, (H.) which to man is impossible. Prov. xvi. 2.

VER. 28. Understanding. This is the duty of man, and a thing of the utmost importance. This teaches us to adore God's judgments (C.) in silence. H.—It is the most important instruction of the whole book. Pineda.

CHAP. XXIX. VER. 2. Me. Job perceiving that his friends made no reply, (C.) and yet did not appear satisfied, (H.) explains how he had behaved in prosperity, in answer to the insinuations of Elihu (chap. xxii. 5); and what miseries he now experienced, though he maintains these were not inflicted on account of his sins.

VER. 4. Youth. Heb. also "autumn or winter," which are seasons of repose, when people enjoy the fruits of their labours.—Tabernacle, and all consulted me as an oracle. C.—Sept. "when God made the visit of my house," (H.) and filled it with blessings, like that of Obadiah. 2 Kings vi. 12.

VER. 6. Butter. Many understand "cream." But butter was used to anoint the body, as well as oil.—Oil. These hyperbolic expressions denote the utmost fertility. Gen. xlix. 11. C.—Sept. have "milk."

VER. 7. To the gate. Sept. "early."—Chair, or throne, where Job sat in judgment. H.—It appears evident that he was the prince in his city. Idumea had at first several petty kings at the same time. Gen. xxxvi. 15. C.—But Job had several princes (ver. 9. H.) under him. Pineda.

8 The young men saw me, and hid themselves; and the old men rose up and stood.

9 The princes ceased to speak, and laid the finger on their mouth.

10 The rulers held their peace, and their tongue cleaved to their throat.

11 The ear that heard me, blessed me, and the eye that saw me, gave witness to me:

12 Because I had delivered the poor man that cried out; and the fatherless that had no helper.

13 The blessing of him that was ready to perish came upon me, and I comforted the heart of the widow.

14 I was clad with justice: and I clothed myself with my judgment as with a robe and a diadem.

15 I was an eye to the blind, and a foot to the lame.

16 I was the father of the poor: and the cause which I knew not, I searched out most diligently.

17 I broke the jaws of the wicked man, and out of his teeth I took away the prey.

18 And I said: I shall die in my nest, and as a palm-tree shall multiply my days.

19 My root is opened beside the waters, and dew shall continue in my harvest.

20 My glory shall always be renewed, and my bow in my hand shall be repaired.

21 They that heard me, waited for my sentence, and being attentive held their peace at my counsel.

22 To my words they durst add nothing, and my speech dropped upon them.

23 They waited for me as for rain, and they opened their mouth as for a latter shower.

24 If at any time I laughed on them, they believed not, and the light of my countenance fell not on the earth.

25 If I had a mind to go to them, I sat first, and when I sat as a king, with his army standing about him, yet I was a comforter of them that mourned.

VER. 11. Gave. Sept. "winked," through approbation. C.

VER. 16. Diligently, not passing sentence at random. I also endeavoured to do justice to those who durst not make any complaint. The prince ought to have an eye to all things. C.

VER. 18. Nest, in security, and among my children. C.—Palm-tree. Sept. "But I said, My youth shall grow old like the shoot of the palm-tree: I shall live a long time." This is clearly the meaning of this version, (H.) as appears from the word στέλεχος, "a shoot, (C.) or trunk." M.—Yet as φῶνιξ signifies also "a Phœnician, and the phœnix," some have explained this passage of the latter, which seems agreeable to the mention of a nest. Palm-trees live a long time, and multiply shoots all round them surprisingly. Pliny, xiii. 4, and xvi. 44.—Yet the Scripture never elsewhere uses the term nest for this tree. The moderns generally translate, "I shall multiply my days like the sand," which is a very common expression. C. Diss.—The following verse seems, however, favourable to the sense of the Sept. and Vulg., though the heavy nature of sand, which "remains" in its place, might serve to express the confidence which Job had of continuing for a long time in the midst of prosperity. H.

VER. 19. Harvest. Prot. "branch." Psal. i. 3; Isa. xviii. 4. H.

VER. 20. Bow, strength. I thought my glory would never end. M.

VER. 23. Shower, in autumn, at which season only, and in spring, it rained in those countries. C. Deut. xi. 14. M.—It would, of course, be very acceptable after the drought of summer. Prov. xvi. 15.

VER. 24. Earth, with neglect. C.—My attendants could scarcely believe their own eyes through joy, (H.) when I assumed a more familiar air with them. C.—They still revered my authority. M.

VER. 25. With. Heb. "in his army, like one comforting people in mourning." H.

CHAP. XXX. VER. 1. Flock, to watch over them. Sanchez. C.—I had so little confidence in them, (H.) or they were so very mean. C.—They were not as well fed as my dogs. Nicetas.—Job does not speak this out of contempt, as he was affable to all. But this proverbial expression denotes how vile these people were. M.

VER. 2. And they. Heb. "Their old age is perished." They were good for nothing all their lives. C.

CHAP. XXX.

Job shows the wonderful change of his temporal estate, from welfare to great calamity.

BUT now the younger in time scorn me, whose fathers I would not have set with the dogs of my flock:

2 The strength of whose hands was to me as nothing, and they were thought unworthy of life itself.

3 Barren with want and hunger, who gnawed in the wilderness, disfigured with calamity and misery.

4 And they eat grass, and barks of trees, and the root of junipers was their food.

5 Who snatched up these things out of the valleys, and when they had found any of them, they ran to them with a cry.

6 They dwelt in the desert places of torrents, and in caves of the earth, or upon the gravel.

7 They pleased themselves among these kinds of things, and counted it delightful to be under the briars.

8 The children of foolish and base men, and not appearing at all upon the earth.

9 Now I am turned into their song, and am become their by-word.

10 They abhor me, and flee far from me, and are not afraid to spit in my face.

11 For he hath opened his quiver, and hath afflicted me, and hath put a bridle into my mouth.

12 At the right hand of my rising, my calamities forthwith arose: they have overthrown my feet, and have overwhelmed me with their paths as with waves.

13 They have destroyed my ways, they have lain in wait against me, and they have prevailed, and there was none to help.

14 They have rushed in upon me, as when a wall is broken, and a gate opened, and have rolled themselves down to my miseries.

15 I am brought to nothing: as a wind thou hast

VER. 4. Grass. The Heb. moluē, is rendered halima by the Sept. (H.) and Bochart would translate, "who gather the halima from the bush." C.—Prot. "who cut up mallows by the bushes, and juniper roots for their meat." H.—Rothmam may (H.) designate any "shrubs or wild herbs," as the Sept. and Symmachus have explained it. C.

VER. 5. Who. Sept. "through excessive hunger. Robbers rushed upon me." Prot. "They were driven forth from among men (they cried after them as after a thief)." H.

VER. 7. Pleased. Heb. "brayed." C.—Briars. Prot. "nettles." They were driven from the society of men, and forced to abscond. H.

VER. 8. And not. Heb. "viler than the earth." Prot.

VER. 11. For he. Prot. "Because he hath loosed my cord, and afflicted me, they have also let loose the bridle before me," (H.) being no longer under any restraint.

VER. 12. Forthwith. Heb. prēe seems to be translated (H.) by three terms, rising, calamities, and forthwith, as it denotes "a bud" which suddenly appears. C.—Sept. Βλαστὸν, "On the right hand of the bud they rose up." H.—Heb. "Youth stood up on the right," to accuse me (Psal. cviii. 6); or, "Scarcely had I begun to flourish, when they rose up," &c. The days of prosperity soon vanished, (C.) and young men were ready to insult the distressed, and, as it were, to trip them up. M.—Sept. "they stretched out their feet and trampled upon me, that they might destroy me." H.

VER. 13. Help them, or me. C. Sept. "they took off my garment." H.—Job seemed to be besieged, and could not escape. C.

VER. 14. Down (deoluti sunt). They have proceeded to aggravate my misfortunes. H.—"They came upon me as a wide breaking in of waters: in the desolation they rolled themselves upon me." Prot.

VER. 15. Nothing. Heb. "terror." H.—Desire. Heb. "princess' reason." C.—Prot. "soul." Sept. "my hope has flown away like wind." H.

VER. 16. Fadeth. Heb. "is poured out," (H.) ready to take its flight. Psal. xli. 5.

VER. 17. They that. Heb. "my sinews take no rest." Sept. "are dissolved." H.—The worms prey upon me, and I am like one in a raging fever. C.

taken away my desire: and my prosperity hath passed away like a cloud.

16 And now my soul fadeth within myself, and the days of affliction possess me.

17 In the night my bone is pierced with sorrows: and they that feed upon me, do not sleep.

18 With the multitude of them, my garment is consumed, and they have girded me about as with the collar of my coat.

19 I am compared to dirt, and am likened to embers and ashes.

20 I cry to thee, and thou hearest me not: I stand up, and thou dost not regard me.

21 Thou art changed to be cruel toward me, and in the hardness of thy hand thou art against me.

22 Thou hast lifted me up, and set me as it were upon the wind, and thou hast mightily dashed me.

23 I know that thou wilt deliver me to death, where a house is appointed for every one that liveth.

24 But yet thou stretchest not forth thy hand to their consumption: and if they shall fall down thou wilt save.

25 I wept heretofore for him that was afflicted, and my soul had compassion on the poor.

26 I expected good things, and evils are come upon me: I waited for light, and darkness broke out.

27 My inner parts have boiled without any rest, the days of affliction have prevented me.

28 I went mourning without indignation; I rose up, and cried in the crowd.

29 I was the brother of dragons, and companion of ostriches.

30 My skin is become black upon me, and my bones are dried up with heat.

31 My harp is turned to mourning, and my organ into the voice of those that weep.

CHAP. XXXI.

Job, to defend himself from the unjust judgments of his friends, gives a sincere account of his own virtues.

VER. 18. Coat. The worms are so numerous, (M.) or my enemies pour upon me. C.—Sept. “with great power He (God; Prot. my disease) has seized me by the garment.”

VER. 19. I am. Heb. “He hath cast me into the mire;” (Prot.) or, “He regards me as dirt; my portion is on the earth and dust.” H.—All look upon me with horror and contempt. C.

VER. 20. Not is supplied by Prot. in the second part of the verse from the first (H.); as this construction is not unusual in the Heb. Sept. “they have stood up, and have considered me,” (C.) to procure my entire ruin. H.

VER. 22. Dashed me in pieces, as if I had been raised so high for that purpose. Heb. “thou hast dissolved my substance,” wisdom, &c.—“Thou hast cast me far away from salvation.” Sept. and Theodot. II.

VER. 24. Consumption. Thou dealest mercifully with other people: but all the effects of thy anger fall upon me, even here. Sept. “O that I might lay hands on myself, or desire another to do this for me!” Heb. has nothing similar; but it is very obscure: “He will not, however, stretch forth his hand to the grave; and when they are wounded, they are healed.” C.—Prot. “grave, though they cry in his destruction.” H.

VER. 28. Mourning. Heb. “blackened without the sun.” H.—Bile has disfigured my countenance, through excessive sorrow. Ver. 30.

VER. 29. Brother of dragons, &c. Imitating these creatures in their lamentable noise. Ch.—I was like those beasts which retire in order to lament. W.

CHAP. XXXI. VER. 1. I made. Job is compelled to proclaim his own praises for his vindication, as S. Paul was, being at the same time convinced that he had only done his duty. Luke xvii. 19. This is the third part of his discourse. Having given a picture of his prosperous and of his miserable condition, he observes that the latter was not inflicted in consequence of any misconduct, since he had always been very attentive to avoid (C.) the most remote danger of offending God, or his neighbour. H.—That I. Heb. “for why should I think upon a virgin?” H.—Why should I expose myself (C.) by indiscreet looks, (H.) since the passage from the eye to the heart is so easy. Eccles. ii. 10. M.—In the war-

I MADE a covenant with my eyes, that I would not so much as think upon a virgin.

2 For what part should God from above have in me, and what inheritance the Almighty from on high?

3 Is not destruction to the wicked, and aversion to them that work iniquity?

4 Doth not he consider my ways, and number all my steps?

5 If I have walked in vanity, and my foot hath made haste to deceit:

6 Let him weigh me in a just balance, and let God know my simplicity.

7 If my step hath turned out of the way, and if my heart hath followed my eyes, and if a spot hath cleaved to my hands:

8 Then let me sow, and let another eat: and let my offspring be rooted out.

9 If my heart hath been deceived upon a woman, and if I have laid wait at my friend's door:

10 Let my wife be the harlot of another, and let other men lie with her.

11 For this is a heinous crime, and a most grievous iniquity.

12 It is a fire that devoureth even to destruction, and rooteth up all things that spring.

13 If I have despised to abide judgment with my manservant, or my maid-servant, when they had any controversy against me:

14 For what shall I do when God shall rise to judge? and when he shall examine, what shall I answer him?

15 Did not he that made me in the womb make him also: and did not one and the same form me in the womb?

16 If I have denied to the poor what they desired and have made the eyes of the widow wait:

17 If I have eaten my morsel alone, and the fatherless hath not eaten thereof:

18 (For from my infancy mercy grew up with me: and it came out with me from my mother's womb:)

fare between the flesh and the spirit, Job deemed this precaution necessary, (W.) and was thus preserved from carnal thoughts. S. Greg. xx. 2.

VER. 5. Vanity, or hypocrisy. (C.) so as to overreach others. M.

VER. 6. Simplicity, and “uprightness.” Thomi. H.

VER. 7. Eyes. Sixtus V. read, “If my eye hath followed my heart.” C. Job kept the utmost restraint both upon his eyes and heart, that no evil impressions from exterior objects might cause his ruin. Num. xv. 39. II.

VER. 9. Door. to seduce his wife. C. M.

VER. 10. Let. Heb. “Let my wife grind for another, and let others bend over her,” urging her to work like the meanest slave. C.—Sept. “Let my wife please (Græc substitutes λ for ρ, and reads ἀλίσαι, grind for) another, and my little children be brought low.” H.—Yet the sense of the Vulg. is most followed. Eccli. xlvii. 21; Lam. v. 13.

VER. 11. This adultery, to which I might have given way, and that of others with my wife, (H.) which would have been a requital, of which I could not indeed have complained, (M.) but which is nevertheless a most heinous offence. H.—Iniquity. Heb. “a crime of judgment,” or capital. Gen. xxxviii. 24. C.—The canons of the Church (H.) have ranked adultery with murder and idolatry, which shows the horror in which it is holden. C.

VER. 12. Spring; the children. Eccli. xxiii. 35; Wisd. iv. 3. C.—Prot. “all mine increase.” H.—Adulteresses were formerly consigned to the flames.

VER. 13. Me, in private; as slaves had no redress in the common courts of judicature. We cannot but admire Job's humility and noble sentiments of God, (C.) whose majesty will eclipse all human grandeur, and place the master and the servant on the same level. S. Greg. S. Aug. de Civ. Dei x. 25. Ephes. vi. 9; Col. iv. 1.

VER. 18. Womb. I was of a compassionate disposition, with which I always corresponded. S. Greg. Heb. “from my youth, pity, (cab, which Prot. translate ‘as with a father.’ H.) grew up with me; and from my birth I have preserved it!” C.—Prot. “From my youth he was brought up with me, as with a father, and I have guided her (the widow, margin) from my mother's womb.” Sept “I

19 If I have despised him that was perishing for want of clothing, and the poor man that had no covering :

20 If his sides have not blessed me, and if he were not warmed with the fleece of my sheep :

21 If I have lifted up my hand against the fatherless, even when I saw myself superior in the gate :

22 Let my shoulder fall from its joint, and let my arm, with its bones, be broken.

23 For I have always feared God as waves swelling over me, and his weight I was not able to bear.

24 If I have thought gold my strength, and have said to fine gold : My confidence.

25 If I have rejoiced over my great riches, and because my hand had gotten much.

26 If I beheld the sun when it shined, and the moon going in brightness :

27 And my heart in secret hath rejoiced, and I have kissed my hand with my mouth :

28 Which is a very great iniquity, and a denial against the most high God.

29 If I have been glad at the downfall of him that hated me, and have rejoiced that evil had found him.

30 For I have not given my mouth to sin by wishing a curse to his soul.

31 If the men of my tabernacle have not said : Who will give us of his flesh that we may be filled ?

32 The stranger did not stay without ; my door was open to the traveller.

33 If as a man I have hid my sin, and have concealed my iniquity in my bosom.

34 If I have been afraid at a very great multitude, and fed him as a father," Theodotion adds, "and was his leader from," &c. It was my earliest delight to assist the afflicted orphan and widow. H.

VER. 20. Blessed me for clothing. M.

VER. 21. Gate, in judgment, (C.) where I was the supreme judge, (H.) and none could resist me.

VER. 22. With. Heb. "from its bone," at the elbow. Sept. C.

VER. 27. Rejoiced. Heb. and Chal. "been seduced" to idolatry. M.—The worship of the sun and moon was most ancient. Eze. viii. 16.—Mouth, to testify respect and admiration. This custom prevailed in many nations. The Syrians still extend their hands towards the altar, and then apply them to their mouth and eyes, when the body and blood of Christ are offered in the Mass. Life of M. de Chateaul. C.—Sept. (26) "Do I not see the shining sun eclipsed, (H.) and the moon disappear, for light does not belong to them," but to the Creator, from whom we have every thing (C.) ; so that we should not swell with pride. Theodotion adds, (27) "and if my heart was secretly deceived." Sept. continue, "if indeed, putting my hand to my mouth, I kissed, (28) this would also be imputed to me as a great transgression, because I should have acted falsely before the most high God." H.

VER. 29. Rejoiced. Heb. "lifted up myself." Sept. "said in my heart, well, well ;" H.

VER. 30. For. Sept. "Then let mine ear hear my curse, and may I fall a prey to the whispers of my people."

VER. 31. Filled. If my servants have not testified sufficient affection for me, (H.) because I kept them under restraint, and obliged them to wait on my guests, (M. S. Greg.) I still would not omit that duty (ver. 32. H.) ; or if they gave way to the greatest excesses of rage, so as to threaten to devour me. I refrained from wishing any evil to my enemy. Ver. 30. C.—Sept. "If frequently my maids said, Who?" &c. Heb. "said not, Oh ! that we had of his flesh ! we cannot be satisfied." Prot. H.

VER. 33. A man. Heb. "Adam," who, to excuse himself, threw the blame upon Eve. Gen. iii. 12. C.—His posterity have too frequently imitated his example. The name of Adam often designates any man. H.—It was requisite that Job should assert his sincerity, that his friends might not suppose that he was actuated by self-love or obstinacy to defend his innocence. C.—Sept. "If falling into an involuntary fault I hid my sin, (for I feared not the crowd of people, that I should not plead before them,) but if I let the needy pass my gate with his bosom empty."

VER. 34. Have not. Heb. "that I kept silence, not going out of doors" to defend the innocent. H.—Moses commands judges to do their duty without fear. Exod. xxiii. 2.

VER. 35. He himself. Heb. "my adversary would write a book." His very accusation would establish my cause, provided he adhered to the truth. C.—I the contempt of kinsmen hath terrified me : and I have not rather held my peace, and not gone out of the door.

35 Who would grant me a hearer, that the Almighty may hear my desire : and that he himself that judges would write a book ;

36 That I may carry it on my shoulder, and put it about me as a crown ?

37 At every step of mine I would pronounce it, and offer it as to a prince.

38 If my land cry against me, and with it the furrows thereof mourn :

39 If I have eaten the fruits thereof without money, and have afflicted the soul of the tillers thereof :

40 Let thistles grow up to me, instead of wheat, and thorns instead of barley.

[The words of Job are ended.]

CHAP. XXXII.

Eliu is angry both with Job and his friends. He boasts of himself.

SO these three men ceased to answer Job, because he seemed just to himself.

2 And Eliu, the son of Barachel, the Buzite, of the kindred of Ram, was angry, and was moved to indignation : now he was angry against Job, because he said he was just before God.

3 And he was angry with his friends, because they had not found a reasonable answer, but only had condemned Job.

4 So Eliu waited while Job was speaking, because they were his elders that were speaking.

5 But when he saw that the three were not able to answer, he was exceedingly angry.

would carry it about as a trophy. H.—A book. The judge wrote down the sentence. Job appeals to God, and fears not being condemned.

VER. 36. Crown. This shows that something pliable was then used to write on.

VER. 37. To a. Heb. "as a prince would I approach to him," and not fear my adversary. H.

VER. 38. Mourn, as if I possessed the land unjustly, or had committed some crime.

VER. 39. Money. Or paying for them. M.—And have. Prot. "or have caused the owners thereof to lose their life."

VER. 40. Thorns. Prot. "cockle." Marg. "noisome weeds." H.—Sept. Batos, "a briar." H.—Ended. Many Latin editions omit these words with S. Greg., &c. The old Vulg. has et quiverunt verba Job, as a title. C.—Sept. place at the beginning of the next chapter, "And Job ceased to speak. His three friends also left off contending with Job ; for Job was just before them."

CHAP. XXXII. VER. 1. Himself. They thought it useless to say any more.

VER. 2. Buzite, a descendant of Buz, the son of Nachor. Gen. xxii. 21. C.—Of, &c. Sept. "of the country of Hus."—Ram. Chal. "Abraham" (M.) ; or rather (H.) this is put for Aram. Sym. "Syria." 2 Par. xxii. 5. Some suppose that Eliu sprung from Aram, the son of Esron, of the tribe of Juda. Others think that (C.) he was the same with Balaam. S. Jer. Ven. Bede.—He is never ranked among the friends of Job, as he perhaps did not come from a distance. His speech, or good intention, is not condemned by God ; and Job seems to have acquiesced in what he said. C.—This silence of the latter might rather proceed from a just (H.) contempt, as Eliu said nothing to the purpose ; many of his observations being palpably false, and others not at all controverted.—God also did not let Eliu pass entirely unnoticed ; but, in one line, showed his displeasure (chap. xxxviii. 2. Houbigant) : as Job perhaps did likewise, by repeating the same decision. Chap. xlii. 3. H.—Eliu vainly explains why he had not spoken before. He arraigns Job for asserting his own innocence, though the holy man only maintained that he was not punished thus for his crimes, according to the laws of vindictive justice (chap. xxvii. 2) ; much less did he pretend that he was juster than God, (chap. xxxv. 2,) as his adversary asserts ; taking thence occasion to praise the Divine wisdom and power, as if Job had called them in question. C.—God, whose eyes behold the smallest faults. M.—Heb. "rather on, or (H.) above God." C.—This young man, who was learned and proud, is the pattern of those hot disputants who set themselves above their elders. S. Greg. xxiii. 2. W.

VER. 3. Found. Heb. "produced an answer, but had still condemned Job" (H.) ; or, "had made Job wicked," by giving him occasion to blaspheme, in order to defend his own righteousness. C.—Sept. "they took it for granted (or laid it down as a fact, θεωρο) that he was a wretch." This was not true (H.) ; but they had also done their best to prove it. C.

6 Then Eliu, the son of Barachel, the Buzite, answered, and said: I am younger in days, and you are more ancient; therefore, hanging down my head, I was afraid to show you my opinion.

7 For I hoped that greater age would speak, and that a multitude of years would teach wisdom.

8 But, as I see, there is a spirit in men, and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth understanding.

9 They that are aged are not the wise men, neither do the ancients understand judgment.

10 Therefore I will speak: Hearken to me, I also will show you my wisdom.

11 For I have waited for your words, I have given ear to your wisdom, as long as you were disputing in words.

12 And as long as I thought you said something, I considered: but, as I see, there is none of you that can convince Job, and answer his words.

13 Lest you should say: We have found wisdom, God hath cast him down, not man.

14 He hath spoken nothing to me, and I will not answer him according to your words.

15 They were afraid, and answered no more, and they left off speaking.

16 Therefore, because I have waited, and they have not spoken: they stood, and answered no more:

17 I also will answer my part, and will show my knowledge.

18 For I am full of matter to speak of, and the spirit of my bowels straiteneth me.

19 Behold, my belly is as new wine which wanteth vent, which bursteth the new vessels.

20 I will speak, and take breath a little: I will open my lips, and will answer.

21 I will not accept the person of man, and I will not level God with man.

22 For I know not how long I shall continue, and whether after a while my Maker may take me away.

CHAP. XXXIII.

Eliu blames Job for asserting his own innocence.

VER. 6. Hanging. Heb. "I felt a reverential awe, (Sept. I was silent,) and durst not show," &c. H.

VER. 9. Aged: πολυχρονοι. Sept. Robim, "the Rabbins," (H.) the "great ones," placed in authority. C.

VER. 11. Disputing. Heb. "searching out words," or arguments. H.

VER. 13. Man. You seem to think this a convincing proof that Job is guilty (Ven. Bede. H.): but it is no such thing. You would fain excuse yourselves from saying any more, for fear of causing him pain, which is already very great; and you vainly imagine that you may thus leave him to be judged by God. We must however convince Job. C.

VER. 14. He; Job, or God. I do not pretend that I have had any revelation, like Eliphaz and Sophar. Chap. iv. 12, and xi. 5. Job has addressed himself to you (C.); but I shall not answer him as you have done. M.

VER. 15. They. Eliu speaks thus contemptuously of the three friends, as if they had been absent. In the former verse he spoke to them: now he turns to Job. Heb. "they were amazed." H.

VER. 18. Me. And forces me to speak. Jer. v. 24, and xx. 9.

VER. 19. Vessels, made of skins. Heb. abuth. H.

VER. 21. Man. Heb. "give flattering titles unto man." Prot. "I do not respect a mortal." Sept. (H.) "Nothing shall make me conceal the truth: I will give things their proper names." Job seemed to him to have arrogated to himself the perfection of God, in maintaining his own innocence. C.—He promises to stand up in defence of the Almighty, (M.) as his advocate. C.

VER. 22. Atrety. I shall therefore speak with the utmost caution, (H.) as one who must shortly appear before the Divine tribunal. M.—Heb. "For I know not how to call things by their surnames, (C.) or titles of vanity (H.); If I do, may my Creator soon (C.) take me away." Sept. "I know not how to admire his face. If it be not so, the worms shall consume me." H.

HEAR, therefore, O Job, my speeches, and hearken to all my words.

2 Behold now I have opened my mouth, let my tongue speak within my jaws.

3 My words are from my upright heart, and my lips shall speak the pure sentence.

4 The Spirit of God made me, and the breath of the Almighty gave me life.

5 If thou canst answer me, and stand up against my face.

6 Behold God hath made me as well as thee, and of the same clay I also was formed.

7 But yet let not my wonder terrify thee, and let not thy eloquence be burdensome to thee.

8 Now thou hast said in my hearing, and I have heard the voice of thy word:

9 I am clean, and without sin: I am unspotted, and there is no iniquity in me.

10 Because he hath found complaints against me, therefore he hath counted me for his enemy.

11 He hath put my feet in the stocks, he hath observed all my paths.

12 Now this is the thing in which thou art not justified: I will answer thee, that God is greater than man.

13 Dost thou strive against him, because he hath not answered thee to all words?

14 God speaketh once, and repeateth not the self-same thing the second time.

15 By a dream in a vision by night, when deep sleep falleth upon men, and they are sleeping in their beds.

16 Then he openeth the ears of men, and teaching, instructeth them in what they are to learn.

17 That he may withdraw a man from the things he is doing, and may deliver him from pride.

18 Rescuing his soul from corruption: and his life from passing to the sword.

19 He rebuketh also by sorrow in the bed, and he maketh all his bones to wither.

20 Bread becometh abominable to him in his life, and to his soul the meat which before he desired.

CHAP. XXXIII. VER. 3. Sentence. Some Edit. have scientiam, "knowledge," with the Heb. C.

VER. 4. Spirit. We are therefore equal: M.—Thou canst not fear being overpowered with the Divine majesty in this dispute. Chap. xiii. 21. C.—Life. Sept. "instruction." H.

VER. 6. Formed. Job had expressed a desire to plead before a man. Chap. ix. 32, and xiii. 19, and xxxi. 35. Eliu offers himself to maintain the cause of God. C.

VER. 7. Wonder (miraculum). Heb. "terror," (H.) in allusion to Job's words. Chap. ix. 34.—Eloquence. Heb. "hand." C.—Sept. "the dread of me shall not cast thee down, nor my hand be heavy upon thee."

VER. 11. Stocks. Chap. xiii. 14, and xiv. 16. Eliu interprets the words in the worst sense, though Job had only expostulated with God on the treatment which he received, testifying a great love and confidence in him. He acknowledges some want of knowledge. Chap. xlii. 3. C.

VER. 13. Because. Sept. "Thou hast said, Why has not He heard every word of my pleading or judgment." Aquila and Theod. "for all his words are unanswerable." Prot. "He giveth not account of any of his matters." H.

VER. 14. Time. One decision ought to suffice; and God had declared Job innocent. Chap. i. 8, &c. W.—His decrees are immutable; and yet thou wouldst have him to explain his conduct, as if he could be under a mistake, and correct it. He manifests his will, and it is our business to be attentive. We cannot expect that he should speak twice, though he does so frequently in his great mercy. Heb. "God speaketh once, and he regardeth not a second time." C.—Sept. "But the second time, (15) a dream," &c. H.—Eliu specifies three methods by which God declares his will (ver. 26): 1. By vision; 2. by afflictions; 3. by the voice of angels, or of preachers, ver. 19, 23.

VER. 17. Him. Sept. "his body from the fall [of iniquity]." Grabe. H.

21 His flesh shall be consumed away, and his bones that were covered, shall be made bare.

22 His soul hath drawn near to corruption, and his life to the destroyers.

23 If there shall be an angel speaking for him, one among thousands, to declare man's uprightness.

24 He shall have mercy on him, and shall say: Deliver him, that he may not go down to corruption: I have found wherein I may be merciful to him.

25 His flesh is consumed with punishments, let it return to the days of his youth.

26 He shall pray to God, and he will be gracious to him: and he shall see his face with joy, and he will render to man his justice.

27 He shall look upon men, and shall say: I have sinned, and indeed I have offended, and I have not received what I have deserved.

28 He hath delivered his soul from going into destruction, that it may live and see the light.

29 Behold, all these things God worketh three times within every one.

30 That he may withdraw their souls from corruption, and enlighten them with the light of the living.

31 Attend, Job, and hearken to me; and hold thy peace, whilst I speak.

32 But if thou hast any thing to say, answer me, speak: for I would have thee to appear just.

33 And if thou have not, hear me: hold thy peace, and I will teach thee wisdom.

CHAP. XXXIV.

Eliu charges Job with blasphemy: and sets forth the power and justice of God.

AND Eliu continued his discourse, and said:

2 Hear ye, wise men, my words, and ye learned hearken to me:

3 "For the ear trieth words, and the mouth discerneth meats by the taste.

4 Let us choose to us judgment, and let us see among ourselves what is the best.

* Supra, xii. 11.—b Deut. x. 17; 2 Par. xix. 7; Wisd. vi. 8; Eccli. xxxv. 16;

VER. 21. Barc. The skin will scarcely cover them. He will appear ghastly, like a skeleton. C.—Heb. "his bones . . . shall stick out." Prot. H.

VER. 22. Destroyers; the worms in the grave, (H.) or to sicknesses, (M.) "which bring on death." Pagnin, mortiferis.

VER. 23. Angel, by secret inspirations, (S. Tho. T. &c.) or a man sent by God to announce the truths of salvation. Mariana.—Man's, or "to man." C.—Heb. "a messenger with him, an interpreter, one . . . to declare to man his uprightness." Prot. (H.) "If there be any merit in him, the angel comforter, chosen from a thousand accusers, is ready to declare to the son of man his rectitude." Sept. "If there be a thousand destroying angels, not one of them shall hurt him; if he consider in his heart to be converted unto the Lord. Though he (the angel) lay before man his reproof, and show his folly, He (God) will take hold of him, that he may not die. He will renew his flesh as the plaster of a wall, and fill his bones with marrow: (25) he will make his flesh soft like that of an infant, and will place him in manhood among men." H.—But this is different from the Heb. C.—The intercession of angels is very powerful. They are represented as suggesting motives, which prevail on God to show mercy. Ver. 24. H.

VER. 29. Times, or often. God instructs man by visions, sickness, and the intercession and inspirations of angels. Ver. 14. C.

CHAP. XXXIV. VER. 5. Judgment. Chap. xxvii. 2. Job had used this expression, but only to intimate that strict justice did not take place, as he thought his faults had not deserved so severe a chastisement. He did not pretend that God was unjust, or that he was quite blameless; and he had so explicitly declared his sentiments, that Eliu could not well be ignorant of them. C.

VER. 6. There. Sept. "he has been deceived;" ελεσθαι. Heb. "I will convict my judge of lying;" or (C.) Prot. "should I lie against my right?" H.—Job, in the excess of grief, had expressed himself forcibly. Chap. xix. 6, and xxiii. 7. But great deductions must be made from such hyperboles; and he had frequently praised the mercy and justice of God, and his just punishment of the wicked.

5 For Job hath said: I am just, and God hath overthrown my judgment.

6 For in judging me there is a lie: my arrow is violent without any sin.

7 What man is there like Job, who drinketh up scorn-like water?

8 Who goeth in company with them that work iniquity, and walketh with wicked men?

9 For he hath said: Man shall not please God, although he run with him.

10 Therefore, ye men of understanding, hear me: far from God be wickedness, and iniquity from the Almighty.

11 For he will render to a man his work, and according to the ways of every one he will reward them.

12 For, in very deed, God will not condemn without cause, neither will the Almighty pervert judgment.

13 What other hath he appointed over the earth? or whom hath he set over the world which he made?

14 If he turn his heart to him, he shall draw his spirit and breath unto himself.

15 All flesh shall perish together, and man shall return into ashes.

16 If then thou hast understanding, hear what is said, and hearken to the voice of my words.

17 Can he be healed that loveth not judgment? and how dost thou so far condemn him that is just?

18 Who saith to the king: Thou art an apostate. who calleth rulers ungodly:

19 "Who accepteth not the persons of princes: nor hath regarded the tyrant, when he contended against the poor man: for all are the work of his hands.

20 They shall suddenly die, and the people shall be troubled at midnight, and they shall pass, and take away the violent without hand.

21 For his eyes are upon the ways of men, and he considereth all their steps.

22 There is no darkness, and there is no shadow of death, where they may be hid who work iniquity.

Acts x. 34; Rom. ii. 11; Gal. ii. 6; Eph. vi. 9; Col. iii. 25; 1 Pet. i. 17.

He had indeed excepted himself from the number; and Eliu ought to have proved that he was wrong in this respect. But he seems to have all along evaded or mistaken the point under dispute. C.

VER. 8. Goeth in. Sept. insert a negation, which is not found in Heb., Chal., &c. They may be understood to speak ironically. C.

VER. 9. With him, and strive to please him. Horrible blasphemy! of which Job was incapable: as if God were a cruel master, and threw us into despair. He had asserted that God punishes the wicked, and often treats his friends with the like severity, (chap. ix. 22, and xxx. 26,) in this world: which is very true. C.—Sept. "Say not that man is not visited. He is indeed visited by the Lord." H.

VER. 13. Earth? If God cannot be unjust, hath he given the administration of the world to some other, who may have been deceived? This will not be asserted. Heb. "who hath visited the earth for him?" or, "who hath set him over the earth?" Is he a hired judge, who may be bribed? C.

VER. 17. Judgment. How can one hope for redress from God, while he condemns his conduct? M.—How can we bring Job to a sense of his duty, since he entertains such perverse notions? Heb. "Shall he hold dominion, who hates justice?" If God be unjust, does he deserve our adoration? (C.) or, "ought not the person to be put in prison, who resists judgment?" Grot. "If thou dost not think that He who bates crimes, and destroys the impious, is eternal and just?" Sept. H.

VER. 18. Who. Theod. in Sept. "wicked is he who says to the king, thou artest contrary to the law; and to the rulers, thou most impious." H.—Apostate. Heb. "Belial."

VER. 19. Tyrant. This title is not always odious. It formerly was given to all princes, and came to be used in a bad sense, on account of the misconduct of some kings of Sicily.

VER. 20. They, the wicked, whatever may be their station in life. H.—

23 For it is no longer in the power of man to enter into judgment with God.

24 He shall break in pieces many and innumerable, and shall make others to stand in their stead.

25 For he knoweth their works: and therefore he shall bring night on them, and they shall be destroyed.

26 He hath struck them as being wicked, in open sight.

27 Who, as it were on purpose, have revolted from him, and would not understand all his ways.

28 So that they caused the cry of the needy to come to him, and he heard the voice of the poor.

29 For when he granteth peace, who is there that can condemn? When he hideth his countenance, who is there that can behold him, whether it regard nations, or all men.

30 Who maketh a man that is a hypocrite to reign for the sins of the people?

31 Seeing then I have spoken of God, I will not hinder thee in thy turn.

32 If I have erred, teach thou me: if I have spoken iniquity, I will add no more.

33 Doth God require it of thee, because it hath displeased thee? for thou beganst to speak, and not I: but if thou know any thing better, speak.

34 Let men of understanding speak to me, and let a wise man hearken to me.

35 But Job hath spoken foolishly, and his words sound not discipline.

36 My father, let Job be tried even to the end: cease not from the man of iniquity.

37 Because he addeth blasphemy upon his sins, let him be tied fast in the mean time among us; and then let him provoke God to judgment with his speeches.

CHAP. XXXV.

Eliu declares that the good or evil done by man cannot reach God.

MOREOVER Eliu spoke these words.

2 Doth thy thought seem right to thee, that thou shouldst say: I am more just than God?

Troubled, or make an insurrection. C.—This often proves the ruin of tyrants. H. Hand, by the destroying angel. C.

VER. 23. Man. Heb. "He will not lay upon man (C.) more than right (Prot. H.) to," &c. After once passing sentence, all is over. C.—When man has fallen into sin, he cannot with a good grace contend with God. C.

VER. 27. All. Prot. "Any of." The wicked observe none of God's commandments as they ought. He that offends in one becomes guilty of all. James ii. 10.

VER. 29. Condemn, either God or the person whom he approves. Does not he exercise dominion over all? C.—Men. Lit. "all men." Heb. "a man."

VER. 30. People. A hypocrite denotes one infected with all sorts of crimes. S. Iren. v. 24. Such a king is sometimes given to punish a wicked people. Osee xiii. 11; Isa. iii. 4. This sense is beautiful, and followed by the Chal., Sept., &c. We may explain the Heb. in like manner, by neglecting the Masoretic points. C.—Prot. "That the hypocrite reign not, lest the people be insnared." H.—Heb. "He overturns the throne of hypocrites, on account of the scandal of the people," or "he delivers the people from servitude." The sense of the Vulg. seems preferable. C.

VER. 33. It, my iniquity. M.—Will God make thee accountable for it? H.—Yea, if thou keep silence, (C.) thou wilt seem to connive at it. H.—He wishes to engage Job to speak. Heb. may be translated many ways. C.—Prot. "Should it be according to thy mind? He will recompense it whether thou refuse, or whether thou choose; and not I. Therefore speak what thou knowest." H.

VER. 36. Father. From God all the rights of a father spring. Eph. iii. 15. C.—Sept. "No indeed: but learn, Job, answer not like fools." Prot. "my desire is, (marg. my father,) that Job may be tried unto the end, because of his answers for the wicked." H.—He has imitated their wicked discourses; let his chastisement deter others. C.

VER. 37. Fast, and pressed by arguments. M. C.—Heb. "since he adds crime (C. Prot. rebellion) to his sin, and clappeth his hands among us, and multiplieth his words against the Lord."

CHAP. XXXV. VER. 2. God. Eliu being greatly mortified at Job's silence, uses still more provoking expressions, and pretends to refute one of the holy man's

3 For thou saidst: That which is right doth not please thee: or what will it profit thee if I sin?

4 Therefore I will answer thy words, and thy friends with thee.

5 Look up to heaven and see, and behold the sky, that it is higher than thee.

6 If thou sin, what shalt thou hurt him? and if thy iniquities be multiplied, what shalt thou do against him?

7 And if thou do justly, what shalt thou give him, or what shall he receive of thy hand?

8 Thy wickedness may hurt a man that is like thee. and thy justice may help the son of man.

9 By reason of the multitude of oppressors they shall cry out: and shall wail for the violence of the arm of tyrants.

10 And he hath not said: Where is God, who made me, who hath given songs in the night?

11 Who teacheth us more than the beasts of the earth, and instructeth us more than the fowls of the air.

12 There shall they cry, and he will not hear, because of the pride of evil men.

13 God therefore will not hear in vain, and the Almighty will look into the causes of every one.

14 Yea, when thou shalt say: He considereth not: be judged before him, and expect him.

15 For he doth not now bring on his fury, neither doth he revenge wickedness exceedingly.

16 Therefore, Job opened his mouth in vain, and multiplieth words without knowledge.

CHAP. XXXVI.

Eliu proceeds in setting forth the justice and power of God.

ELIU also proceeded, and said:

2 Suffer me a little, and I will show thee: for I have yet somewhat to speak in God's behalf.

3 I will repeat my knowledge from the beginning, and I will prove my Maker just.

4 For, indeed, my words are without a lie, and perfect knowledge shall be proved to thee.

assertions, which never escaped his lips, though he had complained that God treated him as an enemy, and with more severity than his sins deserved (chap. vi. 2. C.); or that his affliction was greater than his sin. Chap. xxiii. 7, &c. Eliu therefore calumniate him. W.

VER. 3. Please thee, since thou punishest the guiltless. M.—If I sin. Job had not said so, but it seemed to follow from his expressions. Chap. xxi. 7. See Chap. xxii. 3.

VER. 5. Thee. Thy sin cannot hurt, nor thy virtue add any thing to God. He is not therefore actuated by resentment, or jealousy, but by justice. C.—He revenges the injury done by the sinner to himself. Ver. 8. S. Aug. Conf. iii. 8.—The inference is therefore wrong, (C.) that God will not regard the sins or punishment of men, because he thence derives no profit. Ver. 3. H.

VER. 9. Out. The wicked shall cry out, through vexation, but still they will not address themselves to God. Ver. 10. Why are they abandoned, but because He takes cognizance of all?

VER. 10. Songs. Arab. "thoughts," by means of visions. Chal. "where is the Lord, in whose presence the angels sing canticles of praise in the night?" C.—Sept. "who has ordered the night-watches" (H.); the stars, which display the power of God? His servants also are filled with interior joy, even in the midst of afflictions. C.

VER. 13. Vain. Heb. "falsehood." He will not relieve the hypocrite, who does not cry to him with sincerity. This conduct shows that God acts with discretion, and hears people according to their deserts. C.

VER. 14. Before him. Try whether the assertion be true. H.—Only change thy life, and hope in him, and thou wilt see the good effects. C.

VER. 15. For. Prot. "But now because it is not so, he hath visited in his anger; yet he (marg. Job) knoweth it not, in great extremity." H.—In this world God punishes not with rigour. C.

VER. 16. Knowledge. I have shown that God punishes or rewards according to our deserts, and is not indifferent about our sins. If Job have not experienced the Divine bounty, it is because he has not deserved it. C.

CHAP. XXXVI. VER. 3. Beginning. Heb. "afar" from that God, who is 5 God doth not cast away the mighty, whereas he himself also is mighty.

6 But he saveth not the wicked, and he giveth judgment to the poor.

7 He will not take away his eyes from the just, and he placeth kings on the throne for ever, and they are exalted.

8 And if they shall be in chains, and be bound with the cords of poverty :

9 He shall show them their works, and their wicked deeds, because they have been violent.

10 He also shall open their ear, to correct them : and shall speak, that they may return from iniquity.

11 If they shall hear and observe, they shall accomplish their days in good, and their years in glory.

12 But if they hear not, they shall pass by the sword, and shall be consumed in folly.

13 Dissemblers and crafty men prove the wrath of God, neither shall they cry when they are bound.

14 Their soul shall die in a storm, and their life among the effeminate.

15 He shall deliver the poor out of his distress, and shall open his ear in affliction.

16 Therefore he shall set thee at large out of the narrow mouth, and which hath no foundation under it : and the rest of thy table shall be full of fatness.

17 Thy cause hath been judged as that of the wicked, cause and judgment thou shalt recover.

18 Therefore, let not anger overcome thee, to oppress any man : neither let multitude of gifts turn thee aside.

19 Lay down thy greatness without tribulation, and all the mighty of strength.

20 Prolong not the night, that people may come up for them.

ancient, and not of human invention (Jer. xxiii. 23) ; or from the consideration of the heavens. C.

VER. 5. God. Sept. "Know that the Lord will not cast away the innocent." Theod. continues to ver. 12 : "The mighty, in strength of heart, (Wisd. vi.) will not make the impious live, and will render judgment to the poor." H. C.—"Behold God is mighty, and despiseth not any : mighty in strength and wisdom." Prot. H. C.

VER. 7. Just. Heb., Syr., &c., "the just man, he will place him with kings on the throne." C.

VER. 9. Violent, while in power and on the throne, or because even in a private station, their will has risen up in rebellion against God. H.—Poverty and afflictions are scourges, which are often inflicted by mercy, to bring us to a sense of our duty. C.

VER. 12. Folly. Heb. "without knowledge." He speaks of princes, (C.) and of all the wicked, who have not known the day of their visitation. H.

VER. 14. Storm. Heb. and Sept. "in youth," (H.) being suddenly cut off, without having deplored the sins of their youth. C.—Effeminate. Eliu compares those who will not attend unto God to the most infamous characters. C.—Sept. "and let their life be taken away by the angels" (H.) of death. Chap. xxxiii. 23. C.

VER. 16. He shall. He would have prevented thee from falling into this irremediable distress, if thou hadst imitated the poor who trust in Him. C.—Yea, he will still restore thee to favour, if thou wilt repent. H.—He will fill thee with joy and plenty. M.

VER. 17. Recover. Thou shalt be treated as thou hast treated others. Heb. is not well understood. It may be, "Thou hast spoken like the impious ; but judgment and justice rule. (18) Beware lest wrath overtake thee, so that thy prayers may not avert it. (19) Will He regard thy cries, thy riches, gold, or strength?" C.

VER. 19. Without, or before thou be forced by tribulation. M.—Lay aside all sentiments of pride, (S. Greg.) or keep in awe the mighty, who administer justice in thy name. M.—Prot. "Will he esteem thy riches? No, not gold, nor all the forces of strength." Sept. "Let not a willing mind incline thee unjustly to the prayer of the needy in distress." H.

VER. 20. Prolong not the night, &c. Prolong not causes that are brought before thee, but despatch, by early rising, the business of them that come up to thee. Ch.—Sept. "and all the men of power do not withdraw in the night" from just punishment. Theod. adds, "that the people may come up against them,"

21 Beware that thou turn not aside to iniquity : for this thou hast begun to follow after misery.

22 Behold, God is high in his strength, and none is like him among the lawgivers.

23 Who can search out his ways? or who can say to him : Thou hast wrought iniquity?

24 Remember that thou knowest not his work, concerning which men have sung.

25 All men see him, every one beholdeth afar off.

26 Behold, God is great, exceeding our knowledge : the number of his years is inestimable.

27 He lifteth up the drops of rain, and poureth out showers like floods :

28 Which flow from the clouds that cover all from above.

29 If he will spread out clouds as his tent,

30 And lighten with his light from above, he shall cover also the ends of the sea.

31 For by these he judgeth people, and giveth food to many mortals.

32 In his hands he hideth the light, and commandeth it to come again.

33 He showeth his friend concerning it, that it is his possession, and that he may come up to it.

CHAP. XXXVII.

Eliu goes on in his discourse, showing God's wisdom and power, by his wonderful works.

AT this my heart trembleth, and is moved out of its place.

2 Hear ye attentively the terror of his voice, and the sound that cometh out of his mouth.

3 He beholdeth under all the heavens, and his light is upon the ends of the earth.

4 After it a noise shall roar, he shall thunder with the to demand vengeance. Do strict justice both to the rich and to the poor, without pity or fear. H.

VER. 22. Lawgivers. Heb. mure, "a master." In Chal. "a sovereign." Grot., Sept. "what potentate is against him?" H.—What art thou, to dare thus to resist him? C.—S. Gregory (xxvii. 1) explains this as a prediction of Christ, "our singular lawgiver."

VER. 24. Not is omitted in Heb. and Sept. "Remember that thou magnify his work, which men behold;" Prot. (H.) or "thou hast magnified," formerly. Do so again.

VER. 25. All. The rest of this chapter, and the five first verses of the next, seem to be inserted in the Sept. from Theodotion. "Every man sees in himself how many mortals are wounded," &c.—Off, in the stars, &c., or in ancient times, what wonders God has performed. C.

VER. 27. Floods. God causes the water on the earth to evaporate, (C.) to form the clouds, (H.) which afterwards fall in torrents. M.—Theod. "the drops of rain are numbered by him," &c. Chap. xxvi. 8.

VER. 29. If. Heb. "Also can any understand the spreading out of the clouds, the elevation or noise of his pavilion?" H.

VER. 30. Ends. Lit. "the hinges," or poles, cardines. H.—Heb. "roots." Aristotle (Meteor. ii. 1) and Hesiod (Theog. 727) use the same term (C.) to denote the fountains which supply the sea. H.

VER. 31. Mortals. Heb. "in abundance." H.

VER. 32. Hands, or clouds, which are compared to a hand. 3 Kings xviii. 44. He opens his hand, and light appears. This expression denotes the utmost facility with which a very surprising thing is effected.—To come. Heb. "by this obstacle." He alludes to the sun's eclipse, as if God's hand covered its disk. C.—Prot. "He . . . commandeth it not to shine, by the cloud that cometh betwixt."

VER. 33. To it. The tabernacle of God is designed for his friends. Heb. is very obscure. "Thunder announces rain, and the very animals know it" (Virgil describes their signs, Geor. 1) ; or "His thunder announces from above the clouds his wrath to men." C.—"The noise thereof showeth concerning it, the cattle also concerning the vapour."

CHAP. XXXVII. VER. 1. This thunder, the effects of which are so terrible, that it is often styled the voice of God. C. Psal. xxviii. M.

VER. 4. After. Light travels faster than sound, (H.) though thunder and lightning are produced at the same instant. C.—Sept. "For he has done great things, which we have not understood." This is connected with chap. xxxvi. 24.

voice of his majesty, and shall not be found out, when his voice shall be heard.

5 God shall thunder wonderfully with his voice, he that doth great and unsearchable things.

6 He commandeth the snow to go down upon the earth, and the winter rain, and the shower of his strength.

7 He sealeth up the hand of all men, that every one may know his works.

8 Then the beast shall go into his covert, and shall abide in his den.

9 Out of the inner parts shall a tempest come, and cold out of the north.

10 When God bloweth there cometh frost, and again the waters are poured out abundantly.

11 Corn desireth clouds, and the clouds spread their light :

12 Which go round about, whithersoever the will of him that governeth them shall lead them, to whatsoever he shall command them upon the face of the whole earth :

13 Whether in one tribe, or in his own land, or in what place soever of his mercy he shall command them to be found.

14 Hearken to these things, Job : Stand, and consider the wondrous works of God.

15 Dost thou know when God commanded the rains, to show his light of his clouds ?

16 Knowest thou the great paths of the clouds, and the perfect knowledges ?

Then we read, (ver. 7.) "that man may know his own weakness." All the intermediate verses have been supplied by Origen from Theodotion, or others. H.

VER. 7. He sealeth up, &c. When he sends those showers of his strength; that is, those storms of rain, he seals up; that is, he shuts up the hands of men from their usual works abroad, and confines them within doors, to consider his works; or to foreast their works; that is, what they themselves are to do. Ch.

VER. 9. Parts. The south, (chap. ix. 9,) whence storms commonly came in that country, (C.) from the sea or desert of Idumea. H. Psal. lxxvii. 26; Zac. ix. 14; Isa. xxi. 1.—North wind, or pole. W.—Yet the south seems to be designated (ver. 17, and chap. xxxviii. 32); though cold comes from the north in Idumea as well as here. C.—Mozrim is rendered by Prot. "north." Marg. "scattering winds." Sept. ἀκρωτηρίων, "summits" of mountains.

VER. 13. Tribe. Heb. also, "for correction." H. Amos iv. 7.—Land of promise. Psal. lxxvii. 10.

VER. 15. Light: the rain-bow, according to the best interpreters; or the lightning. C.

VER. 16. Paths. Heb. "the balaneings of the clouds, the wondrous works of Him whose knowledge is perfect?" Chap. xxxvi. 4. Dost thou know what sustends the heavy clouds in the air? C.

VER. 17. Are. Heb. "How thy," &c. It is also beyond thy comprehension, why thou shouldst be too hot when the south wind blows (H.) moderately, though tempests generally proceed from the same quarter. Ver. 9. If thou art in the dark respecting these things, which thou feelest, how canst thou pretend to fathom and condemn the counsels of God? C.—Job was far from doing either. His friends rather undertook to explain God's reasons for punishing thus his servants, which Job acknowledged was to him a mystery, (H.) till God had enlightened him. Chap. xxii. 3. Houbigant.

VER. 18. Brass. Heb. "Hast thou with him stretched out (or beaten, as brass, rokāh; which word Moses uses for the firmament) the heavens, which are as solid as (Chal, and like) a molten looking-glass?" which was formerly made of metal. Exod. xxxviii. 8.

VER. 20. He shall be swallowed up. All that man can say, when he speaks of God, is so little and inconsiderable in comparison with the subject, that man is lost, and, as it were, swallowed up in so immense an ocean. Ch.

VER. 21. Light; being hindered by the clouds, and dazzled when they are removed. Yet we presume to judge of the secrets of Providence! C.—Away. As there is a constant vicissitude of these things, so there is of happiness and misery. M.—Sept. "For the light is not seen by all. It is refulgent in beauties, as that which comes thence upon the clouds." If therefore this light does not pervade all places, why should we wonder that all do not understand the ways of God? H.

VER. 22. Gold. Sept. "from the north, gold-coloured clouds. Above these, great is the praise and honour of the Almighty." H.—When the wind blows, the clouds are dispersed, and the sky appears serene. Each country has its peculiar advantages. In the north, Ophir, &c. may boast of gold: but what ought to be most conspicuous in the praises given to God, is a humble fear. C.

17 Are not thy garments hot, when the south wind blows upon the earth?

18 Thou perhaps hast made the heavens with him, which are most strong, as if they were of molten brass.

19 Show us what we may say to him: for we are wrapped up in darkness.

20 Who shall tell him the things I speak? even if a man shall speak, he shall be swallowed up.

21 But now they see not the light: the air on a sudden shall be thickened into clouds, and the winds shall pass and drive them away.

22 Gold cometh out of the north, and to God praise with fear.

23 We cannot find him worthily: he is great in strength, and in judgment, and in justice, and he is ineffable.

24 Therefore men shall fear him, and all that seem to themselves to be wise, shall not dare to behold him.

CHAP. XXXVIII.

God interposes, and shows from the things he hath made, that man cannot comprehend his power and wisdom.

THEN the Lord answered Job out of a whirlwind, and said :

2 Who is this that wrappeth up sentences in unskillful words?

3 Gird up thy loins like a man: I will ask thee, and answer thou me.

4 Where wast thou when I laid the foundations of the earth? tell me if thou hast understanding.

VER. 23. Worthily. Heb. "the Almighty, we cannot find him out," (H.) or comprehend his nature or mysteries. C.

VER. 24. Fear him, and receive with respect whatever he shall appoint. H. —And all. Heb. "He fears not any that are wise of heart." He knows that the most intelligent (C.) must confess their ignorance, when they attempt to examine his Divine nature. Simonides being desired by Hiero to express his sentiments on this subject, always requested more time to consider of it. Quia, inquit, res videtur mihi tanto obscurior, quanto diutius eam considero. Cicero, Nat. i. 60. Selectæ e Prof. i. 3.—"With thee (says S. Aug. Conf. i. 6) stand the causes of all instable things," &c. H.—Those who are really wise, will therefore adore God's judgments in silence, while the presumptuous will be forced to yield. This is the excellent conclusion of all that had been said. Pineda.—The sentence is beautiful, but ill-applied (H.) to Job. Philip. See Prov. iii. 7. H.—He convinced the other three with sound arguments, "and this last and most arrogant disputant with silence." W.

CHAP. XXXVIII. VER. 1. Then. Sept. "After Eliu had ceased to speak." H.—Lord. That is, an angel speaking in the name of the Lord. Ch.—The name Jave (H.) here occurs, though it never does in the speeches; whence many have inferred that the Lord spoke in person; which argument, however, is not conclusive; and that this work was written after the apparition in the burning bush. C.—The Heb. edition would at least be given after that event.—Whirlwind, designed to strike the senses, (H.) and to represent the distressed condition of Job. Pineda.—This awful appearance imposed silence upon all. H.

VER. 2. Words. Many explain this as a condemnation (C.) of the last speaker, (D.) who would otherwise pass without any reproach, (H.) though he had spoken with less reserve than the rest. C.—Pineda allows that this opinion is very plausible; but he thinks that Job himself is reprehended, not for any grievous offence, but for indiscreet expressions. Chap. xli. The context also seems to require this, as Job takes it to himself. Chap. xxxix. 33. C.—The change of persons might rather imply the contrary: Who is this? Eliu. (3) Gird up thy loins. Job. H.—Can we admit that the devil got the victory? or that God falsely declared that Job had spoken right? Chap. xlii. Houbigant.—Did not the latter maintain the truth with the greatest zeal, while his friends certainly mixed unskillful words or inferences with sentences of the greatest consequence? His face I will accept, that your folly be not imputed to you; for you have not spoken right things before me, as my servant Job hath. Chap. xlii. 8. Heb. "Who is this that darkeneth counsel, by words without knowledge?" Prot. "Who is this who concealeth counsel from me, keeping words in his heart, and thinketh to hide from me?" Sept.

VER. 3. Loins, like one about to engage in an arduous task, (H.) or journey, (C.) to explore the ways of Divine providence. H.—Answer my reasons, if thou art able. C.—Heb. "make me know." H.

VER. 4. Foundations. The Hebrews placed the earth in the centre of the universe, resting upon nothing, (chap. xxvi. 7, and xxxvi. 30,) or upon itself. See Hesiod, Theog. 325. C.—These questions seem intended to show, that it

5 Who hath laid the measures thereof, if thou knowest? or who hath stretched the line upon it?

6 Upon what are its bases ground? or who laid the corner-stone thereof?

7 When the morning stars praised me together, and all the sons of God made a joyful melody?

8 Who shut up the sea with doors, when it broke forth as issuing out of the womb:

9 When I made a cloud the garment thereof, and wrapped it in a mist, as in swaddling bands?

10 I set my bounds around it, and made it bars and doors;

11 And I said: Hitherto thou shalt come, and shalt go no further, and here thou shalt break thy swelling waves.

12 Didst thou since thy birth command the morning, and show the dawning of the day its place?

13 And didst thou hold the extremities of the earth, shaking them, and hast thou shaken the ungodly out of it?

14 The seal shall be restored as clay, and shall stand as a garment:

15 From the wicked their light shall be taken away, and the high arm shall be broken.

16 Hast thou entered into the depths of the sea, and walked in the lowest parts of the deep?

17 Have the gates of death been opened to thee, and hast thou seen the darksome doors?

18 Hast thou considered the breadth of the earth? tell me, if thou knowest all things?

19 Where is the way where light dwelleth? and where is the place of darkness?

20 That thou mayest bring every thing to its own bounds, and understand the paths of the house thereof.

21 Didst thou know then that thou shouldst be born? and didst thou know the number of thy days?

22 Hast thou entered into the storehouses of the snow, or hast thou beheld the treasures of the hail:

23 Which I have prepared for the time of the enemy, against the day of battle and war?

24 By what way is the light spread, and heat divided upon the earth?

25 Who gave a course to violent showers, or a way for noisy thunder:

26 That it should rain on the earth without man in the wilderness, where no mortal dwelleth:

27 That it should fill the desert and desolate land, and should bring forth green grass?

28 Who is the father of rain? or who begot the drops of dew?

29 Out of whose womb came the ice? and the frost from heaven, who hath gendered it?

30 The waters are hardened like a stone, and the surface of the deep is congealed.

31 Shalt thou be able to join together the shining stars, the Pleiades, or canst thou stop the turning about of Arcturus?

32 Canst thou bring forth the day-star in its time, and make the evening-star to rise upon the children of the earth?

33 Dost thou know the order of heaven, and canst thou set down the reason thereof on the earth?

34 Canst thou lift up thy voice to the clouds, that an abundance of waters may cover thee?

35 Canst thou send lightnings, and will they go, and will they return and say to thee: Here we are?

36 Who hath put wisdom in the heart of man? or who gave the cock understanding?

37 Who can declare the order of the heavens? or who can make the harmony of heaven to sleep?

38 When was the dust poured on the earth, and the clods fastened together?

39 Wilt thou take the prey for the lioness, and satisfy the appetite of her whelps, 40 When they couch in the dens, and lie in wait in holes?

41 *Who provideth food for the raven, when her young ones cry to God, wandering about, because they have no meat?

* Psal. cxlvi. 9.

God has created all things for man, he will not surely neglect to watch over him. M.

VER. 5. Upon it. He speaks of the world as of a vast house, (C.) or palace, (M.) in which the Architect has shown his art. H.

VER. 7. Sons. Sept. "all my angels." Hence it appears that the angels were among the first of God's works, formed probably at the same time with the heavens, (C.) or light. Gen. i. 3. H.—The praise of the stars is figurative, (C.) as they tend to raise our hearts to God by their beauty, (H.) whereas that of the angels is real. C.

VER. 8. Shut. Heb. also, (H.) "facilitated the birth of the sea," as a midwife. Grot. C.—Forth. Sept. "ragged." H.

VER. 9. Mist. So Moses says darkness was on the face of the abyss.

VER. 10. Set. Prot. "brake up for it my decreed place." Marg. "established my decree upon it" (H.); or, "I gave orders to break it," against the shore. Jer. v. 22; Amos v. 8.

VER. 13. And didst. Some explain Heb. "that it (Aurora) might spread at once to the extremities of the earth. Then the wicked flee before it;" as they hate the light. Coap. xxxiv. 26; John iii. 20. C.—Sept. and Prot. may be understood in this sense. H.—Allusion may also be made to the shaking of a sieve, to separate the wheat from the chaff (Amos ix. 9; Luke xxii. 31. C.); or of a carpet, to clean it from the dust. D.

VER. 14. Seal. Men, formed to the image of God, shall die; and others shall be placed in their stead, (M.) with as much ease as an impression is made upon clay. H.—Garment. The body seems to be the clothing of the soul, and will be changed. Psal. ci. 27. M.—Chal. "their form will be changed to clay, and they shall resemble a tattered garment." Heb. "their seal shall change like clay," &c. All their glory shall perish. C.—Sept. "hast thou taken earth or clay, and formed a living creature, and endued it with speech on the earth?" Is man the work of thy hands? H.

VER. 23. War. Hail, &c., are like the arrows of God. Jer. x. 13, and i. 25. C.

VER. 24. Heat. Heb. kodim, (H.) the "east." Sept. "south wind."

VER. 31. Pleiades. The seven stars.—Arcturus. A bright star in the north. Ch.—The same terms occur, and are explained, chap. ix. 9. H.

VER. 32. Day-star. Heb. mozruth, (H.) corresponds with the "inner parts of the south" (chap. ix. 9); though some translate, "the signs of the zodiac, or the influences," &c. The antarctic constellations could not be seen in Idumea, while those at the north pole (C.) must appear to those who live on that side of the line (H.) as the perpetual sentinels of the sky.—Evening-star. Heb. "Wilt thou make āiss and her daughters go to rest?" These indicate the arctic stars.

VER. 34. Voice. to mimic the thunder of God, (C.) or to order it to rain. H.

VER. 36. Understanding. That is, to distinguish the hours of the night. Ch.—Sept. "Who gave to women the knowledge of the loom, and the art of embroidering?" H.—But the best interpreters translate, "Who has placed wisdom in the reins, or who hath given understanding to the heart," or soul? C.

VER. 37. Sleep. The ancients have celebrated this harmony. Cic. Somn. Scip.—Sept. "Who numbereth the clouds in wisdom, or hath bent the sky down to the earth?" Prot. "or who can stay the bottles of heaven?" H.—Canst thou cause it to rain, or to be fair (C.)? or make the celestial bodies (H.) rest from motion? W.

VER. 38. Together. When was the water separated from the earth? H.—Where wast thou when I gave consistency to the rocks? C.

VER. 39. And satisfy. Sept. "or fill the souls of the dragons?" H.—Here Heb. edit. commence the following chap., (C.) and are followed by Prot. (H.) and some others, as the proof of God's superior knowledge begins to be established by the consideration of various animals. W.

VER. 41. Wandering. Sixtus V. reads vagientes, (C.) "crying like children." H.—The ravens presently drive their young away to seek for fresh habita-

CHAP. XXXIX.

The wonders of the power and providence of God in many of his creatures.

KNOWEST thou the time when the wild goats bring forth among the rocks, or hast thou observed the minds when they fawn?

2 Hast thou numbered the months of their conceiving, or knowest thou the time when they bring forth?

3 They bow themselves to bring forth young, and they cast them, and send forth roarings.

4 Their young are weaned, and go to feed: they go forth, and return not to them.

5 Who hath sent out the wild ass free, and who hath loosed his bonds?

6 To whom I have given a house in the wilderness, and his dwellings in the barren land.

7 He scorneth the multitude of the city, he heareth not the cry of the driver.

8 He looketh round about the mountains of his pasture, and seeketh for every green thing.

9 Shall the rhinoceros be willing to serve thee, or will he stay at thy crib?

10 Canst thou bind the rhinoceros with thy thong to plough; or will he break the clods of the valleys after thee?

11 Wilt thou have confidence in his great strength, and leave thy labours to him?

12 Wilt thou trust him that he will render thee the seed, and gather it into thy barn-floor?

13 The wing of the ostrich is like the wings of the heron, and of the hawk.

14 When she leaveth her eggs on the earth, thou perhaps wilt warm them in the dust.

15 She forgetteth that the foot may tread upon them, or that the beast of the field may break them.

16 She is hardened against her young ones, as though they were not hers, she hath laboured in vain, no fear constraining her.

tions. Pliny, x. 12; Psal. cxlvi. 9. C.—If God provide for such creatures, He will show still greater attention to man. W.

CHAP. XXXIX. VER. 1. Goats (Iber. Heb. Jāle. H.) frequent rocks, and places which are almost inaccessible to man. C.

VER. 4. Feed. Being weaned very soon. Pliny, viii. 32.

VER. 5. Wild ass, described, chap. vi. 5. The industry of man cannot make this beautiful and strong animal servicable to him.

VER. 6. Barren. Lit. "salt." H.—This is of a nitrous quality, which renders those countries barren. The salt in snow and dung gives warmth and fruitfulness.

VER. 9. Rhinoceros. See Deut. xxxiii. 17; Num. xxiii. 22. Sanchez says they are untameable. M.—But this is not always true, when they have been taken young. Malvenda. C.

VER. 10. Valleys, or furrows. Can he be made to harrow?

VER. 13. Hawk. We may also read, "Is the wing of the ostrich like?" Sept. or Theod. "The bird Neelasa is rejoicing, if she take the Asida, &c., the Neessa." H.—Heb. is variously translated. "The ostrich lifts itself up with its wings, which have feathers, as well as those of the stork."—"Canst thou give to the stork and the ostrich their feathers," which form all their beauty? C.—Prot. "Gavest thou the goodly wings unto the peacock, or wings and feathers unto the ostrich?" H.—The import of these names is uncertain. M.

VER. 14. Dust. This might help to hatch them. C.—Heb. "earth, and warmth them in the dust." Prot.

VER. 16. Ones, or eggs which she leaves. C.

VER. 17. Understanding. This bird has a head disproportionately small; as much, that Heliogabalus served up the brains of 600 at one supper. It greedily eats iron, &c., which may help its digestion, as sand does that of other birds. C.

VER. 18. High. With her head erect, the ostrich is taller than a man on horseback. Pliny, x. 1.—Rider, as they can travel with equal speed. M. Ver. 13.—Adamson (Senegal) placed two negroes on one, and testifies that it still went faster than any English horse. H.

VER. 19. Neighing. Heb. "thunder," to denote the fierceness of the horse; or "with a mane," (Bochart,) "armour," (Syr.) or "terror." Sept. C.—Wilt thou enable the horse to neigh, (M.) when he appears so terrible? H.

17 For God hath deprived her of wisdom, neither hath he given her understanding.

18 When time shall be, she setteth up her wings on high: she scorneth the horse and his rider.

19 Wilt thou give strength to the horse, or clothe his neck with neighing?

20 Wilt thou lift him up like the locusts? the glory of his nostrils is terror.

21 He breaketh up the earth with his hoof, he pranceth boldly, he goeth forward to meet armed men.

22 He despiseth fear, he turneth not his back to the sword.

23 Above him shall the quiver rattle, the spear and shield shall glitter.

24 Chafing and raging, he swalloweth the ground, neither doth he make account when the noise of the trumpet soundeth.

25 When he heareth the trumpet, he saith: Ha, ha he smelleth the battle afar off, the encouraging of the captains, and the shouting of the army.

26 Doth the hawk wax feathered by thy wisdom, spreading her wings to the south?

27 Will the eagle mount up at thy command, and make her nest in high places?

28 She abideth among the rocks, and dwelleth among cragged flints, and stony hills, where there is no access.

29 From thence she looketh for the prey, and her eyes behold afar off.

30 Her young ones shall suck up blood: and where-soever the carcass shall be, she is immediately there.

31 And the Lord went on, and said to Job:

32 Shall he that contendeth with God be so easily silenced? surely he that reproveth God ought to answer him.

33 Then Job answered the Lord, and said:

34 What can I answer, who have spoken inconsiderately? I will lay my hand upon my mouth.

VER. 20. Up. Heb. "frighten," (H.) or "make him leap." Bochart. C.—Nostrils. Sept. "of his chest, or shoulders, is boldness." H.—This inspires the rider with courage, and the enemy with fear. But the Vulg. is more followed. C.

VER. 21. Hoof. Ploughing, or rather prancing, through impatience. C.—Boldly. Heb. "he exults in his strength," being sensible of glory and commendation. C.

VER. 23. Shield, or lance. Jos. viii. 18. C.—The din of armour: does not disturb the horse, which has been inured to such things. H.

VER. 24. Ground. This expression is still used by the Arabs to denote velocity. Grotius.—Sept. "in wrath he will make the earth disappear." H.—Account. Heb. "believe that," or, "stops not when."

VER. 25. Ha. Lit. "Vah," a sound of joy, (M.) or of contempt. Sept. The trumpet having given the sign, he will say, Well: Euge. Nothing could be more poetically descriptive of the war-horse. H.

VER. 26. Feathered. Heb. "fly." H.—South, at the approach of "winter retiring" to warmer regions. Pliny, x. 8.—Sept. "spreading her wings, looking unmoved, towards the south."

VER. 29. Off. The eagle was remarkably (C.) quick-sighted, (W.) as well as the serpent. Hor. i. Sat. 3. Homer, II. 17.

VER. 30. Blood, gushing from the animals, which the eagle brings. M.—S. Chrysostom explains this of the vulture. (Matt. xxiv. 28. C.) which is of the same species. M.—Some eagles will not touch carcasses, but others are greedy of them. Pliny, x. 3; Prov. xxx. 17.—There. Our Saviour quotes this passage. Luke xvii. 37. C.

VER. 31. Went on. Sept. "answered." This was the conclusion drawn from the display of God's wonderful works. If we cannot sufficiently admire them, why should we be so much surprised, as Job acknowledged he was, at the ways of Providence? It would, therefore, be better to keep silence. Ver. 35. H.

VER. 32. Be so. Receive instruction, or (C.) instruct him? Wilt thou learn to admire my works (H.)? or dost thou attempt to give me any information? C.—Him. Heb. "it." Sept. "shall he decline judgment with him who is competent?" ikavov. Theod. adds, "the man who accuses God, shall answer it," or stand his trial. II.

35 One thing I have spoken, which I wish I had not said: and another, to which I will add no more.

CHAP. XL.

Of the power of God in the behemoth and the leviathan.

AND the Lord answering Job out of the whirlwind, said:

2 Gird up thy loins like a man: I will ask thee, and do thou tell me.

3 Wilt thou make void my judgment: and condemn me, that thou mayst be justified?

4 And hast thou an arm like God, and canst thou thunder with a voice like him?

5 Clothe thyself with beauty, and set thyself up on high, and be glorious, and put on goodly garments.

6 Scatter the proud in thy indignation, and behold every arrogant man, and humble him.

7 Look on all that are proud, and confound them, and crush the wicked in their place.

8 Hide them in the dust together, and plunge their faces into the pit.

9 Then I will confess that thy right hand is able to save thee.

10 Behold behemoth whom I made with thee, he eateth grass like an ox.

11 His strength is in his loins, and his force in the navel of his belly.

12 He setteth up his tail like a cedar, and the sinews of his testicles are wrapped together.

VER. 34. Spoken inconsiderately. If we discuss all Job's words, (saith S. Gregory,) we shall find nothing impiously spoken; as may be gathered from the words of the Lord himself, (chap. xlii. 7, 8.) but what was reprehensible in him was the manner of expressing himself at times, speaking too much of his own affliction, and too little of God's goodness towards him, which here he acknowledges as inconsiderate, (Ch.) or rather as the effect of inculpable ignorance (H.); as the present order of things being then novel, confounded the sagacity both of Job and of his friends. The wicked had formerly been the victims of justice, but henceforth, says Job, (Heb.) "if it shall not be so, who can convince me of lying?" chap. xxiv. 25. Yet he did not perfectly discern the intention of God, in abandoning his servants to the power of Satan, till the Lord himself had explained it in the parables of behemoth and leviathan. Then Job testified his conviction and entire submission. Chap. xlii. 5. Houbigant observes that the Vulg. is perhaps less accurate here, and chap. xlii. 3, as God exculpates Job, ver. 8. Yet the latter might entertain fear, at least, of having exceeded in words, after such pungent questions. We may translate, (H.) Heb. "Behold I am vile, (C.) what shall I answer thee?" Prot., or Sept. "Why am I still judged, being admonished and rebuked by the Lord, hearing such things?" H.—If we discuss all Job's speeches, we shall find nothing spoken wickedly, but only a species of pride, in talking too much of his sufferings, and too little of God's goodness and justice, which he ought to have confessed. S. Greg. xxxii. 3. W.

VER. 35. One. Sept. "Once I have spoken, but I will not add again." H.—I have spoken too much, but I will be more cautious. Heb. "I have spoken one thing, and I will not answer (C.); yea, two things, but I will go no farther."

CHAP. XL. VER. 3. Judgment. Job had frequently acknowledged that God could not be in the wrong. But he had expressed himself in too forcible language, of which God makes him, as it were, ashamed. C.—Sept. "rejectest thou not my decision? yea, dost thou think that I have judged thee in a different manner, in order that thou mayst appear just?" H.

VER. 6. Scatter. Sept. is shorter (C.): "Send angels or messengers in wrath, and humble every insulting person. (7) Extinguish the proud, destroy the wicked at once. (8) Hide them in the earth together, and fill their faces with shame." H.

VER. 10. Behemoth; the elephant, (Ch.) "as some think." Prot. marg. H.—This is the common opinion, though Sanchez explains it of the bull; and Bochart, after Beza and Diodati, declares in favour of the hippopotamus, (C.) or "river horse." Parkhurst even thinks Bochart has proved this "to a demonstration."—We find a good description of this animal in Watson, p. 91. But the plural Bemuth, female (H.) "beasts," seems more applicable to the elephant, on account of its great size, as it is designated by θήρ, or Bellua, by the Greek and Roman authors. Suidas, 1 Mac. vi. 35. Pliny, viii. 3.—All that Job says of behemoth, may be well explained of it.—With thee, on the same day, or as well as thee. Amama.—Grass. The elephant does so, and is by no means savage. C.—Sept. "Yet, behold, near thee wild beasts, equal to oxen, eat grass." H.

VER. 11. Loins. The towers were fastened here by an iron chain.—Belly. Yet it is no where so easily wounded. 1 Mac. vi. 45. Pliny, viii. 20.—Hence some 13 His bones are like pipes of brass, his gristle like plates of iron.

14 He is the beginning of the ways of God, who made him, he will apply his sword.

15 To him the mountains bring forth grass: there all the beasts of the field shall play.

16 He sleepeth under the shadow, in the covert of the reed, and in moist places.

17 The shades cover his shadow, the willows of the brook shall compass him about.

18 Behold, he will drink up a river, and not wonder, and he trusteth that the Jordan may run into his mouth.

19 In his eyes, as with a hook, he shall take him, and bore through his nostrils with stakes.

20 Canst thou draw out the leviathan with a hook, or canst thou tie his tongue with a cord?

21 Canst thou put a ring in his nose, or bore through his jaw with a buckle?

22 Will he make many supplications to thee, or speak soft words to thee?

23 Will he make a covenant with thee, and wilt thou take him to be a servant for ever?

24 Shalt thou play with him as with a bird, or tie him up for thy handmaids?

25 Shall friends cut him in pieces, shall merchants divide him?

26 Wilt thou fill nets with his skin, and the cabins of fishes with his head?

would translate Heb. "and its pain in the belly," (C.) as it is only subject to an inflammation and flux; profluvium alvi. Pliny. Ælian, xvii. 44.

VER. 12. Tail, which is very small, and without hair. C.—Vavassor rather thinks "the trunk" is meant. D.

VER. 13. Gristle. Heb. again, "bones." C.—Sept. "back-bone, like cast-iron."

VER. 14. Beginning, or prince. H.—The elephant may be considered as the king of beasts for strength, agility, gratitude, longevity, &c. None approaches so near to man. Pliny, viii. 1. C. Lipsius, 1 ep. 50. Amama.—Sword; which is the rhinoceros, killing the elephant under the belly with its horn (Pliny, viii. 20. Grot.); or God seems to have intrusted his sword to the elephant for the destruction of his enemies. Nothing can withstand its fury, as it overturns houses and trees with its trunk. Jun. C.

VER. 15. Play. No animal is of a milder nature. It never attacks, unless in its own defence. When a crowd of other beasts obstruct its passage, it removes them quietly with its proboscis. Pliny, vi. 9, &c.

VER. 16. Places, inasmuch that Ælian (iv. 24) styles it a "beast of the marshes." C.—Sept. (14) "This is the beginning or chief (ἀρχή) of the creation of the Lord, being made for his angels to play with, or beat. Departing to the craggy rock, it has made sport for the quadrupeds in the field. It sleepeth under all sorts of trees; near the reed and papyrus, and the boutonon, or ox-herb." H.

VER. 18. Wonder. Heb. "make haste," taking time to render it muddy. Ælian, xiv. 44. C.—Run. Heb. "he may draw." Sept. "may knock at his mouth" (H.) in vain, (C.) as long as it can breathe by holding its trunk out of the water. Arist. ix. 46.

VER. 20. Leviathan: the whale, or some sea monster. Ch.—Prot. marg. "or a whirlpool." H.—But some animal is designated; and Bochart understands the crocodile, which agrees very well with the context. The Talmudists also say that the calbush is a small fish, which gets into the throat of the leviathan. They mean probably the ichneumon, which kills the crocodile by that means. Leviathan, "the winding serpent," (C.) often denotes the dragon or crocodile, (Psalm. ciii. 26; Isa. xxvii. 1); which frequents the Nile. H.—It can live as well by land as under water, (Watson, p. 293,) and hence may be translated, (H.) "the coupled dragon." Parkhurst.—Moses mentions the choled. (Lev. xi. 29,) which the Sept. and most others translate, "the land crocodile;" but what could induce the Prot. to render it "tortoise," we are at a loss to determine. The same word may however denote whales, (Parkhurst,) which are the greatest fishes with which man is acquainted. H.—Cord. The crocodile may be taken, but with the utmost hazard; though the Tentyrites attacked it without fear. Chap. iii. 8.

VER. 21. Buckle. Lit. "bracelet," (armilla. H.) or ring. Horses were thus ornamented, (Virg. 7,) and other beasts led about. But this fierce animal could not be tamed. Heb. "Wilt thou put a rush through its gills, or nose, or pierce its jaw with a thorn?" like those little fishes which are thus brought fresh to market. C.

VER. 24. Handmaids? or little girls. C.—Sept. "Wilt thou tie it like a sparrow, for thy boy?" H.

VER. 25. Friends. Heb. also, (H.) "enchanters." C.—Sept. "the nation"

27 Lay thy hand upon him : remember the battle, and speak no more.

28 Behold his hope shall fail him, and in the sight of all he shall be cast down.

CHAP. XLI.

A further description of the leviathan.

I WILL not stir him up, like one that is cruel : for who can resist my countenance ?

2 Who hath given me before, that I should repay him ? All things that are under heaven are mine.

3 I will not spare him, nor his mighty words, and framed to make supplication.

4 Who can discover the face of his garment ? or who can go into the midst of his mouth ?

5 Who can open the doors of his face ? his teeth are terrible round about.

6 His body is like molten shields, shut close up with scales pressing upon one another.

7 One is joined to another, and not so much as any air can come between them :

8 They stick one to another, and they hold one another fast, and shall not be separated.

9 His sneezing is like the shining of fire, and his eyes like the eyelids of the morning.

10 Out of his mouth go forth lamps, like torches of lighted fire.

—Merchants. Sept. "the generation of the Phœnicians" (Heb.) of Chanaan, (Il.) famous for merchandise, (C.) inasmuch that the name is used for any merchant. H.—Will they salt the crocodile for sale ? C.—Its flesh was much liked. Herod., &c.

VER. 26. Cabins, (gurgustium,) the reservoir or basket. C.—Prot. "Canst thou fill his skin with barbed prongs, (for which they have now irons,) or his head with fish spears ?" H.—But this is hardly the meaning of the original. Chap. xli. 6. Heb. "wilt thou fill tents with its skin, or the fish net with its head ?" to catch other fish, or to cover thy tent ? &c. The skin is very hard, except under the belly. C.

VER. 27. Speak. Heb. "do." H.—Thy rash attempt will prove thy ruin. If thou escape, thou wilt not dare to engage again. C.—Sept. "Wilt thou lay thy hand upon it, remembering the battle with its body ? and let it not be done any more. (28) Hast thou not seen it, nor been astonished at what has been said ?" H.

CHAP. XLI. VER. 1. I. Heb. "None is so fierce that dare stir it up." H.—"I will not ask the crocodile to revenge me of my enemies," as some might do in a rage, through impotence. H. Sanchez. M.—Countenance, even though they might overcome the crocodile. God is here speaking. Sept. "Dost thou not fear, since it is ready for thee, (Grab substitutes 'me,') for who will resist me ?" or, "who shall stand against me, and live ? All," &c., ver. 2. H.

VER. 3. Supplication. This is explained by the Fathers as spoken of the devil. Amama.—But the Heb. may signify that God will reward each one according to his deserts, and that Job had consequently no reason to complain ; or it means, that the strength and beauty of the crocodile should be made known. C.—"I will not conceal his parts, nor his power, nor his comely proportion." Prot. "I will not keep silence on his account, and the word of power shall take pity on his equal." Theod. in Sept. H.

VER. 4. Garment, or the skin. M. Who shall look stedfastly, or dare to take off its skin ?—Mouth. Prot. "who can come to him with his double bridle ?" (H.) though it be of the greatest strength ; or, who will enter its jaws, or put bits in them ?—Sept. "Who would enter the wrinkles of his breast, (C.) or the folds of its coat of arms ?" which may allude to the almost impenetrable scales of the leviathan. H.—Sym. "Who will enter the folds of its scales ?" The crocodile can open its mouth so wide as to swallow a heifer, or to let a man stand upright. C.—Each jaw is furnished with thirty-six teeth. Vansleb.

VER. 6. Body. Sept. "entrails are like brazen shields." Prot. "His scales are his pride, shut up together as with a close seal." H.

VER. 9. Sneezing. When the whale breathes it causes the water to foam. Pineda. M.—The eyes of the crocodile are also (H.) very bright, when out of the water. Pliny, viii. 25.—They appear first, and therefore were used as an hieroglyphic of Aurora, (Horus, i. 65,) or of the morning star. H.—Syr. "His look is brilliant." Arab. "The apples of his eyes are fiery, and his eyes are like the brightness of the morning." Sept. "like Aurora." C.—Olaus (xxi. 5) says, "that the eyes of the whale shine at night, . . . and at a distance are taken by fishermen for great fires."

VER. 10. Fire, when they spout water. (M.) or pursue their prey open-mouthed. This description is extremely poetical, like that of anger. 2 Kings iii. 9. C.

11 Out of his nostrils goeth smoke, like that of a pot heated and boiling.

12 His breath kindleth coals, and a flame cometh forth out of his mouth.

13 In his neck strength shall dwell, and want goeth before his face.

14 The members of his flesh cleave one to another : he shall send lightnings against him, and they shall not be carried to another place.

15 His heart shall be as hard as a stone, and as firm as a smith's anvil.

16 When he shall raise him up, the angels shall fear, and being affrighted shall purify themselves.

17 When a sword shall lay at him, it shall not be able to hold, nor a spear, nor a breast-plate.

18 For he shall esteem iron as straw, and brass as rotten wood.

19 The archer shall not put him to flight, the stones of the sling to him are like stubble.

20 As stubble will he esteem the hammer, and he will laugh him to scorn who shaketh the spear.

21 The beams of the sun shall be under him, and he shall strew gold under him like mire.

22 He shall make the deep sea to boil like a pot, and shall make it as when ointments boil.

23 A path shall shine after him, he shall esteem the deep as growing old.

VER. 11. Smoke ; breath, or streams of water sent upwards.

VER. 12. Breath, like bellows. Ver. 10. M.

VER. 13. Neck. Some deny that the crocodile has any, being formed like a lizard. But it is a dispute about words. The animal turns with difficulty, so that Thomas Gage assures us he escaped one by going in different directions.—Want. It ravages a whole country. Heb. "fear." C.—Prot. "sorrow is turned into joy before him ;" which seems strange. Sept. "destruction runs before him." H.

VER. 14. Place ; though people may shoot at him, they will make no impression. Chap. xl. 20, 26. H.—If God send his thunderbolts at him, the monster must however perish. C.—Sym. "His flesh being cast for him, as in the foundry, (molten,) is immovable." H.

VER. 15. Stone. Pineda understands this of the whale's heart. Others suppose that it alludes to its cruel and fearless temper. M.—The Arabs call a valiant man "heart of stone." C.—Smith's. Prot. "as a piece of the nether millstone," (H.) which must be larger and more compact than that which is above. C.—Sept. "He hath stood immovable as an anvil." H.

VER. 16. Angels. Elim. That is, the mighty, the most valiant, shall fear this monstrous fish, and in their fear shall seek to be purified (Ch.) by contrition. Sanchez.—The Fathers refer this to the fall of Lucifer, when the other angels might tremble for their own safety. H.—Sept. "If he turn, there is fear among the wild quadrupeds, jumping on the land." Heb. "When he raiseth up himself, the mighty are afraid : by reason of breakings, they purify themselves." Prot. or "spoil themselves," (C.) expecting nothing but certain death. Amama.

VER. 17. Plate. Prot. "habergeon." The precise nature of these arms is not known. C.—Neither offensive nor defensive weapons can avail. M.—All agree that the crocodile can be pierced only under the belly. C.

VER. 19. Are. Lit. "are turned into stubble," as in Heb. H.—They have no more effect. M.

VER. 20. Hammer. Sept. σφύρα, means also, "the bottom of a rock." This would not overwhelm the whale ; as some are represented like floating islands. Prot. "darts." H.—Chal. "axe." Others have, "the ballista ;" an instrument to throw stones. C.

VER. 21. Under him. He shall not value the beams of the sun : and gold to him shall be like mire. Ch. M.—Heb. "Sharp stones (or potsherds) are under him ; he spreadeth (or lieth upon) sharp-pointed things, as upon the mire." H.—He is not afraid of being hurt.

VER. 22. When. Heb. "a pot of ointment." This boils out very much. C.—The Hebrews style all deep rivers and lakes seas. C.—Sept. "He deems the sea as a vase of ointment ; (23) and the Tartarus of the abyss, like a prisoner." Theod. adds, "He hath considered the abyss as a walk."

VER. 23. The deep as growing old. Growing hoary, as it were, with the froth which he leaves behind him. Ch.—The Vulg. has well expressed the force of the original, and shows the rapidity with which the crocodile moves. C.—Prot. "one would think the deep to be hoary."

VER. 24. Power. Heb. and Sept. "none like him on earth," for bulk.—One. Sept. "made to be played with, or beaten, by my angels." H.

VER. 25. He is king, &c. He is superior in strength to all that are great and strong amongst living creatures : mystically it is understood of the devil, who is king over all the proud. Ch. S. Greg. xxxiv. 4, and 17. W.—Hence Job per 24 There is no power upon earth that can be compared with him who was made to fear no one.

25 He beholdeth every high thing, he is king over all the children of pride.

CHAP. XLII.

Job submits himself. God pronounces in his favour. Job offers sacrifice for his friends. He is blessed with riches and children, and dies happily.

THEN Job answered the Lord, and said :

2 I know that thou canst do all things, and no thought is hid from thee.

3 Who is this that hideth counsel without knowledge ? Therefore I have spoken unwisely, and things that above measure exceeded my knowledge.

4 Hear, and I will speak : I will ask thee, and do thou tell me.

5 With the hearing of the ear I have heard thee, but now my eye seeth thee.

6 Therefore, I reprehend myself, and do penance in dust and ashes.

7 And after the Lord had spoken these words to Job, he said to Eliphaz, the Themanite : My wrath is kindled against thee, and against thy two friends, because you have not spoken the thing that is right before me, as my servant, Job, hath.

8 Take unto you, therefore, seven oxen, and seven rams, and go to my servant, Job, and offer for yourselves a holocaust : and my servant, Job, shall pray for you : his face I will accept, that folly be not imputed to you : for you have not spoken right things before me, as my servant Job hath.

9 So Eliphaz, the Themanite, and Baldad, the Suhite, and Sophar, the Naamathite, went and did as the Lord had spoken to them, and the Lord accepted the face of Job.

10 The Lord also was turned at the penance of Job, when he prayed for his friends. And the Lord gave Job twice as much as he had before.

11 And all his brethren came to him, and all his sisters, and all that knew him before, and they eat bread with him in his house : and bemoaned him, and comforted him upon all the evil that God had brought upon him. And every man gave him one ewe, and one ear-ring of gold.

12 And the Lord blessed the latter end of Job more than his beginning. And he had fourteen thousand sheep, and six thousand camels, and a thousand yoke of oxen, and a thousand she-asses.

13 And he had seven sons, and three daughters.

14 And he called the name of one, Dies, and the name of the second, Cassia, and the name of the third, Cornustibii.

15 And there were not found in all the earth, women ceived that God had also now permitted this cruel foe to exercise a dominion over him, and to pull him from his high station, though innocent. H.—This would henceforward be more frequently the order of Providence, and therefore he expresses his entire resignation. Chap. xlii. Houbigant.—Pride : the strongest and fiercest animals. H.—The crocodile has been seen encountering even the elephant, and gaining the victory. He is king of all fishes. Sept. "of all in the waters." Chal. "of all the sons of the mountains : " or Theod. "of arrogance." C.—Pharao even means "a crocodile," in Arabic. Bochart, Anim. p. 2, b. v. 16.

CHAP. XLII. VER. 2. I know. So the Keri orders us to translate, with all the ancient versions, as the Heb. text has, "thou knowest ; " which Prof. Chapelow and Schultens deem more "sublime," though one would think it was hardly "sense." Kennicott.—Hid. Heb. "of thine can be hindered." All thy orders must be obeyed. It is in vain to keep silence (chap. xxxix. 34) : I will confess openly thy justice and power. H.

VER. 3. Who. Heb. "Who is he that hideth counsel, without knowledge ? " Prot. This seems to allude to the words of God. Chap. xxxviii. 2. Each of my friends has only rendered the ways of Providence more obscure, and I myself have not perfectly understood them. H.—Unwisely. See chap. xxxix. 35. W. D.—Heb. "without knowledge, things wonderful to me, which I knew not." H.—Now I comprehend that thou didst not afflict me, but hast given me into the hands of the enemy, as thou wilt hereafter do others of the greatest virtue, that their patience may shine the brighter, and be rewarded. I need inquire no further, now I see thy design plainly. Ver. 5. He does not accuse himself of any sin or false assertion, but acknowledges his infirmity in not having understood this before. Ver. 6. Houbigant.—Sept. "I have been told what I knew not, things great and wonderful, of which I was not apprized." H.

VER. 5. Seeth thee. Some have thought that God now manifested himself from the cloud. Euseb. Dem. i. 4. Titalman, &c. But all now agree that he only enlightened his understanding, and made known his designs more clearly. C.—Job now perceived that he had spoken too boldly, in saying, Hear, and I will speak, &c., ver. 4. The rest of this book is in prose. T.

VER. 6. Reprehend. Heb. and Sept. "vilify." H.—I recall the obscure expression which has occasioned my friends to mistake. D.—Penance. Heb. "groan." Sept. "pine away, I look upon myself as dust and ashes." Such are the sentiments which every one will entertain the nearer he approaches to the Divine Majesty. H.—Chal. "I have despised my riches, and I am comforted with respect to my children, who are now reduced to dust and ashes." I find a consolation in submitting patiently to my sufferings, which I may have deserved on account of my unguarded speeches. C.

VER. 7. Two friends. It is astonishing that Eliu is not also reprehended, as he was no better than the rest. Some answer that God had passed sentence upon him first. Others maintain that he spoke with greater dignity of God's judgments, and that his ignorance was blameless ; while others remark that he was connected with some of the three friends, or only came accidentally to enter into the debate. God gives sentence in favour of Job, though with some reproof for his inanner of speaking.—As. They had maintained false doctrines, and showed a want of due respect and compassion for their friend (T.) ; whereas Job's assertions were true. C.

VER. 8. Offer. Sept. "Thou shalt make an oblation, ἐρπωμα, for you."

H.—Yet holocausts seem to have been the only species of sacrifice before Moses. The number seven has always been in a manner sacred (C.) ; being doubled, it shows the greatness of the offence. S. Greg. W.—Job was to present these victims to God, (C.) as the priest and mediator, (D.) of whom God approved. He officiated for his family, (C.) and was the most honourable person there. H.—Pray. Behold the efficacy of the prayers of the saints, even while upon earth. How much greater will it be, when their charity is greater and unfeeling ! H.—The many sacrifices would not have sufficed, if Job had not joined his prayer, as S. Chrys. (or 5 con. Judeos) observes. His mediation did not derogate from God's mercy, under the law of nature ; nor does that of other men injure Christ's, under the law of grace, 2 Cor. i. 11. We have here also a proof that both sacrifice and the devotion of the offerer have their distinct effects ; opus operatum, and opus operantis, as the schoolmen speak. Thus Job was honourably acquitted, while his friends were justly rebuked.—Face. Sept. "For if I would not accept his face, and if it were not on his account, I had surely destroyed you. For you have not said to me any thing good (Rom. true) against (or concerning, κατά) my servant Job." They acted both against charity and truth. H.

VER. 10. Penance. Heb. "return." He resolved to restore him to his former prosperous condition, while he prayed for those who had so cruelly exercised his patience. C.—Prot. and Vatable, "the Lord turned the captivity of Job : " so any great distress may be styled, though Job was in a manner abandoned to the power and bondage of Satan. Sept. "But the Lord gave an increase to Job, and while he was praying for his friends, He forgave them their sin. And," &c. H.—Twice, excepting children, who were living (W.) with God. Rabbins. S. Greg., &c.

VER. 11. Brethren. Who had before shamefully abandoned him. Chap. vi. 13. C.—Bemoaned. Lit. "shaked their heads at him," (H.) out of pity, (M.) or astonishment, (T. C.) at his fallen state, and at the present change for the better. They helped to restore him to affluence, in conformity with the will of God, who caused their presents to multiply. The kindred and friends of Job were undoubtedly numerous. H.—Ewe. Kossite, "lamb," as most of the ancients agree, (Spanheim,) or a piece of money, (Bochart,) marked with the figure of a lamb. Grot. See Gen. xxxiii. 19. C.—Ear-ring. Heb. nozom, an ornament (H.) "for the nose," still very common in the East. Syn. adds, "it was unadorned," (C.) or plain. Sept. "a piece of gold worth four drachms, and not coined," ἀσημένιον. H.

VER. 12. Asses. Sept. "droves of," &c., which would greatly increase the number.

VER. 14. Dies, &c. "Day . . cassia . . and horn of antimony." Heb. Imine . . Kotsiae . . Kron-epue. This last may signify (H.) "horn of change," (Pagn.) in allusion to Job's different states. M. D.—Sometimes we find the Latin names retained, and at other times translated. Prot. Semina, "handsome as the day." Kezia, "superficies, angle, or cassia." Keren-happueh, "the horn or child of beauty." The marginal explanations are given at least in the edit. Edinb. 1787. H.—Cornustibii, (Heb. Puc.) means a sort of paint, used to blacken the eyelids, (4 Kings ix. 30,) or a precious stone. Isa. liv. 11.—Chal. "brilliant as an emerald." She was so styled on account of her great beauty, (C.) in which she was not inferior to her two sisters. Sept. "Horn of Amalthea," (H.) or of plenty, (C.) which is not an approbation of the fable, but to show the abundance which Job now enjoyed. Nicetas.

so beautiful as the daughters of Job: and their father gave them inheritance among their brethren.

16 And Job lived after these things, a hundred and

VER. 16. Years, in all, as Judith is said to have dwelt in the house of her husband 105 years; though it is agreed that she only lived that space of time. H.—Authors are much divided about the length of Job's life. Some suppose that he was afflicted with the leprosy at the age of 70, for several months, (T.) or for a whole year, (C.) or for seven, (Salien,) and that he lived twice as long after his re-establishment, in all 210, C. T.—Sept. "Job lived after his chastisement 170," (Grabe substitutes 140 years. Then he marks with an obel as redundant,) "but all the years which he lived were 248;" and adds from Theod. "And Job saw his sons and their children, even the fourth generation." H.—The old Vulg. had also 248 years; while some Greek copies read 740. But Grotius thinks the life of Job was not extended beyond 200. Petau and Spanheim say 189, (C.) and Pineda 210, or rather 280, years. Yet the life of man, in the days of Moses, his contemporary, was not often longer than 120; so that if we allow Job 140, he would be an old man, and might see the fourth generation, ver. 10. H.—Days. Here a long addition is found in the Greek, Arab., and old Vulg.; and Theodotion has also inserted it in his version, as it seems to contain a true and ancient tradition, (see Eus. Præp. ix. 25,) though the Fathers have properly distinguished it from the inspired text. It stands thus in the Alex. Sept., with an obel prefixed: "But it is written, that he shall be raised again, with those whom the Lord will restore to life." "He, this man," as it is translated from the Syriac book, "lived in the land of Ausites, (Hus,) on the borders of Idumea, and of Arabia, and was before called Jobab. But marrying an Arabian woman, he begot a son by name Ennon. But his father was Zareth, a descendant of the sons of Esau, and his mother was Bossora (Arab. a native of Bosra); so that he was the fifth (Arab. the sixth) from Abraham. Now these were the kings who reigned in Edom; over forty years, and he saw his children, and his children's children, unto the fourth generation, and he died an old man, and full of days.

which country he also ruled. First, Balac, son of Semphor (others have Bear): and the name of his city was Dennaba. After Balac, Jobab, who is called Joo. After him, Assom, a leader from the country of Theman. After this man, Adad, son of Barad, who slew Madian in the plain of Moab; and the name of his city was Gethaim. But the friends who came to him were, Eliphaz, [son of Sophan,] of the sons of Esau, king of the Themanites; Baldad, [son of Amnon, of Chobar,] of the Auchite tyrant (Grabe substitutes the tyrant of the Sauchians, as they call our Subites); Sophar, king of the Mineans." What is marked with crotchets, (H.) has been probably taken from Theodotion. See the Greek Catena. What follows occurs in the Alex. MS. C.—"[Theman, son of Eliphaz, he, as the Syriac book is rendered, lived in the land of Ausites, on the borders of the Euphrates. His former name was Jobab, but Zareth was his father, from the sun rising,]" or eastern country. H.—Job might very well be the fifth or sixth from Abraham, if he were a contemporary with Moses, as Levi and Amram would live at the same time with Rahuel and Zare (see 1 Par. i. 35, 44); so that this tradition agrees with history. But what is said of the Syriac version is not so certain. C.—Some think the Syriac or Arabic was the original text, as the Greek seems to indicate, ὁυτος ἐπηγεύετο ἐκ τῆς Συριάκης βίβλου, ἐν μὲν γὰρ κατοικῶν, &c.—The books of Maccabees, which are the only remaining pieces of sacred history, might have been here inserted, as they are in Calmet's edition, that so all the historical part might come together. But it is more common to place those books after the prophets. They only relate a few of the transactions which took place during the 400 or 500 years preceding the Christian era. The rest must be borrowed from Josephus, and from profane authors. It would, however, be proper to read those books, and to have an idea of that period, before we attempt to explain the prophecies. H.

THE BOOK OF PSALMS.

The Psalms are called by the Hebrews, TEHILLIM; that is, hymns of praise. The author, of a great part of them at least, was king David: but many are of opinion that some of them were made by Asaph and others, whose names are prefixed in the titles. Ch.—S. Jerom (ad Cyprian) says, "Let us be convinced that those labour under a mistake, who suppose that David was the author of all the Psalms, and not those whose names appear in the titles." The matter is not of great moment, as all confess that the 150 Psalms were dictated by the Holy Ghost. D.—S. Aug. (de Civ. Dei, xvii. 14) attributes all the Psalms to David; and it seems best to adhere to this opinion, as it is the most generally received. M.—Our Saviour cites the 109th Psalm as belonging to David, (Matt. xxii. 44,) agreeably to the title; and the 2nd Psalm is also attributed to him by the apostles, (Acts iv. 25,) though it have no title at all, no more than the first. H.—S. Jerom himself (ad Paulin.) seems to suppose that David was the writer of all the Psalms, (W.) and that he has left us compositions which may vie with those of the most celebrated pagan bards. In effect, nothing could excel the harmony of these divine hymns, to judge even from a translation. Fleury.—What then would they be in the original? The difficulty of coming to a perfect knowledge of the author's meaning, arises chiefly from the variety of translations and commentaries, which have been more numerous on this work than on any other. The version which we have to explain is not that which S. Jerom made from the Heb., and which possesses the same intrinsic merit as the rest of his works: but the Church has declared authentic the holy doctor's corrected (H.) version from S. Lucian, (Bellar. T.) or from the Sept., as the people had been accustomed to sing the psalter in that manner; and it would have been difficult for them to learn another. C.—A critical examination would show that the Sept. have not so often deviated from the original as some would pretend. See Berthier, &c. Pellican extols the fidelity of our version on the Psalms, though he was a Prot. Ward. Err. p. 6.—When therefore we offer a different version, we would not insinuate that the Vulg. is therefore to be rejected. The copiousness of the Heb. language, (H.) and on some occasions the uncertainty of its roots, or precise import, (Simon. Crit.) ought to make every one diffident in pronouncing peremptorily on such subjects. Let us rather adhere to the decision of the Church, when it is given on any particular text; and when she is silent, let us endeavour to draw the streams of life from our Saviour's fountains, and read for our improvement in virtue. H.—No exhortations could be more cogent than those which we may find in the Psalms. They contain the sum of all the other sacred books, as the Fathers agree. S. Aug., S. Bas., &c. To understand them better, we must reflect upon what key or string they each play. Expositors discover ten such strings of this mysterious harp: 1. God; 2. his works; 3. Providence; 4. the peculiar people of the Jews; 5. Christ; 6. his Church; 7. true worship; 8. David; 9. the end of the world; 10. a future life. On some of these subjects the Psalm principally turns. C.—David excels all the pagans in point of antiquity, as he lived 100 years before Homer. His natural genius led him to follow the pursuits of poetry and music (1 Kings xvi. 23); and God inspired him to compose these poems, as works in metre are more easily remembered, and make a more pleasing impression upon the heart. Hence Moses and other prophets adopted the same plan, both in the Old and the New Testament. The pious king not being permitted to build the temple, made, nevertheless, all necessary preparations for it; and among the rest, procured 288 masters of music to train up 4000 singers. 1 Par. xxiii. 25. He foresaw that these Psalms would be of service, not only on the Jewish festivals, but also in the Christian Church, (Psal. lvi. 10, &c.) gathered from all nations, (W.) among whom he sings by the mouths (H.) of the clergy, who are commanded daily to sing or recite some of these Psalms. W.—The psalter takes its name from an instrument of ten strings, resembling the Greek Δ, (Ven. Bede,) and sounding from above, to insinuate that we may (W.) here learn to observe (H.) all the decalogue, and to aim at heaven. If difficulties present themselves in the perusal of these sacred writings, we must remember not to trust to private interpretation, (2 Pet. i.) but to the doctrine of the Church, (John xiv. 16; 1 Cor. xii.) which we may find in the works of the holy Fathers, (S. Aug. Doct.) and exercise ourselves in humility, when any thing occurs above our comprehension. S. Greg. 17. in Ezec. W.—We must pray with all earnestness to the Father of Lights, and surely no prayers can be more efficacious to obtain what we want, than those which he has here delivered. Whether just or sinners, whether in joy or sorrow, we may here find what may be suitable for us. H.—In hoc libro spiritualis Bibliotheca instructa est. Cassiod.

PSALM I.

BEATUS VIR.

The happiness of the just: and the evil state of the wicked.

PSALM I. Beatus, &c. Theodoret observes, that this psalm has "no title in Heb.;" and some have attributed it to Esdras, when he collected the psalms into one book. But the Compl. Sept. reads, "A psalm for David;" "without a title among the Hebrews." Jeremias (xvii. 7) has imitated this psalm, which may be considered as a preface to all the rest, and an abridgment of the whole duty of man. C.—Sinners, who are still more obstinate. C.—Pestilence. Heb. "scorners," who are the most dangerous sort of people, boldly deriding all religion, and maintaining atheism. There is a beautiful gradation here observed, showing the fatal consequences of evil company. If the virtuous associate with one even of the least contagious, the infection presently catches him, and he is soon introduced among the more dissolute, where he stops with little remorse, till at last he even glories in his shame, and becomes a champion of impiety. 1 Cor. x. 33. H.

BLESSED is the man who hath not walked in the counsel of the ungodly, nor stood in the way of sinners, nor sat in the chair of pestilence:

2 "But his will is in the law of the Lord, and on his law he shall meditate day and night.

3 "And he shall be like a tree which is planted near the running waters, which shall bring forth its fruit, in due season.

And his leaf shall not fall off: and all whatsoever he shall do shall prosper.

4 Not so the wicked, not so: but like the dust, which the wind driveth from the face of the earth.

5 Therefore the wicked shall not rise again in judgment: nor sinners in the council of the just.

6 For the Lord knoweth the way of the just: and the way of the wicked shall perish.

PSALM II.

QUARE FREMUERUNT.

The vain efforts of persecutors against Christ and his Church.

WHY have the Gentiles raged, and the people devised vain things?

2 The kings of the earth stood up, and the princes met together, against the Lord, and against his Christ.

* Jos. i. 8.—b Jer. xvii. 8.—c Acts iv. 25.

VER. 2. Will. He is wholly occupied and delighted in keeping God's commandments. W.—This distinguishes the saint from him who only refrains from sin through fear. C.—Qui timet invitus observat. S. Amb.—Meditate, and put in practice. M.—Night. The Jews studied the books of the law so earnestly from their childhood, that they could recite them as easily as they could tell their own names (Joseph. c. Ap. 2. Deut. vi. 6); and is it not a shame that many Christians should be so negligent, that they have never so much as read the Gospels! (C.) though they be eager enough after idle books. H.

VER. 3. Tree. Probably the palm-tree, the emblem of a long life. Job xxviii. 18. The tree of life is watered by the river of living waters, proceeding from the throne of God, who is the source of all grace. Apoc. xxii. 1; Luke xxi. 33; John iv. 14. C.—Those who make good use of favours received are continually supplied with fresh graces. W.—And. In the office-book a new verse begins here, though not in Heb., which the Vulg. follows.—Prosper, and be rewarded hereafter, though the just man even among the Jews might be here afflicted. Prosperity was only promised to the nation, as long as it continued faithful. C.—All this verse might perhaps be better understood of the tree. "And its leaf . . . and whatever it shall produce," faciet, (fructum.) H.—Some trees are always covered with leaves, like the palm-tree, &c. M.

VER. 4. Not so. Heb. "but are like the chaff which the wind driveth away." H.—They are inconstant (S. Jer.) in the good resolutions which they sometimes form. H. Job xxi. 18.

VER. 5. Again. So as to gain their cause, (Amama,) or to make opposition; as the Heb. ihmu, "stand up" with defiance, intimates. H.—They are already judged, (John iii. 18,) and can make no defence; they being separated from the just, like goats.—Council, (M.) or rather "counsel," as the same word, Boulē, is used by the Sept., as ver. 1, (C.) though the Heb. ādoth, here be different, and mean a council, or assembly. M.—Sept. and Vulg. may be understood in the same sense. H.—Sinners shall be destitute of all hope at the resurrection, and shall be driven from the society of the blessed. W.—They will not even be able to complain, since they had been so often admonished of their impending fate, (Bert.,) and would not judge themselves in time. S. Aug. 1 Cor. xi.; Acts xxiv. 15. Prot. "They shall not stand," &c. H.

VER. 6. Knoweth, with approbation. There is only one road which leads to heaven: but these men, having sown in the flesh, must reap corruption. Gal. vi. 8. Berthier.—God will reward or punish (W.) all according to their deserts. H.—To some he will thunder out, I never knew you; while others shall hear, Come, &c. Matt. xxv. 34, &c. C.—In this world things seem to be in a sort of confusion, as the wicked prosper. But, at the hour of death, each will receive a final retribution. H.

PSAL. II. Quare. This psalm has no title, and therefore S. Jerom, after the Jews, considered it as a part of the former. In Acts xiii. 33, some copies have, in the first, others in the second psalm; and Origen testifies that he saw a copy where this and the former psalm were joined together; and he says the psalms were not distinguished by numbers or letters, as they have been since. We find in some Gr. and Lat. MSS. "a psalm of David." It is certain that he composed it, speaking of the Messiah, (Acts iv. 25; Heb. i. 5,) though some passages may be applied to himself. The Rabbins would restrain it to him entirely; and some Christians have been so much off their guard as to allow (C.) that it refers to David in the literal sense, and to Christ only in the spiritual (Lyran. Brot.); which would destroy the force of the prophecy. David takes occasion, (C.) from the opposition which was made by Saul, (H.) the Philistines, &c., (2 Kings v. 7. Joseph. vii. 4.) to his own exaltation, to foretell the similar rage with which many would resist the Messiah. C.

VER. 1. Raged. Heb. "come together with tumult." (Sym.) "loud cries," like a furious army, composed of several nations. H.—Why have the Philistines, &c. assembled to obstruct my reign? or (C.) "why will the Gentiles be troubled, and the tribes meditate vain things?" S. Jer. Pilate, Herod, and the chiefs of the Jews, met to destroy the Messiah; though, on other occasions, they were at 3 Let us break their bonds asunder: and let us cast away their yoke from us.

4 He that dwelleth in heaven shall laugh at them: and the Lord shall deride them.

5 Then shall he speak to them in his anger, and trouble them in his rage.

6 But I am appointed king by him over Sion, his holy mountain, preaching his commandment.

7 "The Lord hath said to me: Thou art my son, this day have I begotten thee."

8 Ask of me, and I will give thee the Gentiles for thy inheritance, and the utmost parts of the earth for thy possession

9 "Thou shalt rule them with a rod of iron, and shalt break them in pieces like a potter's vessel.

10 And now, O ye kings, understand: receive instruction, you that judge the earth.

11 Serve ye the Lord with fear: and rejoice unto him with trembling.

d Acts xiii. 33; Heb. i. 5, and v. 5.—e Apoc. ii. 27, and xix. 15.

variance. H.—The priests had in vain meditated on the law, since they had not discovered Him who was the end of it. S. Athan., &c.—People of Israel. Acts iv. 27. M.

VER. 2. Kings. Herod and Pilate, (W.) who acted for the Roman emperor. —Princes, of the priests, (H.) Annas and Caiaphas. But all the rage of Gentiles and Jews against Christ was fruitless, (W.) and wicked, (H.) as the attempt of the surrounding nations to dethrone David was, in contradiction to the Divine appointment. He is sometimes styled the Christ, or "anointed of the Lord." Psal. xix. 7. But the Chal. has, "to revolt from the Lord, and fight with his Messias." So that the ancient Jews agreed with us, (C.) and it would be "rash to abandon the interpretation given by S. Peter." S. Jerom.

VER. 3. Us. Let us no longer be subject to the old law, which is abrogated, (S. Aug.) or the enemies of David, and of Christ, encourage one another (C.) to subvert their authority, before it be too well established.

VER. 4. Them, who continue rebellious. Prov. i. He speaks thus to show that we deserve derision. H.—Quod nos derisui digna faciamus. S. Jer.—Yet he will convert many, (W.) even of those who, like S. Paul, were bent on persecuting the faithful. If they still resist, (H.) he will show the futility of their plans, and triumph over all, as David did over his opponents, and Christ over those who wished to have obstructed his resurrection, and the propagation of his gospel. Thus Jesus has proved his Divinity, and confirmed our hopes that he will still protect his Church; as he did when it seemed to be in the greatest danger. C.—God can fear no opposition to his decrees. M.—He is in heaven, to whom we ought to address our prayers. The Lord seems to be here applicable to Christ. Chal. "the word of God."

VER. 5. Rage. These, and similar expressions, when applied to the immutable Deity, only denote that men have deserved the worst of punishments. H.

VER. 6. I am. Heb. "I have anointed . . . over Sion, my," &c. S. Jerom and others have read in the first person, what the Sept. translate in the third. The sense is much the same. C.—But the Vulg. seems to be better connected, and the same letters may have this sense, if we neglect the points, which were unknown to the Sept., and of modern invention. These interpreters may also have read a v for i, as these letters are very similar. Berthier.—"But I am anointed king by him over Sion, his holy mountain." Honbig.—Theodoret, observing that Christ is king not only over Sion, but also over all, alters the punctuation: On Sion . . . preaching, &c., which is very plausible, since Isaiah (ix. 3) says, the law shall come forth from Sion, (Berthier,) and chap. xxxvii. 32, and salvation from Mount Sion. Hence Christ preached frequently in the temple.

VER. 7. Thee. Chal. weakens this text. H.—"I love thee as my son, and look upon thee with the same affection, as if I had this day created thee;" which might be applied to David, now settled more firmly on the throne by his late victory. But it literally refers to Christ, either horn in time, (ver. 1. S. Aug. C.) or baptized (S. Just.); or rather rising again, (Acts xiii. 33,) and born from all eternity. Heb. i. 5. This shows him superior to the angels. The prophet had both these events in view. D.—He to whom God may speak thus to-day, at all times, must be God also. Robertson. Lexic. John v. 25.—To this Socinians can make no reply, without giving up the epistle to the Heb., or allowing that the apostle's arguments were inconclusive. Bert.

VER. 8. Ask. The Messiah must be invested with the human nature, and merit all graces for man. When did David ask for such an extensive dominion? Berthier.—But Christ's kingdom extends over the world.

VER. 9. Rule, as a shepherd, (ποιμαίνε;) as it is cited Apoc. ii. 26. But he is speaking of vengeance taken on the rebellious; and we might translate, "Thou shalt break," &c. C.—God brought the murderers of his Son to an evil end, and destroyed their city. H.—He broke the Gentiles, to make them a more noble vessel. Jer. xviii. 4. S. Hilary.

VER. 10. And. Here the prophet may address kings, unless the Father or the Messiah continue to speak. It is evident these words are not to be understood of David's dominions alone. Fear and joy keep the Christian in proper order 12 Embrace discipline, lest at any time the Lord be angry, and you perish from the just way.

13 When his wrath shall be kindled in a short time, blessed are all they that trust in him.

PSALM III.

DOMINE QUID MULTIPLICATI.

The prophet's danger and delivery from his son, Absalom: mystically the passion and resurrection of Christ.

1 The psalm of David when he fled from the face of his son Absalom. [2 Kings xv.]

2 WHY, O Lord, are they multiplied that afflict me? many are they who rise up against me.

3 Many say to my soul: There is no salvation for him in his God.

4 But thou, O Lord, art my protector, my glory, and the lifter up of my head.

5 I have cried to the Lord with my voice: and he hath heard me from his holy hill.

6 I have slept and have taken my rest: and I have risen up, because the Lord hath protected me.

7 I will not fear thousands of the people surrounding me: arise, O Lord; save me, O my God.

Phil. ii. 12, and iii. 1. Bert.—“The love of God pushes us forward, and the fear of God makes us take care where we walk.” S. Theresa.—The one guards us against despair, the other against presumption.

VER. 12. Discipline. Chal. “doctrine.” S. Jer. “adore purely.” Prot. “kiss the son, lest he be angry,” &c. H.—Houbig. “adore the son, lest he be angry, and you perish. For he comes forward, and shortly his wrath will be kindled.” This version seems to be judicious: that of the Vulg. is less energetic, but comes to the same end, as those who adore the Messias must follow his doctrine. Berthier.—Lord and just is not in Heb. H.—The way or projects of sinners will perish (Psal. i. 6); they will be hurried before the tribunal as soon as they are dead (S. Hil.); and when they least expect it. 1 Thess. v. 2. C.—Some fall from salvation, and God will bring them to judgment at the end of this short life. W.—Heb. “Kiss purely.” Kissing is often used in Scripture to express submission, love, and adoration. S. Jer. c. Ruf. 1. Gen. xii. 40. C.—We testify our respect for God by kissing the Bible, &c. H.—But it cannot be shown that bar means “a son,” in Heb. C.

VER. 13. Trust for salvation through Christ, (D.) acting as he has directed, so that their hope may be well founded. M.—This psalm is quoted six times in the New Testament, which shows the concord of Scripture, and that the prophet saw the promises at a distance, following the law of love, which is as ancient as the world. Berthier.

PSAL. III. Domine, &c. Heb. and Sept. have lit. “a psalm to David,” (τῷ Δαυὶδ,) which may mean that it was addressed to him by God, or that he would set it to music himself, (H.) or that it was composed by him, or on his occasion. The part. I. has various meanings, and it does not incontestably prove that the person before whose name it is placed must be regarded as the author. C.—Yet there is no reason for doubting that this psalm was composed by David. H.—The Jews say he wrote it on the ascent of Mount Olivet. 2 Kings xv. 17. But he rather waited till he had re-entered his capital, and herein expressed his gratitude, specifying at the same time the sentiments with which he had been impressed in the hour of danger. Ven. Bede explains this and many other psalms of Ezechias, as he perhaps did not read or attend to the title. C.—This deserves more attention, as it is the same in all Bibles, though all interpreters do not consider them as canonical, no more than that which is prefixed to the Lamentations. Berthier.—They are authentic, being inspired to Esdras or the Sept. W.—But this is doubtful. H.

VER. 2. Why. Let me know the enormity of my sins. All Israel follows Absalom. 2 Kings xv. 13. So all rose up against Christ. W.—The Church was assailed on all sides, (C.) and every soul must live in expectation of battle from innumerable enemies. Heb. also, (H.) “How are they multiplied.” Houbig.—David is surprised at the sudden change, and adores the depth of God’s judgments, which had been denounced unto him. 1 Kings xii. 10. C.

VER. 3. God. His case is desperate. W.—He must therefore be a criminal. This is the usual judgment of the world, though very false, as we have seen in the person of Job; for temporal punishments are frequently an effect of the Divine clemency. Semei upbraided David on this occasion, as the Jews did Christ. 2 Kings xvi. 7; Matt. xxvii. 42. At the end of this verse, Heb. adds, Selah, (C.) se, and Sept. διαφαλμα, (H.) a word which is not much better understood. Houbigant therefore informs us that he has omitted it entirely, as the Vulg. seems to have done, except Psal. lxi. 8, where it is rendered, in æternum, “for ever,” (Bert.) as S. Jeron expresses it semper, in his Heb. version. It would perhaps be as well to leave the original term. H.—It occurs seventy-one times in the psalms, and thrice in Habacuc. Some think it is a sign to raise the voice, or to pause, &c., (Bert.) at the end of the lesson, before the psalter was divided. None, except Eusebius, asserts that it was inserted by the original authors, and it seems now to be useless. C. Dis.

VER. 4. Protector. Heb. “shield.”—Glory. God is the hope of his servants, (1 Cor. xv. 31.) and grants their requests. C.—He has not abandoned me,

8 For thou hast struck all them who are my adversaries without cause: thou hast broken the teeth of sinners.

9 Salvation is of the Lord: and thy blessing is upon thy people.

PSALM IV.

CUM INVOCAREM.

The prophet teacheth us to flee to God in tribulation, with confidence in him

1 Unto the end, in verses. A psalm for David.

2 WHEN I called upon him, the God of my justice heard me: when I was in distress, thou hast enlarged me.

Have mercy on me: and hear my prayer.

3 O ye sons of men, how long will you be dull of heart? why do you love vanity, and seek after lying?

4 Know ye also that the Lord hath made his holy one wonderful: the Lord will hear me when I shall cry unto him.

5 *Be ye angry, and sin not: the things you say in your hearts, be sorry for them upon your beds.

6 Offer up the sacrifice of justice, and trust in the Lord: many say, Who showeth us good things?

• Eph. iv. 26.

when I had fallen into sin. H.—He gives me the victory, and confirms my throne. W.

VER. 5. Hill. Zion, where the ark has been placed, (C.) or from heaven. M.—Heb. adds, “Selah,” Prot. H.

VER. 6. Rest, in sin (S. Athan.); or, I have not lost my confidence in God, though dangers threaten on every side. C.—Jesus remained undaunted, when his enemies surrounded him; he continued (Theod., &c.) free among the dead, and rose again by his own power. H.—If he prayed that the chalice might be removed, it was to teach us how to behave. C.—He was buried, and rose again, and his disciples believed the Scripture (John ii. 22) recorded here, and in other places. W.—The same word refers to past and future things. S. Greg. Mor. xx. 1. W.

VER. 8. Without cause. Heb. “on the jaw” H.—Without redress. C.—Sept. seems to have read leimon, as “some Jews say that the ancient copies were different.” Origen, A. D. 231. Kennicott.—Teeth. Strength and fury.

VER. 9. Blessing. Abundance of grace is promised to God’s servants, who must look up to him for salvation. David gives thanks for the victory, though he grieved at his son’s death. W.—He showed proofs of the greatest clemency on this occasion. It is evident, from this psalm being inserted before many which regard Saul, that no chronological order is observed. C.—Selah occurs a third time here, as some may have ended the lecture at one, while others ordered it to be continued to another, or even to the third or fifth verse of the next psalm, if that be its real import. H.

PSAL. IV. Cum, &c. VER. 1. Unto the end. Or, as S. Jerom renders it, victory to him that overcometh; which some understand of the chief musician; to whom they suppose the psalms, which bear that title, were given to be sung. We rather understand the psalms thus inscribed to refer to Christ, who is the end of the law, and the great Conqueror of death and hell; and to the New Testament.—In verses (in carnalibus). In the Heb. it is neghinoth, supposed by some to be a musical instrument with which this psalm was to be sung.—For David, or to David, τῷ Δαυὶδ, that is, inspired to David himself, or to be sung by him. Ch.—Lomnotse, from notse, “to push to an end,” may signify (H.) to the end, and this sense is more noble than (Berthier) “To the precursor, or president.” C.—Bonoginuth. H.—“Over the female musicians.” C.—“To the chief of the singers on stringed instruments.” Duguet.—The psalms which have this title relate to future times, and to the Church of Christ (S. Aug. W.); or were to be sung at the close of the Jewish festivals, &c. Bert.—This is considered as a sequel to the preceding, to thank God for the late victory over Absalom. C.

VER. 2. The God. Heb. “When I call, hear me, O God of my justice;” source and witness of my virtue. If I have offended thee, I have done no wrong to my rebellious son and his adherents.—Prayer. Though his request had been granted, he still continues to address God, as we ought to pray without ceasing 1 Thess. v. 17.

VER. 3. O. This is a sort of manifesto to the rebels; and an invitation for them to return to their duty, desisting from setting up a false king, or a lie. H.—Dull. Heb. “my glory to shame.” But the reading of the Sept. seems preferable (C.) as the rhyme in Heb. is now lost, (Fourmont,) and the text has been altered (Houbig.) by an injudicious junction of words, and by using c for b.

VER. 4. Wonderful, (mirificavit,) according to the Heb., means also, has chosen in a striking manner his appointed ruler, or holy person. Bert.—Holy often means one set aside, (Luke ii.,) or commissioned, though the person be a pagan. Isa. xiii. 3. Esid (H.) particularly signifies a “clement” character, such as a king ought to be. C.

VER. 5. Angry. S. Paul (Eph. iv. 26) cites this as a moral sentence. C.—It is more difficult to moderate anger than to deny access to it entirely. S. Fran. of Sales. H.—Beds. Repent for the most secret evil thoughts, before you fall asleep. W.

VER. 6. Justice. External devotion will not suffice. S. Chrys.—No sacrifice

7 The light of thy countenance, O Lord, is signed upon us: thou hast given gladness in my heart.

8 By the fruit of their corn, their wine, and oil, they are multiplied.

9 In peace in the self-same I will sleep, and I will rest:

10 For thou, O Lord, singularly hast settled me in hope.

PSALM V.

VERBA MEA AURIBUS.

A prayer to God against the iniquities of men.

1 Unto the end, for her that obtaineth the inheritance.

A psalm for David.

2 GIVE ear, O Lord, to my words, understand my cry.

3 Harken to the voice of my prayer, O my King and my God.

4 For to thee will I pray: O Lord, in the morning thou shalt hear my voice.

5 In the morning I will stand before thee, and I will see: because thou art not a God that willest iniquity.

6 Neither shall the wicked dwell near thee: nor shall the unjust abide before thy eyes.

7 Thou hatest all the workers of iniquity: thou wilt destroy all that speak a lie.

The bloody and the deceitful man the Lord will abhor.

8 But as for me in the multitude of thy mercy,

I will come into thy house; I will worship towards thy holy temple, in thy fear.

9 Conduct me, O Lord, in thy justice: because of my enemies, direct my way in thy sight.

will please God as long as people take part with rebels. C.—Besides external sacrifices, which have always been required, and those of praise and contrition, (Psal. xlix. and l.) we must offer to God the sacrifice of justice, by complying with our duties to him, ourselves, and neighbours, and by hating sin, and also the world, the flesh, and the devil, which prompt us to offend, and thus to give the preference to vanity. W.

VER. 8. By. Heb. and S. Aug. "From the time of their corn and wine" (C.) gathering. I rejoice "more" than those who live in the greatest affluence, which is nothing but vanity. No mention is made of oil, but the original term, "liquor," includes it. Bert.—S. Jerom found it not in the Hexapla. But it now occurs in the Arab., Syr., &c. C.—David envies not the present prosperity of the rebels. H.—He comforts his followers with the assurance of God's favour, which he had again testified by sending provisions. Bullenger.

VER. 9. Same, (in idipsum.) which signifies with one accord. Acts i. 14. Heb. "altogether," when we shall be united as one people, which I expect will shortly be the case. Confiding in God, I will repose as in the arms of peace. Absalom was already cut off. But all his adherents were not reclaimed. Yet their number was so small as to cause no apprehensions. H.

VER. 10. Singularly. Art "alone" (Pagn.) the source of all my happiness (H.); or thou hast taken such care of me, as if thou hadst no other. M.—I am at a distance from the contagion of evil company, (S. Chrys.) which I hate. Bert.—"For thou only art Lord, thou hast made me dwell secure." S. Jer.

PSAL. V. Verba, &c. VER. 1. For her that obtaineth the inheritance. That is, for the Church of Christ, (Ch.) and every faithful soul, which gains the victory and heaven. W.—Nēluth may also (H.) signify musical instruments with holes, or "women dancing," on religious and joyful occasions, as they did when the ark was removed, &c. 2 Kings vi. 12. C. Psal. lxvii. 26.—This psalm contains an excellent form of morning prayer, as an armour against all our spiritual enemies. Berthier.

VER. 2. Cry. Heb. "meditation." M.—The cry of the heart, (S. Chrys.) and "the groans," which the spirit forms within us. Rom. viii. 26. God cannot reject such prayers. If he seem inattentive, it is because we ask amiss. James iv. 3. C.

VER. 4. Morning. This hour of prayer is also specified, (Psal. lxii. 1, and cxviii. 147,) as that of the evening is. Psal. iv. 9, and liv. 19. We read also of doing a time for prayer among the Jews. Acts x. 9. Daniel (vi. 10) diligently observed these holy customs. C.

VER. 5. Stand. Heb. implies "in order," as those who neglect prayer must be all in confusion. God enables those who are diligent to see wonderful things. Bert.

VER. 7. Workers, (operantur.) "who work," (H.) and die impenitent.

VER. 8. Mercy, not trusting in my own merit, (H.) but with the greatest awe. C.—The just must trust in mercy, not in man's power.—Temple, the Church, and in God's presence. W.

VER. 9. Enemies. Heb. "observers." They are always on the watch to discover any fault. Grant me thy preventing grace. Bert.—Let me not stumble, (H.) but cause me to walk cheerfully in thy paths. C.—If thou approve, it matters not how much worldlings blame me. S. Aug.

10 For there is no truth in their mouth: their heart is vain.

11 *Their throat is an open sepulchre: they dealt deceitfully with their tongues: judge them, O God.

Let them fall from their devices: according to the multitude of their wickednesses cast them out: for they have provoked thee, O Lord.

12 But let all them be glad that hope in thee: they shall rejoice for ever, and thou shalt dwell in them.

And all they that love thy name shall glory in thee.

13 For thou wilt bless the just.

O Lord, thou hast crowned us, as with a shield of thy good will.

PSALM VI.

DOMINE NE IN FURORE.

A prayer of a penitent sinner, under the scourge of God. The first penitential Psalm.

1 Unto the end, in verses, a psalm for David, for the octave.

2 OLORD, rebuke me not in thy indignation, nor chastise me in thy wrath.

3 Have mercy on me, O Lord, for I am weak: heal me, O Lord, for my bones are troubled.

4 And my soul is troubled exceedingly: but thou, O Lord, how long?

5 Turn to me, O Lord, and deliver my soul: O save me for thy mercy's sake.

a Psal. xlii. 3, and cxxxix. 4; Rom. iii. 13.

VER. 10. Their. Heb. "his." But it is incorrect. Houb.—S. Jer. has "their." Bert.—Vain. Heb. "wicked or deceitful."

VER. 11. Sepulchre, which never says there is enough. Prov. xxx. 15. C.—Dealt, &c. S. Paul authorizes this version, (Rom. iii. 13,) though the Heb. be rendered, "they flatter cunningly" (Bert.); or "they sharpen their tongue," and polish it like a sword, that it may cut more easily. This may be applied to heretics. SS. Athan., Chrys., Jer. C.—Judge, or "condemn them" Heb. may be explained as a prediction. Bert.—The Holy Ghost could not dictate an imprecation or desire of revenge. But David might beg that God would frustrate the designs of his enemies; and, by treating them with some severity, hinder the execution of their wicked schemes, which would bring on their own ruin. S. Chrys., S. Aug. C.—Provoked. Heb. "rebelled against." I forgive them for what they have done to me. But I grieve at thy offence; make them return to a sense of their duty. C.

VER. 12. Dwell. Heb. "protect," (S. Jer.) "or shade them." C.—The just will rejoice under thy protection, (H.) and at the conversion of the sinner. S. Chrys.

VER. 13. Shield. Heb. tsine, (H.) which was probably large enough to cover the body. C.—If God be with us, who is against us? H.

PSAL. VI. Domine, &c. VER. 1. For the octave. That is, to be sung on an instrument of eight strings. S. Augustin understands it, mystically, of the last resurrection, and the world to come; which is, as it were, the octave, or eighth day, after the seven days of this mortal life: and for this octave, sinners must dispose themselves, like David, by bewailing their sins, whilst they are here upon the earth. Ch. W.—It may also signify, that this psalm was to be sung by "the eighth" of the twenty-four bands. 1 Par. xv. 21.

VER. 2. Indignation. Lit. "fury." H.—Such strong expressions were requisite to make the carnal Jews fear God's judgments, though a Being of infinite perfection can have no passion. S. Chrys.—David does not beg to be free from suffering, (H.) but he requests that God would chastise him with moderation. Jer. x. 24, and xlvii. 28. C.—Justice without mercy is reserved for the last day. S. Greg.—Wrath. This regards those who have built wood, &c., on the foundation. They shall be purified by fire. S. Aug. Purgatory was then believed in the 4th cent. Bert.

VER. 3. Troubled, with grief. W.—I am sinking under my illness: my virtue is lost. C.—The whole human race is this sick man, requiring the aid of Jesus Christ. S. Aug.

VER. 4. Long? Wilt thou leave me in distress? W.—He breaks off abruptly to express his sorrow. See Isa. vi. 11; Jer. xlii. 26. Bert.—True converts are often tried a long time, that they may conceive how God will treat those who never return to him, (S. Aug., Euseb.) and that they may beware of a relapse. C.

VER. 5. Turn. God never abandons us first, Jer. ii. 27. Bert.—We drive him away by sin. S. Athan.—Sake. I cannot take one step without thee. C.—Treat me not as my sins deserve; but mercifully restore me to favour. W.

VER. 6. Hell. The hardened sinner will not praise thee, (S. Aug.) much less will the damned, who are confirmed in evil. Bert.—Even those who are in "the grave," though just, cannot sound forth thy praises; and, consequently, if I

6 For there is no one in death, that is mindful of thee : and who shall confess to thee in hell ?

7 I have laboured in my groanings, every night I will wash my bed : I will water my couch with my tears.

8 My eye is troubled through indignation : I have grown old amongst all my enemies.

9 *Depart from me all ye workers of iniquity : for the Lord hath heard the voice of my weeping.

10 The Lord hath heard my supplication : the Lord hath received my prayer.

11 Let all my enemies be ashamed, and be very much troubled : let them be turned back, and be ashamed very speedily.

PSALM VII.

DOMINE DEUS MEUS.

David, trusting in the justice of his cause, prayeth for God's help against his enemies.

1 The psalm of David, which he sung to the Lord, for the words of Chusi, the son of Jemini. [2 Kings xvi.]

2 O LORD, my God, in thee have I put my trust : save me from all them that persecute me, and deliver me.

3 Lest at any time he seize upon my soul like a lion, while there is no one to redeem me, nor to save.

4 O Lord, my God, if I have done this thing, if there be iniquity in my hands :

5 If I have rendered to them that repaid me evils, let me deservedly fall empty before my enemies.

6 Let the enemy pursue my soul, and take it, and tread

* Matt. vii. 23, and xxv. 41 ; Luke xiii. 27.

be cut off, the number of thy adorers will be diminished. This motive is often urged, as if God was forgotten in the rest of the world. Psal. xxix. 10 ; Isa. xxxviii. 18. C.

VER. 7. Bed. S. Jer. "I will make my bed swim" (H.) with tears, or sweat. Bert.—Here we behold the effects of true repentance, which will not suffer the sinner to enjoy any repose, (C.) when he reflects on the pains of hell, and the perfections of God. H.

VER. 8. Indignation of God, (Theod.,) or of my enemies. I am also indignant when I behold my foes exulting in my ruin. C.—I have. Heb. "It," the eye. Bert.

VER. 9. Iniquity, who have fostered my passions, (Bert.,) or sought my ruin. I now perceive who were my true friends. C.—David confides in God, as every true penitent may do, for protection. W.—He had also been assured of pardon by Nathan, the prophet. H.

VER. 11. Troubled. This is a prophecy, (S. Aug.,) or a prayer for their speedy and earnest conversion, (S. Jer. C.) or a threat if they persist. W.—Speedily. At the last day the wicked will perceive how short life has been. Tunc sentient peccatores quam non sit longa omnis vita que transit. S. Aug.

PSAL. VII. Domine, &c. Ssogiun (H.) is a word which has greatly puzzled interpreters. See Robertson in sage. Prot. have, "Shiggaion of David." The Rabbins confess that they know not its meaning, and it is of no service for the explanation of the psalm. Bert.—S. Jerom follows the Sept., (H.) which may suit very well. Others have, "ignorance." M.—"Perplexity." C.—"Secret." Vatab.—"Song of wanderings." Parkhurst, &c.—Chusi is scarcely less difficult to understand. The person who has inserted this historical title, and many others, without much judgment, had probably in view the wars of Absalom, and the curses of Semei. But the psalm seems rather to refer to the persecutions of Saul, (C. 1 Kings xxii. 8. M.) who was of the tribe of Benjamin. H.—S. Aug., Bas., and Chrys., explain it of Chusi, (W.) the Arachite, from a town of Benjamin, (C.) who defeated the counsel of Achitophel, (W.) as it is supposed that David was given to understand that his friend had betrayed him, and in consequence speaks of him in such harsh terms. But if that had been the case, he would have suppressed what was founded on error (C.) ; and the supposition is contrary to the idea which we have of inspiration. Yet there is nothing in the psalm which requires the harsh expressions to be applied to Chusi. They may as well refer to Achitophel, who spoke in answer to him.

VER. 3. Lion. In a spiritual sense this is the devil. 1 Pet. v. 8. S. Aug.—"Let him only see the sign of the cross, or the lamp continually burning before the altar, he will flee away. Should we wonder at this? the garments alone of Paul drove him from possessed persons." S. Chrys.—While. Heb. "tearing, and not snatching away." But there is a similar construction, (Lam. v. 8,) which shows that we ought to follow the Vulg. Bert.

VER. 5. That repaid. This seems better than "my peaceable one," as some down my life, on the earth, and bring down my glory to the dust.

7 Rise up, O Lord, in thy anger : and be thou exalted in the borders of my enemies.

And arise, O Lord, my God, in the precept which thou hast commanded : 8 and a congregation of people shall surround thee.

And for their sakes return thou on high.

9 The Lord judgeth the people.

Judge me, O Lord, according to my justice, and according to my innocence in me.

10 The wickedness of sinners shall be brought to naught ; and thou shalt direct the just : *the searcher of hearts and reins is God.

11 Just is my help from the Lord : who saveth the upright of heart.

12 God is a just judge, strong and patient : is he angry every day ?

13 Except you will be converted, he will brandish his sword : he hath bent his bow, and made it ready.

14 And in it he hath prepared the instruments of death, he hath made ready his arrows for them that burn.

15 *Behold he hath been in labour with injustice : he hath conceived sorrow, and brought forth iniquity.

16 He hath opened a pit and dug it : and he is fallen into the hole he made.

17 His sorrow shall be turned on his own head : and his iniquity shall come down upon his crown.

18 I will give glory to the Lord according to his translate the Heb., for it would be but a small commendation not to injure a friend : the pagans do as much. Dupont therefore agrees with the Vulg., and S. Jerom has, "If I have rendered evil to those who did me any, and sent my enemies empty away ;" or, as the Heb. is in the future, "I will let my enemies depart without fighting ;" which is equivalent to, I will gain no advantage over them. Bert.—The man who takes revenge, injures himself, and becomes the devil's slave. S. Aug. H.

VER. 6. Dust. Heb. adds, "to dwell," (H.) as if the ignominy was not to be effaced. This would be very sensible for a king. Bert.

VER. 7. Borders. Heb. is rendered, "fury of my enemies."—My is found in some copies of the Sept., though the edit. of Comp. and Aldus agree with the Vulg., and Bos. observes, that an ancient interpreter rendered the first word as we do, Berg.—Commanded. Chal. "Execute the judgment in my favour, which thou hast decreed." Then all will obey. C.—O Lord, my God. Heb. has not Lord, and some translate ali, "to me." But it also means, "my God." Bert.

VER. 8. High. on thy tribunal, to decide this dispute. The Fathers apply this to the ascension of Jesus Christ, who will judge the world. S. Aug. Theod. C. 2 Cor. x. 11.

VER. 9. Innocence. Heb. "simplicity," which has the same meaning. H.—He speaks of the justice of his cause (Muis) against his particular enemies. W.—S. Paul thus commends himself. 2 Tim. iv. 7.

VER. 11. Just. This epithet refers to God, in Heb. Sept. might easily explain it of help, before the words and verses were divided (H.) : yet it is still taken in the former sense, in some Gr. and Lat. copies.

VER. 12. Strong. Heb. al, means also "God threatening every day" (H.) ; which must be a proof of his patience, as the Sept. have intimated, since he could destroy at once. Thus numquid must be rendered "is he not?" Isa. xxvii. 7. Bert.—God cannot but be displeased at every sin. He threatens the offender daily by secret remorse, or by his preachers and good books. H.—But he often defers punishment (W.) till death, when the measure of crimes is full. S. Aug.—This silence or delay is one of the most terrible of his judgments, (H.) and a mark of his great indignation. If he were, however, to strike every one as soon as he had committed sin, where should we be ?

VER. 13. Except you. Heb. "if he be not." Houb. would read, "God will not be turned aside." Bert.—"For him who does not change, he will sharpen his sword." S. Jer. H.

VER. 14. For them that burn. That is, against the persecutors of his saints. Ch.—Heb. also, "he has made his arrows to burn." Houbigant after Sym. H.

VER. 15. Iniquity. Heb. "a lie." All the labour of the wicked ends in smoke. See Mic. ii. 1 ; Isa. lix. 4. H.—The psalmist sometimes speaks of many enemies, and sometimes of one, who was the chief. Yet what he says of him must, according to the genius of the Heb. language, be applied to the rest. Bert.—Saul, (C.) Absalom, and Achitophel, each found their ruin, in their unjust attempts. H justice: and will sing to the name of the Lord the most high.

PSALM VIII.

DOMINE DOMINUS NOSTER.

(God is wonderful in his works; especially in mankind, singularly exalted by the incarnation of Christ.)

1 Unto the end, for the presses: a psalm for David.

2 O LORD, our Lord, how admirable is thy name in the whole earth!

For thy magnificence is elevated above the heavens.

3 Out of the mouth of infants and of sucklings thou hast perfected praise, because of thy enemies, that thou mayest destroy the enemy and the avenger.

4 For I will behold thy heavens, the works of thy fingers: the moon and the stars which thou hast founded.

5 What is man, that thou art mindful of him? or the son of man, that thou visitest him?

6 *Thou hast made him a little less than the angels, thou hast crowned him with glory and honour: 7 and hast set him over the works of thy hands.

8 ^bThou hast subjected all things under his feet, all sheep and oxen: moreover, the beasts also of the fields.

• Heb. ii. 7.

PSAL. VIII. Domine, &c. VER. 1. The presses. In Heb. Gittith, supposed to be a musical instrument (Ch.); or, "the musicians from Geth," who were famous, and might follow David. 2 Kings i. 20, and xv. 18. The Sept. must have read a v for i, (C.) Gothuth. Yet S. Jer. and Pagnin agree with them (H.); and that sense seems as plausible as any other. The psalm relates to Christ alone (Matt. xxi. 16; 1 Cor. xv. 26, and Heb. ii. 6); who is represented reading the wine-press. Isa. lxiii. 3; Apoc. xix. 13. Bert.—The Jews confess that it speaks of the Messias. Ferrand.

VER. 2. O Lord, (Jeve,) our Lord (Adnina). S. Jer. Dominator noster, "our Ruler." H.—God is Lord of all by creation, and still more of those who believe. W.—Adonai is pronounced by the Jews, and sometimes applied to men. But they have lost the pronunciation of the first term, which some read Jehovah, (C.) or Jaho, (S. Jer.) Jave, &c. H.—Admirable. It expresses all that He is. (Exod. iii. 14. Bert.) Essence itself. H.—Earth. This was verified after the incarnation (S. Chrys.); for before, the Gentiles knew it not, and the Jews caused it to be blasphemed. Bert.

VER. 3. Praise. But why does the prophet take notice of this proof of Christ's being the Messias, while he passes over his curing the sick? &c. S. Chrysostom answers, because the other miracles had been performed in the old law, but God had never before opened the mouths of infants to proclaim "praise the Lord," as they did when they bore witness to Christ entering the temple. God seems to be particularly pleased with the praises of children. Mic. ii. 9; Joel ii. 16. Heb. "Thou hast founded strength." Aquila. C.—But S. Jerom retains praise, as our Saviour himself quotes it. Matt. xxi. 16. H.—Avenger. The old Vulg. read deffensorem (H.) in the same sense. S. Chrys. explains it of the Jews; and other Fathers understand heretics and the devil. S. Aug., &c. C.

VER. 4. Fingers, as if they had been formed in play, while the incarnation is the work of God's right hand. Euseb. C.—Heavens, moon, and stars, denote the Church. No mention is made of the sun, because it is the emblem of Christ, who was the Creator. Bert. Apoc. xii. 1.

VER. 5. Him. The prophet considers the nature of man at such a distance from the Divinity. Being, nevertheless, united with Jesus Christ, it is raised far above the angels. Heb. ii. 6. Bert.—When we reflect on the meanness of our nature on the one hand, and on what God has done for it on the other, we are lost in astonishment. The pagans were aware of the corporal infirmities of man, (Seneca, Consol. 11,) but not of his spiritual disorders. Heb. has here, the son of Adam, or one of the lowest class; and not of Adm, which means a person of nobility, vir. Psal. iv. 3. C.—Yet Christ applies to himself the former appellation, to show us a pattern of humility. H.—S. Aug. inquires what difference there is between man or the son. The Heb. v means, likewise, and; yet or would have been better. Exod. xxi. 16.—"Whether we have sold him, or he be in his hand." Amama.

VER. 6. Angels. Aleim means also "God," as S. Jerom, &c. explain it. Thou hast placed man like a deity upon earth. But S. Paul adopts the sense of the Sept. C.—S. Jerom doubted whether the Epistle to the Hebrews belonged to him, or he would have done the same. Some of the Fathers suppose (Bert.) that the prophet speaks of man before the fall. Theodoret.—Yet he has Christ principally in view. C.—A little less may be better rendered, "for a little while." ῥόαυ ri, Acts v. 34; Isa. x. 25; modico, Heb. ii. Notwithstanding the prerogatives of Adam, before his fall, what is said by the prophet and S. Paul can be true of none but Christ; who was subject to death only for a short space, and quickly rose from the tomb, Lord of all. 1 Cor. xv. 26. If we do not see it yet, (Heb. ii. 8; Psal. lxxix. 2,) our faith must not waver. He is crowned, and will one day assert his dominion. Bert. Matt. xxviii. 18; Eph. i. 19. C.—In his 9 The birds of the air, and the fishes of the sea, that pass through the paths of the sea.

10 O Lord, our Lord, how admirable is thy name in the whole earth!

PSALM IX.

CONFITEBOR TIBI DOMINE.

The church praiseth God for his protection against her enemies.

1 Unto the end, for the hidden things of the son. A psalm for David.

2 I WILL give praise to thee, O Lord, with my whole heart: I will relate all thy wonders.

3 I will be glad, and rejoice in thee: I will sing to thy name, O thou most high.

4 When my enemy shall be turned back: they shall be weakened, and perish before thy face.

5 For thou hast maintained my judgment and my cause: thou hast sat on the throne, who judgest justice.

6 Thou hast rebuked the Gentiles, and the wicked one hath perished: thou hast blotted out their name for ever and ever.

7 The swords of the enemy have failed unto the end: and their cities thou hast destroyed.

b Gen. i. 28; 1 Cor. xv. 26.

assumed nature, Christ became less than the angels; but He has raised it above them, and is appointed Lord of angels, men, and creatures of every description. The sea and the winds obey him. Matt. viii. W.

VER. 8. All sheep. S. Paul did not judge it necessary to specify these things, as they are included in the word all. Bert.

VER. 9. Sea. All things are subjected to man's dominion. Gen. i. 26, and ix. 2. C.—"The Stoics are in the right, who say that the world was made for us. For all its parts and productions are contrived for man's benefit." Lact. Ira, 13.

VER. 10. Earth. This repetition of the first verse insinuates that as God was admirable in giving man the power to avoid sin and death; so he is wonderful in raising him again in such a state that he can sin no more. W.

PSAL. IX. Confitebor, &c. VER. 1. The hidden things of the son. The humility and sufferings of Christ, the Son of God; and of good Christians, who are his sons by adoption; are called hidden things, with regard to the children of this world, who know not the value and merit of them. Ch.—It may also signify "to Ben, the master of music, over the young women." See 1 Par. xv. 18. C. M.—These authors have joined almuth, which S. Jerom, &c. read as two words, "on the death of the son." Prot. "upon Muth Labben." David might allude to the death of Absalom, or of some of his other children. But he has his Son, Christ, the conqueror of death and hell, principally in view, as this psalm sings of victory over nations. His incarnation and the afflictions of Christians are hidden in God. W.—Lomutsē has generally a preposition, l, al, &c., after it, which might induce us to prefer rendering "death," before "secrets or young women." H.—But al may be understood, as it is found Psal. xlv., where all have, "for the secrets." In Heb. this psalm is divided (Bert.) at ver. 22nd, and formerly it seems at the 17th. C.—This division is arbitrary, and of no consequence for the understanding of the psalms. Bert.—The Jews agree with neither. Some unite the 1st and 2nd, as Kimchi does the 114th and 115th. Amama.—What is here rendered a psalm for David, is the same in the Heb. and Sept. as has been before expressed of David. Psal. iii. H.

VER. 2. Praise and thanks, or I will confess. W.—To thee. Heb. "to the." —Wonders; victories gained over the neighbouring nations, so that Israel was at peace and liberty to transport the ark to Sion. 1 Par. xv.

VER. 4. Back; routed. After Saul's family was taken off, none durst oppose David. They saw that the Lord had set him on the throne. C.—Only after his sin rebels began to molest him. H.—The Fathers explain this of the devil and his agents. S. Jer.

VER. 5. Justice, or rightly. C.—God alone always discerns what is just. S. Chrys.—Man overcomes the devil, with the assistance of God's grace. W.

VER. 6. Name, or destroyed them. The name is often put for the thing itself. Yet many of those nations who once made such a noise, are now quite forgotten. No traces of them can be found. H.—The Egyptians and Chanaanites had been exterminated. C.—Ever, for all eternity, as long as God shall reign, ver. 8, 40; or Psal. x. 16. This shows that he speaks of the latter times, and of the final destruction of idolatry, by the preaching of apostolic men, (Bert.) and by the last fire. For some will be so infatuated as to uphold it even to the end. H.

VER. 7. Swords. "My enemies have sunk under the sword," Syr. H.—Frameæ is a German word for "javelins," pointed with iron, which they might either throw, or use in close fight. Tacit.—It is often put for a sword. Et Marth frameam. Juv. 13.—Their. Heb., &c., "the."—Noise, as swiftly. These fierce nations are fallen like a huge Colossus. C.—Heb. "they themselves," or "with them."—Cities, &c.

Their memory hath perished with a noise: 8 But the Lord remaineth for ever.

He hath prepared his throne in judgment: 9 and he shall judge the world in equity, he shall judge the people in justice.

10 And the Lord is become a refuge for the poor: a helper in due time in tribulation.

11 And let them trust in thee who know thy name: for thou hast not forsaken them that seek thee, O Lord.

12 Sing ye to the Lord, who dwelleth in Zion: declare his ways among the Gentiles:

13 For requiring their blood, he hath remembered them: he hath not forgotten the cry of the poor.

14 Have mercy on me, O Lord: see my humiliation which I suffer from my enemies.

15 Thou that liftest me up from the gates of death, that I may declare all thy praises in the gates of the daughter of Zion.

16 I will rejoice in thy salvation: the Gentiles have stuck fast in the destruction which they prepared.

Their foot hath been taken in the very snare which they hid.

17 The Lord shall be known when he executeth judgments: the sinner hath been caught in the works of his own hands.

18 The wicked shall be turned into hell, all the nations that forget God.

19 For the poor man shall not be forgotten to the end: the patience of the poor shall not perish for ever.

20 Arise, O Lord, let not man be strengthened: let the Gentiles be judged in thy sight.

VER. 8. In judgment. S. Jer. "to judge." H.

VER. 10. Poor. Heb. lodoc, "the oppressed," (S. Jer.) "broken with grief." C.—Tribulation. God's assistance is requisite both in prosperity and adversity. He generally manifests his power only, when all human succour proves useless. H.

VER. 11. Know, with love. Such are always heard. What wonder if others be rejected, who flee from God? S. Chrys. and S. Aug. C.

VER. 12. Ways, (studia), "favours," (H.) works, &c. C.—This was done by the apostles. S. Aug.—Men ought chiefly to study the precepts of God. W.

VER. 13. Their, may be omitted, as it would seem to refer to the Gentiles. God declares that he will demand the blood of all that shed it without authority. Gen. ix. 5. H.—He had punished the Chanaanites, &c., for their cruelty, as he did afterwards the persecutors of his Church.

VER. 15. Death, from the most imminent dangers. H.—Daughter. In the places where the inhabitants of Zion assembled, (Bert.) or publicly in the Church. W.—In hell, the damned would wish to die. Theod.—The gates of death may also signify sin, (Orig.), and the bad example of parents. S. Jer.

VER. 16. Illud. These are the enemies of salvation. Bert.—The nations which had oppressed the Jews found their fortifications and arms turned against themselves, (C.) which is often the case of the wicked. W.

VER. 17. Hands. Caught in the very act, so that he cannot deny the crime. Here we find in Heb. (C.) egium sle, which S. Jerom renders, "by meditation for ever." H.—Sept., Sym., and some Lat. copies, "a canticle of the psalm's division," διαψαλμαρος. Here perhaps the psalm ended. C.

VER. 13. Hell; shall die, or be lost (convertantur). Lit. "Let," &c. But it may be properly explained as a prediction, or menacc. H.—Zeal, and not revenge, prompts David to speak thus. W.

VER. 19. Not perish. Heb. does not express the negation, but it must be understood. Bert.—Prot. supply it from the former part of the verse. The expectation of the just will not be frustrated.

VER. 20. Man. Heb. anuss, (H.) "weak, sinful man." Bert.—Gentiles, or all notorious sinners. The Jews despised the Gentiles, as the Romans did all barbarians. W.

VER. 21. Lawgiver. Heb. mure. H.—Sept. intimate one who rigorously enforces his laws. M.—Sym. "a law." Heb. "instruction." C.—Houb. "fear." S. Jer. "terror: let the nations know that they are men always." She is thus frequently explained as a part of the sentence by S. Jerom, though neglected by others. H.—It is no proof that the psalm ended here; but serves to excite attention. W.—The Gentiles lived without law, like beasts, except that their conscience sometimes admonished them of their duty. Rom. ii. 14. H.—The Fathers understand this lawgiver to be Jesus; or Antichrist, whom the wicked have deserved to have set over them. Theod., S. Athan., &c. C.—Those who will not believe in Christ, will give credit to Antichrist. S. Aug. 2 Thess. ii.

21 Appoint, O Lord, a lawgiver over them: that the Gentiles may know themselves to be but men.

Psalm X. according to the Hebrews.

1 Why, O Lord, hast thou retired afar off? why dost thou slight us in our wants, in the time of trouble?

2 Whilst the wicked man is proud, the poor is set on fire: they are caught in the counsels which they devise.

3 For the sinner is praised in the desires of his soul and the unjust man is blessed.

4 The sinner hath provoked the Lord, according to the multitude of his wrath, he will not seek him:

5 God is not before his eyes: his ways are filthy at all times.

Thy judgments are removed from his sight: he shall rule over all his enemies.

6 For he hath said in his heart: I shall not be moved from generation to generation, and shall be without evil.

7 *His mouth is full of cursing, and of bitterness, and of deceit: under his tongue are labour and sorrow.

8 He sitteth in ambush with the rich, in private places, that he may kill the innocent.

9 His eyes are upon the poor man: he lieth in wait, in secret, like a lion in his den.

He lieth in ambush, that he may catch the poor man to catch the poor, whilst he draweth him to him.

10 In his net he will bring him down, he will crouch and fall, when he shall have power over the poor.

11 For he hath said in his heart: God hath forgotten, he hath turned away his face, not to see to the end.

a Infra, xlii. 3; Rom. iii. 14.

PSAL. X. VER. 1, or 22. In modern times the Jews have done it. W.—The Church allows this title, though the Sept. found none in their copies, and therefore looked upon all to be one psalm. The change of subject is no proof of the contrary, as such compositions mingle joy and fear together. David has shown how the just had got the victory. He now proceeds to declare what persecutions they had to endure. Bert.—After peace war succeeds. There is no settled state here below. H.—The same sentiments occur Psal. xi., and xlii., &c. C.—Trouble. God assists his servants in distress (ver. 10); yet sometimes he delays, in order "to inflame their souls with a desire of his coming." S. Aug.—He is present, (Acts xvii. 28,) but only the men of prayer are truly sensible either of it, or of his absence. Bert.—The weak think he defers his aid a long time when they suffer any great persecution.

VER. 2, or 23. Fire. With zeal (W.) and indignation, or rather is oppressed (C.) and persecuted. See Mic. iii. 3. H.—They. Houb. would substitute "he is caught." But we may as well explain this of the sinner and the unjust, ver. 3. Bert.—Indeed both are under perplexity, as the poor knows not why the wicked prosper. Bellar. M.—An answer is given to the complaint of the just, intimating that the wicked are caught in their own snares, (W.) and are not free from trouble. H.

VER. 3. Blessed by flatterers, while he is full of himself also, as the Heb. insinuates. C.—"The miser, applauding himself, has blasphemed the Lord. The wicked in the height of his fury will not seek, nor is God in all his thoughts." H.

VER. 4. Seek to regain his favour, (W. M.) or rather (H.) he flatters himself that God will not punish him, ver. 13. C.

VER. 5. Filthy. Heb. "as one in labour." He can enjoy no ease. Chal. "his ways are prosperous." Jun. "paved." C.—Removed. Heb. "height itself before him, he will blow upon all his enemies." This more forcibly denotes his violence and scorn. Bert. Acts ix. 1. M.

VER. 6. Evil. Always happy, or as the Heb., Chal., &c., may signify, "I shall not desist from evil." C.—I will gratify my passions. Who dares to oppose me? H.

VER. 7. Sorrow. Which he prepares for others, and yet feels himself. C.

VER. 8. Rich. S. Jer. "in the porches," is equivalent. Moderns translate "villages," which Houbigant would change for a word signifying "ditches," without necessity. Bert.

VER. 9. Poor. "His eyes look round the strong," for aid; or "the poor. (Prot.) for destruction. See ver. 14.

VER. 10. Fall. Prot. "and humbleth himself, that the poor may fall us his strong ones." H.—But the Vulg. gives a better sense. C.—"He will bring under the broken, (poor,) and will rush on violently with all his power." S. Jerom here explains elocaim, valenter, instead of "the poor." H.

VER. 11. End. God delays for a time; but he will punish. C.—Relig' lays open all the sophisms of infidelity. Bert.

12 Arise, O Lord God, let thy hand be exalted : forget not the poor.

13 Wherefore hath the wicked provoked God? for he hath said in his heart : He will not require it.

14 Thou seest it, for thou considerest labour and sorrow : that thou mayst deliver them into thy hands.

To thee is the poor man left : thou wilt be a helper to the orphan.

15 Break thou the arm of the sinner and of the malignant : his sin shall be sought, and shall not be found.

16 The Lord shall reign to eternity, yea, for ever and ever : ye Gentiles shall perish from his land.

17 The Lord hath heard the desire of the poor : thy ear hath heard the preparation of their heart.

18 To judge for the fatherless and for the humble, that man may no more presume to magnify himself upon earth.

PSALM X.

IN DOMINO CONFIDO.

The just man's confidence in God in the midst of persecutions.

1 Unto the end. A psalm to David.

2 IN the Lord I put my trust : how then do you say to my soul : Get thee away from hence to the mountain, like a sparrow?

3 For, lo, the wicked have bent their bow : they have prepared their arrows in the quiver, to shoot in the dark the upright of heart.

4 For they have destroyed the things which thou hast made : but what has the just man done?

VER. 14. Sorrow. Thou punishest with pain. S. Aug.—Thou beholdest all the iniquity which is committed, (C.) but waitest until the measure be full. S. Chrys.—Terrible delay!—Poor. S. Jer. “art left thy strong ones,” who distrust in themselves, and rely on thee. H.—Others explain ēloc, “poor and weak.” Parkhurst.

VER. 15. Found. When the means of sinning are withdrawn, he will repent (Ss. Chrys., Aug. Isa. xxviii. 19); or it is a sort of irony : he will see whether, as he said, God will take no notice, ver. 4. C.

VER. 16. Shall. Or Heb. “have perished.” In the prophetic style, things to come are spoken of as past, on account of their certainty. Bert.—The wicked shall not appear in the kingdom of God, to pollute his earth. H.—If God suffer the sinner for a while, it is because he is eternal, so that he will never let him escape. C.

VER. 17. The. Heb. “Thou, Lord, hast heard the desire of the humble. Thou wilt prepare their heart; thou wilt cause thine ear to hear.” Prot. H.—The Heb. intimates that God prepares the heart for all good. Bert.—He hears before his servants cry out, (Isa. lxx. 24,) since his Spirit inspires the petitions. Rom. viii. 26; Gal. iv. 6. C.

VER. 18, or 39. Earth. S. Jer. is more expressive, “that the man of earth may by no means cherish pride any longer.” Though he may be the greatest monarch, he is but man, dust and corruption, ver. 21. H.

PSAL. X. In Domino, &c. Heb. Lōmnotse Lodud, (H.) “to the master of music of, or to David.” C.—S. Jerom supplies the word psalm. That David, or any other, should give the title of master of music to so great a prince may seem strange; and therefore the Vulg. may perhaps be as accurate. S. Jerom and Pagnin have “to the victor to David.” Almost all agree that he composed this psalm (H.) when he began to be persecuted by Saul. He expresses his confidence in God; when his friends advised him to flee. C.

VER. 2. How. My friends . . say, &c. W.—To the. Heb. now “to your mountain,” as the words are joined which were formerly divided, while a v has been lost, and another placed instead of i, as we may gather from the ancient interpreters. Chal., Syr., S. Jer., &c.—Most people suppose that David’s friends exhort him to withdraw : but he waits for the Divine order. Others think (C.) that these are the words of his enemies, who wished to fill him with dismay, that he might retire among the Gentiles, and adore their idols. 1 Kings xxvi. 19. Mariana.—Sparrow. Heb. tsopur, any little “bird.” H. Prov. xxvii. 8. M.

VER. 3. Quiver. Heb. “on the string,” ready to shoot. C.—But ithor (H.) means “abundance,” and may be well understood of the quiver. Bert.—Dark. Sept. add “moon.” M.

VER. 4. Made. In choosing me for king, Heb. “the foundations are, or shall be, destroyed; and what shall the just do? or, what has the just man done?” The foundations, both of religion and of the kingdom, depend on God’s ordinances, as the Sept. well explain. Bert.—Pagnin has, “the nets;” S. Jerom, “the laws.”

VER. 5. Heaven. This is the source of my confidence. C.—The admirable

5 *The Lord is in his holy temple, the Lord’s throne is in heaven.

His eyes look on the poor man : his eye-lids examine the sons of men.

6 The Lord trieth the just and the wicked : but he that loveth iniquity, hateth his own soul.

7 He shall rain snares upon sinners : fire and brimstone, and storms of winds, shall be the portion of their cup.

8 For the Lord is just, and hath loved justice : his countenance hath beheld righteousness.

PSALM XI.

SALVUM ME FAC.

The prophet calls for God’s help against the wicked.

1 Unto the end : for the octave, a psalm for David.

2 SAVE me, O Lord, for there is now no saint : truths are decayed from among the children of men.

3 They have spoken vain things, every one to his neighbour : with deceitful lips, and with a double heart, have they spoken.

4 May the Lord destroy all deceitful lips, and the tongue that speaketh proud things.

5 Who have said : We will magnify our tongue : our lips are our own : who is Lord over us?

6 By reason of the misery of the needy, and the groans of the poor, now will I arise, saith the Lord.

I will set him in safety : I will deal confidently in his regard.

• Hab. ii. 20.

mother of the Machabees suggested this consoling motive, (Bert.) to strengthen her youngest son. 2 Mac. vii. 28. Heaven is the temple of the Lord, (H.) though the tabernacle may be so styled here. See Psal. v. 8. C.—The poor man is not in Heb., but it is chiefly of him that the psalmist speaks (Bert.); and the Sept. and Arab. (C.) seem to (H.) have read it.

VER. 6. Trieth, interrogat, which is rendered by examine, ver. 5. H.—God juridically questions all, (C.) and makes them give an exact account of themselves, even of every idle word. H.—The word also means that he punishes, or chastises. C.—Heb. “the Lord trieth the just, but his soul hateth the wicked, and the lover of iniquity.” S. Jer., &c. H.

VER. 7. Snares. Wonderful expression! The wicked cannot escape. H.—Brimstone, as he did upon Sodom. Gen. xix. 4; Jude 7.

VER. 8. Righteousness. As, on the other hand, (H.) the upright shall behold God, (Matt. v. 8,) while the wicked shall be driven into darkness (C.) for all eternity. In vain do modern sophists pretend that hell will not last for ever, because God is incapable of revenge, or of delighting in the torture of his creatures. They use the word revenge in a wrong sense. Bert.—God is not subject to any passion; but his justice requires that those should be eternally punished whose will is always impious. H.—Can they show that there will be room for repentance in the other world (Bert.)? or that the wicked would make use of it, if granted, since they would not repent as long as they lived? By the same arguments, they might as well prove that God could not punish at all. H. Dan. iii. 27.

PSAL. XI. Salvum, &c. VER. 2. Save. David, persecuted by Saul. (Bosquet); or Absalom (Grot.); the captives at Babylon (C.); our Saviour suffering, or coming to judge (S. Aug.); in a word, any just man who sees the corruption of men, may use this language. H.—We cannot open the writings of the prophets, or of the Fathers, without meeting with such complaints. Heb. “no saint;” said, “pious,” (Pagn. H.) clement person. C.—Truths. Heb. “people of veracity.” C.—Bias said, “All men are bad” (Clem. Strom. 1); or, as Laertius expresses it, “Most people are wicked.” Hence few are chosen. H.

VER. 3. Deceitful. Heb. “flattering;” and of course not free from deceit. Bert.

VER. 4. Lips. “The saints do not curse, but foretell what will happen.” S. Jer.—Heb. “the Lord will destroy” the deceitful, (Bert.) who mean to injure men (H.); and the proud, who attack God and religion. H.

VER. 5. Oven. “We have lips,” (Sym.) or eloquence, to gain our cause against these miserable exiles. C.—Lord. Heb. adun, “master.” We admit of no superior, neither in heaven nor on earth. H.

VER. 6. Arise, and redeem lost man (Theod.); or, protect my servants (C.) from such insolent oppressors. H.—Regard. This may be put in the mouth of the afflicted. C.—“I will place my confidence in the Saviour, and will act boldly in him.” H.—His promises give me a full assurance, ver. 7. The Heb. seems to be incorrect, and very different from what the ancients read. C.—S. Jer. has, “I will place their aid in salvation” (H.); which he explains of Jesus Christ. See Isa. xli. 2. C.

7 The words of the Lord are pure words: as silver tried by the fire, purged from the earth, refined seven times.

8 Thou, O Lord, wilt preserve us: and keep us from this generation for ever.

9 The wicked walk round about: according to thy highness, thou hast multiplied the children of men.

PSALM XII.

USQUEQUO DOMINE.

A prayer in tribulation

1 Unto the end, a psalm for David.

HOW long, O Lord, wilt thou forget me unto the end? how long dost thou turn away thy face from me?

2 How long shall I take counsels in my soul, sorrow in my heart all the day?

3 How long shall my enemy be exalted over me?

4 Consider, and hear me, O Lord, my God.

Enlighten my eyes, that I never sleep in death: 5 lest at any time my enemy say: I have prevailed against him.

They that trouble me, will rejoice when I am moved: 6 but I have trusted in thy mercy.

My heart shall rejoice in thy salvation: I will sing to the Lord, who giveth me good things: yea, I will sing to the name of the Lord, the most high.

a Prov. xxx. 5.

VER. 7. Pure words, very different from those of the deceitful, ver. 3. C.—barth, dross, or in the crucible, or “for the ruler of earth” (Pagnin. H.): current money.

VER. 8. This corrupt generation; or, both in this world and in the next. Heb. “preserve them;” the just, or thy words. C.—“And thou wilt keep him.” Pagn.—Prot marg. i. e. “Every one of them.” S. Jerom reads, “us.” H.

VER. 9. About. Their life is a circle of relapses; or rather they continually attack the just, (C.) but their designs are made subservient to their advancement in virtue, by the power of God. T.—Heb. “They (the just) shall go round the wicked, when baseness shall have raised herself up, on account of the children of men.” C.—“The wicked shall walk round about, when the vilest of the sons of men shall be exalted.” S. Jerom. H.—The former have spent their life in vanity, and shall be kept for ever out of the kingdom of heaven; as the error of the Platonists, who assert that all things will come to pass again, the world being compared to a wheel, is manifestly refuted by Scripture, which assures us that God will preserve the just from this generation, (S. Aug.,) and the wicked will knock at the door, like the foolish virgins, and will be rejected with, I never knew you. Matt. xxv. W.

PSAL. XII. Usquequo, &c. VER. 1. Me. These expressions are figurative. God seems displeased; but it is often for our greater good. C.

VER. 2. Day; frequently. W.—Sept. adds, “and night.” C.

VER. 3. Enemy; Saul, &c., or the devil. S. Aug. C.

VER. 4. Death, by mortal sin, (W.) or through excessive sorrow. Jer. li. 39. Show me thy favour, (C.) and I shall be secure.

VER. 6. Mercy. Man must attribute nothing to himself, otherwise he will be moved by pride. S. Aug. C.—Things; patience and reward. W.—The prophet feels a secret confidence arising in his breast, in consequence of God’s protection. —Yea, &c., is not in Heb., but it is in the Sept., Arab., and the ancient Fathers. Heb. “My heart shall be transported in thy salvation; I will praise the Lord, because he has rendered me the like,” as I placed my hopes in him (C.); or, “he hath rewarded me.” The blessed Virgin adopts the language of this verse, and the prophet probably had the same salvation, Christ, in view. Berthier.

PSAL. XIII. Dixit, &c. VER. 1. Fool: the man of the most depraved morals, the atheist and deist. There have always been (Bert.) such pests of society. H.—David has refuted them again. Psal. lii. Bert.—Heart. This must be strangely corrupted, before the mouth can utter such impiety. H.—No God. Chal. “no power of God on earth.” Aleim denotes particularly “judges.” There have been a few philosophers who have denied the existence of God; and more who have called in question his Providence: though this amounts to the same thing. But the number of those who confess God with the mouth, and deny him by their works, is immense. H.—These live as if there were no judge. C.—Libertinage or pride gives birth to so many infidels. They have begun by reducing conscience to silence. Their arguments only tend to destroy.—No, not one, is not in Heb., Sept., &c., except in ver. 3. C.—Yet it occurs in the Vatican Sept., which is the best. Bert. C.—“They are become abominable, with earnestness there is none who doth good.” S. Jer. H.—Or they sin designedly and with affectation. C.—All are unable to do good without the Redeemer. W.—Some explain this of mankind in general, as all are born in sin. David refers also to PSALM XIII.

DIXIT INSIPIENS. I.

The general corruption of men, before our redemption by Christ.

1 Unto the end, a psalm for David.

THE fool hath said in his heart: “There is no God.

They are corrupt, and are become abominable in their ways: there is none that doth good, no not one.

2 The Lord hath looked down from heaven upon the children of men, to see if there be any that understand and seek God.

3 They are all gone aside, they are become unprofitable together: there is none that doth good: no not one.

Their throat is an open sepulchre; with their tongues they acted deceitfully; the poison of asps is under their lips.

Their mouth is full of cursing and bitterness; their feet are swift to shed blood.

Destruction and unhappiness in their ways; and the way of peace they have not known: there is no fear of God before their eyes.

4 Shall not all they know that work iniquity, who devour my people as they eat bread?

5 They have not called upon the Lord: there have they trembled for fear, where there was no fear.

6 For the Lord is in the just generation: you have confounded the counsel of the poor man; but the Lord is his hope.

b Psal. lii. 1.

actual and habitual sinners. Bert.—S. Paul (Rom. iii.) proves from this text, and Isa. lx. 7, that all stand in need of grace and faith, and cannot be saved either by the law of nature or of Moses. But it does not follow that faith alone will save, or that the most just are still wicked, as Calvin and Beza falsely expound the Scriptures. For the prophets speak of those who were not yet justified, teaching that all mankind were once in sin, and could not be justified but by Christ. At the same time they assert that, when they are justified, they must serve justice to bear fruit, and obtain happiness. Rom. vi. These points are well explained by S. Aug. (de Sp. et Lit. i. 9): “The just are justified freely by his grace,” not by the law or will; though this is not effected without the will, &c. The same holy doctor (c. 27) observes that the just do not live free from all venial sins, and yet remain in the state of salvation; while the wicked continue in the state of damnation, though they do some good works. W.

VER. 2. God. Those only who seek God, understand their real interests. H.

VER. 3. Unprofitable. Without faith in Christ, none have meritorious works. W.—Not one. Such was the condition of the world before Christ, as all were born in sin. “No one,” says S. Aug., “can do good, except he show the method.” All were immersed in ruin, “except the holy Virgin, concerning whom, for the honour of the Lord, I would have no question at all, in treating of sins.” S. Aug. de Nat. et Grat. con. Pelag. xxxvii. 44. C.—The Council of Trent approves of this reserve, when speaking of original sin. H.—Their, &c. What follows to shall not, (ver. 4,) occurs in S. Paul (Rom. iii. 11—13); whence S. Jerom supposes that it has been inserted here, though the apostle took the quotations from different parts of Scripture. Pref. in Isa. xvi. He informs us that all the Greek commentators marked it as not found in Heb., or the Sept., “except in the Vulg., or κοινῇ, which varied in different parts of the world.” There seems to be no reason why it should have been omitted designedly, whereas some might insert it through the false notion that S. Paul had taken it from this psalm. C.—The Heb. is not therefore mutilated, but the Vulg. redundant. Amama.—Yet this is not absolutely clear. We find the quotation in the Rom. Sept., which is the most correct (Bert.); though some prefer the Alex. MSS. H.—It is also in the Arab. and Ethiopic versions; so that it might have been in S. Paul’s copy. Our Saviour read a passage from Isaias, which is not extant. Luke iv. 19. Bert. C.—Prot. 1577, inserted these three verses, (W.) which they now omit.—Sepulchre. They are never satisfied with destruction, (H.) and with vexing others. W.

VER. 4. Know, my just providence, though they would fain keep it out of sight, (ver. 1,) that they may indulge their passions. H.—My people. These, we may conclude, were just (Bert.); at least in comparison with their cruel oppressors, (H.) who made it their daily practice to injure them, (S. Aug.,) as they could do it with facility. Num. xiv. 9; Prov. xxx. 14; Mic. iii. 2. C.

VER. 5. Where. This expression refers to there, which is in Heb., though this last part of the verse be wanting. Capel.—It is in Psal. lii. 6, and this renders the former omission (ver. 3) more credible. Bert.

VER. 6. Man, who wished sincerely to practise his religion, like Daniel, &c. Such you have persecuted, and hence God has filled you with alarms, and will punish you. C.—Some persevere in justice, amid the general contagion and insults of men. W.

7 Who shall give out of Sion the salvation of Israel? when the Lord shall have turned away the captivity of his people, Jacob shall rejoice, and Israel shall be glad.

PSALM XIV.

DOMINE QUIS HABITABIT.

What kind of men shall dwell in the heavenly Sion.

1 A psalm for David.

LORD, who shall dwell in thy tabernacle? or who shall rest in thy holy hill?

2 He that walketh without blemish, and worketh justice:

3 He that speaketh truth in his heart, who hath not used deceit on his tongue:

Nor hath done evil to his neighbour: nor taken up a reproach against his neighbours.

4 In his sight the malignant is brought to nothing: but he glorifieth them that fear the Lord.

He that sweareth to his neighbour, and deceiveth not; 5 he that hath not put out his money to usury, nor taken bribes against the innocent:

He that doth these things, shall not be moved for ever.

PSALM XV.

CONSERVA ME DOMINE.

Christ's future victory and triumph over the world and death.

VER. 7. Sion; which God has chosen for his sanctuary. H.—Salvation, or the Saviour, whom Jacob expected. Gen. xlix. Bert.—This Redeemer would fill all, both Jews and Gentiles, with joy, who should embrace his faith. S. Aug., &c.—The prophet seems to foretell the restoration of the ten tribes to the kingdom of Judea, as it took place after the captivity. C. Diss.—But he sighed for, and designated more particularly, (H.) the Saviour of the world; who would redeem man from the tyranny of the devil, to the great joy of those who strive to supplant every vice, and to contemplate God, (W.) as some interpret the names of Jacob and Israel. H.—The Gentiles will then be ingrafted into the stock of Abraham, (M.) into the true olive-tree. Rom. xi. H.

PSAL. XIV. VER. 1. David. The word psalm being appropriated to some, while others are styled hymns, &c., does not hinder the latter from being also psalms or spiritual songs, to be set to music: so the insertion of David, "the beloved's name," in some of these Divine canticles, is no proof that the rest were not written by him. W.—The author describes the perfection of priests, &c., contrasts the sanctity of those who shall inhabit Jerusalem with that of the wicked mentioned in the last psalm.—Hill. The Jews comforted themselves with the hopes of seeing Jerusalem rebuilt. Psal. cxxxi. 1.—Heaven is also styled a tabernacle and mountain, (Apoc. xv. 5; Heb. xii. 22. Bert.,) and is here chiefly (H.) meant. See ver. 5. W.

VER. 4. Nothing. He despises all wickedness, though done by kings, whose power he considers as the means of destruction. 1 Kings xv. 26; Luke xxiii. 9. The wicked dares not appear before an upright judge, like David. Psal. c. 2. Heb. may be "the wicked is despised." S. Jer. H.—Lord. Glory is the reward of good works. W.—Neighbour. This sense is conformable to the Heb. without points, (Geneb.,) and more beautiful than that of the Rabbins, "against his own interest," (Jun.,) "to do evil," (Ainsworth,) "friendship," (Sym.,) or "to afflict himself." S. Jerom.—We find such vows strongly enforced. Num. xxx. 3; Dent. xxiii. 21. C.—Prot, "that sweareth to his own hurt, and changeth not." H.

VER. 5. Usury. This was always blameable, though Moses tolerated it with respect to the Jews lending to the Chanaanites. Deut. xxiii. 19; Luke vi. 35. C.—Bribes, (munera,) "presents." Even these are dangerous, as they tend to prepossess the judge. H. C.—The same maxims must be applied to all in authority, (H.) to witnesses, &c. C.—Those who have not failed in any of these respects, must be possessed of faith, and all other necessary virtues, before they can enter heaven. For when the Scripture attributes salvation to any one virtue in particular, it does not mean to exclude the rest.—For ever. All terrestrial things are mutable; and of course the psalmist speaks of heaven. The good Christian who has not yielded to temptation, may there enjoy an undisturbed repose. Isaias (xxiii. 15) uses similar expressions, when describing the state of Jerusalem, after the defeat of Sennacherib. C.

PSAL. XV., &c. VER. 1. The inscription of a title. That is, of a pillar or monument, στυλογράφια: which is as much as to say that this psalm is most worthy to be engraven on an everlasting monument. Ch.—Mocthom. Prot. "Michtam." Marg. or "golden psalm of David," or most excellent. S. Jerom, &c. have divided the word into two; "of the humble and upright David." H.—It may signify "inscribed," C.—But there seems to be no reason for abandoning the Sept., who were well acquainted with the original. The psalm is in the form of a prayer, which David pronounces in the person of Christ, to whom the apostles apply several verses; and, as the rest seem to be of the same nature, we must understand all of the Messiah, praying, in his sacred humanity, (Bert.,) that his body may remain incorrupt. C.—The thing most worthy to be noted (stilographia) by the prophet David, is our Saviour's crucifixion (W.); the memory of which must be perpetuated. Job (xix. 24) wished that what he said about the resurrection might

1 The inscription of a title to David himself.

PRESERVE me, O Lord, for I have put my trust in thee. 2 I have said to the Lord, thou art my God, for thou hast no need of my goods.

3 To the saints, who are in his land, he hath made wonderful all my desires in them.

4 Their infirmities were multiplied: afterwards they made haste.

I will not gather together their meetings for blood-offerings: nor will I be mindful of their names by my lips.

5 The Lord is the portion of my inheritance and of my cup: it is thou that wilt restore my inheritance to me.

6 The lines are fallen unto me in goodly places: for my inheritance is goodly to me.

7 I will bless the Lord, who hath given me understanding: moreover, my reins also have corrected me even till night.

8 "I set the Lord always in my sight: for he is at my right hand, that I be not moved.

9 Therefore my heart hath been glad, and my tongue hath rejoiced: moreover, my flesh also shall rest in hope.

• Acts ii. 25.

thus be engraven on flint. H.—Preserve. David acknowledges his infirmity, and that all good comes from God. C.—Jesus was heard praying with tears, &c. Heb. v. 7.

VER. 2. I have. Heb. "Thou, my soul, hast said." But S. Jerom agrees with us.—Goods. Heb. "my good is not above thee." I can desire nothing greater. Bert.—Aquila and Vatable seem to have the same idea as the Sept. We reap all the profit from our piety. C.—The redemption was entirely for man's benefit, (W.) though it gave the greatest glory to God. H.—Since God, therefore, wants nothing, I will show my kindness (Bellar.) to the poor. H.

VER. 3. Saints. Heb. "the magnificent" priests, God himself, (Exod. xv. 11. C.) and ceremonies of religion, (H.) for which David had a wonderful affection. C.—But Christ has displayed the greatest love towards all his converts, and they had need of it. Bert.—God here speaks, showing that Christ should make known his wonderful charity to the apostles and other saints.

VER. 4. Haste. Men who are convinced of their own infirmities, hasten to find a remedy. W.—No sooner had fallen man been redeemed, than he strove to advance in the ways of perfection. Bert.—The sins to which the saints sometimes yield, tend to make them more cautious (C.) and grateful to their deliverer, like S. Peter. Persecutions likewise cause them to cling closer to God, and fill them with interior joy. Acts v. 41. H.—If we explain it of the wicked, chastisement often makes them repent. Psal. lxxvii. 34. C.—"Their idols have been multiplied after their followers, I will not join in their libations of blood." S. Jer.—David was continually exposed to such temptations among the idolaters; but out of contempt, he would not even pronounce the name of the idols. C.—Blood, or bloody. D.—The pagan (W.) and Mosaic sacrifices shall cease. Christ will unite us (Bert.) by a more excellent oblation of his own body and blood. H.

VER. 5. Cup. Eternal happiness consists in seeing (W.) and enjoying God, (H.) and is promised to the patient. Though Christ was truly King of Israel, and exercised jurisdiction, (John xii. and xviii. 37; Matt. xxi., &c. W.) yet it was not of a temporal nature (H.); and his chief inheritance was the Lord, who would reward his merits.—David alludes to the custom of allotting each portion of wine and meat, which was greater in proportion to the person's dignity. He rejects with disdain all worldly and sensual joys. C.—God is not "a part," but the whole portion of a good man.—It is, &c. S. Jer. "Thou art the possessor of my lot." I trust in thee for all. H. 1 Pet. i. 4; 2 Tim. i. 12. In the ancient sacrifices a part was reserved for the offerer. But Jesus keeps nothing back.

VER. 6. Lines, with which land was measured. Bert.—Christ expresses his satisfaction with his Church, which is gathered from all nations, to manifest the choicest virtues. Tit. ii. 14. Euthymius, S. Jer., &c. C.—This was his inheritance, not measured out with lines, (Jos. x.,) but reaching to the very ends of the earth. Psal. ii. H.

VER. 8. That I. Heb. "I shall not," &c. The sense is the same, but S. Peter agrees with us and the Sept. Acts ii. 25, &c. It is not of faith that the seven preceding verses regard Jesus Christ as the following do; but as the same person speaks, we may rationally infer that all should be explained of him. Though he always enjoyed the beatific vision, his soul had the affections of other men, and always tended to keep in God's presence. So the angels who see God, desire more and more to contemplate him. 1 Pet. i. 12. How earnestly ought we to strive always to keep in the Divine presence! (Bert.,) then we should constantly advance in virtue, and fear no dangers. The patriarchs thus walked with God, and arrived at such perfection. H.—The Father was always at the right hand of his Son, to support and glorify him; and the Son, having continually performed what was pleasing to God, (John viii. 29,) was placed at his right hand at his ascension, though his Divinity had never been separated from him. C.

VER. 9. Tongue. Heb. "glory." Yet Prot. translate, "tongue," (Acts

10 *Because thou wilt not leave my soul in hell; nor wilt thou give thy holy one to see corruption.

11 Thou hast made known to me the ways of life, thou shalt fill me with joy with thy countenance: at thy right hand are delights even to the end.

PSALM XVI.

EXAUDI DOMINE JUSTITIAM.

A just man's prayer in tribulation against the malice of his enemies.

1 The prayer of David.

HEAR, O Lord, my justice: attend to my supplication.

Give ear unto my prayer, which proceedeth not from deceitful lips.

2 Let my judgment come forth from thy countenance: let thy eyes behold the things that are equitable.

3 Thou hast proved my heart, and visited it by night, thou hast tried me by fire: and iniquity hath not been found in me.

• Acts ii. 31, and xiii. 35.

as S. Peter follows the Sept., (H.) and he surely understood the force of the Heb.; so that his testimony in their favour is very strong.

VER. 10. Soul in hell. Beza (in his 1st edit., which he corrected afterwards) would translate, "my corpse (cadaver, or carcass) in the grave;" for which he has been justly blamed. For, though the corpse is sometimes called soul, as it has been animated by it, (H.) and the soul and blood are often used synonymously, yet we shall find no instance of the body of any one still living being styled a soul. When speaking, therefore, of a person's future death, the soul means either life or the spiritual substance. Gen. xxxvii. 22; Psal. xlix. 16. Hence the explanation of the Fathers, who understand this of Christ's descent into hell, to free the saints who were detained in limbo, is more probable. Bert.—The instances which are adduced to maintain the opposite sentiment, which Calmet, &c. assert is more literal, either prove nothing, or they relate to people deceased, whose bodies were not to be touched. See Gen. ix. 5; Lev. xvii. 11, and xxi. 11; Num. vi. 6, and xix. 13; Agg. ii. 14. Christ speaks of his body in the following part of the verse, (H.) calling it Holy, because it was never separated from the Divine nature. Bert.—The Prot. edit. vary. Some retain the word hell, others the grave; remarking that "this is chiefly meant of Christ, by whose resurrection all his members have immortality." And (Acts ii.) they paraphrase, "Thou shalt not leave ME in the grave;" wresting that which regards the body, rising from the grave, to the soul, which was never there. W.—The last edit. of James I. agrees however with us, in both places. "Thou wilt not leave my soul in hell, neither wilt thou suffer thy holy one to see corruption." It is observable, that in the Heb. editions (except Stephens' and some few others) we find the word esidic in the text, though the last i be properly omitted in the margin; as the word would otherwise signify "saints;" and thus make the apostles false witnesses. Acts xiii. 35, &c. H.—"But who shall lay any such thing to their charge? Other men may be deficient in their knowledge, and in their honesty; but inspired apostles could neither be deceived nor deceive. All the ancient versions, the Masorets," who order the word to be read in the singular, though printed plural in the text, and many of the best MSS. vouch for their veracity. Moreover, it is not true that God will not suffer his saints to see corruption; and, if this were the meaning of the words, they would not predict the resurrection of any particular person: yet "these words, the apostles observe to the Jews, are a prophecy of some particular person, whose soul was not long to continue in the place of departed spirits, and whose body was not to be corrupted, both being soon to be reunited. Now David, say they, did not speak this of himself, &c. Have the apostles imposed a prophecy upon the Jewish people, and upon the world?" Kennicott. Diss. 1.—One. Mont. ventures to follow the Keri, "thy merciful one." H.—Corruption. "Neither wilt thou permit that sanctified body, by which other people are to be sanctified, to become corrupt." S. Aug.—Christ rose again before the holy women had embalmed his body, (Luke xxvi. 53; Mark xvi. 1,) that no one might attribute the incorruption to that cause. His descent into hell was not in consequence of any weakness, or that he might suffer, (C.) as Calvin blasphemously asserts, (H. T.) but he descended in triumph, to liberate the souls of the holy Fathers, (C.) or to announce to them the glad tidings of peace, the fruits of which they should shortly enjoy at his ascension, when he would open the gates of heaven to all the faithful. H.

VER. 11. Of life. The observance of the commandments, (S. Jer.), or the method of obtaining happiness, by patience and humility. S. Aug.—Thou hast opened a new track to me, (H.) in the resurrection, unknown to mortals. Euthym. Bellar.—For though some had been already raised to life, Christ is still called the first-fruits of those who sleep, or of the dead; because none had raised themselves to life, as he did. H. John x. 18.

PSAL. XVI., &c. VER. 1. Prayer. This psalm contains the model of a fervent prayer, (H.) which may be used by any person under affliction. W.—The Fathers think that this psalm was composed during the persecution of Saul, and that it contains the sentiments of Jesus Christ, and of his Church, under the persecution of infidels. There are some very difficult passages in it. C.—My justice. Heb. "attend to justice," (H.) which amounts to the same thing; as no one would make this petition, unless he supposed that he was in the right. "Hear the justice of my cause." Principles. Bert.—"Hear the just man." S. Jer. II.—

4 That my mouth may not speak the works of men: for the sake of the words of thy lips, I have kept hard ways.

5 Perfect thou my goings in thy paths: that my footsteps be not moved.

6 I have cried to thee, for thou, O God, hast heard me: O incline thy ear unto me, and hear my words.

7 Show forth thy wonderful mercies; thou who savest them that trust in thee.

8 From them that resist thy right hand keep me, as the apple of thy eye.

Protect me under the shadow of thy wings. 9 From the face of the wicked who have afflicted me.

My enemies have surrounded my soul: 10 they have shut up their fat: their mouth hath spoken proudly.

11 They have cast me forth, and now they have surrounded me: they have set their eyes bowing down to the earth.

12 They have taken me, as a lion prepared for the prey; as a young lion dwelling in secret places.

Lips. I do not attempt to deceive thee, like the hypocrite; or rather, I have not acted with deceit, or endeavoured to excite rebellion, as I have been accused. C.

VER. 2. Countenance. Pronounce sentence, (Esth. i. 19. C.) if I have done wrong, I do not refuse punishment. Psal. vii. 5. H.—The Greek and Latin copies vary. Some read correctly with the Heb. "Let thy eyes behold what is wrong." Yet S. Jer. (Ep. ad Sun.) has "right," with the Syr., &c. Others more commonly read, "Let mine eyes behold justice." C.

VER. 3. Fire. I have experienced all sorts of misery. C.—Iniquity. Heb. "Thou hast not found; I have thought." But the same word without points, zumthi, (H.) has the sense given by the Sept., and they knew nothing of these points. Bert.—We may also translate, "Thou hast not found in me any criminal thoughts. My mouth has not transgressed thy orders." If some thoughts of taking revenge, by killing Saul, presented themselves involuntarily, David repressed them (C.); and when he was alone with him at night in a cave, he would not suffer him to be hurt, 1 Kings xxvi. 7. Theod.

VER. 4. Men. Houb. "My mouth shall not pass to the pretences of Adam." I will not seek for excuses in sin. H.—"My mouth utters not vows to the vain works of men." Prin. Disc.—But these versions are singular. Bert.—Hard. Heb. "way of the robber." Prots, or pri-ts, (S. Jer. H.) means also "fracture." Bert.—David was ordered by God to retire into the wilderness, and to caves, where he was obliged to live like robbers, (C.) and was even branded (C.) with the title of a fugitive slave by Nabal, 1 Kings xxv. 10. H.—Yet the actions of David were very different from theirs. Bert.—He did not speak about the works of men in power to condemn Saul, or any other, being averse to all detraction, and prescribing to himself the strictest laws, (C.) which God had ever promulgated. Prot. "I have purposed that my mouth shall not transgress (4) concerning the works of men, by the word of thy lips, I have kept me from the paths of the destroyer." H.

VER. 5. Perfect. Heb. "support" me in these hard ways, where I am in continual danger of falling. C.—God's grace enables us to begin and to perfect every good work. H.

VER. 6. Heard me, on former occasions. This encourages me to pray with more confidence (Bert.) and fervour.—Heb. also, "thou wilt hear me favourably." S. Jer. H.

VER. 7. Mercies. We become accustomed to the ordinary effects of grace, which are always admirable; and we are astonished only at miraculous conversions and occurrences. Orig.—Some such manifestations of the Divine power seemed now requisite, to deliver David from such a powerful rival as Saul. C.—Syr. "Lord, make thy holy one appear as a prodigy, as the Saviour of those who hope in thee." S. Jer.—"O thou Saviour of those who hope." H.

VER. 8. Eyc. God has shown particular attention to protect the apple of the eye. He watches still more over his servants, (Zach. ii. 8.) for whom all things procure good. Rom. viii. 28. Saul had declared himself against David, because he had been chosen to succeed him, and thus he opposed the designs of God. C.—The prophet prays that he may never give way to such impicity. W.—Wings, as a hen does her chickens. H.—Defend me from the furious countenance of my enemies. W.

VER. 10. Their fat. That is, their bowels of compassion: for they have none for me. Ch.—They have become fat, and have given way to greater insolence, as we see too often verified. Deut. xxxii. 15; Job xv. 26; Psal. lxxii. 7. Chal. C.—Proudly. Libertines are often prompted by vanity to speak as they do against God and man. H.

VER. 11. Earth. To testify their wrath.—Heb. assomu, is rendered "by our step," (Mont.), or contemplation. But the Sept. have explained it as a verb, as well as S. Jerom. (Bert.), who reads, "marching against me; now they have surrounded me," (H.) like wild bulls. C.—Sym. "blessing me, they have presently cast down their eyes, they have prepared snares, to throw me down upon the ground." They have sought my ruin both by craft and by open force. Ever those who were once my friends and admirers, are now turned against me. H.—He alludes particularly to the courtiers of Saul. C.—They intend utterly to destroy me, even to the ground. W.—Heb. "by our step they have now su:

13 Arise, O Lord, disappoint him and supplant him; deliver my soul from the wicked one; thy sword 14 from the enemies of thy hand.

O Lord, divide them from the few of the earth in their life: their belly is filled from thy hidden stores.

They are full of children: and they have left to their little ones the rest of their substance.

15 But as for me, I will appear before thy sight in justice: I shall be satisfied when thy glory shall appear.

PSALM XVII.

DILIGAM TE DOMINE.

David's thanks to God for his delivery from all his enemies.

1 Unto the end, for David, the servant of the Lord, who spoke to the Lord the words of this canticle, in the day that the Lord delivered him from the hand of all his enemies, and from the hand of Saul: and he said: [2 Kings xxii.]

2 I WILL love thee, O Lord, my strength:

3 The Lord is my firmament, my refuge, and my deliverer.

*My God is my helper, and in him will I put my trust.

My protector, and the horn of my salvation, and my support.

4 Praising, I will call upon the Lord: and I shall be saved from my enemies.

* Heb. ii. 13.

surrounded us," (Mont.) conformably to the Keri; though the text, followed by Pagnin, has, "In our path, they have surrounded me."

VER. 12. They have taken me, is not expressed in Heb. H.

VER. 13. Disappoint. Heb. "meet him," as an enemy. Lev. xxvi. 23.—Thy sword. The wicked are employed by God to chastise the just, and will then be thrown into the fire. Isa. x. 5; Jer. l. 23. C.—They little think that they are subservient to the designs of Providence, as they attribute their success to their own might.

VER. 14. Divide them from the few, &c. That is, cut them off from the earth, and the few trifling things thereof, which they are so proud of; or, divide them from the few; that is, from thy elect, who are but few; that they may no longer have it in their power to oppress them. It is not meant by way of a curse or imprecation; but, as many other like passages in the psalms, by way of a prediction, or prophecy of what should come upon them, in punishment of their wickedness.—Thy hidden stores: thy secret treasures, out of which thou furnishest those earthly goods, which with a bountiful hand thou hast distributed both to the good and the bad. Ch.—Of children. Heb. "their children are satiated." Houb. Bert.—Some copies read ἔσθω, (Rom. Sept.,) instead of ἔσθω. "They have been filled with hogs' flesh." The mistake was easy in Greek. C.—S. Jerom agrees with the Vulg. H.

VER. 15. Appear. S. Jer. "I shall be filled, when I shall awake in thy likeness." (H.) at the resurrection (Phil. iii. 21, and 1 Cor. xiii. 12); or, "when thy likeness, the Messias, shall rise again;" or (as the same expression is used by the Sept. as Num. xii. 8,) David begs for actual inspiration, "thou wilt comfort me with the prophetic spirit." C.

PSAL. XVII. VER. 1. This title is almost wholly taken from the book of Kings, except Unto the end for; instead of which we read, And David spoke, &c., (11.) which are the words of the inspired writer; so that Ferrand is very rash in rejecting both these titles. David wrote this psalm after he had subdued the Moabites, &c. C.—We cannot doubt but this psalm regards David. But there are some passages which refer to Jesus Christ and his Church more directly; and in general, David must here be considered as only (Bert.) the figure of the Messias, and of the just in his Church. W.—S. Jerom and Aug. explain it of the victories of David, of the Messias, and of his Church. C.—Saul may be particularly mentioned, because he was the most powerful. W.

VER. 2. I will love thee, as a mother does her son. He that loves has fulfilled the law. This word is omitted 2 Kings xxii. 2. C.—Strength. Ibid.—Rock. H.—The Sept. have inserted some alterations in the Psalms, giving the sense of the Hebrew. W.—Others attribute the variations to David, or to the mistake of transcribers. H.

VER. 3. Firmament. Heb. "rock and my citadel, and my deliverer. My God, (or strong one,) my rock." S. Jer. "my strong one." The two words which are rendered "my rock," are slai and tsuri. H.—David frequently retired to such places for safety. The idea was beautiful and striking. Such a multiplicity of titles shows the gratitude (C.) and affection which David felt. C.—Here are nine, and we may add the three metaphorical Heb. terms, "rock, citadel, and buckler." Can we refuse to love One from whom we have received so many favours?—And in, &c. These words are most probably cited by S. Paul, (Heb. ii. 13,) though they occur also in Isa. viii. 13.—Protector. Heb. "buckler."

5 The sorrows of death surrounded me: and the torments of iniquity troubled me.

6 The sorrows of hell encompassed me: and the snares of death prevented me.

7 In my affliction I called upon the Lord, and I cried to my God:

And he heard my voice from his holy temple: and my cry before him came into his ears.

8 The earth shook and trembled: the foundations of the mountains were troubled and were moved, because he was angry with them.

9 There went up a smoke in his wrath: and a fire flamed from his face: coals were kindled by it.

10 He bowed the heavens, and came down, and darkness was under his feet.

11 And he ascended upon the cherubim, and he flew; he flew upon the wings of the winds.

12 And he made darkness his covert, his pavilion round about him: dark waters in the clouds of the air.

13 At the brightness that was before him the clouds passed, hail and coals of fire.

14 And the Lord thundered from heaven, and the Highest gave his voice: hail and coals of fire.

15 And he sent forth his arrows, and he scattered them: he multiplied lightnings, and troubled them.

16 Then the fountains of waters appeared, and the foundations of the world were discovered:

Bert.—Horn. This title is given to Jesus Christ. Luke i. 69. It is an allusion to beasts which attack their opponents with their horns (Theod. Deut. xxxiii. 17), being an emblem of strength (W.) and glory. C.

VER. 4. Praising. Heb. "praised;" and (2 Kings) the Lord, who is worthy to be praised. H.—Chal. agrees here with the Sept. and Vulg., which seem more natural. C.—The sense is the same. Bert.

VER. 5. Sorrows . . iniquity. Heb. "cables . . Belial." By these figurative expressions David declares to what dangers he had been exposed. They seem to be more applicable to our Saviour's agony. Bert.

VER. 7. Called. All these words are in the future, 2 Kings, and Heb. H.—But as they relate to an event that was past, they seem to be as well expressed here as they are in Dupont's Greek Psalms. Bert.—Both are true; as David had prayed, and would continue to pray, for God's protection; otherwise he would have deserved to lose it. We must always pray, and never faint. H.—Temple, "from my heart" (S. Aug.); from the tabernacle at Gabaon, (Lyran,) or from heaven. Chal., Euseb. C.

VER. 8. With them is not in Heb. Lu, illi refers to God. Furor fuit ei. Mont.—"He was wroth." Prot. Yet he displayed his power on the mountains, as if he had been displeased with them, or with the enemies, (ver. 4,) whom he would thus strike with awe. H.—These expressions are not to be taken in a gross literal sense. C.—God showed himself as earnest in the protection of David, (H.) as if he had been in a rage (C.); or as if the elements had all conspired to defend him. Theod.

VER. 9. By it. This relates to the clouds, thunder, and lightning. Muis.—God's wrath is compared with smoke, fire, a dark night, or mist. W.

VER. 10. Feet. A violent storm of rain. Heb. is rather more expressive, (ver. 9,) "a fire devoured" (ver. 11); "on a cherub, and flew; he flew most swiftly;" like an eagle. Bert.—Heb. vidu. H.

VER. 11. Winds. God mounts his chariot, as it were, (Ezec. i. 4, &c.,) to come speedily to David's assistance.—The Fathers explain the former verse of Christ's incarnation, or of his second coming; and this of his ascension. S. Athan., &c.—They may also (H.) intimate that God is ready to pardon as well as to punish. W.

VER. 12. Pavilion. Job xxii. 14, and xxvi. 9. The Jews had this idea of God's throne, of which we behold only the less brilliant side, as the Egyptians did that of the cloud. Exod. xiv. 19.—Air. The parallel passage, (2 Kings,) seems more accurate. Dropping waters out of the clouds of the heavens. Heb. "waters bound up in darksome clouds." C.

VER. 13. Clouds. 2 Kings. The coals (Heb. "flames") of fire were kindled. Two words ābju, ābru, his clouds removed, (H.) omitted in this passage, are here supplied, as the former word is found in Syr. and Arab. But then hail and coals of fire seem improper for "they kindled into coals of fire;" and in the next verse they are redundant; being therefore omitted in 2 Kings xxii., in the best editions of the Sept., and in the old Italic of Bianchini. Capel supposes they have been inserted from the preceding verse, which is rendered more probable by the Heb. MS. 5. Kennicott, Diss. 1.—They have been inserted in some editions of Sept., from the Heb. of Theodotion, (C.) or Symmachus. Montf. C.

VER. 15. Arrows. Thunderbolts.

VER. 16. Discovered. The earthquakes were so great, that such dreadful

17 He sent from on high, and took me: and received me out of many waters.

18 He delivered me from my strongest enemies, and from them that hated me: for they were too strong for me.

19 They prevented me in the day of my affliction: and the Lord became my protector.

20 And he brought me forth into a large place: he saved me, because he was well pleased with me.

21 And the Lord will reward me according to my justice; and will repay me according to the cleanness of my hands:

22 Because I have kept the ways of the Lord; and have not done wickedly against my God.

23 For all his judgments are in my sight: and his justices I have not put away from me.

24 And I shall be spotless with him: and shall keep myself from my iniquity.

25 And the Lord will reward me according to my justice: and according to the cleanness of my hands before his eyes.

26 With the holy thou wilt be holy; and with the innocent man thou wilt be innocent:

27 And with the elect thou wilt be elect: and with the perverse thou wilt be perverted.

effects might have been expected. These phenomena sometimes make the sea retire, and new islands appear. Pliny, i. 84, and xxxi. 5, &c.—The Jews supposed that the sea was the common source of all fountains, and that the earth was founded on it. Psal. xxiii. 2; Eccle. i. 7. C.

VER. 17. Sent his angel, &c.—Waters, which often represent multitudes, (Apoc. xvii. 15. C.) and afflictions. W.—David seemed in danger of perishing. C.

VER. 18. For me. He may allude to the giant Goliath, or to Saul, who surrounded him on all sides (1 Kings xxiii. 26, and 2 Kings xxi. 15. C.); and, in general, to all his temporal or spiritual adversaries. W.

VER. 19. Affliction, when my friends joined Absalom. Theod.—In the rest of this psalm the prophet chiefly uses words in the obvious sense, yet mystically speaks of Christ, and of the faithful. W.

VER. 20. Place, where I was not hemmed in by my enemies. H.—Saved me, by repentance, out of his infinite mercy, (Euseb., S. Athan.,) without any deserts. W.

VER. 21. Will reward. S. Jer. "hath rewarded," (C.) yet the edition of 1593 reads retribuit. H.—Justice, with respect to my enemies, whom I have not injured (C.); or my sincere desire to serve God. Theod.

VER. 23. Judgments. Commands, or treatment both of the just and of the wicked.

VER. 24. Him, by his grace. W.—Iniquity, and be careful not to relapse. Others explain it in the past time. I have not shed the blood of my enemy when I could have done it. 1 Kings xxiv. 6, 14. C.—Fui immaculatus. S. Jer. 11.

VER. 25. And. He repeateth (ver. 21) that God will render to every one as he deserves. W.—Matt. xvi. That all sins are equal is the error of the Stoics. H.

VER. 27. Perverted. No version can properly express this idea. God turns away from those who abandon him, treating every one according to his works. If we do not advance in piety, it is a sign that God perceives something amiss in us. Bert.—He cannot but abhor duplicity, and resist the wicked. Lev. xxvi. 23, 40; Prov. iii. 34. C.—Some improperly use this text, to show that people will adopt the manners of those with whom they associate, (H.) though it means that God will treat the good liberally, and the wicked with severity. Lev. xxvi. 23, 24. Amama.

VER. 28. Proud, as thou hast already done. C.

VER. 29. Lamp, giving me hopes of redress, and of the Messias. C.

VER. 30. Temptation. David was almost continually assailed by enemies. C.—Sept. παραγὰς, signifies "a place for pirates;" denoting what crafty foes he had to encounter, (Bert.,) or "a place or time to learn the military exercise," a warfare. Job vii. 1. But godud (H.) means "a troop," designed to make incursions, as those under Jephth and David. Heb. "In thee I will run armed" (S. Jer.); or, "at the head of my troops." C.—"I will break, (Pagnin,) or, run through an army." Mont.—No fortification can hold out. H.—He alludes particularly to the wall of the Jebusites, which Joab first mounted, though extremely high. 2 Kings v. 6. C.—With God's help every difficulty may be sur-

30 For by thee I shall be delivered from temptation; and through my God I shall go over a wall.

31 As for my God, his way is undefiled: the words of the Lord are fire-tried: he is the protector of all that trust in him.

32 For who is God but the Lord? or who is God but our God?

33 God, who hath girt me with strength; and made my way blameless.

34 "Who hath made my feet like the feet of harts: and who setteth me upon high places.

35 "Who teacheth my hands to war: and thou hast made my arms like a brazen bow.

36 And thou hast given me the protection of thy salvation: and thy right hand hath held me up:

And thy discipline hath corrected me unto the end: and thy discipline, the same shall teach me.

37 Thou hast enlarged my steps under me; and my feet are not weakened.

38 I will pursue after my enemies, and overtake them: and I will not turn again till they are consumed.

39 I will break them, and they shall not be able to stand: they shall fall under my feet.

40 And thou hast girded me with strength unto battle; and hast subdued under me them that rose up against me.

41 And thou hast made my enemies turn their back upon me, and hast destroyed them that hated me.

42 They cried, but there was none to save them, to the Lord: but he heard them not.

mounted. W.—Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation, as our Saviour admonishes.

VER. 31. As for, might be omitted. H.—The conduct of God towards men is irreproachable. He will treat all according to their deserts, and will fulfil his promises of protecting the just. Euseb.—Heb. "He is the strong God, his words are pure as gold. . . He is the shield," &c. Bert.

VER. 32. Our God. Will any one then hinder Him from doing as He has said? H.—Heb. "Who is the rock but our God?" Bert.—God is often styled a rock, tsur. Yet S. Jerom and Pagnin render it "strong," or "the strong one." H.

VER. 33. Blameless. Whatever good is in me comes from his grace, ver. 21, 24. H.—God has prevented me from killing Saul and Nabal; He has rescued me from the abyss into which I had fallen. C.

VER. 34. Harts. Prot. "hinds." H.—The Hebrews generally prefer to specify the female. Harts are remarkably swift, and this quality was greatly esteemed in a warrior. C.—As harts trample serpents under their feet, says Theodoret, so I treat my enemies.—High. Heb. "my high places," where I have so often baffled the efforts of my persecutors. H.

VER. 35. And thou. Chal. gives the same sense. "He strengthens," &c. C.—Heb. "and a brazen bow is broken by my arms." Mont.—Prot. "a bow of steel;" perhaps, not knowing that the ancients had the art of making brass answer the same purposes. See Proclus, Hesiod, &c. H.—They made all sorts of weapons of it. Job (xx. 24) seems even to insinuate that it was harder than iron.

VER. 36. Of thy. The latter word is omitted in some copies of the Sept., while others change it into "my." But the Heb. is agreeable to the Vulg. C.—End. Thou hast preserved me by salutary correction. S. Aug. H.—Heb. "thy goodness shall multiply me" with children. Sym., conformably to 2 Kings xxii., has "my obedience shall lift me up." C.—The Heb. may, however, admit the sense of the Vulg.—And thy, &c. is a paraphrase of the former sentiment, or it is borrowed from Theodoret. Bert.—Grabe marks from unto the end, &c., as omitted in Heb. H.

VER. 38. I will. Bellarmine would supply "I said I will;" and thus all is connected. But these future victories relate more to Jesus Christ. Bert.

VER. 40. Against me. No prince was ever more courageous than David, as the single combat with Goliath evinces. We know not that he ever lost a battle. He refers all the glory to God. C.

VER. 41. Upon me. An expression often used to denote a flight. Jos. iii. 12, &c. C.

VER. 42. Lord. This must be understood of Absalom, who offered sacrifices, (2 Kings xv. 12. Bert.,) or of Saul, who, receiving no answer, consulted a witch. C.—This is "the testimony of a soul naturally Christian," as Tertullian (Apol. 17) speaks, to have recourse to the great and only God, in the utmost distress. H.—Deus ut subveniat oratur; ipsa veritas, cogente natura . . erumpit. Lact. Inst. ii. 1.

the wind; I shall bring them to nought, like the dirt in the streets.

44 Thou wilt deliver me from the contradictions of the people: thou wilt make me head of the Gentiles.

45 A people which I know not, hath served me: at the hearing of the ear they have obeyed me.

46 The children that are strangers have lied to me, strange children have faded away, and have halted from their paths.

47 The Lord liveth, and blessed be my God, and let the God of my salvation be exalted.

48 O God, who avengest me, and subduest the people under me, my deliverer from my enraged enemies.

49 *And thou wilt lift me up above them that rise up against me: from the unjust man thou wilt deliver me.

50 ^bTherefore will I give glory to thee, O Lord, among the nations, and I will sing a psalm to thy name.

51 Giving great deliverance to his king, and showing mercy to David, his anointed: and to his seed for ever.

* 2 Kings xxii. 49.—^b 2 Kings xxii. 50; Rom. xv. 9.

VER. 43. Streets. Thus he treated the Ammonites, &c. 2 Kings viii. 2, and xii. 31. C.—Jesus Christ will rule over his enemies with a rod of iron. Bert.

VER. 44. Gentiles. Here he begins to predict the glory of the Messias, though what he says may be applied to himself. David's own people began to revolt, under Absalom and Seba; after he had subdued the most powerful nations around. 2 Kings xx. 1. The chosen people rejected Christ. (C.) while the nations were converted. The reprobation of the former was prefigured by those rebels. W.

VER. 46. Faded, (inveterati sunt,) "are grown old." H.—The Jews had been long the objects of God's peculiar favours: yet they fall away. Prot. "the strangers shall fade away, and be afraid out of their close places;" (S. Jer.) "shall flow away, and be contracted in their straits," while I shall be at large, ver. 37.

VER. 47. Liveth. This is my consolation, though it must fill the obstinate sinner with dismay. H.—In a sort of transport, David wishes all happiness to his great Benefactor. He may also speak of Christ's resurrection. C.—My God. Heb. "rock;" a title frequently applied to God, in acknowledgment of his stability and protection. Bert.

VER. 48. Avengest, or "grantest me revenges," (H.) and the victory; inflicting a just punishment on the wicked. David was too well informed to delight in sentiments of revenge. 3 Kings iii. 11. Jesus Christ takes vengeance on his enemies, but this is done without passion. The love of justice is his only motive. C.—Enraged enemies. Vulg. iracundis. H.—Sept. have thus explained ap, "wrath;" others join it with the following verse. "But (C.) or yea," (H.) etiam. The former version is, however, very accurate. Bert.

VER. 50. Nations. S. Paul (Rom. xv. 9) adduces this to prove the vocation of the Gentiles. C.—We cannot doubt but the great things announced in this psalm pertain to Christ. Bert.—We see the completion of this prophecy, as there is no Christian nation which does not use the Psalms of David to praise God. Theod., &c.

VER. 51. Great. This is intimated by the plural salutes, "salvations;" as David had experienced innumerable favours. H.—For ever. The true Church will never perish (H.); God still protecting it, as he did David, ver. 48. W.

PSAL. XVIII., &c. VER. 1. David. It is not known when this was composed. David praises the works and law of God. Some passages are applied to Jesus Christ and his apostles. Rom. x. 18. C.

VER. 2. Firmament. Heb. "expansion," or region of the stars, far above our atmosphere. Bert.—These two sentences express the same idea, unless the former may denote what we behold, and the firmament be explained of the higher heavens, (H.) where we imagine the throne of God to be placed. H.—The silence of heaven speaks louder than any trumpet. S. Chrys.—"Who can behold the heavens, and yet be so foolish as not to acknowledge that a God exists?" said Cicero, (H.) a learned pagan (Arusp. and Nat. Deo. 2. C.); "though they cannot determine of what nature the Deity may be." Leg. 1. M.—Hands. Chal. "Those who look up at the heavens, publish the glory of the Lord; and those who raise their eyes towards the air, announce his works." C.—S. Paul reproaches the philosophers of paganism for not understanding the language of the creation. Rom. i. 20; Job xii. 7. H.—The Church, which is so often styled the kingdom of heaven, makes God known, not only as a Creator, but also as a Redeemer. The figure is here most beautifully preserved. Heaven denotes the Church, as the stars represent apostolic men, who cease not to perform their duties day or night, in happier days as well as under persecution. Jesus Christ is the true Sun of justice, enlightening every man that cometh into the world. S. John i. —The Fathers have made these remarks. Bert.—What a consolation must it be for Catholics to think that the true doctrine will never cease, no more than the succession of day and night! We have received our creed, our orders, and mission, from the apostles. The chain of succession has never been broken. H.

VER. 3. Uttereth, with great force and abundance, eructat.—Knowledge of PSALM XVIII.

CELI ENARRANT.

The works of God show forth his glory: his law is to be esteemed and loved.

1 Unto the end. A psalm for David.

2 THE heavens show forth the glory of God, and the firmament declareth the work of his hands.

3 Day to day uttereth speech, and night to night showeth knowledge.

4 There are no speeches nor languages, where their voices are not heard.

5 Their sound hath gone forth into all the earth: and their words unto the ends of the world.

6 He hath set his tabernacle in the sun: and he as a bridegroom coming out of his bride-chamber,

Hath rejoiced as a giant to run the way: 7 His going out is from the end of heaven,

And his circuit even to the end thereof: and there is no one that can hide himself from his heat.

8 The law of the Lord is unspotted, converting souls: the testimony of the Lord is faithful, giving wisdom to little ones.

Rom. x. 18.—^d Luke xxiv. 46.

God. Bert.—Our knowledge is always on the increase. Abenezra.—The vicissitudes of day and night prove the wisdom of their author. Euseb.—They seem to sing in succession the praises of God. Bellarm.

VER. 4. There. Sym. joins this with the preceding. "Will announce knowledge. Not by words or speeches, the sounds of which are not heard," so as to be understood. H.—"They are not languages or words, the signification of which is unknown;" or Heb. "never has their voice been heard."—The sight of the heavens is sufficient to convince any one of the existence of God. H.—No nation, however barbarous, can plead ignorance. The Fathers have explained this of the gift of tongues, by means of which the apostles spoke languages which they had not studied. Acts ii. 4. S. Aug., &c.—Some of every nation have heard, (W.) or will embrace, (H.) the Christian religion. W.

VER. 5. Sound. So S. Paul reads this text, though the Heb. have "line." Yet there is no reason why we should suppose that the Sept. read differently, or that the Jews have corrupted their copies, as they could derive no advantage from so doing (Bert.) here, unless it were to discredit the apostle; as infidels assert the truth of the Old Testament, to vilify the New. Kum (H.) may signify a "line," (Bert.) or "writing." Abenezra.—The greatest exactitude has been observed in forming the world, as if all had been measured by an architect. But the sense of the Vulg. is preferable, and is adopted by Sym., S. Jer., and the Syr. C.—Prot. "their line." Marg. "their rule or direction." Kulon, "their voice," occurs in the preceding verse.—Their, refers to the heavens representing the apostles, as S. Paul explains this text, to prove that all were inexcusable who would not believe the gospel. Bert.

VER. 6. Sun. Here God seems to reside, (Ferrand,) and the magnificence of his works shines forth, inasmuch that almost all nations have offered Divine honours to the sun, and even the Manichees adored it, imagining that it was the very body of Jesus Christ. S. Aug. con. Faust. xiv. 12, and xx. 6.—Heb. "For the sun he has placed a tent in them," the heavens, (S. Jer. H.) or the ends of the world. The Jews supposed that the heavens rested, like a tent, upon the earth. C. Diss. II.—Giant. Moderns would render "a strong man;" and Bythner remarks that the bulk of a giant would render him less fit for running, as if the stoutest wrestlers were not often the most active. Bert.—S. Aug. and S. Jer. explain all this of Jesus Christ, who diffuses the light and warmth of his grace throughout the world. C.—He always resides with the Church, and is never divorced from her. W.

VER. 7. Circuit. So the Heb. word is rendered "revolution." Sept. and Vulg. "meeting," occursus, may insinuate that the sun is found in the centre, while the earth moves daily and yearly round it, according to the Copernican system. Bert.

VER. 8. The law. As the sun gives light to the world, so the law serves to direct mankind, and is another most powerful motive for us to praise God. This raises our hearts and minds still more perfectly to him, recalling us from our wanderings, and confirming our knowledge. H.—Unspotted. Heb. and Sept. "irreprehensible." C.—Who, indeed, could pretend to find any fault with it, since it comes from God? H.—The laws of men are imperfect, and liable to change. How happy would all be if they would embrace the law of the gospel! Bert.—Converting. Heb. "tranquillizing souls," (M.) by keeping the passions under H.—Testimony, declaring the will of God to men.—Little ones. The simple, and the wicked; as both are so called. C.—Pothi, "easily persuaded." M.—It directs the former, and keeps the latter in awe by punishment. C.—All, in general, must confess their ignorance, and want of the Divine law, to reap any benefit from it. H.—God is the author of salvation, sweetly inviting all by the perfections of his law, which confers light and gladness, to co-operate with grace, that they may obtain the promised reward. Ver. 12, and 2 Tim. iv. 6. W.—The like grace was offered from the beginning, so that none will ever be punished who has not deserved it, having had the means to perform his duty. H.

9 The justices of the Lord are right, rejoicing hearts: the commandment of the Lord is lightsome, enlightening the eyes.

10 The fear of the Lord is holy, enduring for ever and ever: the judgments of the Lord are true, justified in themselves.

11 More to be desired than gold and many precious stones: and sweeter than honey and the honeycomb.

12 For thy servant keepeth them, and in keeping them there is a great reward.

13 Who can understand this? from my secret ones cleanse me, O Lord: 14 and from those of others spare thy servant.

If they shall have no dominion over me, then shall I be without spot: and I shall be cleansed from the greatest sin.

15 And the words of my mouth shall be such as may please: and the meditation of my heart always in thy sight.

O Lord, my helper and my Redeemer.

PSALM XIX.

EXAUDIAT TE DOMINUS.

A prayer for the king.

1 Unto the end. A psalm for David.

VER. 10. Fear; or "the law, accompanied with fear;" of which he is speaking. This fear is filial and pure, such as a child must have of displeasing his father. Bert.—Yet even servile fear, which restrains us from committing sin, lest we incur punishment, is a gift of God, and prepares the way for charity. Trid. Sess. xiv. 4. But we must not stop here, like Achab and Antiochus. If we understand by fear, the moral law, it will subsist as long as there shall be men.—Themselves. Sept. ἐν τῷ νόμῳ, "by that very thing," that they are the judgments of the Lord, (H.) who cannot do wrong. Dan. ii. 27. C.—Heb. "truth itself, is justified altogether." H.

VER. 11. Stones. So S. Jerom renders the Heb. Prot. "than gold; yea, than much fine gold." Poz (H.) denotes the finest gold of Uphar, or of the Phison; which is probably the river Phasis. Gen. ii. 11. C.—Yet many explain this word of the topaz or chrysolite, which is of a golden colour. The Vulg. expresses topaz, (Psal. cxviii. 127,) where the Sept. have, "a precious stone."—Honeycomb, as the English and German versions have it, though the Heb. signify, "the dropping of the honeycombs;" which is the most excellent honey. Bert.

VER. 12. For. I speak from experience. C.—If I had no other inducement, I would observe this law for the consolation, (H.) and repeated advantages which I have derived from it. Theod.—Those who keep the same, and content not themselves with reading or hearing only, may feel the same impressions.—Reward: on which account the prophet declares that he observed the justifications (Psal. cxviii. 112); though that passage is corrupted in the Prot. version. W.—Heb. "wherefore thy servant shall teach them" (S. Jer.); or rather, "is instructed by them, and convinced that in keeping them there are frequent falls. Who," &c. 13. C.—Achab may indeed signify "a fall," or tripping-up the heels. But it is more commonly rendered "a reward," (as Prot., Mont., &c., here agree,) or end, as 1 Peter (i. 9) has it. H.—The instruction, which the observer of the laws obtains, arises from that observance, inasmuch as "he is attentive to them." Sept. φύλασσε αὐτά. This must therefore be understood, and is well expressed by custodit. Taste, and see that the Lord is sweet. Psal. xxxiii. 9. Berthier.

VER. 13. Sins. Who can always decide when a sin is only venial? H.—Though I may have avoided the grosser transgressions, how can I be assured that my heart is innocent? C.—We know that (H.) we are to work out our salvation with fear and trembling; and that S. Paul, though conscious to himself of nothing, said: Yet in this I am not justified, &c. 1 Cor. iv. 4, and ix. 27; Phil. ii. 12. Heb. speaks of "ignorances," which might not, however, be wholly blameless. Bert.—Ones, or enemies: "... and from the proud preserve." Sym., Chal. But he alludes to the distinction of sins of ignorance and of pride, (Lev. iv. 2; Num. xv. 30. C.) or malice. H.

VER. 14. Those, &c. Or "from strangers," alienis, whose company we cannot avoid with too much caution. H.—Heb. "the proud."—Spare. Heb. "free," (S. Jer.) or, "withhold." Nature is so prone to evil, that the prophet prays earnestly for grace to resist, or to be kept out of danger. H.—Those who are in authority have much to dread, lest they be answerable for the sins of others, which they ought to have prevented; as all must fear giving scandal, &c., and so being accessory to another's crime. H.—Delicta aliena affligunt me. S. Aug.—Yet sins of frailty, and of malice, are here meant (Bell.); which last ought to be strange, or very uncommon.—Over me. Sept. μὲν. H.—S. Aug. reads dominata, which agrees better with delicta. If my secret sins, or those of others, do not oppress me, I shall pray with confidence, and be heard. C.—Yet dominati refers to alienis, strangers, or proud people, (Bert.,) who were continually alluring to evil, both by word and example. How great must be the influence of such over their subjects, when even their equals take the infection so frequently! H.—

2 MAY the Lord hear thee in the day of tribulation may the name of the God of Jacob protect thee
3 May he send thee help from the sanctuary: and defend thee out of Sion.

4 May he be mindful of all thy sacrifices: and may thy whole burnt-offering be made fat.

5 May he give thee according to thy own heart; and confirm all thy counsels.

6 We will rejoice in thy salvation; and in the name of our God we shall be exalted.

7 The Lord fulfil all thy petitions: now have I known that the Lord hath saved his anointed.

He will hear him from his holy heaven: the salvation of his right hand is in powers.

8 Some trust in chariots, and some in horses: but we will call upon the name of the Lord, our God.

9 They are bound, and have fallen: but we are risen, and are set upright.

O Lord, save the king: and hear us in the day that we shall call upon thee.

PSALM XX.

DOMINE IN VIRTUTE.

Praise to God for Christ's exaltation after his passion.

1 Unto the end. A psalm for David.

Sin, pride; the source of all evil. S. Jer.—"Let men at last blush to be proud for whose sake God was humbled." S. Aug.

VER. 15. Always. Heb. "to thy regards," such as thou mayst approve. H.—He joins mental with vocal prayer, speaking like an evangelist. Bert.—Heipcr Heb. "rock." C.—S. Jer. and Prot. "strength." H.—Grace is requisite to persevere, as well as to be converted. W.

PSAL. XIX., &c. VER. 1. David. This psalm was to be sung when he or his successors went to battle. In a higher sense, it may allude to the victories of Christ, and of his Church. Bert.—Christians must offer up this prayer for their governors. W.

VER. 2. Hear thee, the Ruler; or Jesus Christ praying for his people. W.—Tribulation. War is always such. The victors themselves suffer, and many souls perish. C.—Name. The Messiah, as the Jews often explain this expression, (Hooke, Prin.,) or God himself, as others have it. Nomen ejus ipse. C.—The blessed Trinity is all one God. The name of the Lord is a strong tower, &c. Prov. xviii. 10. It was made known to Moses, to give him confidence. Exod. iii. 13. H.

VER. 3. Sion, where God was supposed to reside, in the tabernacle; though he was also in heaven, ver. 7. C.

VER. 4. Sacrifices. Heb. minca, a sacrifice of flour, & unbloody; a figure of the Mass. W.—Monethic, "thy presents" (Mont. H.) of fruits, &c.—Fat. Heb. also, "ashes," by a miraculous fire, (Bert.,) to testify God's acceptance; as at the sacrifices of Abel, (H.) Elias, &c. Lev. ix. 24, and 3 Kings xviii. 31, and 1 Par. xxi. 26. God forbade lean victims to be offered, as they might show a want of respect (Mal. i. 8); though he always regarded the heart (C.) and faith of the offerer more than the victim. Heb. xi. 4. H.—Sacrifices were offered before every important enterprise. 1 Kings xiii. 12. C.—Fat here intimates what would be acceptable. W. Dan. iii. 40. M.

VER. 6. Salvation. Jesus Christ, who gives us the victory over all our spiritual enemies, (C.) or in thy prosperity (W.); which we shall attribute to God. The first words may also be addressed to Him. We shall rejoice if thou grant us the victory, and we will return thanks. Heb. "we shall praise, or be praised, for thy salvation; and in thy name we shall lift up the standard." C.—But there is no proof that nodgol, (H.) which occurs no where else, has this signification. It is probable that the Sept. read nogdol; and Houbigant adopts their version. S. Jerom has, "we shall dance." All the versions denote joy. Bert.

VER. 7. Hath saved. The prophets speak of future events as past. Bert.—The people were convinced of God's protection, (C.) and anticipated what they would say at their triumphant return.—Anointed (Christum) the king, (C.) priest, (W.) or our Saviour, at his resurrection, (S. Athan.,) after he had subdued his enemies. W.—Powers. That is, in strength. His right hand is strong and mighty to save them that trust in him. Ch.

VER. 8. Call upon. Sept., Rom., Syr., &c., read, "we shall be exalted," μεγαλυνθήσόμεθα, (C.) as ver. 6. Some call upon or trust in chariots, &c. H.—Heb. "remember," which often implies to confide, (C.) and such we call upon as we hope will be able and willing (H.) to protect us. Bert.—Let our enemies assemble all their forces and auxiliaries, we shall not fear as long as God is for us. C.

VER. 9. Bound. Their chariot-wheels are entangled. Exod. xiv. 25. C.—Those who trust in the power of man, fall into captivity. W.—Their feet are ensnared. Bert.—The king. Heb. "Let the king hear us when we call." Prot. (H.) "our king shall hear," &c. Syr. "Word of the Lord, redeem us; Potent king, hear," &c. But the Sept. is preferable, and the best critics often deviate from the Jews (Mont. C.); though here the sense is very good, and adopted by

2 IN thy strength, O Lord, the king shall joy; and in thy salvation he shall rejoice exceedingly.

3 Thou hast given him his heart's desire: and hast not withholden from him the will of his lips.

4 For thou hast prevented him with blessings of sweetness: thou hast set on his head a crown of precious stones.

5 He asked life of thee: and thou hast given him length of days for ever and ever.

6 His glory is great in thy salvation: glory and great beauty shalt thou lay upon him.

7 For thou shalt give him to be a blessing for ever and ever: thou shalt make him joyful in gladness with thy countenance.

8 For the king hopeth in the Lord: and through the mercy of the most High he shall not be moved.

9 Let thy hand be found by all thy enemies: let thy right hand find out all them that hate thee.

10 Thou shalt make them as an oven of fire, in the time of thy anger: the Lord shall trouble them in his wrath, and fire shall devour them.

11 Their fruit shalt thou destroy from the earth: and their seed from among the children of men.

12 For they have intended evils against thee: they have devised counsels which they have not been able to establish.

13 For thou shalt make them turn their back: in thy remnants thou shalt prepare their face.

14 Be thou exalted, O Lord, in thy own strength: we will sing and praise thy power.

PSALM XXI.

DEUS DEUS MEUS.

Christ's passion: and the conversion of the Gentiles.

1 Unto the end, for the morning protection, a psalm for David.

2 O GOD, my God, look upon me: why hast thou forsaken me?

Far from my salvation are the words of my sins.

3 O my God, I shall cry by day, and thou wilt not hear: and by night, and it shall not be reputed as folly in me.

4 But thou dwellest in the holy place, the praise of Israel.

5 In thee have our fathers hoped; they have hoped, and thou hast delivered them.

6 They cried to thee, and they were saved: they trusted in thee, and were not confounded.

* Matt. xxvii. 46; Mark xv. 34.

S. Jerom. God is styled king in Heb. H.—This title is commonly given to the Messias. Bert.

PSAL. XX., &c. VER. 1. David, after his victory over the Ammonites (Du Pin. C.); though many passages relate only to the Messias, as the Chaldee and even some of the modern Jews confess, (Kimchi. Muis.) with the holy Fathers, who explain all of Him. C.

VER. 2. King. Chal. adds, "the Messias shall reign; and how shall he rejoice when thou shalt have delivered him!" The people had promised to return thanks in the former psalm. H.

VER. 3. Will. Heb. arsoth, "the proof or request," (H.) which manifests the will. The term occurs no where else. Bert.—Our Saviour's greatest desire was the glory of his Father, (H.) in man's redemption. W.

VER. 4. Sweetness. Heb. "of goodness," the effects of thy mercy. H.—Thou hast made David a king according to thy own heart, and granted him victory, and many favours, even before he had asked for them.—Stones. Heb. "fine gold or the topaz." Psal. xviii. 11. Bert.—David took the crown of Melchior, weighing a talent. 2 Kings xii. 30. C.—God gave him the victory on every occasion. Eccli. xlvii. 7. H.—He crowned Jesus Christ, the martyrs, and all those who have been ready to suffer for him. W.

VER. 5. And ever. David was much favoured, and reigned a long time, as well as his posterity. 2 Kings vii. 12, 29. But this was literally verified only in the Messias, (C.) who was his son (H.); and founded his Church on a rock, to endure unto the end. C.—What do we ask for on earth? All will be lost if we have not life; and this we cannot obtain for ever, without rising again. Therefore Jesus said, I am the resurrection and the life. John xi. 25.—We must live in him by faith, (Bert.,) and suffer before we can expect a crown.

VER. 7. To be, (in benedictionem). Thou shalt inebriate him with the torrent of thy blessings. H.—Blessing shall take hold of him, if we may so speak, (Bert.,) and embrace him for ever. H.—All the saints receive glory. But Christ alone can impart it to others, as all are blessed in him. Gen. xxi. 1; John i. W.

VER. 9. Thy hand. O king, Messias, or God. No earthly monarch can always punish his enemies. But none can escape the hand of the Almighty. He will bring all to judgment. Bert.—Let thine enemies find thy power, so as to return to good. S. Jer.—To find, often means to attack, (Judg. i. 5, and 3 Kings xiii. 24,) or to accomplish with ease. Deut. xxxiii. 1.

VER. 10. Anger. Lit. "face" (vultus. H.); which sometimes intimates favour, ver. 7.—It is a terrible thing to fall into the hands of an angry God, who will punish his enemies in a fire; to which S. Paul (Heb. x. 27) attributes rage, (H.) or emulation, as it will seem to strive to surpass all others.—Trouble. Heb. "swallow up;" which is more energetic.

VER. 12. Intended. Heb. "turned aside," like a torrent. The Ammonites had violated the law of nations, and had attempted to raise up very powerful enemies to invade David. C.—Establish. Heb. leaves the sentence imperfect, to show the utter weakness or impotence of God's enemies. Bert.

VER. 13. In thy remnants thou shalt prepare their face: or thou shalt set thy remnants against their faces. That is, thou shalt make them see what punishments remain for them hereafter from thy justice.

VER. 14. Exalted. God can receive no increase; but he manifests what he has. Theod.—Power. Lit. "powers." H.

PSAL. XXI., &c. VER. 1. Protection, susceptione. Heb. ailoth esser, or "for a speedy interposition," or succour. See ver. 2, 20, 25.—S. Jer. "the morning star." H.—Many of the titles are almost inexplicable, and this is one of the most puzzling (C.); but is of no service for understanding the psalm, which certainly speaks of Jesus Christ, as the apostles have quoted several texts, and Theodorus of Mopsuesta was condemned for asserting that it was only accommodated to him. Conc. v. col. 4. Bert.—Sept. seem to intimate that this psalm was sung at the morning service, (C.) or referred to the coming, or resurrection, of our Saviour, (S. Aug. W. Psal. iii. 6. M.) after the long night of infidelity. Didymus.—He is represented as the hart, or beautiful hind, whom the Jews hunted unto death, ver. 17.

VER. 2. O God. Our Saviour repeated these words as they are in Heb., though the vulgar tongue was Syriac, (C.) or Greek mixed with the Abamcan. Paulus.—Eli (or Eloi. S. Mark) lamma sabachthani. So he pronounced what the Jews would now read, Eli . . lama (or lamach. T.) azabthani (C.); and in our method, ali . . lome azbothoni. But it must be admitted (H.) that the true pronunciation is irretrievably lost. H.—It were, therefore, greatly to be wished that the learned would agree about some characters to express uniformly the Hebrew in modern languages, as it would greatly facilitate the knowledge of the sacred writings. Kennicott. Diss. 1, p. 243.—Look upon me, are words omitted by Christ, "because (says Eusebius) they are not in Heb." But this reason is not conclusive, as he might have left them out, though they were in the original. The Sept. may have rendered one ali, in this sense "to me," as they have not added my to the first mention of God; or, they may have anticipated from ver. 20 (Bert.) this explication. Christ speaks with reference to his sacred humanity, as his Divinity suspended its beatific influence, that he might drink the bitter chalice. Theod. S. Jer.—He also speaks the language of his afflicted members, who think they are abandoned. S. Aug. C.—Sins. That is, the sins of the world, which I have taken upon myself, cry out against me, and are the cause of all my sufferings. Ch.—An ancient psalm of S. Germ. reads "lips," instead of sins. Heb. "roaring." S. Jer. C.—"Prayer." Sixt. Edit. "Why art thou so far from helping me, and from the words of my roaring?" Prot. H.—Delicta nostra sua delicta fecit, ut justitiam suam nostram justitiam faceret. S. Aug.—He speaks in the name of his members. S. Tho. 3 p. q. 15, a. 1.—Christ could commit no sin (1 Pet. ii. 21, and 2 Cor. v. 21): but as long as he had taken our iniquities upon himself, to expiate with his own blood, he could not be at ease till he had perfected the work. David was convinced that his own sins were punished by the rebellion of Absalom, as Nathan had declared. 2 Kings xii. 10. C.

VER. 3. Folly. My cry proceeds not from impotent rage. Luke iv. 28. Euseb. Agel. M.—I know that thou wilt grant my request. C.—I shall not cry in vain. Theodor.—It is not for my own folly that I suffer. Geneb.—"Many cry and are not heard, yet it is for their advantage, and not out of folly." S. Aug.—Christ prayed on the cross as he had done in the garden, to have the bitter chalice removed. But this was not blameable, as it was done with entire submission. W.—The cry of the lips, or of human nature, which would be free from suffering, was not heard (H.); because the cry of the heart, which desired that the justice of God should be satisfied, was much louder: and this petition was granted by Him who denied nothing to his Son. John xi. 41. C.—This should be our model. Submission and perseverance will always be crowned.

VER. 4. In the, &c. Heb. "the Holy One inhabiteth the praises of Israel," or "Thou holy, sancte, inhabitant, the praise," (S. Jer.) or, as the plural intimates, the source and object of all "the praises of Israel," (H.) and of the Church W.—This may be connected with the preceding or following verse. Thou art in the midst of us, so that thou canst not be ignorant of my situation, like the idols or thou hast shown great favours to our ancestors, ver. 5. Theodoret and S. Jerom. seem to take these words to be addressed by the Father, or by the prophet, to Jesus Christ, who inhabited a body so free from sin. C.

7 But I am a worm, and no man: the reproach of men, and the outcast of the people.

8 All they that saw me have laughed me to scorn: they have spoken with the lips, and wagged the head.

9 He hoped in the Lord, let him deliver him: let him save him, seeing he delighteth in him.

10 For thou art he that hast drawn me out of the womb: my hope from the breasts of my mother. 11 I was cast upon thee from the womb:

From my mother's womb thou art my God, 12 depart not from me

For tribulation is very near: for there is none to help me.

13 Many calves have surrounded me: fat bulls have besieged me.

14 They have opened their mouths against me, as a lion ravening and roaring.

15 I am poured out like water; and all my bones are scattered.

* Matt. xxvii. 39; Mark xv. 29.—^b Matt. xxvii. 43.

VER. 6. Confounded. He interests his Father, by calling to mind the ancient patriarchs, (Eccl. ii. 11. Bert.,) who obtained their requests. W.

VER. 7. No man. Heb. aiss, "a great man," vir, (Mont.,) so far from being treated as a nobleman, I am not even respected as one of the meanest of men (adom). H.—"Why not a man?" says S. Aug., "because he is God. Why a worm? because a mortal, born of the flesh, without generation." The ancient naturalists supposed that worms were not generated; and though this be now deemed inaccurate, the Fathers applied this notion to confirm the doctrine of our Saviour's being born of a virgin, which had been clearly revealed. C.—People. God afforded Christ no exterior (H.) or common consolation, while the wicked persecutors treated him as a worm. W.—The rights of humanity are respected in the greatest criminals. But the enemies of our Lord added insult to torments. Isa. lli. 14. Bert.

VER. 8. All. This often denotes only the greatest number. S. Jer.—For surely the blessed Virgin, and some others, must be excepted. H.—But almost all joined in persecuting Christ, (W.) while his disciples left him. C.—These two verses are quoted by the three first evangelists.—Spoken. Heb. "opened or distorted," Bert.—"They shoot out the lip." Prot.—These signs and expressions (H.) mark the greatest contempt, ver. 14; Job xvi. 4. &c.

VER. 9. He hoped. Heb. "roll, or he (C.) rolled himself on the Lord." Prot. marg. But the text is conformable to ours. "He trusted on," &c. S. Matt. xxvii. 43, He trusted in God, let him deliver him now if he will have him. C., which is here rendered quoniam, "since," (H.) may also mean "if," as it is in the Prot. marg. Thus both texts agree. Many passages are thus quoted, without adding, as it is written. Bert.—God permitted that these blasphemers should use the very language of the prophet, that the completion of what he had said might be more conspicuous. Chal. "I have sung praises to the Lord, and he has withdrawn me from danger." This explanation is not contemptible. C.—But it is foreign to the context, and to all the other versions, as well as to the evangelists. H.—The collating of this psalm with the history of Christ must convince every sincere person, that he who was thus ignominiously treated was the object of God's complacency, and that the Christian religion is true. Bert.

VER. 10. Womb. David might say this as a figure of Christ, in consequence of the many favours which he had received. Theodoret. C.—But none could use these expressions with propriety, but Jesus Christ, who had no man for his father, and who had the perfect use of reason, so that he could call God his God from the very first. All others are born children of wrath, except the blessed Virgin, whose privilege was still the fruit of redemption. Bert.—She conceived and bore her son, remaining a pure virgin. Euseb., S. Athan., &c.—The synagogue rejected the Messias, but God received him, and made him head of the Church. S. Aug.

VER. 13. Calves. The insolent Jews and soldiers.—Bulls. The more inveterate enemies, the priests and Pharisees. S. Aug., &c.—Heb. "strong bulls of Basan," (Prot.,) a fertile country east of the Jordan, where the finest cattle were found. Amos iv. 1. C.

VER. 15. Water, in the agony, or on the cross, fainting away. Jos. vii. 5.—Bones. In extreme pain, (C.) they have been dislocated. H.—Heart. Which lives and dies first, is now like wax in the fire. W.

VER. 16. Jaws. So that he said, I thirst. Bert. W.—He would answer Pilate nothing in his own vindication.—Death. The region of blessed spirits, (S. Jer.,) or into the grave, where other bodies turn to dust. C.

VER. 17. Dogs. The pagan soldiers, who were instigated by the Jews, (Matt. xx. 26. C.) or the latter are here styled dogs, as they are by S. Paul. Plul. iii. 2. S. Jer.—The evangelists could scarcely have explained the authors and manner of our Saviour's death more particularly; so that we might entitle this "the Passion of Jesus Christ, according to David." W.—Dog. The Jews have here corrupted their text; reading, "like a lion," though it have no sense, to avoid so clear a prophecy. W.—They keep caru in the text, though it (Amama) or the margin had formerly the proper reading, caru. The Chal. has "they have

My heart is become like wax melting in the midst of my bowels.

16 My strength is dried up like a potsherd, and my tongue hath cleaved to my jaws: and thou hast brought me down into the dust of death.

17 For many dogs have encompassed me; the council of the malignant hath besieged me.

They have dug my hands and feet: 18 They have numbered all my bones.

And they have looked and stared upon me. 19 They parted my garments amongst them: and upon my vesture they cast lots.

20 But thou, O Lord, remove not thy help to a distance from me; look towards my defence.

21 Deliver, O God, my soul from the sword: my only one from the hand of the dog.

22 Save me from the lion's mouth; and my lowness from the horns of the unicorns.

23 I will declare thy name to my brethren: in the midst of the church will I praise thee.

* Matt. xxvii. 35; John xix. 23, and 24.—^d Heb. ii. 12.

bitten like a lion," &c., in some editions only; which shows the antiquity of this variation, (H.) as the author, Joseph the blind, is supposed to have lived in the fourth century, though this is uncertain. C.—All the ancient versions of the Sept., Syr., &c. agree with us, as the Prot. do likewise. Even the Masora intimates that caru has not here the sense of "like a lion," as it has Isa. xxxviii. 13; and, though it might be pointed so as to signify the same as caru, they have rejected that punctuation, and obstinately maintain their reading, in opposition to many MSS. seen by Ben., Chaim, &c. Bert.

VER. 18. They. Heb. "I shall or may tell all my bones," (C.) they are so dislocated. H.—Syr. "my bones have howled," as in mourning. C.—Upon me. out of contempt, (Euseb.,) or to prevent my escape, (Orig.,) or deriding my naked condition. M.—David experienced nothing of the kind. S. Justin, Apol. 2.

VER. 19. Vesture, or inner garment, which was all of a piece. C.—The soldiers perceived that it would be rendered unserviceable by cutting. H.—"Heretics attempt to divide the Church, but in vain." S. Jer.—Lots. This was verified above a thousand years afterwards, in the person of Jesus Christ. Bert.—Let the Jews show how it was accomplished in David. They assert themselves that nothing which had belonged to their kings was used by others. Their thrones, garments, &c. were all burnt. Maimon., &c.—Though this be doubtful, we may employ this testimony against them. C.—At Siceleg the effects of David were indeed plundered; but David was absent, and not under torments, like the person here described. Our goods must be divided, either before or after death. Let us be solicitous to obtain the second covering, which may never be taken from us. 2 Cor. v. 4. Bert.

VER. 20. Thy help. So some editions of the Sept. read, but S. Jer. approves "my help," as it is in the Com. edit., conformably to the Heb., (C.) which seems more animated, though the sense is the same. Bert.—The humanity here addresses the Divine nature, to obtain a speedy resurrection. S. Jer.—Heb. "O my strength, haste thou to help me." What is man when left to himself! The whole of a spiritual life consists in keeping close to God, and being convinced of our own infirmity. Bert.

VER. 21. Dog. All my enemies are united to persecute me, in my desolate condition. Unicum meum, "my desolate one," the soul, which is the only thing which ought to fix our attention; since, if we lose it, all is lost. This only one, self, is often, however, the most dangerous enemy. Bert.

VER. 22. Lowness. This sense appears to be preferable to the Heb. "hear me from," &c. C.—Yet some who render the orig. literally have, "save me from the throat of the lion, and from the horns of the unicorns; thou hast heard me." This seems very striking, as Christ henceforth recounts the glorious effects of his sufferings. The Sept. have explained anithni as a noun, though it properly signifies, thou hast heard, or humbled. Bert.—They may not have read the last n. C.—Yet S. Jer. has, exaudisti me, "thou hast granted my request." H.

VER. 23. Brethren. So Christ styles his disciples, principally (C.) after his resurrection. Matt. xxviii. 10; John xx. 17; Heb. ii. 11. S. Paul quotes this passage, which may convince us that this psalm relates to our Saviour alone; and he informs us that we are brethren of Christ, because we spring from Adam, (Bert.,) and are adopted by God: whence the apostles assume the title of children of God, after baptism. Rom. viii. 15, and 29; Eph. i. 5. C.—We are willing to be coheirs with Christ, but dislike the condition. Rom. viii. 17.—Church. This he will never cease to do. After the resurrection he communicated many instructions to his apostles, which all tend to honour God. H.—S. Aug. here refutes the Donatists, who pretended that God's church was confined to a small part of Africa, and that he had abandoned the Catholic Church. He shows that this conduct would be injurious to God, and contrary to his solemn promises, as well as to this prediction, which speaks of all, and of a great Church, praising and fearing Him, ver. 24, 26, 28, and 29. The Church can, therefore, neither be destroyed nor hidden, though it may be persecuted. It will always be great, in comparison of any separate congregation which may pretend to the truth; and 24 Ye that fear the Lord, praise him: all ye, the seed of Jacob, glorify him.

25 Let all the seed of Israel fear him: because he hath not slighted nor despised the supplication of the poor man.

Neither hath he turned away his face from me: and when I cried to him he heard me.

26 With thee is my praise in a great church: I will pay my vows in the sight of them that fear him.

27 The poor shall eat and shall be filled; and they shall praise the Lord that seek him: their hearts shall live for ever and ever.

28 All the ends of the earth shall remember, and shall be converted to the Lord.

And all the kindreds of the Gentiles shall adore in his sight.

29 For the kingdom is the Lord's; and he shall have dominion over the nations.

30 All the fat ones of the earth have eaten and have adored: all they that go down to the earth shall fall before him.

this appears not only with respect to the Donatists, but also to the Lutherans, &c. W.

VER. 24. Fear. Thus the Gentile converts are designated. Acts x. 2, 35, and xiii. 16, 26.

VER. 25. Israel. This may be something more general, as all the holy nation went under this name.—Supplication. Heb. also, "the lowliness of the afflicted." Bert.—When I. Heb., Chal., and Syr., "he," (C.) Jesus, of whom the prophet speaks (Bert.); though, according to the Vulg., He speaks himself; which seems more agreeable to the context. H.

VER. 26. Great Church; the Catholic Church, dispersed throughout the world, in which many adore God in spirit and truth. S. Jer.—Here Jesus Christ praises his Father by the mouth of his priests and faithful, in whom the Spirit works. Heb. "From thence shall proceed my praise," in the great Church. C.—Prot. "congregation." H.—The Vulg. may have the same meaning, as the desire to praise comes from God. The Church which Jesus founded immediately after his resurrection, to pay his vows, must last unto the end; otherwise this service would be interrupted. This can only be verified in the Catholic Church, as she alone can prove her uninterrupted existence. She alone is spread throughout the earth, united under the same pastors, and partaking of the same sacraments. If the Church failed after three or four centuries, the vows of Christ must have ceased. Yet he assures us that he will pay them as long as his kingdom shall continue, ver. 29.—Fear him. Houbigant would substitute "thee." This change of persons is however very proper and remarkable, as Christ no longer addresses his Father, but gives a description of the worship which should be exhibited in his Church. Bert.—The eucharistic sacrifice is the vow here specified, which Christ offers by his priests daily. It is the only sacrifice of the new law, and the most perfect means of acknowledging God's supreme dominion, &c. S. Aug., S. Jer., &c. C.

VER. 27. Poor. Heb. anvim, means also, "quiet and modest men," such as our Saviour calls poor in spirit. Matt. v. 3. These alone ought to partake of the holy sacraments. H.—The sacrifices of thanksgiving were symbols of that of the blessed Eucharist, of which the Fathers explain this text. Theod., S. Aug., &c. C.—Indeed, as it speaks of the times of the new law, this must be the meaning. H.—It describes that part of the Christian worship, which consists in participating of those sacred mysteries which give life to the humble and worthy receiver. John vi. Prot. explains this eating, to mean "instruction." But that may be given any where; and the psalmist alludes to the public service, which is to be performed in the midst of the Church.—Their. Heb. "your," though S. Jer., Chal., Syr., &c., agree with us. The sense is the same. My friends shall partake of the victims in abundance, after my restoration. "But the text is more naturally explained of the food . . . which we receive in the blessed Eucharist," and which imparts life eternal. The strong may partake, but they must first become mean in their own eyes. C.—The faithful and humble only derive benefit from this great sacrament. Its effect is a glorious resurrection in eternal life. W.

VER. 28. Remember. Our Saviour says, Do this in remembrance of me. H.—We must recollect what Christ has suffered and done for us, what was the condition of the world at his coming, and what the behaviour of his first disciples. Bert.—We cannot explain this of David, except in a very exaggerated sense. But all is clear if we understand it of Jesus Christ, whose faith many nations have embraced, assembling to celebrate his sacred mysteries, and the festivals of his birth, &c. C.

VER. 29. Nations. God placed David on the throne. He caused both Jews and Gentiles to submit to Jesus Christ. Matt. xxviii. 18; Rom. iii. 29. Theod.

VER. 30. Fat ones. Many ancient psalters read, "the rich," which is the true sense.—Adored. This may be taken as a prediction. C.—Heb. is in the future, "they shall," &c. Bert.—The rich of this world have no relish for the sacred nourishment. C.—Earth. Dying, (Bert.,) or to manifest their adoration in the Church. Euseb.—All shall adore Jesus Christ, particularly those who 31 And to him my soul shall live: and my seed shall serve him.

32 There shall be declared to the Lord a generation to come: and the heavens shall show forth his justice to a people that shall be born, which the Lord hath made.

PSALM XXII.

DOMINUS REGIT ME.

God's spiritual benefits to faithful souls.

I A psalm for David.

THE *Lord ruleth me: and I shall want nothing.

2 He hath set me in a place of pasture.

He hath brought me up, on the water of refreshment.

3 He hath converted my soul.

He hath led me on the paths of justice, for his own name's sake.

4 For though I should walk in the midst of the shadow of death, I will fear no evils, for thou art with me.

Thy rod and thy staff, they have comforted me.

5 Thou hast prepared a table before me, against them that afflict me.

* Isa. xl. 11; Jer. xxiii. 5; Ezech. xxxiv. 11, and 23; 1 Pet. ii. 25, and v. 3.

receive his sacred body at the hour of death. Heb. "who go down to the dust," H.

VER. 31. Shall. Heb. "and his soul he will not vivify," which gives no distinct meaning. Some join it with the preceding, All shall adore . . . yet he will not restore them to life. The living alone shall be able to sound forth God's praises, as it is often observed. Psal. vi. 6; Isa. xxxviii. 18. C.—Chald. "the Lord will not give life to the wicked; but the race of Abraham shall praise him." Others again explain it of Jesus Christ. "because he has not spared his life," he shall see a long-lived seed (Isa. liii. 10) in the Church, which shall praise him for ever. H.

VER. 32. To, or by the Lord, who opened the mouths of the prophets to foretell the propagation of the Christian Church. C.—Prot. "It shall be accounted to the Lord for a generation: They shall come and shall declare," &c. H.—Heavens is added by the Vulg. to show that the apostles, who are styled the heavens, (Psal. xviii.,) shall proclaim these things. Bert.—Sept., &c., omit this word, as well as many Latin copies. One generation shall deliver the true doctrine to another, as long as the world shall last. C.

PSAL. XXII., &c. VER. 1. David. This psalm most beautifully describes the consolation which the just find in God's protection. H.—It may be applied to the Israelites in the desert, (Chal.,) to David persecuted by Saul, or rather (C.) settled quietly upon the throne, (Muis.,) or to the Jews returned from Babylon. S. Athan. C.—The Fathers explain it mystically of Jesus Christ, the Shepherd of our souls. Didymus, S. Aug., &c. The allegories of a shepherd and of a person giving a feast to his guest, are well supported. C.—Ruleth, in Heb. Is my shepherd; viz. to feed, guide, and govern me. Ch.—Sept. ποιμάσει, pascit, as S. Aug. and S. Jer. read. S. Greg. Thaumaturgus understands this of the angel guardian. Paneg. in Orig.—Jesus Christ conducts us into the pastures of his Church, and feeds us (W.) with his own body, &c. C.—The saints never complain of want. Bert.

VER. 2. Place. Mont. "in the huts of grass, (or of young trees, germinis,) he will make me lie down." See Cant. i. 6; Ezech. xxxiv. 15. H.—Shepherds were accustomed to conduct their flocks to shady places during the heat of the day.—Refreshment. Heb. "still waters," like the pond of Siloe, (Isa. viii. 6,) in opposition to the great streams of the Euphrates, &c. The Fathers understand it of baptism (S. Chrys., &c.); or of the truths of salvation. Euseb. C.—Baptism is the first justification. W.

VER. 3. Converted. Prot. "restoreth my soul" (H.) to her former tranquillity, or bringeth me back from my wanderings. Bert.—Justice. Those who have received baptism must observe the law of Christ, (W.) as all indeed are bound to do. H.—Sake. Not on account of man's deserving (C.) by the force of nature. God must begin and carry on the work of our conversion by his grace; with which we must co-operate. H.—The captives had been in the greatest distress among idolaters. They rejoice at the sight of the promised land, where they will fear no dangers. C.

VER. 4. Walk. In the greatest temptations, we may resist by God's grace. W.—Midst. Heb. "in the valley." The greatest darkness, and the most horrible precipices, give no alarm to those who are under God's protection.—Comforted me, as they have kept all enemies at a distance. The shepherd's staff or crook is designed for that purpose; and though it may be used to bring back the wandering sheep by beating them, yet it is not under that idea an object of consolation, but rather of terror. C.

VER. 5. Thou. Here the allegory of a shepherd seems less discernible, though it may allude to the provisions for winter (Bert.); or rather it ceases, as feasts are made for men (M.); and the second allegory of a guest here commences. H.—The enemy had reduced me to the greatest misery. C.—But God has admitted me to his table. M.—This may be explained of the sacred mysteries received in the Church, (S. Amb.,) or of the Scriptures, which nourish our souls. S. Jer.—No mention is made of the ancient sacrifices; and as this psalm must be understood in the spiritual sense, the prophet speaks of the blessed Eucharist, which imparts

Thou hast anointed my head with oil; and my chalice which inebriateth me, how goodly is it!

6 And thy mercy will follow me all the days of my life.

And that I may dwell in the house of the Lord; unto length of days.

PSALM XXIII.

DOMINI EST TERRA.

Who they are that shall ascend to heaven: Christ's triumphant ascension thither.

1 On the first day of the week, a psalm for David.

THE* earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof: the world, and all they that dwell therein.

2 For he hath founded it upon the seas; and hath prepared it upon the rivers.

3 Who shall ascend into the mountain of the Lord: or who shall stand in his holy place?

4 The innocent in hands, and clean of heart, who hath not taken his soul in vain, nor sworn deceitfully to his neighbour.

5 He shall receive a blessing from the Lord, and mercy from God, his Saviour.

6 This is the generation of them that seek him, of them that seek the face of the God of Jacob.

* Psal. xlix. 12; 1 Cor. x. 26.

the unction of grace, &c. The enemy strives to make us keep at a distance from it. Bert.—Christ has himself prepared this table (S. Cyp. ep. 63. Euthym.) against all spiritual adversaries.—Oil. Christians are also strengthened by the sacraments of confirmation, penance, holy orders, matrimony, and extreme unction. W.—Three of these are administered with oil. H.—It was customary to anoint the head of guests with perfumes, (Matt. xxvi. 7; Luke vii. 46.) both among the Jews and Gentiles. But the Fathers explain this text of chrism, used in confirmation. S. Athan. Theod. C.—Chalice. The blessed sacrament and sacrifice of Christ's body and blood. W.—Inebriateth. Heb. "overflowing." "Thy chalice inebriating me," occurs in most copies of the Sept., in Sixtus V., &c. But the more correct edition of the Sept. and all the Greek interpreters, (S. Jer. ep. ad Sun.,) agree with the Heb. and Vulg.

VER. 6. Follow me, like provisions from the king's table. 2 Kings xi. 8. C.—The grace of God prevents the unwilling to make him willing; and it follows the person who is in good dispositions, that they may not be in vain. S. Aug. Ench. 32.—Prævenit per fidem, subsequitur in custodiendo mandata Dei. S. Jer.—Continual and final perseverance is a special grace of God. W.—And that, Heb. "and I shall." The Vulg. expresses the effect of a worthy participation of God's table, which leads to a happy eternity. Bert.—Days, in eternal life. W.—David always desired to be near the ark, (Psal. xxvi., and lxxxiii. M.) as the figure of heaven. H.

PSAL. XXIII., &c. VER. 1. Week. This title was found only in the common edit. of the Sept. Theod.—The Jews say the psalm was used on Sunday (Bert.); and the Fathers explain it of the resurrection and ascension of our Lord, whom it regards in the more sublime sense, though it may also be literally explained of the temple, or translation of the ark, 2 Kings vi. 12. C.—David appointed when the psalms were to be sung. Eccli. xlvii. 12. This speaks of the creation. M.—S. Paul applies the first verse to Jesus Christ, whom he styles the Lord, (1 Cor. x. 26,) and Creator, of whom David speaks. It is wonderful that so few have noticed this excellent proof of Christ's Divinity.—Therein. Though God be the Creator of all, He seems to have made a particular choice of Sion. Before the coming of Christ, all, except a few Jews (C.) and enlightened Gentiles, like Job, (H.) were buried in sin and ignorance. But now his kingdom is propagated widely; and in every place the Father is adored in spirit and in truth. S. Aug., &c.

VER. 2. Founded, or created it (Bert.) upon (Heb. al, "above, in, near, to, with," &c. Amama) the seas, like a floating island. Prov. viii. 29; Jon. ii. 7; Job xxxviii. 11.

VER. 3. Place. The punishment of the Bethsamites, and of Oza, had filled all with alarm, so that David durst not introduce the ark into his palace. 1 Kings vi. 19. C.

VER. 4. Heart, whose faith and intentions are pure, as well as their actions. —Vain, by neglecting good works, (S. Jer.,) or seeking after trifles (S. Aug.); or rather, according to the Heb., "who hath not sworn in vain by his soul." 2 Cor. i. 23, and 1 Kings i. 26. To take the name of God in vain, means to swear falsely. C.—Prot. "who hath not lifted up his soul unto vanity;" to swell with pride, (H.) or to swear by idols. Pr. in disc.—To his, &c. This is not in Heb., but must be understood, (C.) as a person can only intend to deceive men. So Import. who follows the Heb. so exactly in his Greek psalms in verse, (Bert.,) reads, "Nor sworn an oath, that men he might deceive." H.

VER. 5. Blessing. David seems to have given the eulogium of Obededom, whose example taught him that the ark was only terrible to the wicked; and that it was a source of blessings to the just. 2 Kings vi. 11.—Mercy. Heb. "justice."

7 Lift up your gates, O ye princes, and be ye lifted up, O eternal gates: and the King of Glory shall enter in.

8 Who is this King of Glory? the Lord, who is strong and mighty: the Lord mighty in battle.

9 Lift up your gates, O ye princes, and be ye lifted up, O eternal gates: and the King of Glory shall enter in.

10 Who is this King of Glory? the Lord of hosts, he is the King of Glory.

PSALM XXIV.

AD TE DOMINE LEVAVI.

A prayer for grace, mercy, and protection against our enemies.

1 Unto the end. A psalm for David.

TO thee, O Lord, have I lifted up my soul. 2 In thee, O my God, I put my trust; let me not be ashamed.
